White Reno said last week she "was mad," Clinton said: "You think she was mad. You should have been there when I heard about it."

Meanwhile in Washington, the head of the White House Military Office, which oversees the unit that videotaped the coffees, took responsibility for the failure to find the tapes earlier.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 71 LOW: 53	HIGH: 62 LOW: 41	HIGH: 55 LOW: 33

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics .....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 14
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Haensel wins Stark Draper Prize; oil refining work impacts nations

By Eric Petersen
Collegian Correspondent

Vladimir Haensel, professor of chemical engineering at the University of Massachusetts Amherst, has been chosen as the 1997 Prize Laureate of the prestigious Charles Stark Draper Prize.

Haensel was chosen for the award for his work in the 1940's to improve the oil refining process, which culminated in his invention of a process called "Platforming" in 1947.

The Charles Stark Draper Prize, which is the highest honor in the profession of engineering, consists of a citation, a gold medal, and an honorarium sum of $450,000.

Haensel invented platforming in 1947 while working for the Universal Oil Products Company (UOP), and the effects of his invention are wide spread.

Platforming, which is short for platinum reforming, revolutionized the process through which crude oil was refined into fuel. It replaced a process that required the addition of lead into the mix.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Umass Engineering professor, Vladimir Hanesel. Winner of this years Charles Stark Draper Prize.

Haensel's platforming makes possible the cleaner–burning, unleaded fuels used today. The fuels produced are of much higher octane, allowing engines to perform more efficiently, going 35 percent farther than on the same amount of leaded gasoline.

Platforming even produces more fuel from the same amount of crude oil than earlier processes.

"Haensel has created what can only be called a revolution in mobility," Paul Jennins said, professor of civil engineering at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, and Chairman of the Draper Prize committee.

Platforming also produces, as a by–product, the aromatic hydrocarbons essential for the production of many modern plastics. These plastics are used in the manufacturing of products such as medical devices, automobiles, synthetics for clothing, and tapes for audio and video recording.

"Val is an amazing person," Joseph Goldstein, Dean of the College of Engineering at UMass said, echoing the sentiments of nearly all who know Haensel. "He contributed at the highest level of research, be he equally loved to be in the classroom."

"We are all delighted at the recognition of Val's spectacular professional accomplishments with this most prestigious award," Michael F. Malone, Head of Chemical Engineering at UMass said. "If Val's idea worked, it has as much to do with his making it work as the technology behind it. He has a lot of energy. Only recently has he stopped giving tennis lessons to young assistant professors who weren't really looking for one."

The Charles Stark Draper Prize, named for "Doc" Draper, is an endowment from the Charles Stark Draper Laboratory Inc. in Cambridge. Draper is known as the father of the modern guidance systems used in aircraft, space vehicles, missiles and submarines. This year's $450,000 prize is the world's largest of it's kind.

"This [the Charles Stark Draper Prize] is really the Nobel Prize of Engineering," Robert MacIntosh, professor of electrical engineering at UMass said.

The Draper Prize is presented once every two years by the National Academy of Engineering (NAE). It was established in 1988 to recognize individuals whose achievements in engineering have contributed to the well–being of all humanity. Recipients are individuals who have been able to take an idea, develop it, and see it through to fruition.

"In all the world, there is no higher award in the field of engineering," MacIntosh, who was recently inducted into the National Academy of Engineering, said. "Some of the past recipients include the inventors of the integrated circuit, which made computers possible, space communica-

Turn to PLATFORMING, page 2

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Flyin' high
Members of the UMass Colorguard practice for the Woonsocket, R.I., Columbus Day Parade on the Haigas Mall Sunday afternoon.

'Tainted Blood:' a discussion of rights and blood donation

LAUREN ROSATI / COLLEGIAN
Melissa Croteau and Dr. Mary O'Neill of the Red Cross sit on a panel discussion on blood donation with Tom Meyer and Jesse Burchfield of UMass' Concerned Students for Civil Rights.

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

In conjunction with National Coming Out Week, a panel discussion was held last Wed., Oct. 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. The Discussion, entitled "Tainted Blood," addressed the conflicts between the American Red Cross Blood Banks and the gay community on Campus.

The panel was composed of Melissa Croteau, the Director of Corporate Communications for the New England Region of the American Red Cross, Dr. Mary O'Neill, the Medical Director for the New England Region of the American Red Cross, Tom Meyer and Jesse Burchfield, both of whom are University of Massachusetts students and members of the Concerned Students for Civil Rights organization.

The moderator and organizer of the panel discussion was Derick Cheesebore–Weaver, the Office Manager of the Pride Alliance.

The primary subject of the debate was about certain questions which are asked to donors prior to the donation of their blood. The question of the Blood Donation Record (BDR), a health history questionnaire administered to potential donors, asks, "For males: have you had sex, even once, with another male since 1977," and "For females: in the last 12 months, have you had sex, even once, with a male who has had sex with another male since 1977?" The Red Cross will not accept the blood of anyone who answers "yes" to these questions.

According to Burchfield, these questions are considered discriminatory.

"They perpetuate the myth that all gay men and bisexual men have AIDS... when straight men go in to give blood and are asked that question... they walk away with that in their minds," Burchfield said.

In her opening statement, Croteau said that the American Red Cross blood services provide 45 percent of the blood that is transfused in the United States.

"The mission of the American Red Cross Blood Services is to provide an adequate supply of blood that is as safe as possible for patients who need blood... the blood supply is safer today than any other time in our history," Croteau said.

Croteau also said that these controversial questions have nothing to do with the Red Cross and are under the jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Administration.

"These are not strictly Red Cross policies, these are policies that the FDA determines," Croteau said.

Burchfield opposed.

"I see a dichotomy in the logic of the American Red Cross and their statements," Burchfield said. "There are two sides to the story. The Red Cross is stating why the policy is in place, here's why it's protecting you which insinuates that you agree with the policy... yet in the next breath you're saying you're being forced by the FDA."

The representatives from the Red Cross refused to announce their stance on the issue of the question. Croteau said, "it's not the Red Cross' position to say how the questions should be asked." According to Croteau, their request for a review

Turn to BLOOD, page 2

LSS tutors provide much needed help

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Correspondent

Are you having a little trouble in Chemistry? Are you doing pretty well in statistics but really want that A? Could you use some help with those Calculus theories? If you answered yes to these questions, then the tenth floor of the W.E.B Du Bois Library is the place to go.

Learning Support Services (LSS) is a program at the University of Massachusetts, located on the tenth floor of the library and has many services available for all students.

According to the LSS borchure:

"The LSS mission is to improve retention and graduation rates at UMass Amherst by providing the learning support programs and self–development activities that give students the skills necessary for college success."

Some of the services offered through the LSS program include: free tutoring for individuals and small groups; supplemental instruction seminars in selected courses; computerized testing and Instruction; a collection of video tapes for calculus, statistics, engineering and other subjects; and mentoring for first year students.

"Each of these services is designed with the goal of having undergraduate students help other undergraduate students," director and founder of the LSS, Humberto Segura said.

Apart from the instructional seminars, all tutoring and helping is done by other students. The students work together on the problems, therefore, each is taught, not told, how to get the correct answers, according to Segura.

All of the tutors go through an application process and interview. Students picked are then trained, sometimes in many different subjects.

Once they begin their job, the tutors are evaluated on their work. Each student who seeks help at the LSS office fills out a questionnaire, and has the opportunity to fill out a comment card rating the value of the program.

"The comments are 100 percent positive," Segura said.

One of the tutors, senior math and statistics major Aleck Ma, said that he gets many students who come in frequently, as well as random students who seek academic help after hearing about the LSS program.

Ma said that the program is greatly needed at the University, partly because of the large class sizes.

"It [LSS program] gives help to people that need it, when they can't get it in class," Ma said.

The idea for the LSS came in 1992 when an undergraduate committee conducted a search to find a person to create and direct a program to help the students. In 1994, the committee chose Segura.

"The first thing I did when I came was hand out surveys asking students what services they needed, and what hours they needed them," Segura said. In September of 1994 the Learning Support Services was created to help students obtain the academic support they needed beyond the classroom.

Since then, students using LSS have increased tremendously. In 1994, 1,800 students visited the center on the tenth floor of Du Bois a total of 4,368 times. By the 1996–1997 school year, 3,039 students visited the LSS office a total of 12,223 times.

The students that use LSS are extremely grateful for the help that they receive.

Students who want to find out more about LSS should visit the office from noon to 8 p.m. weekdays, or visit the web site at http://www.umass.edu/lss.

Clinton supports free trade in South American speech

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — At a monument symbolizing South America's struggle for freedom, President Clinton preached the gospel of open trade yesterday but said more must be done to alleviate poverty and "give everyone a chance to be a winner in the new economy."

The hillside slums overlooking Caracas' skyscrapers are dramatic evidence of the economic inequality in this oil–rich country - which has become the United States' biggest petroleum supplier. Eight of 10 Venezuelans live in poverty, according to government estimates.

"For all the progress we have made together to advance democracy, free markets and full citizenship, we must acknowledge that a great challenge remains to make these forces work to the benefit of all our people," Clinton said.

The president said no nation, including the United States, has found "the perfect formula" but that education is an important ingredient.

Clinton spoke from the steps of the National Pantheon, the church–like burial place for South American liberation hero Simon Bolivar and many of Venezuela's founding fathers. Bolivar led the fight to end Spanish colonial rule in Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Bolivia, Panama and Peru.

Apparently for security reasons, a tall screen encircled the courtyard, blocking it from surrounding buildings and cutting off any breeze on a hot day.

Clinton delighted the crowd of several hundred people by experimenting with Spanish, to say, "Todo esta chevere en Venezuela!" Roughly translated, it means "Everything is cool in Venezuela." His audience cheered.

From Venezuela, Clinton flew to Brazil, second stop on his week-long visit to South America that will include Argentina. Before a state dinner at Brasilia, Clinton told President Fernando Henrique Cardoso that Brazil and the United States, as the two largest nations in the hemisphere, have an obligation to lead "this historic revolution underway in the Americas" of democratic and market reforms.

Turn to PROTEST, page 2

1990 Poet Laureate reads at UM

By Laura Borcella
Collegian Staff

On Thursday Oct. 9, poet Mark Strand performed a reading of old and new material at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Strand came to University of Massachusetts as a part of the Fall 1997 Visiting Writers Series, sponsored by the Masters of Fine Arts program in the English department.

Strand read his poetry for about an hour to an over-filled room of people.

Strand began the reading with a comical prose poem called "Narrative Poetry," which he said was about the "self hatred, memory, and pity" in narrative.

The poem also strove to humorously answer the question "What is narrative?" Much to the amusement of Strand's audience.

Strand continued with poems from his latest book, Dark Harbor, as well as some brand-new poems not yet seen or heard. These poems focused on the imminence of death and the inevitable hardship of love.

He addressed a romantic partner in a poem from Dark Harbor as "my partner, my beautiful death." In another line, Strand expresses the isolating feeling of being physically naked with another: "finally we are safe from each other."

Between poems, Strand assumed the role of quiet comedian, much to his audience's delight.

When introducing a group of yet unpublished poems, Strand said, "These are the poems I like to read out loud, to see what they sound like." He said, before reading an untitled poem, "I always thought 'Untitled' sounded too much like 'Untentitled.' Maybe not."

When introducing a poem called "Old Man Leaves Party," about a beautiful man with "a beautiful body," Strand quipped to audience applause, "You mustn't think this poem is about me. I never left the party, and I'm not as old as this guy."

Strand's final poems contained themes of the "joylessness of fate" and the melancholy nature of a passing moment. He read a poem about Wallace Stevens entitled "The Great Poet Returns."

Before reading a long, celebrated piece called "The Delirium Waltz," Strand commented on imagination of poets.

"I think it's every poet's dream to have his imagination outlast his fate," Strand said.

A former Poet Laureate, Strand is the author of numerous books of poetry. His most recent was entitled Dark Harbor.

He has received fellowships from the and the Ingram Merrill, Rockefeller, and Guggenheim foundations, as well as the Academy of American poets. In 1987, he received a MacArthur Fellowship, and in 1990 he was named Poet Laureate of America.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

That's some pig!

Judy, a 6 month old Vietnamese pot-bellied pig, shows her stuff in front of the campus center yesterday afternoon.

protest

continued from page 1

"America reaches out to Brazil with the hand of friendship and the pledge of partnership," Clinton told Cardoso at the foreign ministry.

A delighted Cardoso, who made a state vIsit to Washington just two years ago, reminded Clinton, "There's no substitute for firsthand knowledge and contact ... with a country."

Like Venezuela, Brazil also suffers severe economic inequality, fueling a growing undercurrent of social unrest among the poor. Even before Clinton arrived, Brazilians fumed at a U.S. Embassy commercial guide posted on the Internet that said corruption was endemic in the country.

The embassy apologized and struck the word "endemic." Wrapping up his stop in Venezuela, Clinton and President Rafael Caldera witnessed the signing of agreements to strengthen cooperation in energy development and combating drugs.

The drug accord gives Venezuela more than $11 million in patrol boats and surveillance planes to spot smugglers. The United States and Venezuela also will establish a joint intelligence center to share information and coordinate anti-drug operations.

The United States agreed to give Venezuela $500,000 for a study of greenhouse gases, and to expand Fulbright scholarships to Venezuelan students to study energy and the environment.

Last year Venezuela replaced Saudi Arabia as the top U.S. oil supplier.

"For the last 80 years, Venezuela has been a rock of stability, staying out of the oil embargo (in 1973), stepping in to boost production in moments of crisis from World War II to the Gulf War," Clinton said.

Because of lingering differences, the two countries were not able to conclude agreements on investment and taxation, considered important for foreign trade.

Open trade is the central theme of Clinton's trip - as well as his campaign back home.

blood

continued from page 1

did not specify which questions were of current controversy.

"The American Red Cross has heard these concerns and initiated the appropriate process for addressing them... we have requested a review of all the questions to the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB)," Croteau said. "I don't know of anyone at the Red Cross that has gone through the form and said, 'this question we agree with, this question we don't,' that's not our role."

A meeting of the FDA is scheduled for next week to discuss this questionnaire issue. Burchfield said he is pessimistic of the outcome.

"At next week's meeting I seriously don't expect anything to come out of it," Burchfield said.

Burchfield also touched upon the fact that many gay men are tested for the AIDS virus.

"Who gets tested the most? Gay men and bisexual men get tested more than heterosexual men," Burchfield said. "Who's the risk here?"

In response, the representatives insisted that they were doing all that they could do in effort to help through their efforts to get a review of the questions asked.

"The Red Cross has not done enough. Until the American Red Cross comes to the table and says, 'we are the ones who spell out what we disagree with.' Now you say that's not your role and I'm saying that role needs to change," Burchfield said.

The other issue that was debated at the panel discussion was the issue of confidentiality. According to Burchfield, not only are the records of all who are denied as donors kept by the Red Cross, they are kept as a reminder to keep those people from donating in the future.

Croteau clarified that the records are completely confidential and when it says on the computer that a person has been deferred in the past it does not say why. She also informed the panel that the blood that is tested and those results not only are confidential but are labeled by corresponding bar codes to insure anonymity.

"I want to assure the public that there is no exploitation going on," Croteau said.

The New England Region of the Red Cross tries to get approximately 1,100 volummes of blood a day. According to Croteau, 25 percent of the blood the Red Cross collects is from high school and college students. UMass has the highest rate of donation in the New England region.

"We rely very heavily on the student population... when the campuses have had concerns we have made ourselves available... to answer questions and respond and on a national level we are encouraging the AABB to platforming

continued from page 1

tions, and FORTRAN, which was the first computer programming language. That should give you an idea of the scope of an achievement that receives this award."

"It's a tribute to the previous winner to add his [Haensel's] name to the list of awardees," said Malone.

The Draper Prize is not the only recognition Haensel has received in his long career. Among his other awards are the Professional Progress Award of the American Institute of Engineers, The Perkins Medal in 1967, and the National Medal of Science in 1973. He is one of very few individuals to be a member of both the National Academies of Sciences and of Engineering, and he was the first recipient of the National Academy of Sciences Award for Chemistry in Service to Society.

Over the years, he has been granted more than 150 US patents and 450 foreign patents.

Haensel, born in Germany and raised in Moscow, Russia, emigrated to the United States at the age of 16, unable to speak a word of English. He went on to receive his bachelor's degree from Northwestern University and his post-graduate degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He began his teaching career at UMass in 1980 after 42 years as a researcher, and later vice president, of Universal Oil Products.

Haensel plans to retire from teaching next August, whereupon he will continue his current research on the use of Hydrogen for fuel.

The award will be presented in Washington D.C. on Feb. 24, during National Engineering Week, and it is rumored that President Clinton may be on hand to present the award.

"I hope he [Clinton] does," Malone said. "I think it would be a real treat for Clinton."

IS THERE A PEBBLE IN YOUR SNEAKER?

The wedge that comes between you and the better you. The one who plays unselfishly. The one who sticks up for her teammates. The one who doesn't mind making the sacrifice bunt.

We're looking for that special player. Someone who dreams of being part of an extraordinary team of insurance and financial services professionals. Someone who refuses to let anything slow her down.

Interested?

As you keep striving to get better, consider CIGNA. We're waiting for you at the starting line.

We look forward to meeting you at the Undergraduate Business Club Career Fair on October 15 from 1-5 in the Campus Center Auditorium.

CIGNA
A Business of Caring.

Visit us on the Web at: www.cigna.com

HealthCare Property & Casualty Group Insurance Life • Accident • Disability Retirement & Investment Services Investment Management Individual Insurance Reinsurance International

Procter & Gamble
Career Information Session

As the global leader in the Consumer Product industry, P&G sells over 300 brands in over 140 countries.

Students from ALL MAJORS

We offer starting FULL-TIME and SUMMER CO-OP positions in CUSTOMER BUISNESS DEVELOPMENT in major marketing areas throughout the United States. We're only coming to UMass in the Fall, so don't miss this opportunity to learn more about how you can be part of our leadership team.

THREE LOCATIONS, THREE TIMES - REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED!

Visit our website at www.pg.com

Hamas marches, Israel frees more Arabs

By Mohammed Daraghmeh
Associated Press

NABLUS, West Bank — Hamas activists dressed as suicide bombers marched in a display of menace and triumph in the West Bank town of Nablus yesterday, white death shrouds covering their heads and fake explosives lining their belts.

Even as 4,000 people cheered at the rally celebrating the freeing of Hamas founder Sheik Ahmed Yassin, Israel released nine more Arab prisoners as part of a deal cut with Jordan over a bungled attempt on the life of another Hamas leader.

The prisoners, all Jordanian citizens, were flown by helicopter to Jordan, where sources said none would go to prison. None was a Hamas member or had been involved in attacks on Israelis, government spokesman Moshe Fogel said. Most were jailed for security offenses.

But a Jordanian official speaking on condition of anonymity said Jordanians convicted of carrying out attacks in which Israelis were killed could be among the 20 to 30 prisoners still to be freed.In its part of the deal, Jordan has released two agents from Israel's Mossad intelligence agency who were involved in the Sept. 25 assassination attempt on Hamas political strategist Khalid Mashaal.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who authorized the widely lambasted operation, stayed away Monday from a special parliament discussion about the embarrassing operation.

"There is no doubt that he is evading this debate and degrading the Knesset and himself," said opposition leader Ehud Barak of the Labor Party.

Mashaal addressed marchers at the rally in Nablus via telephone from Jordan.

"Netanyahu wanted to give my head to the Zionists as a present," he said. "But the arrow shot back at him."

Yassin addressed the rally as well, by telephone from his home in the Gaza Strip. He urged students at An Najah University, a Hamas stronghold, to commit themselves to their studies, saying "only the educated can build the nation."

He did not mention violence, but the marchers clearly alluded to it.

Eight activists marched with red headbands tied over white hoods to symbolize blood. Another eight, representing Hamas gunmen, wore military fatigues, masked their faces and swung fake assault rifles made of wood.

Hamas has carried out more than a dozen suicide bombings in Israel since 1994.

Israel moved to exact retribution for the latest of those attacks Monday, saying it would demolish the homes of three Islamic militants who carried out two suicide bombings in Jerusalem this summer.

John Denver dies in Calif. plane crash

By David Klignan
Associated Press

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. — With such 1970s hits as "Rocky Mountain High," "Sunshine on My Shoulders" and "Take Me Home, Country Roads," John Denver was a wholesome, wire-rimmed hippie who turned out sunny music for cynical times.

In the end, he died in a setting straight out of his music, soaring over the mountains, sea and sky before his brand-new experimental plane crashed Sunday in picturesque Monterey Bay. He was 53.

"Who I am is in my songs," Denver said in a 1986 interview. "I love it when people get that."

Peter, Paul and Mary made a hit of Denver's "Leaving on a Jet Plane" in 1969, and on Monday, member Mary Travers mourned him as man who offered an alternative to angry rock and helped bind the wounds of tumultuous times.

"I think he brought a sense of optimism, a sort of naivete we were thrilled to have after Vietnam, after Watergate, after the rising tide of cynicism of the 1970s," she said. "He was talking about how beautiful it was in the mountains, saying, 'There is another side to it all.'"

Denver's single-engine Y-shaped plane crashed during the afternoon in the choppy waters just offshore. His body was badly mangled, and his identity was confirmed Monday with fingerprints sent from Colorado.

National Transportation Safety Board spokesman George Peterson said Denver had just bought the plane and had performed three practice touch-and-go landings at the Monterey Peninsula Airport. He then told the tower he would be flying for about an hour. "The aircraft was about 500 feet in the air, and about 100 yards off the coast itself, when the engine quit and It went straight down into the water," said Sheriff Norman Hicks. "It just sort of dove head first, straight down into the water." The two-seater aircraft was built by Rutan Aircraft. Owner Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager in 1986 made the first non-stop, unrefueled flight around the world in an experimental plane named Voyager. Denver had two drunken-driving arrests in Colorado and was awaiting trial on one of those charges in January. Hicks said toxicology reports are done routinely in accidental deaths, and results are expected in 10 to 14 days.

Jerry Weintraub, the singer's friend and longtime manager, said Denver had a passion for flying. Denver's father was an Air Force test pilot and taught his son to fly a Learjet, Weintraub said. "He was a huge force in the music industry in the 1970s," Weintraub said. "I think the music and all his passion for environmental causes will be remembered most."

President Clinton saluted Denver as a "dedicated champion of the environment."

"His soaring music evoked the grandeur of our landscape and the simple warmth of human love."

Leaf–peeping trip claims 43 lives; bus plunges into Canadian ravine

(AP) ST-JOSEPH-DE-LA-RIVE, Quebec — A bus carrying nearly 50 senior citizens on a Thanksgiving Day trip to view the turning of the seasons plunged into a ravine yesterday in central Quebec, killing most of them.

Quebec provincial police said the accident took place in the afternoon about 60 miles northeast of Quebec City. The bus was traveling on Highway 138 and crashed at the bottom of a steep hill heading into a hard right curve.

"There are more than 40 victims at the moment," provincial police spokesman Real Ouellet said at the scene.

Five survivors among the 48 people aboard the bus were taken to hospitals in nearby La Malbaie and Baie-St.-Paul.

Michelle Robitaille, a spokeswoman for the Charlevoix Hospital Center in Baie-St.-Paul, told The Associated Press that five injured people were brought there in critical condition and four of them were transferred to a trauma center in Quebec City.

The passengers, who belonged to a senior citizens club in the Beauce region southeast of Quebec City, were on an outing for Canada's Thanksgiving holiday, Ouellet said.

Conditions on the twisting road were dry and weather was sunny. The hill has a steep grade and is marked by warning signs. Automobile drivers usually take it in first gear and even then brake frequently.

The bus was headed for Ile aux Coudres, a vacation island in the St. Lawrence River, where seasonal foliage changes are especially brilliant this time of year.

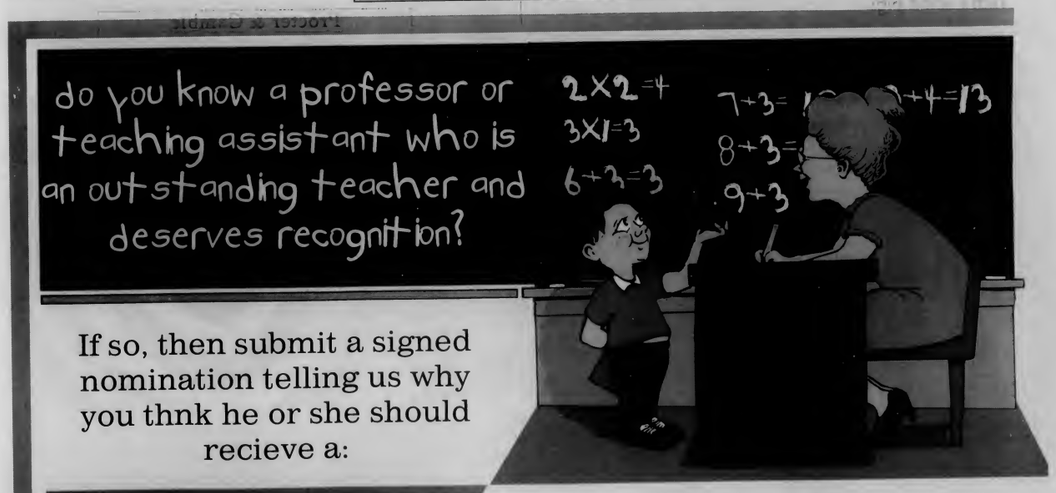
The island is reached by ferry from St.-Joseph-de-la-Rive, a small town with a maritime museum, restaurants, gift shops and farms. The area is popular with tourists.

Albert Tremblay, a witness who arrived shortly after the accident, said there was a 60-foot drop from the highway to the spot where the Mercier bus landed.

"I looked out the window and saw the bus," he said. "It didn't make the turn and it fell into the hole."

Tremblay, his son and others rushed out immediately to help the injured.

At the scene, emergency workers and passersby helped shuttle bodies from the bus, which was propped on its side in the ravine between the hill and an elevated length of railroad track that straddles a tributary of the St. Lawrence.



A 1974 accident at the same highway location took 15 lives. That accident was apparently caused by engine trouble.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

It's gotta hurt. . .

Harley Newman, in a campus activities production last Friday night, allows students to stand on him while lying on a bed of 1,000 nails. Students were invited to try the bed of nails themselves after the show.

If so, then submit a signed nomination telling us why you thnk he or she should recieve a:

Alumni and Current Undergraduate or Graduate Students May Submit Nominations

Send Your Nomination to:

Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Provost
362 Whitmore
545-2328(Fax)

Deadline: Friday, October 31,1997

Have Questions? Contact: Nancy Kahn @ 545-2554 or nmkahn@provost.umass.edu

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Fooling Ourselves

Ever stop to think about all those electrical impulses that shoot around inside a computer? No? I don't blame you. For the most part all we need out of a computer is something to type a paper, play a game or mail a friend. Thankfully, there are many layers that separate us from the electrical signals and binary codes upon which our computers operate. These layers allow us to do things like send letters and write papers, while giving us the illusion that the electronic data which we work upon is as real as pen and paper. Most of the time, this abstraction from the technology behind our computers is highly desirable. However, this same distance can sometimes lead us to fool ourselves when dealing with computers.

Such is the case with the internet. Through our web-browsers and remote terminals, it seems as if it is all just one huge collection of information. The entirety of it all is just a click away.

Paolo Piselli

All our senses tell us that this global network transcends the physical world. We don't waste a moment worrying about the streams of data racing in and out of our computers and across the globe. This could be considered testament to the success of the layers of abstraction that we have built up — the layers that allow us to harness the power of the internet. But now, the danger of stacking illusion upon illusion is becoming apparent as the users of this electronic fabrication clash with those who would re-tether the internet to the physical world.

Around the globe, governing bodies and legal systems have begun reeling the internet back to earth. One example of this pull is the trial of Robert and Marleen Thomas of Milpitas, Calif. In the United States, every community is allowed to outlaw 'obscene' materials — materials that are exceptionally offensive and have no redeeming social or artistic value. People who attempt to distribute obscene materials into the community can be convicted by these laws. The Thomases, who run an electronic bulletin board system in Milpitas, Calif., were tried and convicted of violating community obscenity laws in Memphis, Tenn. The basis of the case was that someone in Memphis downloaded 'obscene' materials from the Thomas's bulletin board — therefore the Thomases knowingly distributed material over the internet that was considered obscene in the Memphis locality.

To some, this conviction seems insane. Was not the individual in Memphis the one who downloaded the obscenity? Can the Thomases be held accountable for simply making the materials available? What is to prevent Memphis Tennessee from attempting to convict anyone who makes 'obscene' materials available over the internet? The case of the Thomases raises questions regarding whether or not computers should be governed by the laws of the locations in which they reside. Some argue that the internet is just another communication tool, similar to mail and telephone, even if more advanced. In the minds of these people, communications over a computer should fall under the same jurisdiction as phone calls and postal mail. Others believe that the internet should be allowed to transcend geographically delimited law, even though there is no precedent for such an exception. To them, directly linking the abstract information to the underlying infrastructure seems ludicrous.

Why should a package sent via the post office be considered the same one sent via the internet? When one sends a package via the post office, there is the address, with its country, state, town and street; there is the truck that comes to pick it up; there is the jet that flies across country; there is the truck that delivers the package to its destination. When one sends a package via the internet, it seems that there is simply the push of a button, and it arrives. But however it may appear, beneath that button is an internet-protocol address, with its cryptic specification for our internet provider's computer. Unseen is the stream of data as it is routed through the various transfer-stations of the internet. Unheard is the convoy of binary signals propagating down the phone-lines into our computer. Beneath the abstraction that is our perception of the internet — there indeed lies a package sent from one physical location to another.

What will happen to the internet as it becomes bound by the politics of the computers that comprise it? The case involving the Thomases is troubling in that it shows us that, even without legislation like the Communications Decency Act, places like Memphis, Tenn. can regulate our free speech. It also alarms us to how little control we have over how our information can be sent — if we could simply tell our computers "don't send obscenity to Memphis," then problems like this could be solved. Maybe in the future the internet will be redesigned in such a way we can easily avoid offending Memphis and anyone else. Either way, we are limiting what we can say to each other as we would in real life.

As for the internet transcending the physical world — we were just fooling ourselves.

Paolo Piselli is a UMass student.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Next week, a public demonstration will be held to oppose one of the most malignant cancers on the UMass campus today. "The Rally to End All Frivolous Protests" will convene on the Student Union steps on Tuesday at noon. Bring signs and noisemakers and be prepared to chant... "Hey, hey!... Ho, ho!... Frivolous protests have got to go!"

Mark McGrath

* * *

I'm going to drink a case of beer in two hours 'cause I'm a typical UMass student, and I think that's cool.

* * *

A new public service project will unite two of UMass' most loved departments next semester. As part of the unique project, the world-renowned polymer science department will be using its newly-developed space age materials to construct the world's largest prophylactic. "Supercondom" will be unveiled next spring, when Health Services will use it to demonstrate proper usage on the W.E.B. Du Bois Library. The project is expected to cost $15 million and will result in a 240 percent increase in student fees.

* * *

And while we're on the subject of Health Services (this item, unlike the previous one is true). Last year at about this time, I went to visit my friends at UHS because I had a rash of some type. Despite the fact that I told the nurse practitioner that I had already had the chicken pox, and despite the fact that the blotches didn't even look like chicken pox, I was diagnosed with... you guessed it! I was told to go into immediate isolation. When I was fully convinced that they had misdiagnosed me, and after having missed three full class days in isolation, I returned and was told that they messed up. Thanks UHS!

I'm just glad they didn't give me a pelvic examination and put me on the pill.

* * *

I wish I were still on the meal plan. Wheatball grinders sure sound good!

* * *

Is it just me, or is nobody noticing the fact that SGA is not operational?

* * *

Had enough of those weasely credit card freaks chasing you around with water bottles and free T-shirts?

Here's a solution. Next time you are accosted, take the shirt and fill out the application with the name and address of your favorite UMass administrator. For example, Chancellor David K. Scott, 374 Whitmore Administration Building, University of Massachusetts, 01003. Don't forget the phone number. It's (413) 545-2211.

I bet you a water bottle those credit hawks will be sent away before you can say "no annual fee."

* * *

I haven't heard anything about gen-ed reform lately, but that's not going to stop me from throwing my two cents in. My suggested requirement would involve not students, but faculty. In order to teach a class, professors should have to complete a requirement in VCR competency. I can't count on all my fingers and toes the number of times I've witnessed an absolute genius of an instructor lacking the common sense to operate the simplest of VCRs.

Subject matter for the course would include checking that the power cord is plugged in and making sure the tape is in the machine. Prerequisite for the course... last semester's instructional seminar, "How to Operate an Overhead Projector."

* * *

Whatever happened to "Topless coming soon?"

* * *

Keeping with tradition, I'll now proceed with the obligatory Halloween Costumes bit. I'd give anything to see...

- UMass President Billy Bulger as the invisible man.
- SGA President Lia Wong as the Terminator.
- Martin F. Jones (Millennial Prophet) as a psychic friend.

* * *

Over the course of my last few years here at the Collegian, I have taken a number of cheap shots at the Cannabis Reform Coalition. And now it's time for me to accept my shortcomings and admit that the CRC isn't that bad. It's worse.

As if advocating the violation of shared space with smoke and incense isn't enough, their arguments are based on an individual's rights... the same set of rights that are violated every time a drug-free student is forced to choke down stray marijuana smoke because they have no other way of getting to their room than via a cloudy hallway. There's a violation for you.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle, or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by email (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545-1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Editorials should be 500-700 words long and should include a phone number so we can call you back.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

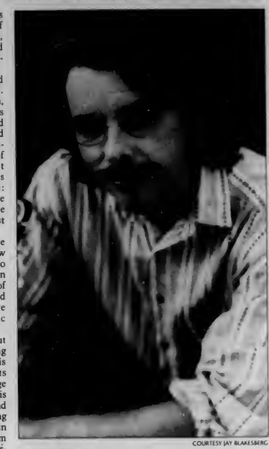
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Anger tops in American acoustic

Welcome all to my other column (besides "Jazz/Blues Weekly"). This column will delve into the world of American acoustic music, be it in the styles of rock, country, folk, bluegrass, or whatever else we can find which embraces the acoustic guitar or other non-electric central instruments.

I would say the album Heritage, issued by Island Records, would be a great place to start off. Multi-instrumentalist Darol Anger (he excels on violin, mandolin and a few other instruments on the disc) has decided to recast some age-old broadside ballads and roots music in new and atmospheric acoustic masterpieces by a panache of some of the greatest acoustic musicians around today. The lineup is a who's who in acoustic song writing and performance: Northampton's own Dar Williams, Bela Fleck, Jane Siberry, Mary Chapin- Carpenter, John Gorka, Willie Nelson, David Grisman and Fleck's Flecktone bassist Victor Wooten on a few tracks.



Joshua Boyd

The changing cast on the album take songs like "Pretty Polly," "Oh Death," "Down In The Willow Garden" and others, adding a very ethereal quality to the songs due to echoing instruments seeming to slip in underneath other instruments to provide a true sense of depth to the old tunes. An album like this is a very good introduction to many of the above names which have very concrete places in today's American acoustic music.

You have performers like the ones I listed above, but there are also those who are just starting out, struggling to headline a paying gig. One of these such people is right here on campus. A University of Massachusetts graduate student, Mark Erelli, has been attracting large crowds in coffee- houses around New England with his high voice, and catchy hook-laden folk/rock songs and ballads like "California" and "River Road." This young man, who's opened up for Dan Bern among others in the past, has put out a CD entitled "Long Way From Heaven," which is a very easy-going and enjoyable listen. Look out for him in December at Fire & Water after he's toured around New England and even down to Pennsylvania over the next two months.

Speaking of young people, Sugar Hill has released the debut album, Just You Wait & See, of the 18-year-old singer Tina Adair who has the most smooth and sweet yet mature voice this side of Alison Krauss. Actually, she employs Alison's bass-playing brother Viktor on the album, as well as fiddler Aubrey Haynie, whose new album, Doin' My Time came out the same day as Adair's.

Adair's album is all vocal songs (she is only a singer, so go figure). The 12 songs, two of which are written by her — one also written with her brother Keith — and stand as terrific compositions, are all very melodic and splendid performances. Veteran dobro player and the producer of Just You Wait & See, Jerry Douglas guests on a few songs, adding his instrumental weeps and exaltations to "By The Time It Gets Dark," and "Nobody But You." Krauss, the previously uncontended "Queen Of Modern Bluegrass" may now have some definite competition.

Darol Anger

COURTESY JAY BLAKESBERG

Haynie's Doin' My Time, which features Bela Fleck on banjo on three songs, is a mostly instrumental album with many foot-stomping fast-paced solos by Haynie on fiddle and mandolin, Bryan Sutton (background vocalist on Just You Wait & See with Alan O'Bryant, also on Doin' My Time), on particularly jazzy guitar and Union Station guitarist/vocalist Dan Tyninski howling the title track.

Suzzy Roche's new album Holy Smokes (Red House) is not as exciting musically or lyrically as any of the four above. Most of her lyrics and music take on cliches like a dog takes on fleas. In the opener "My My Broken Heart," she croons over below average folk-rock "If I had a million dollars / I would Go To See A Doctor / Hey doctor could you set me free from the pain." These types of lyrics occur all over the album with sometimes mellow and nice, often boring folkie guitar carrying them along.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Pitt shines in Seven Years in Tibet

Controversial movie tells story of former Nazi & Dali Lama

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

SEVEN YEARS IN TIBET
Directed by Jean-Jacques Annaud with Brad Pitt, David Thewlis, Mako
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

Seven Years In Tibet is a rich film which succeeds in simultaneously portraying the transformation of an individual through an emersion in a different culture; while presenting the political undercurrents of the time, through an outsider's eyes.

Director Jean-Jacques Annaud combined all the right elements: great shots of extraordinary landscapes, a strong screenplay and powerful acting performances to tell a convincing and moving story.

The film begins in 1939 when Austrian Heinrich Harrer (Brad Pitt) joins countryman Peter Aufschnaiter (David Thewlis) and his team on an expedition to Nang Parbat, one of the highest peaks in the Himalayas. Harrer leaves behind his pregnant wife of four years — a decision which haunts him for the rest of the film. Harrer's change in character, from a good-looking famous but unhappy mountain climber to an individual with an understanding of friendship, Tibetan culture, and a desire to be a father to his son, is a key element to the movie and is conveyed well through Pitt's acting.

The fact that Harrer was supposed to be a "bad guy," has not rescued the production from controversy. In 1997, after the film completed principal photography, Germany's Stern Magazine claimed Herrer was a member of the National Socialist (Nazi) party. Harrer claimed he joined the party to further his freedom as a climber. In the film Harrer did not care about politics, anything else for that matter, except mountain climbing. While it is quite difficult for the world to forgive an individual with ties to that party, the fact that Harrer left Austria before World War II and the Holocaust, combined with the understanding that the film is primarily about events in Tibet, should prevent an audience from dismissing this important story.

With the onset of World War II the expedition team was arrested in Indian territory for being citizens of enemy nations. (India, at the time a colony of Great Britain who had just declared war on Germany and its annexed Austria.) The group does not manage to escape the prison camp until 1942, and only Harrer and Aufschnaiter make it out of India and into Tibet.

Quickly the two find out that Tibet is not a country which views foreigners highly. The two scavenge for survival until they sneak into the Holy City of Lhasa, where they are taken in by an aristocrat Kungo Tsarong (Mako). Tibetans had feared a prophecy in which the country is overrun by foreigners. Tsarong defends his decision to the hierarchy by arguing that they

Turn to PITT, page 7

COURTESY DAVID APPLEBY

Brad Pitt stars as Heinrich Harrer, an Austrian mountain climber whose odyssey of self-discovery is set against the spiritual and sweeping majesty of Tibet.

The Undergraduate Business Club & SOM Placement Office present

SOM
CAREER DAY 1997

All Students are cordially invited to attend!

Date: Tomorrow, Wednesday, Oct 15th

Place: Campus Center Auditorium

Time : 1pm - 5pm

Attire: Professional Dress Preferred (Suit and tie for men, skirt and blouse for women)

Companies in attendance:

Aerotek, Inc.
American Express Financial Advisors
American Power Conversion
Au Bon Pain
Barnes & Noble
Bay Networks
Black & Decker
The Boston Company
Caldor
C.W. Costello
Cigna Corporation
CSC
Data General
Deluxe Corporation
Digital Equipment Corporation (Financial Management)
Digital Equipment Corporation (Manufacturing - Nashua, NH)
E & J Gallo
EDS
Enterprise Rent - A - Car
Filene's
Ferguson Enterprises, Inc.
GE Financial Management Program
Great West Employee Benefits
Hart Re
Heublein
International Paper
J.C. Penney Catalog
J.C. Penney Stores
John Hancock Financial Advisors
KPMG Peat Marwick
Lockheed Martin Corporation
Macy's
Marriott Hotels
NCR Systemedia
New England Funds
Northeast Utilities
Northwestern Mutual Life
Office Environments of New England
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbrokers
Osco Drug
The Pioneer Group
Pratt & Whitney
Procter & Gamble
Providian Bancorp
Putnam Investments
Sears Roebuck & Co.
Sherwin Williams
Smithkline Beecham
Solion
Stop & Shop
TJX Companies
Teradyne
3 - COM
Travelers
Wallace, Inc.
Wolf & Co.

Looks like a dismal year on the

Alex Iglesias

For the past number of years television programming has been in a steady decline. Excuse me, it's more like the great depression of TV. Somehow those prestigious and highly regarded producers and writers — who are supposedly creative — have failed to entertain their comedy-starved audiences.

In response to their unproductive efforts to creating any relevancy or a possible chuckle or two, they've managed to arise with a genuinely ridiculous idea. If anyone has ever heard the myth that you can't teach an old dog new tricks... Please, reset your ideologies — the networks have proven us wrong. Let me re-phrase. They have made a valiant effort at redefining the myth.

It is true, perhaps even daunting at times, when you're flipping through the channels and come across the same actor, with two completely different hairstyles — let us not mention clothing. Can you remember those embarrassing yearbook candids back in your glory days? You know the ones titled "most changed since freshman year." That pretty much sums it up when you come across Scott Baio in re- runs of "Charles In Charge," then suddenly notice he's starring in FOX's new sitcom "Rewind." Out of sudden impulsive behavior my first line of defense against this televised blasphemy was to blare out crying. It seems "Rewind" is rewinding itself back in time — destination 1980's.

Baio is not alone in his quest to become the first martyr ever in the history of primetime TV. This theatrical crusade to save the art of television programming, is fully re- enforced by a cavalry of long-forgotten Hollywood heroes. In fact, it is my assumption that this "Retired Actors' Guild of America" — my spontaneous creation of an actors' club — will eventually hold informational conventions tentatively titled "No work, No pay. There is always television."

The comforting thought is that within this pageantry of 70's and 80's pre-Madonnas, there still lies a handful of humorously entertaining actors. Revered legends along the lines of Bill Cosby and dancer/actor Gregory Hines will present their somehow tireless and perennial homestyle punch-lines.

Among this short, yet distinguished list of come-back shows, two have already made their presence known last season — "Cosby"(CBS) and Michael J. Fox's "Spin City"(ABC). It's baffling, but Fox will always be the adorably conservative Alex P. Keaton of NBC's "Family Ties." The entire problem facing these old, ambitious actors is that they each contain a TV/movie persona which Americans can relate to. Sure, Cosby is still the same lovable, family oriented comedian he has always been, but what about Judd Hirsch.

Hirsch is now comforted in his bosom buddy show "George & Leo"(CBS), which co-stars Bob Newhart, with the challenge of playing a flip-side role of his forgotten "Taxi" persona. If you happen to be a self-indulged masochist, perhaps Tim Currey will suit your fancy. Currey's new role in ABC's "Over The Top" doesn't show much promise for a second season run. It seems Currey just touches that sweet spot we can't get over, after his 70's lingerie driven hit from The Rocky Horror Picture Show — "The Pelvic Thrust."

Let's face it. It's just another year, with just another show. Producers and writers alike are struggling for both new material and new actors while they're digging up the 80's archives. Only a few will survive this network struggle for material and it's going to be up to the fresh new faces to tug this barge of a season along 'till summer. Possibly a few persevering veterans such as Tony Danza will balance the field of play, but don't get your hopes up — the future is grim. Is it true that John Ritter is looking for work? Oh no! There go the networks.

Alex Iglesias is a Collegian Staff Member.

One acts a spirited & emotional night

By Kristin Stewart
Collegian Correspondent

AN EVENING OF ONE-ACTS
Rand Theater
Oct. 11

Instead of calling it An Evening of One-Acts by Early African-American Women, perhaps we should call it An Evening of Spirit, Courage and Emotion. Audiences were guaranteed to experience all three characteristics at the show. The one-acts were sponsored by the University of Massachusetts and New WORLD Theater.

The Evening of One-Acts was an attempt by the two theaters to bring to the stage three of the most profound and important pieces of theater written by African-American women between 1920 and 1940. Each play focuses on a different aspect of African-American life such as slavery, poverty and oppression.

The first play, Shirley Graham's It's Morning, was directed by Judie Al-Bilali. The play dealt with a mother's desire to protect her child at any price. Set on a plantation at the end of the Civil War, the audience witnessed the cruelty of slavery and the inner turmoil it caused for all those affected by the practice.

Georgia Douglas Johnson's Plumes was directed by Beth Maxwell. As the second piece of the night, the play portrayed an African-American woman struggling to keep herself and her daughter alive.

The final piece, The Purple Flower by Marita Bonner, took the audience on a spiritual journey through the oppression of the African-Americans. Directed by James Vesce and performed by members of the Domick Street Voices of Boston, the play attempts to show through abstract acting, song and dance the struggle African-Americans face in trying to make a place for themselves and to get to "Somewhere."

The evening was highlighted by Bonita Oliver's convincing portrayal of the crazed and distraught Cissie in It's Morning. Fran Anderson was absolutely spectacular as Charity Brown in Plumes, and choreographer Shaumba Yandje Dibiunga's work in The Purple Flower coincides beautifully with the explosive African drumbeats.

There were a few downsides to these performances. At times, the acting fell flat and contrived. The set also spoke of a minimalist style. There certainly was no Broadway styled-staging at this performance.

However, the theater department and New WORLD Theater succeeded in bringing a thoroughly entertaining and evocative piece of theater to the University.

UMass Orchestra performed brilliantly

By Tricia Van Winkle
Collegian Staff

UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA
Fine Arts Center
October 9, 1997

In the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, the University of Massachusetts Orchestra held a fantastic performance. The performance was led by Conductor Mark Russell Smith and his an orchestra which consisted of more than 75 musicians and 20 different instruments. It was impressive to see all the musicians sitting with their assorted instruments, dressed in black and ready to put on a remarkable performance.

The first composition performed was Samuel Barber's Symphony No. 1 in One Movement, Op. 9. This piece was a wonderful way to begin the night as it held the audience in a trance-like state. The Symphony was intensified by instant changes from loud and bold melodies to soft and gentle rhythms. The fortes in the piece where enhanced by the percussion section played by Brandon Flynn, Nick Angelis, Matthew Pagnotta, Colin McNutt, Daniel Albert and David Wolf.

The next composition was Ellen Taafe Zwilich's, Concerto for Horn and Strings. Laura Klock accompanied the orchestra with her horn. Before this piece began many of the musicians left the stage to give the horn and string musicians more room.

This composition started slowly and quietly and contained a dark, haunting melody in the first few measures. Then the violins, violas and cellos came in and lightened the piece, giving it an aura of hope and happiness. The work consisted of a few measures where the stringed instruments, including the violins, were plucked rather than strummed. This brought the music a different texture than other pieces creating a truly intriguing work for this composition. The audience showed their approval by applauding loudly and wildly when the lights went down.

Last was William Schuman's New England Triptych; Three Pieces for Orchestra after William Billings. It was "Be Glad Then," "America," "When Jesus Wept" and "Chester." For this composition all the musicians returned to the stage as the piece began with a quiet drum solo, it was an exciting composition that had a breath of new life to it. The work was interesting, because it used the plucking method with the stringed instruments encompassed into the melody.

The night was one of unmistakable talent as the musicians played proud, the conductor was a strong leader, and the composers speak for themselves. The auditorium was filled with the life of music and appreciation.

Got Collegian?

RESTAURANT GUIDE

Contest ! Readers can enter to win a FREE dinner for two.

Coming Oct. 17, 1997

Sponsored by: OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-3699

The Collegian is the butter on your bread!!!

providian financial corporation

where the people are as innovative as the products

To be innovative is to find new ways of doing, thinking, being. To be an innovator is to be a change maker — a creative problem-solver — with a unique approach to life and work. At Providian, innovation means we never leave well enough alone. In fact, many of our financial "firsts" have set the newest industry standards.

To be an industry innovator takes an indomitable spirit. The courage to stand out and drive the industry down new roads. If you've got it, come engineer an exciting future at Providian Financial. We seek candidates with academic accomplishments in Engineering, Finance, Computer Science, Statistics, Business and Marketing.

Please see us at the School of Management Career Fair on Wednesday, October 15 at the Campus Auditorium

If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Providian Financial Corporation, College Relations, 201 Mission Street, 13th Floor, San Francisco, CA 94105. FAX: (415) 278-6037. E-mail: college@providian.com. Website: www.providian.com. We value diversity of culture, professions and experience and are an equal opportunity employer.

WITH OFFICES IN SAN FRANCISCO, PLEASANTON AND SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

PROVIDIAN Financial

engineering your future

Right Here Right Now!

The perfect opportunity has arrived for you to begin a career unparalleled by most other industries!

We're Ames. One of the dominant discounts store chains in America, with more that $2 billion sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the northeast. Currently, we're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills!

Assistant Buyer Training Program

Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where farsightedness and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 10-week training program for you that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training with a successful Buyer.

Upon successful completion of the 10-week program, you will become an Assistant Buyer. Then, you'll work alongside a Buyer, assisting in the management of a $20 to $100 million businessi As an Assistant Buyer, you will continue to participate in ongoing developmentai seminars, Business Analysis Group Workshops, and other training support programs...all designed to ultimately prepare you for a career in Buying.

Finance Executive Trainees

As a Finance Executive Trainee, you will participate in our 10-week training program, designed to provide you with an understanding of the fundamentals of retail and orient you with Ames. On-the-job training in our Finance Division is coupled with seminars and classes taught by senior management.

Upon successful completion of the 10-week training program, rotational on-the-job training continues as you work within the various departments of our Finance Division, such as Planning & Analysis, Internai Audit, Accounting, and Accounts Payable.

Our commitment to your long-term professional development lasts throughout your career at Amesi

Please come to talk to us!
We'll be participating in the School of Management
Career Day 1997 on:
Wednesday, October 15th
1pm - 5pm

Contact your placement office for more detailed information or to schedule an interview.

Ames

Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

COURTESY DEAN WILLIAMS

Blast off

The problems are just beginning for NASA when the space agency signs on rocket scientist Fred Z. Randall (played by Harland Williams) and a precocious chimpanzee to join the crew of the first manned mission to Mars. The Disney flick opened this weekend.

■ pitt

continued from page 5

must help two people in need, and that the two men cannot overpower a nation. It was amazing how much had changed in the course of the film, at this time it was believed the two Austrians were the only foreigners in the country. By the films end, the nation was overrun by the Chinese Army.

When Aufschnaiter marries a Tibetan woman, Harrer feels a strong sense of loneliness until one day his presence was requested by the young Dali Lama. The relationship which develops between Harrer and the Dali Lama is the most interesting aspect of the film. Harrer teaches the Dali Lama about the western world, and Harrer comes to terms with his personal demons.

One interesting note which should be mentioned is the character of Great Mother, mother to his holiness the Dali Lama, is played by her real life daughter Jetsun Pema. Pema, who had never acted before, got special permission from the Dali Lama to participate in the movie.

"My mother was much loved by everyone who knew her, and the Tibetans kept saying they didn't want just anyone playing her," Pema said. A-

Lomax anthology mixes styles and sounds

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
The Southern Journey Series, Volumes 1–3
Rounder Records

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part review covering all eight discs of this collection. Volumes 4–8 will be examined in the coming weeks.

The year of 1997 has been deemed the year that music collector and writer Alan Lomax's collected recordings will be released in as comprehensive a way as possible. Luckily, the Cambridge-based Rounder Records was up to the task and so, two gentlemen by the names of Matthew Barton and Andrew L. Kaye have pieced together the recordings made by Lomax in the years 1959–60 in Virginia, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, Kentucky, Georgia and Tennessee in a 13–disc series titled Southern Journey.

Most of the recordings on the eight–themed discs that are out already were previously released in a similar series compiled by the Prestige label. However, many of those recordings were edited and there are a good number on the new Southern Journey discs that are previously unreleased.

Volume One, Voices From The American South, acts as a preface to the subsequent volumes. Introducing the a cappella balladry of Arkansas residents Almeda Riddle and Ollie Gilbert, the gospel a cappella with clapping style of the Georgia Sea Island singers, the multi-instrumentalist Hobart Smith from Virginia, bluesman Fred McDowell from Mississippi among others. Disc one does have some rare highlights, like Vera Ward Hall's rendition of the "Mama's Gonna Buy" lullaby (forget about "diamond rings"), and the ensemble of Smith, the Sea Island singers, Bahamian drummer Nat Rahmings and Mississippi cane fife player Ed Young on a couple of tunes.

The second volume, Ballads And Breakdowns: Songs From The Southern Mountains, is a collection of many Smith performances (on banjo, fiddle, guitar, piano and vocals, he spins off blues and ancient folk ballads like a true bard), as well as a few a cappella ballads and lullabies by his smooth–voiced yet aged sister Texas Gladden. Also here are many bluegrass–style breakdowns by the elder Charlie Higgins and Ruby Vass' guitar–and–vocal balladry. All the tunes here bring to mind the smooth contours of Virginia's Blue Ridge and the high, lonesome sound it is known for.

Volume Three drives us down 61 Highway Mississippi for some Delta Country blues, Spirituals, Work Songs & Dance Music from the likes of Ed Young and his brother and grandson playing music on the high–pitched cane–fife and deep drums, creating a true African–American connection with the blues and African polyrhythms both encased in his music. There are also many guitar blues by Fred McDowell, and the harmonic vocal and rhythmic miracles that the unfortunate men at the Parchman Farm penitentiary attained.

Here ends the first part of our exploration of this amazing set which is not just music, but instead a historical document.

The Arts & Living page is always looking for new writers. Come and get involved with New Englands's Best College Daily.

At the top 25 U.S. law schools, 3 out of 4 students who prepped for the LSAT chose Kaplan.

—1997 Bruskin-Goldring Research Study of Students at the Top 50 Law Schools

Call today and find out why 3 million students have chosen Kaplan to help them score higher.

LSAT Free Class Thursday 10/16 7:30pm! Learn how experts ace the exam!

expert teachers supe ior mi ate ials smart technology proven results

KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com

*LSAT is a registered trademark of the Law School Admission Council.

Even At Four, You Had A Good Head For Business.

Face it, you didn't come to college to be just like everyone else, so why not ally yourself with one of America's top internships? You'll make your resume stand out after graduation, plus earn real money while still in college. Some of our students earn a five-figure income. Put the Northwestern Mutual Life name to work for you, and realize that you're worth much more than you think. Maybe The Steffen Agency should hear from you. Internship openings available now.

For more information, stop by our booth at the Undergraduate Business Club Career Fair on Wednesday, October 15th.

Katie Kane
The Steffen Agency
413/748-6000
katekane@javanet.com

Northwestern Mutual Life®
The Quiet Company®
www.NorthwesternMutual.com
For sales career opportunities 1-800-CALL-NML

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE℠

50% Off!!

Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.

Classes Start Wed, Oct. 15th 7:00pm Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover

1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS
ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • MATH

TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.

When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.

Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – together, Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems and Raytheon TI Systems are driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.

At Raytheon you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com.

WE'LL BE ON YOUR CAMPUS ON OCTOBER 21, 1997.
CONTACT YOUR CAREER PLACEMENT OFFICE TODAY TO SCHEDULE AN INTERVIEW.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and, System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30 Sat 12:00-7:30 Closed Tuesday

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$154	$287
PARIS	$209	$390
ROME	$266	$497
MADRID	$218	$407

Subsidized flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave NY NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Tuesday, October 14, 1997

Two years later: Million Man March remembered

Editors Note: This piece originally ran in the Daily Collegian on Oct. 18, 1995 after the Million Man March on Washington. This being the second anniversary of the March, we at Black Affairs felt it fitting to let those who weren't there get a look at what it was like on that historic day. Long live the spirit of the Million Man March! Peace and Stay in Knowledge.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — At 5:30 a.m., the University of Massachusetts delegates to the Million Man March rose from their cramped positions in the three buses in which they had traveled, and stepped out into the chilly October air.

Hundreds of miles and over nine hours had past since the 150 black students, faculty and administrators had left the final trip registration and sendoff by their sisters at the Malcolm X Center in Southwest Residential Area, marched and clapped their way across campus and boarded the vehicles for the restless journey.

Now, these black men found themselves in middle of the parking lot of Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium, freezing, awaiting instruction from Black Student Union president Dan Lizana, around whom they had surrounded eagerly.

The words from Lizana were simple — the marchers were to try to stay with one of the chaperons, return to RFK by 5:00 p.m. and prepare for a 6:00 departure back to Amherst.

By 5:45 a.m., the UMass delegation was on the move.

"I feel good"

Although shuttle buses were available, fare prices to the Capitol district were too high for many, who opted instead to trek by foot to the site of the march.

As he walked toward the destination, Harlem native Rex Quaye, a sophomore, said his first thoughts were of his family back in New York. "[illegible]

"The whole world will be watching," he said. "My father is probably up watching it on 'Good Day, New York' right now. Both of my sisters have been to D.C. before, but I've never been. It looks like the first time will be for a good cause."

The time is 6:20 a.m. and Lizana is a few paces ahead of Quaye when the Capitol building becomes visible over the horizon. Lizana, whose brother Al, a 1995 UMass graduate and former Student Trustee, accompanied the Springfield group of supporters, said he was already thinking of the progress to made upon the delegation's return to campus.

"I can't wait for everything to begin when we get back," he said. "Seeing all those buses filled with brothers who want positive change was very uplifting. I feel good about bringing in three buses from UMass."

Walking past the driveway entrance to the Capitol, Lizana suddenly paused at the sight of a tall, light-skinned black man standing at the ajar back passenger side door of a red Lexus. It is Dr. Benjamin Chavis, one of the primary organizers of the march.

Lizana greeted Chavis, who politely returned the gesture before climbing into the automobile to use the cellular telephone inside. For the rest of the way to the Capitol lawn, Lizana is smiling from ear to ear.

It was still dark when Lizana and the rest of the UMass marchers reached the lawn, but the silhouettes of thousands and speaker-amplified African percussion could already be discerned. Silky 70's soul followed the drumming, and then the Godfather of Soul took over at 6:45 a.m.

Still growing, the crowd was brought to life upon hearing the opening riff to James Brown's "I Feel Good." Among those either singing or dancing was UMass maintenance employee Armando Hernandez.

"I think it's great to see a rainbow of brothers here," he said. "It's something when peaceful brothers come from all over the globe. You can feel the electricity."

At the age of 44, Hernandez said he is new to activism, despite having witnessed the Civil Rights Movement.

"I missed this in the 60's," he said. "I was young, but I remember seeing it on T.V., hearing it on the radio."

Faces could soon be distinguished as the sun completed its rise, also revealing more men arriving on all sides of the Capitol.

"Mic check, one, two," a voice said over the loud speakers at 7:05 a.m., signaling the start of the day to come.

One million men

Al Lizana, one of UMass' most outspoken leaders during his time at the University, was surprisingly almost at a loss for words when the announcement was made at 10 a.m. that one million black men were in attendance at the march.

"Incredible," he said, shaking his head. "America will never be the same. Never."

His brother, Dan, was equally awestruck by the magnitude of the experience.

"This is history in the making," he said. "Feels good don't it."

First-year student Luis Quirama said he was glad the figure stood as such for reasons other than its historical, social and political ramifications.

"There were a lot of media people saying only a quarter– million people would come," he said. "But this has proved them wrong. There were a lot of media trying to downplay the whole march."

A Columbian native who moved to New York at the age of four, and attended four years of boarding at Milton Hershey School in Hershey, Pa. The world citizen Quirama said his participation in the event was still an experience unto itself.

"I've seen a lot, I've traveled a lot," he said. "But it is still overwhelming to see this many people. I'm glad to be a part of it."

Quirama also expressed his desire to see genuine progress made from the hours of positive messages the black men would receive that day.

"I hope this isn't in vain," he said. "I hope this will make improvements. Something needs to be done in this country, in these cities, in our minorities so that we're not having to be fed, but are feeding ourselves."

The march and beyond

Vice–Chancellor for Campus Activities, M. Ricardo Townes, stood among several other UMass students in the crowd, one bud of his Walkman in his left ear, the other tucked behind the earlobe. Simultaneously he was listening to both a talk show, on which the topic of the day was the march, and the live speakers themselves.

"This is massive this is huge," he said. "The key thing here is that everybody is in a positive head. a positive mind. People are polite, people driving by honk horns in support and I even saw a woman drive by and give us a thumb up."

Senior David Nuñez said the sheer numbers in attendance would be a refutal by black Americans of the preconceived disapproval of Farrakhan by many.

"This is going to send a real strong message to white America," he said. "It's going to send a real strong message to people who try to pick our leaders. It's going to break a lot of stereotypes."

Second–year MBA student, Willie Vick, said he was focused on what he could bring back to his fellow UMass students, particularly those who have not reached the graduate level, now an important factor in job competition.

"I want to get all undergraduate brothers and sisters focused on goals, future goals," he said. "And to further their education after graduation."

Perhaps the most awe–inspiring and spiritual part of the day arrived when, upon request from a Nation of Islam minister on stage, the marchers each passed a donation of a dollar through the crowd, depositing the cash into boxes circulated throughout the mass of hill–waiving arms.

"I have never seen anything like this in my life," Nuñez said. "The trust shown between the men, that was the point."

Al Lizana agreed that the faith exhibited by the estimated million–plus men was extraordinary.

"A million black men trusting each other with money," he said. "I saw some tens and twenties. What's more important is that Farrakhan trusted them."

As a wave of greed drifted above his head, it was Rex Quaye who may have best summarized the impact the Million Man March might have on black America.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The tought process

Dan Lizana takes it all in at the Million Man March on Washington, Oct. 16, 1995.

Answers to the question of you

Black man, this Thursday, Oct. 16, 1997 is the second anniversary of the Million Man March in Washington. If you didn't know, now you do and (more importantly) you have no excuse not to honor this most sacred of days. Not to imply that any of the distinguished brothas on this University of Massachusetts campus didn't plan on attending the events planned for that day, but for those who may have accidentally caught a case of amnesia, let your confusion end and your clarity begin.

How often do you look in the mirror and ask yourself what it means to be a black man? Do you ever look deep inside and check yourself? Can you even begin to unlock the mysteries and knowledge of self and realize your full potential? Not many of us can. Not many of us do. Brothas all over this country are suffering, because we don't know ourselves and because we don't know each other.

Humphery brown III

The well of twisted, socialized thinking among black men is overflowing, while the springs of unity and self awareness run dry. We've been socialized (brainwashed is more like it) into believing that being a man means not showing pain. We're encouraged to be strong, in control and among all else, maintain dominance. We're told that our only real source of power comes from our manhood and not our minds. Along with being cursed with our blackness, the only thing that gives us any real value is between our thighs and we hold them like they are. This is the twisted truth about how we are taught to perceive ourselves. If congress could have its way, every black man in the country would think like this on the regular. The scary reality, with the exception of a few dedicated, proud and wise, is that we are playing those roles to a tee.

Two years ago, when 150 UMass men got on the buses to roll to the march, a statement was made. Those black men and the brothas and sistas that supported them, said that they were looking for a better way. They acknowledged the flaws in their mental and spiritual armor, and went to get fixed. They understood that they weren't born in a perfect world, but were damned if they used that as an excuse for apathy. laziness or failure. Those 150 black men, took it upon themselves to carry the burden of truth, look themselves directly in the eye and ask, "Am I really a man?"

Once again, as was asked two years ago, a call is being made to the black men on and surrounding the UMass campus. There is a special event planned for Oct. 16, 1997 and it requires the participation of every brotha who is able to run, walk, roll or crawl. The message is simple, plain, basic and (at the same time) intimidating.

The message for this Thursday is atonement.

It all begins in the Malcolm X Cultural Center, around 8:00 a.m., and ends at the Campus Pond in front of the W.E.B. DuBois Library Tower. For a specific listing of the agenda, see tomorrow's Collegian, but the call is already made. Brothas of UMass are being called to come forth and be made responsible, once again, but be warned.

Skepticism kills follow–through.

I remember the tons of skeptics that plagued us weeks before the March. Everyone was saying how it wasn't going to work and that there was going to be violence. But, for all the bad things that were spoken about the March, the one that hurt the most was when people would say that we weren't going to change. They said that we'd all go to the March, hear a few speeches, say a few prayers and come home with the same mentality that we've always had. At the most, we would have a good two weeks of a "Million Man March high", but in time it would all fade. Many of us fell victim to such skepticism and we never really made the change we may have wanted to. Perhaps many of those who did go to the March, found themselves doubting what they had experienced as if it was too good to be true or not a reality outside of that Capitol lawn. This can not be allowed again.

What keeps a man from being a real man? His peers. If all of your brothas are trying to keep righteous and do the things they need to do, most likely, you will follow. The same is true for the reverse. We all have to take responsibility for one another, particularly at UMass. Only we can do for us. No one else understands no matter how much they say they do. The logic is simple.

Would you send an electrician to teach a plumber how to fix a leaky faucet? Does an atheist give life lessons to a Christian? Of course not! So, why would you let anyone else teach you how to be a black man other than another black man? There are many things that we can all learn from one another, but when it comes to learning how to be a strong, wise and righteous brotha, no one who isn't a brotha can show you.

This Thursday, brothas are trying to make moves and right wrongs. The time for excuses and apathy is long past. You are your brothas keeper, whether you like it or not. When you've come to the end of this column and you don't think it applies to you. Look yourself in the mirror and ask, "Am I a man?" Then, ask your brotha.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian Columnist.

One time for the mind

Sister, will you hold my hands

Yes, the wonders of my skin and the wonders of being a beautiful black women gives me intrinsic energies that can't be fathomed by any.
When I see my sisters with complimentary colors of mahogany, rouge, red bone, blue black, honey pecan, high yellow, sandy brown and tawny red, the thought of this caresses my soul.
For we are the sisters, cousins, aunts, grandmothers, and great grandmothers. that boiled hot herbal tea when the roughness our first menstrual flow was unbearable.
We were the ones that took two hours to comb and pull the naps of Tracy's hair into four plaits using ribbons and barrettes to match.
While applying DAX to smooth out the sides.
Yes, we were the sisters cousins, aunts, grandmothers, and daughters, who cooked all day in the hot kitchen, as Shanice was the only one to make it to college.
When the shadows of life come racing down I ask, Sister will you hold my hand?
I look outward to see beyond that distant mountain, but yet I cannot see Sister will you hold my hand?
For we were created with unbreakable strength that cannot be fathomed.
The strength that our mothers had to stand when our fathers left and never came back.
The strength that she had to put a smile on her face when she had to work 60 hours a week to put food on the table.
The strength that she had to nurture care, and protect us from harm.
She taught us that since it was the Lord who created the world, whom shall we fear.
For we were the jewels as our mother's daughters. We clasped our golden hands tightly with our mothers of strength.
With these same hands, I ask, Sister will you hold my hand?

The strength that has been innate in us, has allowed many other women to fear the roar of a black woman. The black man has the utmost respect for his black women, although he knows that for many generations we have carried our black children into adulthood without him.

"Sister Will you Hold my Hand" is in response to the Million Women March. It is about time that an effort of such is being implemented. The importance of this march is that we as black women enter this with some frame of mind.

In a larger scale we have to ask ourselves, as a society of black women, where are we at? How are our young females, and elder women doing? Are our health issues being dealt with? How are we doing on an employment level?

Though all these questions can't be answered in one day, a mere observation is another way to gain some perspective.

Allana E. Todman

As Black women in this nation, we are the last on the economic poll. When race issues are brought up there is the comparison between the black and white man. When the general topic of women's issues is addressed, the majority of these do not relate to the present issues of the black woman.

That is why this march is very significant. Here we are taking the first step.

In this march we can implement what Dr. Bell Hooks calls, "Talking Back."

This concept is what she describes when black women are able to stand up for anything that they personally feel is hindering them. Whether on a communal, social or political scale this form of voice is the only avenue for black women not to be overlooked.

When there is a time like this when all women of color are called to unite, every black woman should attend. If you plan to be in the work force, and you plan to be successful, you need to attend. If you plan to get married, then you need to attend. If you plan to be healthy you need to attend.

In our generation, how to interact with confidence with our black men has not been talked of. How to support our black men in dealing with a society that treats him more harshly (while taking care of ourselves) has not been very positive.

If we don't learn about healthy lasting relationships and responsibility, then the high number of our young black people working in temp agencies and on unemployment programs will increase.

With the understanding that many single mothers who have children are no longer with the person they had the child with, the means to provide for the child on the father's viewpoint can be very depressing.

With many of our men in similar situations, trying to get by with a "fast cash" mentality, not having a degree will keep them at a lower class status.

A collective effort is more powerful when social change is brought about. Here is our chance to make that transition. When we "talk back," we allow ourselves, and our society around us to know that we are not a silent people. We as black women have carried our generations to this present time. We need to appreciate each other at this Million Women March, and vow that this first step will not be the last.

A chance to network with black women of all ages creates an environment that can shed light to many of our young black women.

We are the products of generations before us. Here is the opportunity to link our generations. The elder black woman that will be present carry years of experiences that no history book can relay. It's with a march like this that our own chapters of life learning can be created.

We as the women who created our black nation will come together to address our issues. Once again I ask, sister will you hold my hand?

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, October 14, 1997

Why the myth of Columbus remains important

Editor's Note: This article was originally a speech given at a rally in Boston last year. It was part of an anti-Columbus Day program.

Mahtowin Munro

We all learned pretty much the same story in school about Christopher Columbus. He was a very brave, windy person and determined white man. He wanted to prove the world was round so he went to find Queen of Spain and asked for some money, and [illegible] so interested in scientific progress, she gave it to him so that he could take three ships — the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria — on a voyage to India. After much hardship, he and his men arrived in what they thought was India and he named the people he found there "Indians." It turned out, however, that instead of Columbus finding a new trade route, he had discovered a new world — America. Everyone lived happily ever after. The end.

Mahtowin doesn't think so. And I'm sure you don't think so, either, or you wouldn't be here today.

So what is the truth about Columbus? First of all, it seems rather obvious that Columbus didn't discover anything. How can you discover land that is already inhabited and claim it for your own? Yet that is exactly what he did.

Also, Columbus didn't sail around the world because he wanted to prove that the world was round. Educated Europeans knew that in 1492. What he did want, however, was to make a fortune for himself. In fact, the terms he got Queen Isabella to agree to included that he would get ten percent of all wealth returned to Europe from any of his voyages that used his new trade route to what was supposed to be Asia.

Finally Columbus was the first explorer to arrive in the Americas. Chinese and African explorers had been visiting the west coast of the Americas centuries and the Vikings had arrived hundreds of years before Columbus did.

So why is Columbus important? Because he and his cohorts began the era of European colonialism.

In 1492, Spain, like other European countries, was crumbling economically because the feudal system was no longer capable of supporting the population. What was needed was new land and a new source of wealth. Columbus' voyage gave European economic zest in the arm.

At this time, land was seen as the region that was ripe for exploitation. The problem, at least for the Europeans, was that Turks controlled the known trade routes to Asia. That's why the Europeans embarked on holy wars and crusades against the Turks and fought to oust Islam and [illegible] Arab hysteria.

When Columbus promised, and what followed, the merchants of Spain and the group of Italian bankers who also backed Columbus, was a new trade route to Asia that would enable them to reap tremendous profits. Profits were without question the primary motivation for the voyages of Columbus. Of course, Columbus never made it to Asia. When he did first land on October 12, 1492 it was on land in the Bahamas. There, he and his men first encountered the Arawaks. Here is Columbus' description of the Arawaks from his diary:

"They are so naive and free with their possessions that no one who has not witnessed them, would believe it.

When you ask them for something they have, they never say no. To the contrary, they offer to share with anyone. They do not bear arms and do not know them, for I showed them a sword, they took it by the edge and cut themselves out of ignorance. They would make fine servants. With fifty men we could subjugate them all and do with them whatever we want. As soon as I arrived, on the first island which I found, I took some of the natives by force."

Within ten years of Columbus' first landing, virtually the entire Arawak population of the Bahamas — estimated to have been about 100,000 — was exterminated.

From the Bahamas, Columbus traveled down to Hispaniola, the island that now comprises Haiti and the Dominican Republic. He set up a base there, and leaving some sailors behind to hold the fort, he set sail for Spain. His cargo, he included some Arawaks whom he had seized as slaves, thus beginning the trans–Atlantic slave trade. Only six of these Arawaks survived that voyage back to Spain.

Once in Spain, Columbus lied through his teeth and told the Queen and his other financiers that he had found a new route to China. He told many tales, but he could provide massive amounts of gold, spices and other raw materials, as well as virtually unlimited numbers of slaves.

Only the part about the slaves was true.

Columbus returned to Hispaniola this time with more ships and more men. He discovered that the sailors he had left behind had been killed off by the Arawaks, who had gotten fed up with the Spanish forays in search of slaves for work and sex.

Columbus now began in earnest the establishment of a European–run economy on the island. In 1495, he and his men went on a massive slave hunt, capturing 500 Arawaks who were shipped back to Spain. Over 200 died on the voyage; many others died shortly afterward in captivity in Spain.

Columbus was under tremendous pressure to fill the pockets of his financial backers. Here is an example of how he responded to that: he decreed that all Arawaks over the age of 14 from the province of Cibao, in what is now Haiti, had to deliver a certain amount of gold every three months or fill the Spanish coffers. If they failed to do so, their hands were cut off and they bled to death. The Arawaks had been given an impossible task, as there was very little gold in Hispaniola. So they were hunted down with dogs, and killed. The Arawak people mounted tremendous resistance to the colonialists, but were faced with the technologically superior armaments of the Spanish: muskets, sword, horse and armor.

Arawaks by the tens of thousands were seized to work as slaves in huge mines and to dig in the mines. Very few could long survive the harsh working conditions. Malnourished women could no longer provide milk for their infants.

The Cheyenne people have a saying: "A nation is not defeated until the hearts of its women are in the ground." I believe that, literally and figuratively. Rendered sterile by disease and malnutrition, and unable to conceive children that would survive, the hearts of the Arawak women fell to the ground. The only resistance they could offer was to the Spanish: occasionally, rather than see them starve to death, Arawaks began committing mass suicide with cassava poison rather than be oppressed any longer by the colonialists. Even today, when you visit some parts of the Caribbean, local people will point to certain cliffs and tell you that there, 10 or 500 or 1,000 Arawaks jumped to their deaths rather than be oppressed any longer by the colonialists.

Bartolome de las Casas, a young Spanish priest who accompanied Columbus, wrote about the Spanish treatment of the native people in Cuba in the early 1500's:

"The Spaniards thought nothing of cutting Indians in two and twenties and of cutting off the heads of the hapless creatures at their backs."

Columbus and his compatriots held such disregard for the Arawaks, Tainos, Caribs, and other indigenous nationals of the Caribbean.

It is estimated that in 1492, prior to the invasion of European colonialists, there were some half a million to three million Arawaks in Hispaniola. By 1495, half of them were dead. By 1515, not more than 10,000 Arawaks were left alive. Not a single full–blooded Arawak is left alive today.

The wholesale slaughter of Native people cleared the way for European colonial occupiers of their new territory. Brutality and avarice would be the tone for many European conquistadors to follow, from Cortez in Mexico to the English in Massachusetts and Virginia.

By the year 1600, slightly more than a century after Columbus first landed in the Bahamas, it is estimated that 60 million Indigenous people of the Americas had died — 60 million human beings.

This devastation of the indigenous population of the Americas would pave the way for one of the most unspeakably brutal and terrible events in human history: the enslavement and exploitation of millions of Africans to the "New World." Only six years after Columbus first arrived in the Americas, Vasco Gama of Portugal would sail around the Cape of Good Hope in Africa, and the European exploitation of that continent would begin in earnest.

The number of African slaves who actually reached the Americas would run in the tens of millions. About 200 million Africans would die resisting capture or during the infamous Middle Passage. This forced outflow of millions of Africans would depopulate the continent and end up for exploitation and colonialism by Europe.

In less than less than a century, an inhuman racial system of racism would be firmly established by the European colonialists to justify the exploitation and oppression of Native and African people. Columbus' actions in 1492 set history on a course that has led to the Nazi Holocaust, the Rwandan genocide, and the Bosnian genocide. Today, the War Columbus, the Pilgrims and other colonialists brought with them was an invasion of our continents and are unbelievable: thirst for land, slave labor, and raw materials that could be used to benefit a tiny, incredibly wealthy, privileged class of people.

This, then is the legacy of Columbus: slavery, brutality, genocide, capitalist greed, and theft of lands.

Why is the Columbus myth so important? Because it says that fighting–skinned people from a supposedly superior culture have an inherent right to seize lands from their rightful occupants. It lays the foundation for the type of thinking that can justify everything from the U.S. theft of the southwestern U.S. from Mexico to U.S. intervention in Cuba and U.S. assaults on the people of Iraq. Columbus forms the very foundation of the U.S. government's rationalizations for imperialism.

But the colonialists and later the U.S. government never went unchallenged. Native nations fought long, hard and bravely in order to defend their land and way of life. Some people today think that fight ended in the 19th century, when such holdouts of resistance as the Apache hero Geronimo or the Metis leader Louis Riel were finally captured or killed. Some think the fight ended with the massacre of over 300 unarmed Native people, most of them elders, women and children at Wounded Knee in 1890.

But the attempts at genocide didn't end there, and neither did the resistance. We can look to the Native inspiring resistance of Native people in Canada, Chiapas, Brazil, Ecuador, Guatemala, El Salvador, Chile, Peru, right here in the United States and in many other countries, many of them engaged in armed struggles. Despite everything that the governments have done, Native people have refused to disappear. We have fought back by any means necessary to defend our lands, languages, traditions, our culture, and our land.

From 1492 until 1996 — these five hundred years, not only 500 years of oppression and genocide, but also 500 years of the peoples' resistance. All of us are survivors of Columbus — not just indigenous people. And it is this resistance of which I speak that has enabled us to survive.

I thought it was very fitting that, this past Saturday, on Columbus Day, Oct. 12, tens of thousands of Latinos — many of them indigenous — from around the country, gathered in Washington, D.C. to protest the government's war on immigrants. United American Indians of New England was proud to take part in that demonstration, and to point out that Clinton, Dole, Pete Wilson and the rest of these anti–immigrant politicians are themselves descendants of European immigrants. How dare they act as though they have a right to decide who can come into the U.S.? While we were there in DC, we saw a large contingent of Chicano/a students wearing a shirt that showed an Aztec man pointing and saying, "Who is the illegal alien, Pilgrim?" Who, indeed?

And so we continue the struggles every day on poor and working people in this country, on women, on poor children, immigrants, on lesbian, gay, bi, and transgendered people, on disabled people, and on all people from oppressed communities. We need to join our struggles together and fight on in the spirit of all our sisters and brothers murdered by the European invasion. Remember the Arawaks! Remember the Caribs, remember the Tainos, and sink the Nina, Pinta, and the Santa Maria!

Mahtowin Munro is the co-leader of the United American Indians of New England and national organizer for the National Peoples campaign.

Zionism and assassination redux

In the wake of the Rabin assassination almost two years ago, I published an article in the pages of this esteemed newspaper entitled "Zionism and assassination," in which I demonstrated that the Zionist movement and the State of Israel have consistently relied upon assassination of Palestinians, British, and Jews, as a primary means of achieving political goals.

For demonstrating this inconvenient fact, I was excoriated by the Israeli Consul General, the Jerusalem Post, the so–called Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America (CAMERA), the Anti–Defamation League (ADL), the Forward newspaper, UMass Chancellor David K. Scott, and the Chancellor's "Commissar for Zionism" Larry Goldbaum among others.

Hussein Ibish

Two years on, and this time in the wake of Mossad's attempted assassination of Hamas leader Khaled Misha'al in Jordan a few days ago, it seems relevant to point out that the significant Israeli national leaders of the 1990s — Yitzhak Shamir, Yitzhak Rabin, Shimon Peres, Ehud Barak and now Benjamin Netanyahu — are all acknowledged assassins and murderers. The Israeli state continues to rely as much as ever on assassination as a principle political tool and its national leaders remain assassins to a man.

Two weeks ago, a pair of bumbling Mossad hit men, "Shawn Kendall" and "Barry Beads," traveling on forged Canadian passports, jumped Misha'al outside his Amman office, injected slow acting poison into his head, and fled only to be apprehended by his bodyguard. As Misha'al fell ill, King Hussein informed the Israelis that if he died, Netanhayu's hit men would be hanged and diplomatic relations severed. The Israelis rushed an antidote to Jordan and were forced to release a number of Palestinian political prisoners including none other than Sheikh Ahmad Yassin, founder of Hamas.

Netanyahu's decision to order the hit on Misha'al, which has been universally condemned as reckless and idiotic, reflected a foolish Sabra's faith in the legend of Mossad. But it also underlined the extent to which the Israeli state continues to rely on assassination as a principle tool of policy. Netanyahu remains defiant and unapologetic in the face of his murderous fiasco, and insists that murder is a perfectly acceptable tool of statecraft. Most of his Israeli critics condemn the stupidity of this bungled attempt, but not the principle of murdering political enemies.

In his commitment to the practice of assassination as political tool, Netanyahu joins both the pantheon of Zionist leaders throughout the hundred years of the movement's history, and all his contemporaries as Israeli national leaders across party lines.

Indeed, all of these men except Netanhayu had a direct hand in the 1988 murder of Khalil al–Wazir (Abu Jihad), the PLO second in command, who was gunned down by an Israeli hit squad at his home in Tunis in front of his wife and children.

Shamir was Prime Minister, Rabin Defense Minister and Peres Foreign Minister in the cabinet that voted in favor of "whacking" Abu Jihad and Ehud Barak. Barak is the current leader of the Labor Party and probable next prime minister. He was the then–unnamed "senior military commender" who orchestrated the murder from "a Boeing 707 equipped like an American airborne warning and control system aircraft with sophisticated electronic gear ... to monitor and coordinate the entire operation."

Barak, dressed as a women, was also a member of the Israeli hit squad which rampaged through Beirut on April 9, 1973 "offing" a number of Palestinian leaders and some of their wives. He is reputed to have devised the tactics of the Israeli death squads responsible for killing dozens of leaders of the Intifada; which all Israeli governments have continued to deploy in the occupied territories.

Yitzhak Shamir, who in the 1940's had ordered the murders of Lord Moyne, Count Bernatdotte and Shamir's "best friend" and rival Eliayhu Giladi among many others. The Israeli Prime Minister also ordered the murders of Lebanese cleric Sheikh Abbas Mussawi, his wife and three– year–old son, who were burned alive when their car was attacked by Israeli helicopter gunships on Feb. 16, 1992.

Shimon Peres, during his brief six month tenure as prime minister in 1996, found time to order the killing of Yehya Ayyash, a senior military commander of Hamas, whose head was blown off by a bomb implanted in his cell–phone by Israeli hit men.

Yitzhak Rabin, the assassin who was himself assassinated, was involved in scores of murders during his distinguished career at the head of the Zionist movement. In one example, a few weeks before his own preferred tactics were fatally turned against him, Rabin ordered his Mossad hit men to "whack" Palestinian leader Dr. Fathi Shiqaqi. Shiqaqi was shot in the head five times by Israeli assassins outside of his hotel in Sleima, Malta.

COURTESY / ASSOCIATED PRESS

Prime Minister of Israel, Benjamin Netanyahu.

Little wonder, then, that in this context Yigal Amir emerged from the campus of Bar Ilan University to gun down Yitzhak Rabin. After all, the actions of the Zionist leaders such as Rabin had taught the young man, who was violently opposed to Rabin's policies, that the way to deal with political enemies is to assassinate them.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

Vida tras la Conquista: Atrapado in the Smoky Mirror

Editor's note: an English version of this editorial is available at the Collegian offices.

Me odio por no escribir esto en Nahuatl, en Quechua o en Bribrf. Sólo me quedan las lenguas europeas: este maldito Español de la conquista, el Français de merde de mon école y este gringo English that I learned by my own. Everytime I go back to 1492 I find myself near the coast, the Spaniard y el Taíno fighting under the sun. Yo, I'm afraid of both.

The boat is not moving. It has been the same for the last 505 years. I don't know any language pero todavía estoy aquí, no sé que es más salado, my tears or the breeze from the sea. Y son las olas las que me hablan, filling me with questions de alguna tierra lejana y mía when all I can sense is the diapason of my own Caribe.

I don't remember anything: soy lo que soy y no soy nada. Navego este ataúd con el understanding que Mi Muerte is the only certainty but knowing myself unprepared. Todavía hay un long journey before the flowery death.

Ave María Purísima Virgencita Negra de los Angeles

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcóatl

Chiuacoatl Teteoinnan Toci Tlazolteotl Chalchiuhtlicue
Espiritu Santo Sagrado Corazon de Jesús
Huitzilopochtli Cuauhxicallis Iiz Huehueteotl

There are currents shaping my path, un camino dispuesto a pelear: en los feelings of the primordial water this fifth and present sol me transforma con sus llamas into el jaguar, para ser peleado y golpeado by the flint blade rain of Tlaloc and Chac, dagas de obsidiana lloradas por el Ave de Pico Ancho. !Ojalá! the celestial jaws would eat me alive before there is land to plant the cross, the eternal crucifixion of life breaking the cycle of time cuando ya Jesús ruega por todos resurecto a la par de su coátl, el Quetzal.

Hay algo en la oscuridad. Ha llegado ese poder not even the sun can unveil. I admire a night this dark, the sign que Ehecatl me ha llegado a llamar. Los caracoles ya cantan, el pulque y el gusto refrescan la piel que me descascaran... ni, ya he llegado... es el viento, él que emplumas my body, featheres my journey, le da alas a esta ride.

I cruise the night searching for life pero my windy compañon, Itzpapalotl, the obsidian butterfly looks down. Abajo en el agua, the boat crushes the algae leaving behind the trail of light. Mesmerized I turn to her y ella me mira en el cielo. Al levantar mi pescuezo I find the skirt of llamateculhli, citlale ícue, the cloud serpent, el camino blanco of millions of stars milking the sky, reflejando the luminescent trail of my own boat...!mi vida!

I'm trapped in this smoky mirror, between the Spaniard and the Mesoamerican, entre Jesús y Quetzalcóatl, entre La Realidad y Tezcatlipoca, but I know that as long as there is sky, wind, sun and water, the boat will always move forward leaving a luminescent trail behind, a reason for being a passenger, a life. Y cuando se abran las nubes, con la oscuridad encontraré reflejado en el espejo de obsidiana, in dynamic and complementary opposition, the satisfied certainty of my own flowery death . . . !Mi Muertel

There's no dust to dust.
Una vivencia de Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcóatl.

Despite previous week's commotion, Wong maintains her position in SGA

Will our Student Government Association (SGA) President, Lia Wong, be impeached?

No.

That was the promise given to over 200 students who attended the SGA meeting last Thursday in support of Wong.

Rumors had been flying around campus that two of her own cabinet members, and some members of various organizations, wanted Wong out. Reasons for her impeachment ranged from her Asian accent to her support of contraversial issues such as the Red Cross protest by the GLBT students on campus.

Lillian Chan

One by one each of Wong's cabinet members promised that they would support her. They denied having any thoughts about having Wong impeached. Two of her cabinet members, the Speaker of the Senate, Peter Kilbourne, and Jody Bailey, the Elections Chancellor, promised to support Wong "150 percent."

It was revealed during the meeting that there have been ongoing disagreements between Kilbourne and Wong. When asked what some of the differences were, Kilbourne made no comment.

A student then spoke up and asked whether it was true that he had verbally attacked Wong while she was in her office. In response, he blew up and said "That's bulls—t!" To that, there was a collective gasp in the room. Wong calmed the situation down and told Kilbourne that "there was no need for profanity." He then apologized.

Students asked Kilbourne to specify some of the political differences he had with Wong. Wong intervened and said that it would be best to keep their differences between themselves. Students were not happy with this response, but they let it go and were reassured by the fact that Wong would handle it.

Wong asked Kilbourne if he would agree to have mediation with her to resolve their differences. Mediation would involve Kilbourne, Wong, and a third, neutral party to sit in a room behind closed doors and talk it out. Kilbourne promised Wong that he would definitely agree to mediation.

Mediation wasn't what the students wanted to hear, but saw that what was most important at the time was that Wong would not be impeached by her cabinet.

Towards the end, the students were quelled. Wong thanked all her supporters for showing up to stand by her. She was near tears when she expressed her thanks.

For now, the situation has calmed knowing that Wong will remain in office. But, questions still remain whether or not Wong and Kilbourne will be able to settle their differences. We shall have to wait and see.

Lillian Chan is a UMass student.

Women's soccer sweeps pair in Virginia over weekend

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Consistency. One might hope to find it in the weather this fall, or on long road trips through Virginia and Washington D.C. on two-engine planes, and nights stayed in Super 8 Motels with drunken neighbors on one day's rest.

UMass	3
Virginia Tech	0
UMass	4
G. Washington	0

This was all the No. 15 Massachusetts women's soccer team was looking for this weekend when they took to the road against George Washington and Virginia Tech, returning 11–2–0 (7–0 in Atlantic 10).

On Sunday, the Minutewomen expected a close game with GW, who has tied two Top 20 teams and lost to two Top 20 teams in overtime, but the Colonial Women never really posed much of a threat. UMass changed its method against GW's counterattack, scoring two goals per half to win 4–0.

Sophomore Emma Kurowski intercepted a pass in the Colonial Women's penalty box, burying a left footer from 12 yards out for the first goal at the 20:59 mark of the match — her 50th career point in a UMass uniform. Junior Sophie Lecot let loose a bullet on GW's goalkeeper Traci Iensen on a feed from freshman Kara Green, who is tied for fifth in assists (11) in the nation, for the second goal.

UMass's luck changed the first 15 minutes into the second half when GW applied pressure in the Minutewomen's defensive zone. But two key turning points changed the tempo of the game: one, UMass keeper Danielle Dion dove left and made a great save to keep the score at 2–0, and three minutes later, senior Erica Iverson jumped up for a header on a corner kick colliding with GW's Chemar Smith.

A brilliant scorer according to UMass coach Jim Rudy, Smith jumped late and subsequently headed the back of Iverson's neck, causing her a penalty and a game-ending concussion.

"She had a bump on her head the size of a golf ball," Rudy said.

Iverson had blood on her neck, but returned to score on a free kick that sailed over the wall of GW players, and out of Jensen's reach at 64:58. Sophomore Tarah Tokarchik closed out the score with a pass from freshman Molly McGrew nine seconds later at 65:07.

Friday proved much of the same for UMass, defeating Virginia Tech, 3–0. It was the first time the Minutewomen had played at their new facility, and it proved to be an unbalanced surface for both teams.

"It was bizarre, fast and slow, hard and soft, and dry and wet," Rudy said. "There was no consistency in the footing."

Green highlighted the day for UMass with two goals, one in each half. The first was scored at 23:45 off a feed from freshman Brooke Bartlett, breaking off the left flank and dishing it to Green, who beat two defenders for the score.

Iverson netted the second goal of the game from 15 yards out, and Green scored her second goal with an assist from Lecot at 77:28. The Minutewomen changed the system in the second half with five midfielders, preventing the Hokies from penetrating UMass's defense.

JORMA KANGANEN/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore midfielder Emma Kurowski scored her 50th career point in the Minutewomen's 4–0 win over GW on Sunday, upping UMass' record to 11–2 on the season.

■ soccer

continued from page 16

in Philadelphia, Pa.

"The ball landed right in front of me, and all I had to do was knock the ball in," Hewitt said. "But the team really needs to pick it up right now, and we need to win every game the rest of the season going into A-10's."

"We always work together as a team, but we've been just getting unlucky shots and unlucky bounces."

UMass had the edge in play before Hewitt's goal, but afterwards, the tables began to be turned. A little over six minutes later, GW tied the game at 1–1 with a goal by junior Craig Jones off an assist by senior Ben Ferry, beating sophomore keeper Todd Fowler low to his left from 15 yards out for the equalizer.

The Minutemen came out firing in the second half, with junior midfielder Paul Corcoran missing the bottom of the crossbar on an acrobatic bicycle kick attempt in the 47th minute. The tempo of the match became more and more physical as the half went on, with GW's junior defender Ben Digger picking up a yellow card at the 53:29 mark.

Consecutive scoring opportunities by senior forwards Mike Butler and Joenal Castma in the 65th and 67th minutes were to no avail, and two consecutive offensive rushes for the Colonials in the final twenty minutes brought the away game home to GW. Jones scored his second goal of the match with an 18–yard bender from the left flank, flying past Fowler into the top corner on the far post.

A late flurry by UMass in the final two minutes came to nothing, and the Colonials limped away with their 2–1 win.

Be a Resident Assistant!

Help Shape Your Piece of the World

Applications for Spring 1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.

Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

October 14	7:00pm	McNamara Main Lounge
	7:00pm	Kennedy 19th Floor Lounge
October 15	7:00pm	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
	7:00pm	Cance TV Lounge
October 16	12:00pm	Campus Center #805-809
October 20	7:00pm	Hamlin Hotspot (Basement)
October 21	12:00pm	Campus Center #911-915
October 22	7:00pm	Field Classroom

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545-0472.

LOWEST FARES ★ GUARANTEED ★ FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
CONTINENTAL USA MAXIMUM $137 O/W CALL FOR DETAILS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228 TRAVEL MAKERS, INC THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson) AMHERST

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route 4 one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

GW Semester in Washington
An Undergraduate Program in Political Management
Spring, Summer, and Fall Sessions
Make Connections to Launch Your Career
Now Accepting Applications On A Rolling Admissions Basis
Apply NOW!
Session Deadlines:
Spring - October 31, 1997
Summer - March 31, 1998
Fall - June 1, 1998
The George Washington University
The Graduate School of Political Management
GW is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution
For More Information or To Receive An Application Contact
(800) 367-4776, (202) 994-6000 http://www.gwu.edu/~gspm
Rolling Admissions Basis
October 31 1997

Engineering/CS Majors
Not to strain your high-tech senses, but some things do have more impact.
There's a simple truth about influence we think you should know. The odds that your ideas will be heard at GEC-Marconi Hazeltine are among the best in any industry, anywhere. Which means you'll never have to just sit back and listen to someone else's point of view. You'll have hands-on involvement in developing innovations for Identification Friend or Foe Systems (IFF), Satellite Communications (SATCOM), JTIDS, DAMA and PLSR. But more than that, you'll discover what some of the finest engineers in the industry already know. That GEC-Marconi Hazeltine will give you the training, resources and support you deserve. All in a fast-paced environment that offers summer hours, tuition reimbursement, and a casual dress code. So put your revolutionary engineering concepts ahead of the rest at GEC-Marconi Hazeltine. Because we'll never ask you to turn down the volume on a great idea. To find out more about career opportunities in Wayne, NJ or Greenlawn (Long Island), New York see us on campus:
October 16, 1997
Marcus Hall
10:00am - 3:00pm
and for on-campus interviews
October 17, 1997
Or visit us on-line at www.gecm.hazeltine.com
Nothing even comes close.
GEC-Marconi Hazeltine
An equal opportunity employer, m/f/d/v.

Field hockey posts pair of weekend upsets

By Aaron M. Soykin
Collegian Staff

Although recently plagued by a three-game losing streak, winning has suddenly become contagious for the Massachusetts field hockey team after upsetting two top ten teams this weekend in Syracuse, N.Y.

Hoping to avenge their 1996 loss to the Orangewomen, coach Patty Shea's Minutewomen (7–7–0, 2–0 in Atlantic 10), riding high from a 2–1 victory over No. 9 Ball State on Sunday, turned the corner on their 1997 campaign with yesterday's incredible 3–2 overtime triumph over No. 10 Syracuse.

After a game–tying goal from Syracuse junior Megan Koons in the waning moments of regulation, UMass forward Kerry Lyons provided the overtime heroics at the 76:15 mark, beating Orangewomen netminder Sara Clapp as she notched her second game–winning tally of the season.

Despite trailing 1–0 at the break, the Minutewomen rallied in the second frame for two consecutive goals, taking command of the game. Junior midfielder Vicky Browne put UMass on the board with an unassisted goal. Scoring the go– ahead goal was junior forward Erica Johnston, whose impressive 1997 campaign has her sitting atop the scoring lead in the A–10.

After Koons' late–game score forced the extra period, the Minutewomen once again dominated the action, outshooting Syracuse 4–1 en route to their second straight victory over a nationally ranked opponent.

Anchoring the UMass defense this weekend was goalkeeper Zowie Tucker, outdueling her counterparts as she collected nine saves in the OT win over the Orangewomen, and 10 saves on Sunday as her team topped the Cardinals.

In preparing for that contest, coach Shea sensed her team was on the brink of a breakthrough after a solid effort in Wednesday's 3–0 loss to Boston University. Four days later, her underdog Minutewomen stunned the favorite Cardinals as freshman midfielder Lucy Koch's first collegiate goal with 19:50 left was the eventual game–winner, giving UMass a much–needed lift after a three–game losing streak.

After an impressive weekend, the Minutewomen will have an opportunity to continue their winning ways as they embark upon a four–game home stretch, beginning Wednesday afternoon against Providence College at 3:30 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field.

LAUREN KOSAY/COLLEGIAN

The UMass field hockey team rebounded strongly this weekend by beating No. 9 Ball St., 2–1, and No. 10 Syracuse, 3–2.

Bird adjusts to coaching; Pacers adjusting to Larry

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

FORT WAYNE, Ind — Larry Bird has his first victory as a coach — and his first loss. Sitting on the bench is fine, but wearing a suit coat to a game is still a little weird.

And the statewide adoration for the Indiana Pacers' new coach? Well, that's going to take some getting used to.

"As a coach, I haven't done anything yet," Bird said. "So they're wasting their time."

The fans don't think so, greeting him with standing ovations when he was introduced at the Pacers' exhibition games Friday and Saturday night. People in the crowd wore his old Celtics jersey. When he left the locker room after the Pacers' 104-100 victory over Toronto on Saturday — his Indiana debut — hundreds of fans were waiting.

Bird gave a quick wave, signed a few autographs, then made his way to the team bus.

"There are a lot of expectations on this team, and hopefully we can fulfill them," said Reggie Miller, Indiana's fan favorite before Bird arrived. "We have the talent to do that. So it ought to be interesting."

After 13 years with the Boston Celtics, three NBA titles and three league MVP trophies, Bird swears he doesn't miss being out on the floor. He doesn't look at his players and think he could do it better.

He is exactly where he wants to be: on the bench, coaching his home team.

"Them days are over," he said of playing. "I had all the opportunities I wanted to do that. This is something I wanted to do. I could have coached other places, but this is the place I want to be.

"Now I just want to get a winning team out there."

But there are some parts of the job that don't come easily to Bird, like figuring out what to do with himself now that he's on the bench. In his playing days, the only time he was on the bench was at the end of the game. And he was in shorts, like a player is supposed to be in the gym.

Now, though, he's on the sidelines for the entire game. And he's wearing a suit coat and tie. During Friday's 105-98 loss to Cleveland and Saturday's victory, it looked like it was taking every effort to stay in his seat.

He squirmed around, rocking back and forth one minute, leaning forward with his hands on knees the next. He finally got up at the end of the first quarter Saturday, took a short stroll to the end of the bench, then quickly returned to his seat.

"I've always felt weird standing in a suit coat," he said. "I've been around gymnasiums and coliseums my whole life. This time I'm not shooting, I'm sitting."

But the coaching part is coming along just fine. Disappointed with his team's sloppy defense on Friday night, he was constantly reminding his players to be aggressive Saturday.

Collegian Sports
Saving the best for last

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Fried Cheese & Onion Rings 6.50 3.25
Shrimp Cocktail 5.75 2.88
Lite Potato Skins 7.50 3.75
1/2 PRICE!
TJudie's DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 8th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Tuesday, October 14, 1997
Room 904-08
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5314

Anyone interested in Broadcasting ie: News, Entertainment, Sports, Etc.
COME CHECK US OUT!
WMUA 91.1 F.M. NEWS STAFF
105 Campus Center (next to collegian)
Ask For Elain Mileb or call 545-2876

How Would You Score?
MCAT
Take a Free Test Drive and find out!
Take a 3-hour MCAT, proctored like the real test.
Receive individual feedback. Get strategies that will help you ace the real exam.
SATURDAY, 10/18 10AM
Call today to reserve your seat!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com
MCAT is a registered trademark of the Association of American Medical Colleges

Sales
ASSERTIVE, SELF-STARTERS
WANTED FOR ENTRY-LEVEL OUTSIDE SALES
You must have the desire to work in a highly competitive, international market, where your ability to influence others will be vital to your success. You must have strong closing skills and be willing to prospect for new business. You should be an exceptional listener and have above average problem solving abilities. You should also have demonstrated ability to achieve personal and professional goals with limited supervision.
You must have a Bachelor's Degree, be computer literate, have the permanent legal right to work in the U.S., and be willing to relocate.
First year earnings from $22- 28,000, based on location.
For more information, visit our website at www.british-airways.com
If you wish to apply call Michelle Fowler at: 718-397-4337, Monday, October 20th or Tuesday, October 21 9:00 am - 1:00 pm EST ONLY! (No calls will be taken outside these times)
BRITISH AIRWAYS
Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

EMPOWER YOURSELF
At Osco Drug we allow you to take charge of your career path. For over 50 years we've set the standards for quality and service in the retail industry. Through our extensive management program you can empower yourself to advance quickly through your own motivation and desire to succeed. Join us as:
MANAGEMENT TRAINEES
In this position you will play a vital role in the operation of your store. As a true team motivator, you must possess the leadership and communication abilities necessary to meet a diverse array of retail challenges. These entry-level opportunities are the first level of our extensive 4-step management program.
At Osco Drug, you will enjoy an excellent compensation package including health/life insurance, 401 (k), merchandise discounts and a stock purchase plan. To learn more about these outstanding opportunities we have available, stop by your Career Services Office to sign up for on-campus interviews, or forward your resume to:
OscoDrug
Liz Abrantes, 1818 Swift Drive
Oak Brook, IL 60521
Fax: 630-571-7963
Our Vision for the Future Includes a Commitment to Equal Opportunities and a Drug-Free Environment

Looking for challenge and opportunity?
AEROTEK
Make your mark as an Aerotek sales recruiter!
How would you like a piece of the fastest growing contract services provider in North America? With Aerotek, you'll join a high-energy team who give 100% to everything they do. You'll sell Aerotek to top professionals and Fortune 500 companies alike and draw on your people skills to move quickly into top sales positions like account manager and national account manager.
ENERGY • ENTHUSIASM SUCCESS
What can Aerotek offer you?
• Competitive Salary & Benefits
A great salary plus bonuses and comprehensive benefits
• Career Planning
Personal and professional support for your advancement into sales and management
• Rewards
Hard work rewarded with bonuses and promotions
• National Opportunity
Over 100 branch offices across North America
• Training
The nation's best trainers to bring you over 50 years of experience from Fortune 500 companies
Aerotek Recruiting . 7301 Parkway Drive . Hanover, MD . 21076 email: cmorfesa@aerotek.com fax: (410) 712-7346 phone: (800) 92[illegible]
http://www.aerotek.com

Dean Smith's retirement not as restful as planned

By Joe Macenka
Associated Press

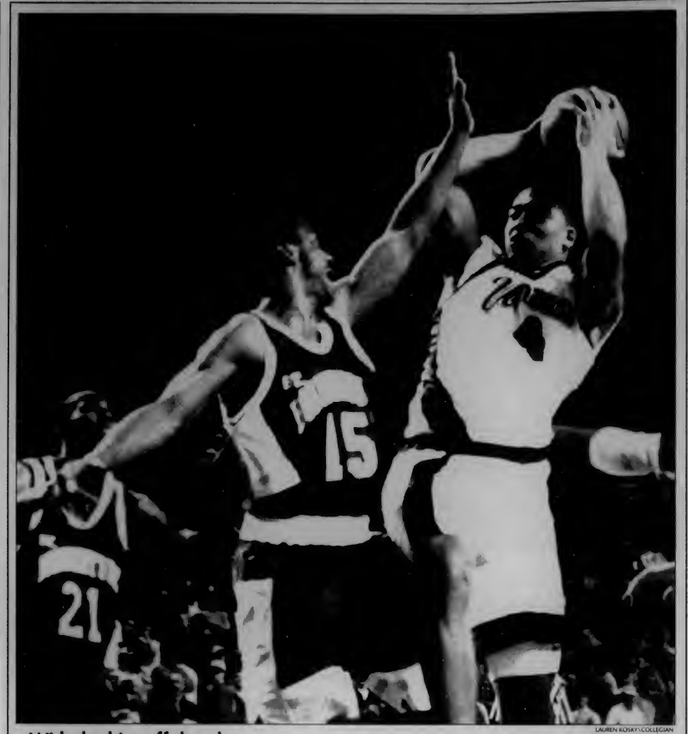
CORNELIUS, N.C. — Dean Smith is finding out that slipping quietly into retirement isn't an option.

Four days after quitting his job, Smith finally found time to play golf yesterday, although it was hardly the relaxing, low-key kind of affair known to most 66-year-olds.

Smith came to the Peninsula Club to take part in the James Worthy Legends of Sports Charity Golf Classic, held to benefit the American Diabetes Association.

To get an idea of Smith's drawing power, consider that the list of celebrities included Matthew Laurance of "Beverly Hills 90210" and Bill Murray. Smith, however, was the only player who was assigned two stern, gun-toting police officers as he made his way around the upscale club on the shores of Lake Norman just north of Charlotte.

On virtually every tee and behind some greens, Smith patiently worked through the pockets of people who swooped in on him to ask him to sign autographs or pose for pictures. He graciously obliged everyone, although he raised an eyebrow at one man who asked for autographs of what appeared to be about 10 copies of a newspaper story detailing Smith's decision to step down as North Carolina's basketball coach.



"Gee," Smith asked the man, "how many people are in your family?"

The winningest coach in college basketball history signed three copies and moved on to the next request.

Smith hasn't had any trouble filling his schedule since his surprise retirement announcement last Thursday. He went to the office the next day to meet with his former assistants, and he flew to Ohio on Saturday to take part in a clinic for about 850 high school coaches.

But on Monday morning, he got down to the business of at least trying to relax, and he started by making good on one of his vows in his retirement announcement: to take better care of himself. True to his word, Smith elected to walk down the middle of the fairways between shots while his playing partners rode in carts. Each celebrity was paired with four amateurs, and Smith found himself in good company. All of his playing partners were adorned in Tar Heel colors or had Tar Heel golf bags or Tar Heel head covers.

While a decent golfer, Smith is no threat to the Senior PGA Tour, and he's not interested in becoming one, as evidenced by his remark on the 11th tee, where all of his partners outdrove him. "I've got to find something to do other than play golf," he said. "This is fun, but it's not enough."

LAUREN KOSKY/ COLLEGIAN

With the kiss off the glass...

UMass junior center Lari Ketner is gearing up for the 1997–98 season which begins on Friday when Midnight Madness kicks off. UMass students get in free with a valid I.D.

Write for sports!

For more information, talk to the sports editor in the campus center basement.

amc
There is a Difference!
$3.50 (Tues.) Big Show Daily
★ Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL

Rocketman (PG)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:20
The Edge (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10
Most Wanted (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL

Kiss the Girls (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:20
U-Turn (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
In and Out (PG-13)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:30
Soul Food (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:30
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

Dont Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!

Marshall STEINBECK
Collision Repair & Auto Body
• Imports and other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• Users of Sikkens paint products
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair
53 S. Prospect St.
Amherst Center
256-8157
Shop Reg. #RS1212

DON'T JUST WALK THE LINE...
WORK THE EDGE

We know you want an engineering career that's the opposite of pedestrian. One that puts you right out there with other bright, forward-thinking professionals. One that challenges you to dig deeper and push harder than you ever thought possible.

At Data General, your career will be all that—and more. Our products are not only leading-edge, they offer diverse expansion opportunities. CLARiiON storage is the system of choice for open enterprise UNIX and PC servers, making us the global leader in open RAID-based disk array storage. AViiON servers run tens of thousands of NT or UNIX applications and meet workgroup business needs across enterprise or department. We're strong financially and growing fast. We're looking for exceptional talent, people who thrive on our pace and our drive to discover. You'll work just 29 miles outside of Boston, in an area that's become a mecca for the best and the brightest minds in technology. And you'll work with a team that challenges every limit, every boundary. Join us, and we'll give your career a head start that's way ahead...because it starts out there on the edge.

Visit our Web site at www.dg.com

SOFTWARE AND HARDWARE DEVELOPMENT ENGINEERS

Sign-up for our On Site Interviews: Friday, October 24

E-MAIL: newgrads@dg.com
FAX: (508) 898-4686
MAIL: Data General Corporation, College Relations Manager, D120, 4400 Computer Drive, Westboro, MA 01580

See Us At The CAREER FAIR: Thursday, October 16

Data General

You'll like our highly competitive salaries, excellent benefits and outstanding advancement opportunities. We are an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and strongly encourage women, minorities, veterans, and individuals with disabilities to apply.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

East

	W	L	T	Pct.	PF	PA
New England	5	1	0	.833	176	80
Miami	4	2	0	.667	119	111
N.Y. Jets	4	3	0	.571	177	137
Buffalo	3	3	0	.500	122	159
Indianapolis	0	6	0	.000	88	155
Central
Jacksonville	5	1	0	.833	169	119
Pittsburgh	4	2	0	.667	145	160
Baltimore	3	3	0	.500	161	134
Tennessee	2	4	0	.333	114	133
Cincinnati	1	5	0	.167	88	164
West
Denver	6	0	0	1.000	190	85
Kansas City	4	2	0	.667	122	110
San Diego	3	3	0	.500	102	126
Seattle	3	3	0	.500	107	134
Oakland	2	4	0	.333	151	148

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

East

	W	L	T	Pct.	PF	PA
Dallas	3	2	0	.600	124	75
Washington	3	2	0	.600	90	73
N.Y. Giants	4	3	0	.571	131	133
Philadelphia	2	4	0	.333	111	137
Arizona	1	5	0	.167	109	131
Central
Green Bay	5	2	0	.714	168	149
Minnesota	5	2	0	.714	176	155
Tampa Bay	5	2	0	.714	140	124
Detroit	4	3	0	.571	160	129
Chicago	0	7	0	.000	101	199
West
San Francisco	5	1	0	.833	152	70
Carolina	2	4	0	.333	94	127
St. Louis	2	4	0	.333	104	142
New Orleans	2	5	0	.286	118	162
Atlanta	1	5	0	.167	105	153

Sunday's Games
Atlanta 23, New Orleans 17
New England 33, Buffalo 6
Tennessee 30, Cincinnati 7
Detroit 27, Tampa Bay 9
Green Bay 24, Chicago 23
Miami 31, New York Jets 20
Jacksonville 38, Philadelphia 21
Minnesota 21, Carolina 14
New York Giants 27, Arizona 13
San Francisco 30, St. Louis 10
Pittsburgh 24, Indianapolis 22
Open date: Baltimore, Denver, Kansas City, Oakland, San Diego, Seattle

Monday's Game
Dallas at Washington, 9 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 16
San Diego at Kansas City, 8 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 19
Arizona at Philadelphia, 1 p.m.
Carolina at New Orleans, 1 p.m.
Jacksonville at Dallas, 1 p.m.
New England at New York Jets, 1 p.m.
San Francisco at Atlanta, 1 p.m.
Seattle at St. Louis, 1 p.m.
Washington at Tennessee, 1 p.m.
Denver at Oakland, 4 p.m.
Miami at Baltimore, 4 p.m.
New York Giants at Detroit, 4 p.m.
Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, 4 p.m.
Open date: Chicago, Green Bay, Minnesota, Tampa Bay

Monday, Oct. 20
Buffalo at Indianapolis, 9 p.m.

Associated Press Top 25

The Top Twenty Five teams in The Associated Press expanded college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, records through Oct. 11, total points based on 25 points for a first place vote through one point for a 25th place vote, previous ranking, record vs. top 25 teams at time of game, record of opponents played, and extra points:

	Pts	Pv	T25	Rec.
1. Penn St. (51)	5-0	1,724	2	1-0	11-15 Enis 211 yds; back at No 1
2. Nebraska (14)	5-0	1,668	3	2-0	13-10 Average 530.2 yds per game
3. Florida St. (3)	5-0	1,603	4	2-0	10-13 5-0 vs. GT in ACC games
4. N. Carolina (2)	6-0	1,521	5	1-0	12-16 4 straight wins vs. NC St.
5. Michigan	5-0	1,490	6	1-0	8-16 7-2-1 last 10 vs. Iowa
6. Auburn	6-0	1,366	8	1-0	21-8 5-5 last 10 vs. Gators
7. Florida	5-1	1,280	1	1-1	20-9 KO'd in 93-second span
8. LSU	5-1	1,199	14	1-1	20-10 7-3 last 10 vs. Ole Miss
9. Tennessee	4-1	1,126	9	1-1	18-4 FR RB Jamal Lewis 232 yds
10. Washington	4-1	1,121	10	2-1	14-8 3-2-1 at Tucson, Ariz.
11. Ohio St.	5-1	1,113	7	1-1	22-8 7-0-1 last 8 vs. Hoosiers
12. Michigan St.	5-0	1,058	11	0-0	11-15 13-8 at Evanston, Ill.
13. Washington St. in Pac 10	5-0	958	12	1-0	11-13 No. 1 Offense
14. Texas A&M	5-0	827	15	1-0	5-15 Sirr Parker 80 run & 78 KR
15. Iowa	4-1	703	17	0-1	7-17 1-4 in 1990's vs. Michigan
16. Oklahoma St.	6-0	665	20	1-0	10-20 Best start since 1945
17. UCLA	4-2	637	18	1-1	17-9 19-5-3 at home vs. OSU
18. Air Force	7-0	516	19	1-0	18-11 Tim Curry big plays for W
19. Georgia	4-1	446	13	0-1	13-12 8-2 last 10 vs. Vanderbilt
20. Kansas St.	4-1	388	22	0-1	15-10 RB Bishop 196 yds 2 TDs
21. Georgia Tech	4-1	281	25	1-1	11-14 4 str Ws, most since 1993
22. Virginia Tech	5-1	274	23	0-0	13-18 Clark top QB Big East
23. West Virginia	5-1	182	-	0-0	10-18 Zereoue top RB Big East
24. Wisconsin	6-1	134	-	0-0	9-27 10-10-2 vs. PU since 1971
25. Stanford	4-2	119	16	0-1	15-13 4-9 vs. Arizona St.

Tennis squad beats Eagles, loses to Boston University

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team proved it is not invincible yesterday afternoon at the upper Boyden courts. A tough Boston University squad got the better of the Minutemen by a tight score of 4–3.

However, the team did triumph in its home opener last Thursday against another Hub foe In Boston College.

"The Boston College match really proved a lot to me," coach Dixon said. This is the type of match which really makes me appreciate my job. All the guys gave it their all."

Quite a vote of approval from coach Dixon. But not much of an understatement either. The Minutemen pounded out a 5–2 annihilation of the Eagles.

The Eagles won the doubles point to open up the action, which really frustrated the Minutemen.

"Right now our doubles is really holding us back, "Dixon said. "It puts way to much weight on the outcome of our singles matches."

Luckily for the Minutemen, five out of six singles matches went in UMass' favor. The biggest win coming from No. 1 Todd Cheney.

Cheney overcame a 6–7 first set against Anand Annigeri by rolling 6–3, 6–2 in the final two sets. This supreme effort came despite obvious pain in his right ankle.

The good news is the injury is not as serious as once thought, and he should be recovered with a little rest.

Equally impressive were the straight set victories by numbers 2 and 3, Pat Slyman and Rob Manchester.

"I beat my opponent (Nik Smith) last season, but he was much tougher this time around," Manchester said. "It took all I had to overcome that."

Manchester's match (7–5, 7–5), and Alex Aller's match included a lot of emotion from the Minutemen players.

"I encourage the guys to be very vocal on the court," Dixon said. Alex and Rob are pretty much the leaders in that category. They play with an incredible amount of intensity."

This intensity level carried over to yesterday's showdown with BU but lacked conviction, as the Minutemen were outplayed.

Once again, UMass was playing catch-up after dropping the doubles point by a 2–1 tally. "We are going to have to make some changes at this point," Dixon said. "We cannot continue to give away the doubles point."

No. 1 singles player Todd Cheney went down yesterday to Bartek Antchak 4–6, 6–7. He continues to play in pain, but at this point he will continue to play on.

More alarming though was two more losses at the five and six singles slots.

Parsa Samii, and Kevin Curley both fell in straight sets, forcing Coach Dixon to push the panic button. "I am going to move freshman Jason Lin into the singles action, probably bumping Parsa for the time being," Dixon said.

There were some obvious bright spots on this afternoon for the Minutemen. Pat Slyman and Rob Manchester pulled out hard fought three set victories.

And Alex Aller steamrolled over Brad Shahine 6–1 6–4. This was his biggest victory of the fall season, and he felt some pressure lifted off his back afterwards.

"This is the best I've felt about my tennis all season," Aller said. Hopefully, I'll continue to play this way down the stretch."

The match of the day went to Manchester vs. Ian Carrera. The feisty Carrera sent everything but the kitchen sink at Manchester. Carrera captured the first set 6–4, but then succumbed 5–7,4–6 to the gritty Manchester.

The outcome of the overall match was long decided, but Manchester battled on, and pulled out a great match.

"I was really pleased with Rob and Alex's play today," Dixon said. They were really tough for us."

While the Minutemen were obviously disappointed about the end of a 4–game win streak, they promise to stay focused for the duration of the fall season.

"This loss will remind the team that we can lose without the proper preparation," Dixon said. "We need better practices and more discipline to finish up strong."

Minutemen Notes: UMass defeated Amherst College in a scrimmage last week by a match score of 6–1.

Kevin Curley and Parsa Samii defeated Keith Schuman and Jason Lin in a challenge match for the No. 3 doubles spot. But coach Dixon has announced she will substitute Jason Lin for Curley, effective immediately.

The rain–interrupted Rhode Island match will be continued on October 24 as the last regular season match of the fall.

THE PERFECT Environment FOR YOUR CAREER

Rizzo Associates, Inc. is a leading engineering, transportation and environmental science firm. We have built our reputation by meeting the technical, regulatory, and management needs of public and private clients worldwide.

If you are looking for employment in the fields of engineering, transportation, or environmental science, we invite you to take a closer look at Rizzo Associates. Twice recognized by Inc. 500 as one of America's fastest growing companies, our firm strives for excellence and employs top professionals in the following technical areas:

- Transportation Engineering
- Civil/Site Engineering
- CAD Drafting
- Environmental Assessment
- Hydrology
- Geology
- Environmental Science
- Environmental Compliance/Auditing

OUR CORE VALUES. These are the timeless guiding principles that define who we are and how we are bound together.

Honesty. We are honest, decent and principled: with each other, with our clients, with our competitors. We cannot envision any other way of doing business.

Openness. We manage our company in an open and participatory manner. We are open to ideas. We are open to change.

Responsiveness. We are a service-oriented business. This fact permeates our being and is a key factor in our professional success.

Involvement. We care deeply about the work we do and the society in which we do it. We are leaders and active participants in our profession, our community, and our company.

OUR PURPOSE. As employee-owners, our purpose is to create professional and personal opportunities for all members of our organization. As a corporation, our purpose is to use our strengths and our knowledge in the support of our clients' endeavors.

OUR GOAL. We aspire to be a $100 million global company by the year 2008 - our 25th anniversary. We know attainment of this goal will require that we take risks, and sacrifices will be likely be made. But, we believe the rewards are worth it, we want to do it, and we are not afraid to try.

If you are unable to attend the career fair, please send your resume and cover letter to: Rizzo Associates, Inc., Human Resources Manager, 235 West Central Street, Natick, MA 01760. Fax: (508) 651-3401. E-mail: HR@rizzo.com.

We are committed to diversity and are an EEO employer.

RIZZO ASSOCIATES, INC.
ENGINEERS AND ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENTISTS
AN EMPLOYEE-OWNED COMPANY

● Attention UMass Undergraduate Students ●

Join Head Coaches
Joanie O'Brien, Women's Basketball
Bruiser Flint, Men's Basketball
Joe Mallen, Ice Hockey

Wednesday, October 15 at 7:00 p.m.
Mullins Center VIP Room (3rd Floor)

Join the Minutemaniacs as we welcome Head Coaches Joanie O'Brien, Bruiser Flint , and Joe Mallen to speak about their upcoming seasons. This meeting is open to all UMass undergraduate students. If you have not signed up to be a Minutemaniac, you may do so at this meeting.

UMass Minutemaniacs

Minutemaniac Benefits:
• Advance Reserved Basketball Ticket Pickup
• Minutemaniac T-Shirt
• Game Receptions
• "The UMass Maniac" Newsletter
• Membership Card

Great Value at $25.00 to Join!

THE Minutemaniacs ARE LIMITED TO THE FIRST 500 UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS TO REGISTER!

If you have any questions, please call the Athletic Development Office at 545-9672
Complete form below, cut, and mail to Minutemaniacs at:
308 Mullins Center ● University of Massachusetts ● Box 35910 ● Amherst, MA 01003

Application for Minutemaniacs Membership

Student Name:_____ Student #:_____
Local Address:_____
Local Phone:_____ Year at UMass:_____
Home Address:_____
City:_____ State:_____ Zip:_____ Home Phone:_____
Make checks payable to: UMAF
Or Charge to your credit card: Visa ❑ Mastercard ❑ Discover ❑
Number_____ Expiration Date_____

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One bedroom apartment Downtown. $520 + utilities. 253-1903, 545-4003, 545-4002.

Sugarloaf Estates Luxury 2 bedroom apartment homes. Free heat and hot water. State of the art kitchens, designer baths, wall to wall carpeting, washer and dryer. On PVTA. Incredible move-in specials. Call Today. 665-3856

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda GLC 2 door, coupe, 5 speed, 70k original miles. Excellent condition inside and out. Asking $1800. Call 549-4211

1990 Chevy Barretta Great condition. Must sell. BEST REASONABLE OFFER takes it. 296-4549

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1990 Jeep Wrangler 5 speed, 85k, hard top/soft top. $8000. 256-0501

EMPLOYMENT

Teacher Needed
Kaplan Educational Centers has a current opening for an MCAT Instructor. Qualifications include thorough knowledge of course material, great presentation skills and superior MCAT scores. This is an excellent well paying part-time job, ideal for graduate students. Please visit us Mon-Thurs, 12-4pm, at 150 Fearing St., Amherst, or call us at 549-5789 to arrange an interview.

International Marketing Firm seeks Spokesperson. $10 per hour. 8-10 hours a week. Models are encouraged to apply. Call Sean Sweeney (800)829-4777

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

Jobs For The Environment
Campaign with MassPirg to reduce pesticide use. Flexible schedule. $50-75/day. Call Terry @ 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

TUTORS
Bilingual Tutors for part-time paid assistance to students. Speaking Japanese, Khmer, and Punjabi. Contact ESL/Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857.
Amherst Public Schools
170 Chestnut Street,
Amherst, MA 01002
An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

HELP! Baby Iguana needs home. Comes equipped. $80. Call Matt 546-2608

FOR SALE

Drum Set- 5 piece Yamaha All accessories. Moving, must sell. $650 or best offer. 5-3129 or 549-5981

KHS Montana Descent Mountain Bike Great condition. 247-5358

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Kona Mountain Bike Ridden off-road only 3 times. Shimano LX Shifter. $450 or B/O. Call Dan at 628-3857 Leave message.

Self Amplified Bazooka Base Tube 6 inches, great shape. Call 259-1984

Computers! Computers! Computers!
The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4850

FOR SALE

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

FOUND

Watch Found Northeast Quad. 10/8/97. Call 546-4443 to describe.

INSTRUCTION

BARTEND WITH UNIVERSITY BARTENDING 50% student discount. On-campus classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-Can-Mix for info.

LOST

Lost: Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6, Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental value. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE BLACK KITTEN! Needs loving home ASAP. Call 549-8770

Earn $75-$100 Exercise Science Study Needs non-weight trained males Call Steve @ 253-4952 or 5-6072

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

www.movieposter.com Vintage-Current (416)391-0133

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room available on Main St. Very close to town. On bus route. 21+ please. Call 259-9282

ROOM WANTED

Sublet Needed January 1998- 1 month only. Bus access necessary. Preferably in Northampton. (617)623-3851

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Retired Faculty Member offers English Language Lessons and Editorial Expertise to International Students, all levels. Reasonable rates. Ms. Reed 253-3354

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Port Antonio Jamaica Seaside Cottages Real Jamaican Neighborhood $150/week 367-935

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH!
CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception is for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly. Legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS APARTMENT FOR RENT AUTO FOR SALE COMMUNITY EVENTS EMPLOYMENT ENTERTAINMENT FOR SALE FOUND (2 DAYS FREE) HAPPY BIRTHDAY HOUSES FOR RENT INSTRUCTION LOST MUSICIANS MISCELLANEOUS MOTORCYCLES PERSONALS ROOM FOR RENT ROOM WANTED ROOMMATE WANTED SERVICES SUMMER SUBLET TO SUBLET TRAVEL TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT. 14

Clinic — There will be an intermural volleyball officials clinic at 7 p.m. at Boyden, room 249.

Meeting — The Index (UMass yearbook) will hold its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. Contact Jill Aordkian at 545-0848 for more information.

Meeting — All members of the Class of 2000 interested in promoting a sense of community in our class and fundraising come to a general interest meeting at 8 p.m. in the Student Union. Cape Cod Lounge. For more information, contact Danielle Fournier at 546-1188.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural volleyball captains meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Party — Sukkah building party at 3 p.m. at the Hillel House Courtyard. Come help build and decorate the sukkah then carve a Yaskov-o'lanterns. Please call ahead at 545-1710. Sponsored by Hillel Religious and Cultural Commitee and the Jewish Environmental Group.

Slide Show — "Recovering the Past' a slide show presentation on Queer history will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. For more information contact the Pride Alliance at 545-0154, e-mail at lbgs@stud.umass.edu, or stop by the office in the Student Union, room 413B.

Speaker — The Amherst Rights Coalition presents Erik Marcos, author of Vegan: The New Ethics of Eating at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 162. For more information, contact Jenn at 545-5411 or the Animal Rights Coalition at 545-1925 in the Student Union, room 306.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 15

Blood Drive — Help the American Red Cross ensure a safe and adequate blood supply for all those in need by donating from 9:30 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. In the Campus Center, room 165-169. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Clinic — There will be an intermural volleyball officials clinic at 7 p.m. at Boyden, room 249.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural volleyball captains meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Meeting — There will be a meeting to learn more about and plan the National Young Women's Day of Action at 7 p.m. In the Student Union, Cape Cod Lounge. All are welcome. For more information, contact Ellen Donoghue at 546-4773 or ecd@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Western Mass Linux-Unix User's Group (WMLUUG) Is in the process of forming and is holding a meeting from 6-8 p.m. In Morrill south building, room 319 OEB. Linux is a free computer operating system that runs on PCs, Macs and Mainframes. All are welcome and all members are new.

Service — Sukkot service at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House Sukkah. Celebrate the Harvest Festival with Hillel.

Speaker — The UMass University Democrats presents Governor Michael Dukakis on Political Activism in the Modern Era at 7:30 p.m. in Morril 1, room N329.

Clinic — There will be an intermural volleyball officials clinic at 5 p.m. at Boyden, room 223.

Discussion — Brian Tokar will lead a discussion around his latest book Earth for Sale, at 6 p.m. at Food For Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural tennis players meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Service — Sukkot service with Jewish community of Amherst, 10 a.m. at the Hillel House.

Speaker — The Smith College chapter of Students for a Free Tibet presents Ama Adhe, political prisoner of 27 years, who will be speaking as a woman, a prisoner, and an activist for freedom, at 7:30 p.m. in the Stoddard Hall Auditorium, Smith College.

Speaker — Education reformer Lorraine Monroe will speak at 7:30 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College In the New York room, In Mary Woolley Hall.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested In using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation of Friday, October 17, or 24. The free one-hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. In Hertzer 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545- 0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406e or just bring the artwork by.

Course — The Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies is offering a Certificate In Film Studies to all majors (equivalent to a minor). Includes six courses In film/video studies. For more information and to fill out an application, stop by the office in 101 South College or call 545-3659. Office hours Mon. Wed. 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Tues. Thurs. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Fri. 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Or visit the webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday October 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Internships — Environmental internships offered. Campus this semester Include: Hunger and Homelessness, Pesticides, Endangered Species; Updated Bottle Bill and Campaign Finance Reform. Looking for motivated students to take leadership positions. Call MassPIRG at 545-0199 or stop by 423A Student Union.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545-2726.

Notice — The women's basketball team will be holding walk-on tryouts on October 20th at 6:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Proof of insurance and of a recent physical are required to participate in tryouts. For further information, call the women's basketball office at 545-2726.

Open Forum — Come meet the final candidates for the Assistant Director of Disability Services search as they attend a campus-wide open forum. All sessions will be held in the Campus Center from 4-5:30 p.m., Troy Justesen on Tuesday, Oct. 14 in room 904-908, Angelina Ramirez on Wednesday, Oct. 15 In room 903, and Wayne Husted on Friday, Oct. 17 in room 917. Dori McCracken and Susan Pliner to be announced.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups Is happening now. Call 577-5316 for more information.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, NH on Friday October 24-26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545- 2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch In the Student Union.

NOTICES

F!i's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an F!i, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TUESDAY

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12)	Wishbone Ⓚ	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓚ		Nova "Fatal Attraction" Ⓚ		Stephen Hawking's Universe		Frontline "The Lost American" (In Stereo) Ⓚ		Bean File
WGBH	2	(5)	News Ⓚ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV Ⓚ		JAG "Blindside" (In Stereo) Ⓚ	Michael Hayes (In Stereo) Ⓚ	Dellaventura (In Stereo) Ⓚ		News Ⓚ	Late Show Ⓚ
WBZ	4	(4)	News	CBS News	Extra Ⓚ	Ent. Tonight		JAG "Blindside" (In Stereo) Ⓚ	Michael Hayes (In Stereo) Ⓚ	Dellaventura (In Stereo) Ⓚ		News Ⓚ	Late Show Ⓚ
WCVB	5	(5)	News Ⓚ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle Ⓚ	Home Imp.		Soul Man Ⓚ	Home Imp.	Hiller-Diller	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) Ⓚ	Nightline Ⓚ
WLVI	6		Full House Ⓚ	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "Hard to Kill" (1990, Drama) Steven Seagal, Kelly Lebrock.			News			Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓚ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Marlins at Braves					News	Tonight Show
WTXX		(8)	Married...With	Cheers Ⓚ	Judge Judy Ⓚ	Grace Under	Clueless Ⓚ	Moesha Ⓚ	Hltz (In Stereo)	Head-Heels	News	LAPD	Vibe	News	Tonight Show
WVIT		(36)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy Ⓚ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Marlins at Braves					News	Simpsons Ⓚ	Deep Space 9
WTIC	61	(11)	Home Imp.	Simpsons Ⓚ	Seinfeld Ⓚ	Frasier Ⓚ	Terror in the Family (1996, Drama) Joanna Kerns. (In Stereo) Ⓚ			News			Tonight Show
WWLP	61	(22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓚ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 6 – Marlins at Braves					News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	(57)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓚ		Nova "Faster Than Sound" Ⓚ		Frontline "The Lost American" (In Stereo) Ⓚ		Transplant		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	(28)	News Ⓚ	ABC News	Women Health	Frasier Ⓚ	Home Imp.	Soul Man Ⓚ	Home Imp.	Hiller-Diller	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA) Ⓚ	News Ⓚ	Nightline Ⓚ
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld Ⓚ	Frasier Ⓚ	Clueless Ⓚ	Moesha Ⓚ	Hltz (In Stereo)	Head-Heels	News	M*A*S*H Ⓚ	Real TV Ⓚ
WTBS	46		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach Ⓚ	Coach Ⓚ	★½ "House Party 3" (1994, Comedy) Christopher Reid.					★★½ "Who's the Man?" (1993, Comedy-Drama) Ed Lover.
A&E	49		Northern Exposure Ⓚ		Law & Order "Volunteers" Ⓚ		Biography: Julia Child		Pride and Prejudice (R) (Part 2 of 2) Ⓚ
CNN	50	(23)	WorldView Ⓚ		Moneyline Ⓚ	Crossfire Ⓚ	Prime News Ⓚ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live Ⓚ		World Today Ⓚ		Moneyline Ⓚ
COM	52	(26)	A-List (R) Ⓚ	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	! Night Stand	Comedy Nt. 2	Diane Carvey: Critic's Choice		Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	53		Wings "Strange Planes" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: The Rat Race		New Detectives (R)		Tragedy on Pad 34		Justice Files "The Trackers"
ESPN	54		Up Close	Sportscenter		Up Close	NHL Hockey: Pittsburgh Penguins at New York Rangers. (Live) Ⓚ						Sportscenter Ⓚ
LIFE	56		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "A Deadly Silence" (1989, Drama) Charles Haid, Mike Farrell.				Homicide: Life on the Street Ⓚ
MTV	57		MTV Live	Viewers	Matbrook (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Live-10 Spot	TBA	Oddville, MTV	Loveline
NICK	58		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Sports Theater "First Time" (R)		Secret of Alex	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years
SCIFI	59		Twilight Zone "Printer's Devil"		Amaz. Stories	Masters	Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo) Ⓚ		★★ Bloodstone: Subspecies II" (1993, Horror) Anders Hove.				Amaz. Stories	Masters
TLC	60	(24)	Hometime (R)	Home-time (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II: Life in the ER		Rescue: Baby Jessica		Blast Masters. Explosion.		Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	62		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		★★½ "Above the Law" (1988, Drama) Steven Seagal, Henry Silva.				★★½ "An Eye for an Eye" (1981, Adventure) Chuck Norris.
USA	63		Superboard "Tentacles" Ⓚ		Highlander: The Series Ⓚ		Walker, Texas Ranger Ⓚ		Boxing: Kenny Keene vs. James Toney. (In Stereo Live) Ⓚ			Bik Bukkings "Partners" (R) Ⓚ
HBO	65		★★★ "Twister" (1996, Drama) Helen Hunt. (In Stereo) PG-13 Ⓚ				★★★ "The Ghost and the Darkness" (1996) Michael Douglas Ⓚ			Comedy Hour: Richard Jeni		Ok "Pan E (R) (In Stereo) Ⓚ
MAX	66		(:40)	★★ "Lyndale" (1992) Anthony Edwards. PG-13			★★★ "The Bridges of Madison County" (1995) Clint Eastwood Ⓚ			★★ "Amityville Dollhouse" (1997, Horror) Robb Thomas. Ⓚ
SHOW	67		★½ "Vibes" (1988, Comedy) Cyndi Lauper. (In Stereo) PG Ⓚ				★★★ "Jack & Sarah" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Richard E. Grant. Ⓚ			★★½ "Sex and the Other Men" (1995) R			Women

YOUR COMPANY NAME AND LOGO HERE 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	26 UCTV
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27 TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28 BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31 Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32 Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33 Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
16	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

and here too

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

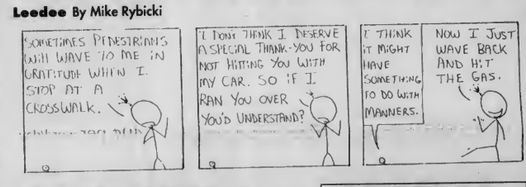
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Non Sequitor By Wiley



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — It is important for you to take care of your own today – not only for them, but for you, too. Your self esteem is sure to improve as a result.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — This is the day to put bygones behind you for good, and to look forward to a period of increased enlightenment and cooperation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can have what you want today without making any kind of abrupt demands on others. Simply go about your business plainly and openly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Why do you think you must be secretive today? The fact is that an honest and straightforward approach can win the day for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may have to slow down a little today in order to accommodate a private weakness that has sprung up recently. It isn't serious.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Look around today and judge yourself in light of what others are doing currently. You are bound to discover that you're doing very well indeed.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may find yourself looking back toward a time when things seemed more carefree, but after some analysis you'll know you're better off now.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You needn't beat yourself up today trying to accomplish something ahead of schedule. A more realistic, calmer pace can achieve the same result.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Some may say you are overdoing it at this time – and you may be – but the question really is: what's the harm in that right now?

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You won't please everyone today, so do your best to please those who mean the most to you, and who are depending on you for something essential.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — This is a good day for you to put yourself in the line of fire in order to experience what others can only begin to describe to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Are you sure that you have things entirely under control? You may be overlooking one small detail that can make all the difference.

Quote of the Day

"For a man, a woman is best fitted to be the real bearer of his soul image, because of the feminine quality of his soul."

–C. G. Jung

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Look at that, everyone! Annette was able to walk right past the computer even though she knows there are 27 e-mails waiting for her!"

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
(Chicken) Breasts with Stuffing
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Eggplant Cutlet

Worcester
LUNCH
Stir Fry Pasta and Vegetables
Ziti and Sauce
Chicken Burrito
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Parmesan
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

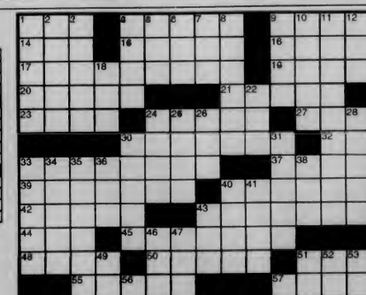
Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
Fnord

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breasts with
Rice Stuffing

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Bean Burrito
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Wings
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra von Ziegesar
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krasy, Joe Savitch



ACROSS
1 Excavated
4 Yellow-brown
9 Candle
14 Avail oneself of
15 Propelled a boat
16 Burning
17 Joke ending
19 Forfeits
20 Actor Flynn
21 Parcel out
23 Changed colors
24 Ironically
27 Diplomacy
30 Stirred up
32 Greek letter
33 Act like a seer
37 — Allen
39 Spot remover
40 Naming a book
42 Himalayan country
43 Birdhouse, of sorts
44 Pistol: slang
45 The devil
48 Cut
50 Ballet costumes
51 — Hari
55 Solitude lover
57 Helpers
58 New England state
60 Spa amenity
64 Room
65 Philadelphia
66 Beginning for "historic"
67 — down: muted
68 Falls
69 Hosiery shade

DOWN
1 Tricked
2 Loan-sharking
3 Type
4 Eye shadow
5 Actor Holbrook
6 Tycoon Onassis
7 He's a doll!
8 Noble goals
9 Like most cagers
10 Under way
11 Exotic ice-cream flavor
12 Before, poetically
13 Thing, in law
18 Food fish
22 Soap-making ingredient
24 Small songbird
25 Starlet's quest
26 Actor Brynner
28 Recite rhythmically
29 Slight trace
30 Bikini, e.g.
31 Hinder
33 Vampire's teeth
34 Singer Billy —
35 Like a snake
36 Airport info
38 R.N.'s specialty
40 Soy product
41 Currier and —
43 Code signal
46 Colorado Indian
47 Swore
49 Puerto Rican port
51 Playing marble
52 Acclimate
53 Aquarium fish
54 Pale-faced
56 Requirement
57 Iowa town
58 Colo. hours
59 Military addr.
61 La Brea — pits
62 Self
63 Jungfrau, for one

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

P	L	E	A	T		A	M	E	S		Q	U	A	D
R	O	V	E	R		L	I	S	A		U	N	D	O
O	P	E	R	A		O	P	P	O	S	I	T	E	S
M	E	R	I	N	G	U	E		O	Z	O	N	E
			A	C	I	D		W	H	I	Z
S	C	A	L	E	S		R	E	E	L	C	I	T	S
T	H	U	S		T	R	U	E	R		S	C	O	T
A	I	R		G	A	I	R			C	A	R
F	L	A	M		G	N	A	S	H		S	O	D	A
F	I	S	H	T	A	I	L		U	N	E	A	S	Y
		E	E	L	S		R	E	A	M
S	C	O	T	T	S		D	E	S	T	I	N	E	S
N	I	G	H	T	C	L	U	B		U	N	A	N	E
A	M	E	E		S	A	I	L	E		V	A	P	O
P	E	E	R		T	O	L	L		E	R	A	S	E

10-14-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS WEEKEND

Tuesday, October 14, 1997 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wildcats strike first, UMass falls 49–27 to 'Nova

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

It was too little, too late against the second team in the second half.

Even with the 27 points tallied up against No. 3 Villanova (5–0, 4–0 in the Atlantic 10) in the second half of Saturday's game, it was no consolation for the Massachusetts football team, who fell to the Wildcats 49–27 and plummeted to 1–5 for the season.

At the end of the first half UMass was trailing far behind Villanova 35–0, with signs of a loss far worse than 1996's 50–14 defeat looming.

Villanova	49
Massachusetts	27

Unfortunately for the Minutemen, Villanova would put themselves at such a distance in the first half that a comeback looked impossible.

The Wildcats recorded touchdowns on their first five possessions — due to sophomore quarterback Chris Boden and two identical receivers.

Boden completed 16 of 18 passes for 276 yards and a career–high five touchdown completions — two of which were 39 and 49 yard bombs.

On the receiving end of those passes were the Finneran twins — Brian and Brad, who have more in common than just their looks. Brad Finneran led Villanova receiving with 171 yards on 11 receptions and two touchdowns. His brother Brad, who usually dominates the spotlight, caught for 83 yards and another two touchdowns.

Brian Finneran became the first receiver in Wildcat history to catch for over 3,000 yards on Saturday. He now has caught for 3,049 yards over his four year career. He's also Villanova's all–time leading receiver in receptions with 199.

With Villanova setting up three, sometimes four receivers at a time, Boden was able to locate an open receiver on every passing play. In fact, the Wildcats' quarterbacks spread 31 receptions around to nine different receivers. Chris Gicking replaced Boden just before the end of the first half and remained the quarterback for the rest of the game.

But in the second half, it was a complete turnaround for the Minutemen, who dominated the line of scrimmage in a game that had pretty much been decided. In the last 30 minutes of play, UMass outscored the Wildcats 27–14. It was the most points the Minutemen had scored in one half since the miracle comeback against Connecticut last year.

"This team [UMass] played until the final whistle," Villanova coach Andy Talley said. "There are many teams that haven't, [but] I'm not going to say who."

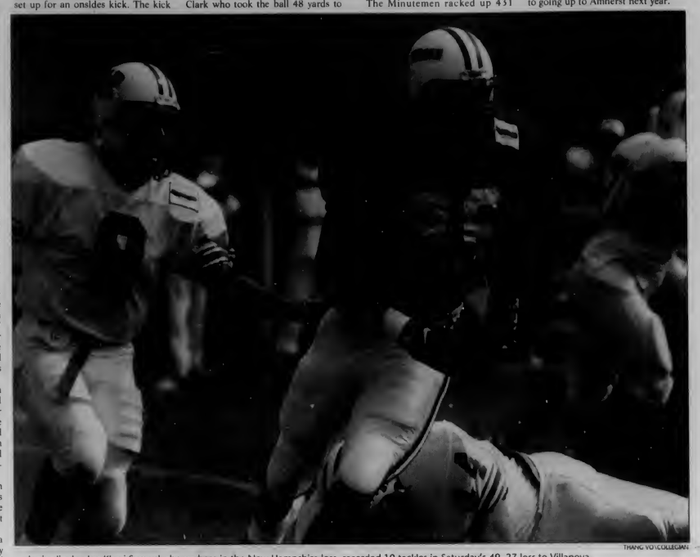
The second half offensive attack was led by senior quarterback Anthony Catterton, who started Saturday's game after replacing Jeff Smith in last week's loss to New Hampshire. Catterton completed 11 of 20 passes for 134 yards and one touchdown. The .550 completion percentage is a season–high for UMass quarterbacks.

Freshman tailback Marcel Shipp rushed for 81 yards on 10 carries — including one 38 yard scamp in the third quarter that set up UMass' first touchdown of the day. Shipp was used sparingly, with his 10 carries scattered throughout the game. He was only used on the first or second play of a drive.

After Shipp's 38 yard run, the Minutemen were held up by the Wildcats defense. On fourth down and 15, Catterton completed a 17 yard pass to tight end Kerry Taylor to put UMass on the three. On the next play, Matt Jordan ran the ball up the middle for the Minutemen's first touchdown.

The lone touchdown completion for Catterton came on a fourth and goal from the one yard line. After three failed attempts at running the ball up the middle, UMass stunned the Wildcats defense when Catterton ran a play–action fake and found Taylor wide open in the end–zone.

It was Taylor's fourth touchdown reception of the season. Taylor has accounted for 24 of the Minutemen's 77 points in the last six games.



With a little over a minute and a half left to go in the game, Dan Healey took a hand off from Catterton and went end over end until it made a classic bounce high in the air. Senior wide receiver Daryl Thomas leaped high over all the players and snatched the ball away from the Wildcats. It gave UMass one last chance on their own 49.

On the first play from scrimmage, Catteron completed a pass to Doug Clark who took the ball 48 yards to Villanova's three yard line. After three unsuccessful carries up the middle by Jordan and Catterton, the Minutemen handed it off to Jim Pizano who leaped over the pile of players on the goal line for a touchdown.

The two point conversion failed and UMass lost 49–27.

The Minutemen racked up 431 total offensive yards — 297 of which came on the ground, which is the most yards UMass has rushed for since last year's 41–20 win over Buffalo.

"This team is a very young football team," Talley said. "Mike [Hodges] has done a great job with this team. I'm not looking forward to going up to Amherst next year.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Junior linebacker Khari Samuel, shown here in the New Hampshire loss, recorded 10 tackles in Saturday's 49–27 loss to Villanova.

Minutemen fall to Colonials and Hokies

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Don't you hate it when life seems to deal you a bad hand, and you keep taking one step forward and two steps back? No matter how hard you try, life is like a see–saw, and when you finally hit the highest point, the bottom drops out.

GW	2
UMASS	1

Va. Tech	3
UMASS	2

Such was the fate of the No. 22 Massachusetts men's soccer team this past week, culminating a 1–2 week with two home conference losses to George Washington on Sunday, and Virginia Tech last Friday.

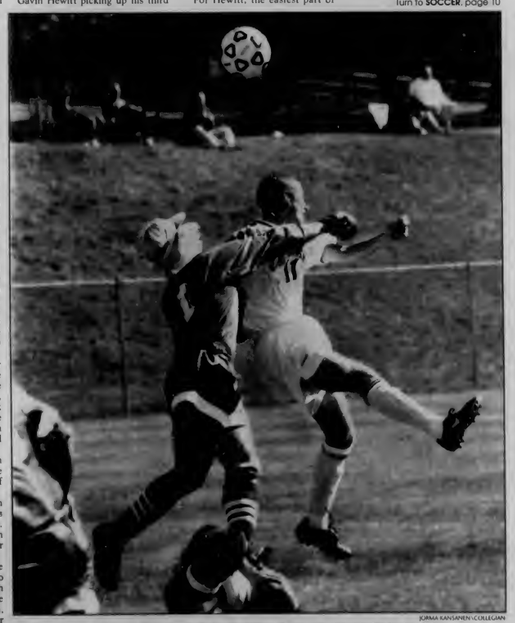
The Minutemen (8–4–1, 4–3 in Atlantic 10) lost two close contests, dropping a 2–1 decision to the Colonials (4–7–1, 2– 2–1 in A–10) and a 3–2 backbreaker to the Hokies (10–2, 4–0 in A–10) at Totman Field.

After consecutive wins over then–No. 22 New Hampshire and then–No. 9 Boston University four weeks ago, UMass went on to a 1–2 record in its next three games. Like a seesaw, the Minutemen bounced back with three straight wins, beating then–No. 19 Temple at home last Sunday in a 4–0 blowout at home.

However, after taking another step forward to the top of the A–10 with a 2–0 win over Rhode Island this past Wednesday, UMass took two giant steps back with two important conference losses. The team is now 2–4 when they are ranked nationally, and 6–0–1 when they are unranked.

Could this be a case of the team being more comfortable with the role of the hunter over the role of the hunted?

Possibly, but Minuteman coach Sam Koch saw these two losses as a major step back for the team. Koch feels the team needs to win the rest of their games to be up for postseason consideration.



"[Against GW] we scored the first goal and fell back into too much of a defensive mode," Koch said. "We didn't play with the intensity we needed to play with, and we need to start to do a better job with it. Soon.

"After these two losses, we're going to need to win the rest of our games to seriously be considered for the postseason, and that will be tough."

UMass got the early lead against GW at the 25:53 mark of the match, with sophomore forward Gavin Hewitt picking up his third goal of the season off of a corner kick by junior midfielder Jake Brodsky. Hewitt took immediate advantage of his substitution for freshman forward Seth Lilburn, netting his goal far post on the Colonials' senior goalkeeper Jamie Hadzima.

For Hewitt, the easiest part of this game was the goal, but the hardest part of the weekend were the losses. To the native of Seattle, Wash., the Minutemen have to finish the season strong after two tough losses; especially if they want to go to the A–10's held this year

Turn to SOCCER, page 10

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

UMass junior Jake Brodsky fights for the ball with GW goalie Jamie Hadzima in Sunday's 2–1 loss.

UM drops two A-10 matches, volleyball fall to .500 on season

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Correspondent

This weekend, the Massachusetts volleyball team made a change to something that wasn't necessarily broken. A new shipment of short sleeve shirts came in Friday afternoon, ready to be worn for crucial matches against Atlantic 10 rivals George Washington and Fordham.

Villanova	49
Massachusetts	27

Villanova	49
Massachusetts	27

Well, if things go as you would expect, the Minutewomen will be sporting long sleeves come this weekend. UMass (9– 9, 4–4 in the Atlantic 10) dropped to the .500 mark on the year with a 3–2 loss to Fordham Saturday night and a 3–0 thrashing to the hands of George Washington on Friday.

Against Fordham, the momentum was in UMass' favor. The victory was in their grasp and the Rams were on their heels. Down 11–2 in the fourth game and up two sets to one, UMass evened the score up at 11, behind sophomore outside hitter Karl Hogancamp and freshman setter Jennifer Drennan, not to mention a little help from the opposition. But the Minutewomen couldn't finish them off, dropping the fourth game and eventually the match to who coach Bonnie Kenny dubs as "the most improved team in the conference."

UMass was a perfect 4–0 against the Rams coming into the weekend, but Fordham fought back from a 2–1 deficit to defeat the Minutewomen 15–8, 8–15, 13–15, 15–13, 15–7.

Sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers collected 21 kills on the night, hitting at a .351 clip, while Hogancamp and senior outside hitter Lesley Nolan each registered a double– double in kills and digs.

Outside hitter Michelle Paciorek put herself in the record books in the losing effort. Paciorek, the senior from Sunderland, leapfrogged Dionne Nash to become UMass' all–time leader in block assists with 264. She also holds the career mark for total blocks (338) and block solos (74).

"It was a great night for Michelle, but other than that, there isn't much to be happy about," Kenny said. "We out killed them, out dug them, but we had 42 errors to their 20 and that'll kill you every time."

The Minutewomen hit a subpar .146 on the evening, including a horrendous –.158 (three kills, six errors on 19 total attacks) in the fifth and deciding game. Fordham's blockers were just too much, out blocking UMass' 32–17 and frustrating them along the way.

It was Massachusetts' first five set loss this season, after being victorious in their first three attempts. The last 5–2 UMass loss was on Nov. 9, 1996 when Temple defeated the Minutewomen at the Cage.

Things were even uglier on Friday night when the Minutewomen took on the Colonials of George Washington. Kenny called the outside hitting "atrocious" as UMass hit .061 on the night, on their way to a 15–12, 15–5, 15–10 loss to GW.

Nolan led UMass with 14 kills (.130 pct) and nine digs. Hogancamp chipped in with eight kills and 16 digs in what was a GW rout from the beginning. Sophomore outside hitter Sarah Watters added 11 kills and seven digs.

"This was our worst performance of the year. There were no bright spots. George Washington just beat us," Kenny said.

George Washington's blocking stymied the UMass outside hitters all night, knocking back a countless amount of Minutewoman attacks. UMass was outblocked 22–7 in the match.

Meyers was among the frustrated, collecting only six kills on 31 attacks, amounting to a –.065 average.

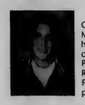
"We wanted to work the right side and the middle, but it turned out that 80 percent of our attacks went to the left side into their strongest block," Kenny said. "Their blocking frustrated us all night and we just can't afford to have 34 hitting errors against a team like George Washington."

UMass became the epitome of .500 volleyball with the loss to Fordham. Their overall record: 9–9 on the season, 4– 4 in the conference, 5–5 at home, 2–2 on the road, and 2–2 at neutral sites.

The Minutewomen return to action when they travel to Philadelphia, Pa. to take on Temple on Friday night. The Owls currently reside at the top of Atlantic 10 conference along with Rhode Island with an unblemished 8–0 record.

After a match against LaSalle on Saturday, the Minutewomen will return home for a non–conference battle against the Connecticut Lady Huskies.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Voted 1997's Best College Daily — New England Newspaper Association



Volume CVII Issue 30 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, October 15, 1997

"You don't know what you got til it's gone."

Janet Jackson once again experiments with new sounds, yet her innovation isn't all that innovative. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

It takes some Gutz to win

Senior Jen Gutzman and the Minutewomen field hockey team face off against No. 8 Providence today at Richard F. Garber Field (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Battle in Congo grows violent

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — The battle for the Republic of Congo's capital grew more violent yesterday when a former military leader launched renewed, concentrated attacks on Brazzaville's airport and presidential palace, diplomats said.

Forces loyal to President Pascal Lissouba managed to repel at least one wave of attacks. The opposition militia vowed to begin another offensive against government positions and appeared to be gaining ground in the city, diplomats in Kinshasa said o n conditionof anonymity.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan asked the Security Council yesterday to slap an arms embargo on the Republic of Congo and send a military team to nearby Gabon as a preliminary step toward a U.N. peacekeeping force to halt the fighting.

But council action on both the advance team and the peacekeeping force hinged on U.S. approval. Council diplomats said the Americans were reluctant to commit to such a force, citing President Clinton's 1994 guidelines to limit peacekeeping operations.

An opposition military official in the Republic of Congo, speaking on condition of anonymity, said his forces had taken control of the airport and the palace, although diplomats insisted they were still under Lissouba's control.

NATION

Private support for the arts triples

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private giving to the arts has more than tripled since 1965, but the number of opera companies and theater companies has increased at a much faster pace, and the National Endowment for the Arts reports that Americans' support for t hetraditional arts is declining.

People who work in the arts are partly to blame, the NEA says in a new report. Actress Jane Alexander, who has headed the agency for the last four years, said she found a lack of long-range planning for the arts around the country.

Alexander had just won a battle in Congress to keep the federal government the biggest single dispenser of money to writers and arts groups. Congress has promised $98 million for th e yearthat began Oct. 1 — down from a peak of $176 million in 1992.

Lee Kessler, head of the advocacy group American Arts Alliance, said the effect of that loss of seed money remains to be seen. The number of opera companies rose from 27 in 1965 to 120 in 1994, and theater companies grew from 56 to 425, the NEA reports.

But money to support them has not increased as fast. Private giving, adjusted for inflation, rose from about $3 billion to about $10.24 billion in those years, according to "Giving USA 1997," an annual survey of donations to the arts and humanities that showed an upturn in 1996 after a three-year decline.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 66 LOW: 46	HIGH: 62 LOW: 44	HIGH: 55 LOW: 39

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 12
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Coffee talk

YOONNE YANG/ COLLEGIAN

Andrea Grimes, a junior sociology/ education major, enjoys a hot drink and good conversation at Rao's Coffee Shop in Amherst.

Board of Higher Education votes to ban alcohol from state schools

By Tomar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Board of Higher Education voted yesterday to press a ban on alcohol at all 29 state colleges and universities in the Commonwealth.

The Board strongly suggested in its vote that all of the campuses be made dry in an effort to combat underage drinking and substance abuse by students in general.

"It is the policy of the Board of Higher Education that no persons shall give, sell, deliver or have in their possession any alcoholic beverage in any building, including residence halls, owned or operated by an institution within the system of public higher education," read the motion, which was approved unanimously by the Board.

Violators of the policy, according to the motion, would be subject to dismissal from the institution.

The Board's motion, however, does allow for alcohol at specifically designated buildings, such as campus pubs, or at specifically designated events, to be determined by the Board of Trustees of each campus.

The Board asked each school's Board of Trustees, who would have to approve of the ban before it could go into effect, to vote on the policy by Dec. 15.

Brian O'Connor, the Faculty Senate delegate to the Amherst campus' Board of Trustees, said that the trustees will consider the impact of a ban on the town of Amherst before taking their vote on the proposal at their December meeting.

"They will obviously study the impact, especially on the town of Amherst," O'Connor said. "They will consult with the Chancellor, and hopefully some sort of compromise may be worked out."

COURTESY UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Chancellor David K. Scott

O'Connor, who said he felt the ban was not a solution to drinking problems but rather "the easy way out," said that Chancellor David K. Scott may have an influence on the trustees' opinion.

Scott, who was hospitalized this week with a deep inner ear infection while on vacation in Michigan, but is expected to return to campus later this week, voiced his opposition to a ban at the Amherst campus at the last Faculty Senate meeting, held on Oct. 9.

At the Senate meeting, Scott argued that prohibiting alcohol on campus would only lead to students drinking in town.

"I do not believe that is the best solution for this campus," Scott said. "It will just push drinking into town."

Scott reiterated this message in a series of comments released from the UMass News Office yesterday.

"Today's vote by the state Board of Higher Education to ban alcohol completely from campuses is one approach, and one that gets everyone's attention. But, it's not a simple fix," Scott said. "We are concerned with a complete ban since it may push students to drink in surrounding towns, and cause more problems for the town."

Scott also touched upon the difficulty on enforcing a total ban on campus.

"We don't want to have policies that we may not have the resources to enforce," Scott said.

SGA reacts to proposed ban

Lin Wong, president of the Student Government Association (SGA), has placed a referendum question, "Should the entire University campus be alcohol free?" on the ballot for the Oct. 22 election.

Wong said she hopes that this referendum question will show the Board of Trustees how the student body feels about making UMass–Amherst a dry campus.

"It is really important that the Board of Trustees understand the view of the campus as a whole," Wong said.

Wong also said that she is personally opposed to a ban.

"There is nothing wrong with Scott putting a ban on tailgating... but it is a big leap to making the campus dry," Wong said.

Frankie J. Mozell, SGA chief of staff,

"I do not believe that is the best solution for this campus," Scott said. "It will just push drinking into town."
Chancellor David Scott

Turn to ALCOHOL page 2

CCBMCC commemorates third anniversary of historic march

By Gregory H. Casimir
Collegian Staff

On Thursday, the Collegiate Committee of Black Males for Community Consciousness (CCBMCC), in conjunction with the Malcolm X Cultural Center, has planned a day of absence to commemorate the third year anniversary of the historical Million Man March.

The first Million Man March took place in Washington D.C., and many black males from UMass embarked on the journey to be a part of that historical event. The impact of that memory was so powerful that two years later it has prompted the black men of UMass to re–enact that historical moment here on campus.

Junior Areaya Abebe, a economics and finance major, expressed what this day means to him.

"For me, this day is a time where black males can take a day off from all the rhetoric and hectic nonsense that clutters their minds with stress. It allows them to take time and reflect upon their roles as black men in society and in college life, and learn about history and themselves," Abebe said.

The day will be an absence from all classes and work. The day's commemoration will begin roughly at 8:15 a.m. in the Malcolm X Cultural Center. There will be a welcoming address given by James Callahan, a doctoral student and the head of the CCBMCC, and the Assistant Vice–Chancellor Rick Townes. This will be followed by a series of workshops, discussions, and presentations following the theme of "Understanding our past and planning for the future."

Next on the day's agenda will be a film series. Fifteen minute excerpts from provocative black documentaries will be shown. These films will include: Eyes on the Prize, Slavery in the States, Martin Luther King's March on Washington, Make It Plain — a film about Malcolm X, footage on the Million Man March, and Civil War — a story about the black 54th Regiment. After the conclusion of the films, an hour and a half lunch break will follow.

The day's activities will then continue with lectures from two of UMass' well known Afro–American Studies professors, Prof. John Bracey and Prof. Bill Strickland. Professor Bracey's lecture will be about "Understanding Affirmative Action" and Prof. Strickland will discuss "Politics In Our Mist."

The spiritual aspect of the commemoration will take place later that day. At around 7 p.m., an important candlelight vigil will be held. Called "Hands Around the Pond," this act will celebrate the embodiment of the spirit of the Million Man March — reconciliation, atonement and responsibility. Candles will be given out and there will be a procession from the Malcolm X Cultural Center to the campus pond.

Ronny Thorpe, an Afro–American Studies major, spoke about why he will participate in the vigil.

"I'll be there to shine for those who couldn't make so their light can still shine," Thorpe said.

A large number of people from not only UMass, but the Five College Area are expected to show up and participate as well.

The day will be concluded with a dinner on the Metawampee Lawn.

Senior Kola Olasunde commented on the meaning of the entire day, saying "Oct. 16 is much more than a day of absence; it is a day of atonement, reconciliation, and responsibility. It is a time that we need to reflect, refine, reinitiate, and renew. I cannot do justice to the importance of this day, so I will give an excerpt from the Million Man March statement: '... we must honor our past, willing engage our present, and self–consciously plan for and welcome our future.'"

Author Erik Marcus tells benefits of vegetarian diet & the risk of eating meat

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Staff

Eating meat and dairy products in this day and age can be hazardous to your health and can lead to heart disease, cancer and increased body weight, said author Erik Marcus last night.

Marcus presented those points, among others, from his book, Vegan: The New Ethics of Eating, in a speech sponsored by the Animal Rights Coalition at 8 p.m. in room 162, Campus Center.

Marcus became vegetarian 10 years ago in college, he said, after watching cows being slaughtered in the movie Faces of Death.

"I looked into the calf's eyes as it was being slaughtered," Marcus said. "At the time, I ate so much meat that it really hit me. All of a sudden a veil was lifted."

Since then, Marcus said he has been comparing eating meat versus eating vegetarian and has found that meat eaters sustain twice as many problems with heart disease than do vegetarians.

The American Cancer Society also says vegans have 50 percent fewer problems with fatal cancer than non–vegans, according to Marcus.

After studying the effects of mad cow disease in England, Marcus found the disease stems from rendering houses, or places where unused animal parts are grinded, heated at high temperatures and knocked out with acid before being fed back to cows.

Rendering appeared safe at first because it killed infections and viruses, Marcus said, but the British government soon found that preons, the main killers in mad cow disease, survived rendering and were passed onto other cows who ate the "protein concentrates."

"A non–vegetarian in Britain has eaten over 70 servings from infected animals," Marcus said. "But it takes one quarter to one fifth of an animal's life for preons to spread in the body and eventually cause death."

That means, if an average person liver 80 years, the disease can live in humans for approximately 20 years before showing symptoms of hallucinations and hysteria.

"Preon diseases are probably worse than AIDS, more gory than AIDS," Marcus said.

Mad cow disease is not just a problem in England though, Marcus said. The United States continue to render cows and have no laws protecting people against the procedure.

"If we continue to eat beef and then [mad cow disease] comes out, many of us could have already eaten infected beef," Marcus said.

He also explained the stereotype that the old–fashioned farm with the little red barn has become extinct and replaced with factory farms. These farms crowd animals into such small spaces they can't move or exercise and thus are forced to gain weight before being slaughtered for human consumption.

Although Marcus is mainly concerned with the ethical issue of vege-

Turn to VEGETARIAN, page 2

KEN MC DONALD/COLLEGIAN

Saving the world one person at a time...

Melanie Undem, the Masspirg Campus Organizer, discusses President Clinton's opinion on the issue of global warming with, junior Lindsay Mc Cabe, yesterday outside the Student Union.

■ vegetarian

continued from page 1

tarianism, he also addressed the health aspects.

Over the years, Americans have continually increased their weight, causing health risks like heart disease and cancer, according to Marcus.

"It's getting out of hand," he said. "Americans weigh more now than they ever have, increasing their body weight 10 percent over the last 10 years."

Marcus said the reason for the increase is due to television and other forms of media advising people to include meat and dairy products into their diets.

"Somehow, people think a meal is not complete without [animal-based foods]," Marcus said. "However, the reality is that if you base your diet on animal foods, it's hard to maintain a healthy body weight."

Marcus urges people who are concerned with improving their health and saving animals' lives to switch to a vegetarian diet.

"If you're inspired to improve your health, protect animals and bring your weight to where you want it to be," Marcus said, "than [vegetarianism is] really worth it."

Rampant disease in Chinese blood bank infects thousands

By Elaine Kurtenbach
Associated Press

BEIJING — A blood bank in central China was so poorly run that more than 10,000 people who donated blood there contracted the sometimes deadly hepatitis C virus, a health official said yesterday. Health officials investigated the blood bank after discovering that "blood merchants" were taking poor villagers in groups to sell their blood there, said Xu Peilin, a former health director in eastern Zhejiang province.

The disclosure underscored concern that blood and blood products in China remain tainted despite stricter laws and efforts to improve supervision of the blood supply.

Zhejiang health officials investigated the blood bank in the city of Dantu, in neighboring Jiangsu province, after discovering dozens of Zhejiang villagers had contracted hepatitis C after donating blood there, Xu said.

They found that, because of unsterilized equipment, more than 10,000 people had contracted hepatitis C after donating blood in Dantu. It concluded the blood bank was not screening donors: tests of 92 donors found 86 were infected with hepatitis C, a blood-borne virus that can cause chronic liver disease and sometimes death. One infected donor had given blood 27 times in one month; another had given blood 19 days out of 23.

The findings were contained in a report obtained by The Associated Press. It was dated June 24 and had apparently not been previously published.

The blood bank in Dantu has since been closed, according to officials at a nearby hospital. But it was unclear if any action was taken against officials responsible for policing the blood supply.

Spokesmen for the Jiangsu and Zhejiang provincial governments and their health departments declined comment, saying they knew nothing about the report.

Earlier this year, China issued regulations imposing severe penalties on those who violates laws intended to curb the spread of infectious diseases such as hepatitis and the AIDS virus. The discovery in April of AIDS antibodies in a commonly used Chinese blood product heightened fears the disease was spreading through blood supplies.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Leaving the Scene
Oct. 10
A vehicle parked on John Adams Road was struck by an unknown vehicle.

Accident — Property Damage
Oct. 10
A minor two vehicle accident occurred on University Drive.

Animal Complaint
Oct. 12
A large moose was reported moving in the direction of the soccer fields on Mullins Way where a game was in progress. UMass and Hadley police were on the scene to help with traffic and pedestrian safety. Environmental police and State police responded to assist with traffic. All units were cleared at 5:30 p.m. after animal left the scene.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 9
Individuals were inside of construction area on Hicks Way.
Oct. 10
Individuals were reported throwing furniture from the 3rd floor of Brooks Residence Hall.
An individual was yelling from John Adams Residence Hall.
An individual was throwing rocks at windows in Prince Residence Hall.
A dispute between vehicle operators occurred on Infirmary Way.
Oct. 11
An unwanted guest was removed from Webster Residence Hall.
Oct. 13
Reports were made about erratic driving by a motorist on Infirmary Way.
An offensive note was left on the Cluster office door in Baker Residence Hall.

Disturbance
Oct. 10
A fight between individuals was reported from Kennedy Residence Hall.
Oct. 11
A large fight was reported outside of Gorman Residence Hall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 11
Water was leaking through ceiling in the Morrill Science Center.

Larceny
Oct. 9
A telephone was stolen from a Machmer Hall office. Estimated value $250.
Oct. 10
A bicycle was reported stolen from Knowlton Residence Hall.
Oct. 11
A VCR was stolen from an unlocked room in Coolidge Residence Hall.
A case containing CD's was reported stolen from Johnson Residence Hall.
An individual reported his computer stolen from Coolidge Residence Hall.

Vandalism
Oct. 9
A window was broken in the French Hall Greenhouse.
A swastika was carved into a resident's door in Lewis Residence Hall. It was removed by housing.
Individuals were reported breaking bathroom windows in Cance Residence Hall.
Oct. 10
A vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive was damaged.
Oct. 11
Fire extinguishers were thrown through the windows at Worcester Dining Common.
Oct. 12
Trash was dumped on top of State vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue.
A rear view mirror was broken on a vehicle parked in parking lot 21 on University Drive.
Oct. 13
Racial graffiti was found in elevator of McNamara Residence Hall.

Iran accuses United States of spying; tensions rising in the Gulf after raids

By Afshin Valinejad
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran accused the United States yesterday of spying on Iranian military maneuvers, warning it to withdraw a destroyer and a reconnaissance plane from the area. The Navy denied the charge, saying the ship never even left port.

Senior Iranian naval officers, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that after the warnings, the USS Kinkaid and an S-3 reconnaissance plane pulled back from the site of the war games. However, a spokesman for the Navy's 5th Fleet, headquartered on the Gulf island of Bahrain, said he had "no indication that either incident occurred."

"The Kinkaid has been in port in Bahrain since Monday afternoon," Cmdr. Gordon Hume said.

The Kinkaid is part of a seven-ship battle group that arrived in the Persian Gulf on Sunday. The S-3 is one of 75 aircraft operating from the USS Nimitz, the aircraft carrier that leads the battle group.

Tensions in the region escalated after Iran's Sept. 29 air raids on two Iranian opposition bases inside Iraq. The raids violated a "no-fly" zone patrolled by the United States and its allies. For its part, Iraq sent two fighters in pursuit, also violating the zone.

In response, Washington ordered the Nimitz to skip a port call in Singapore and speed to the Persian Gulf two weeks ahead of schedule.

Yesterday, an Iranian naval commander said the Nimitz "would have no major impact on the region."

"It serves only as a psychological threat by the Americans to justify their illegitimate presence here," Adm. Ali Akbar Ahmadain, the navy commander of Iran's Revolutionary Guards, said in remarks carried by Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency. Iran is not seeking a confrontation with the United States, but will strike back if attacked, he said.

The Iranian exercises cover a 15,000-square-mile area and involve more than 100 vessels. The U.S. Navy has 15 ships in the region.

Neither Iran nor the Navy has given precise locations for their warships, and it is not known how far their ships are from one another.

But Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon suggested a confrontation was unlikely.

"The exercises were planned long before the Nimitz went into the Gulf, and they have — the best we can tell — proceeded according to plan," Bacon said.

"We don't see any signs now that Iraq is trying to take... provocative action or is trying to confront us in any way," he said, speaking in Washington.

On Monday, a Tehran newspaper warned that an accidental collision in the Gulf could spark a confrontation between the two countries.

"Iranian naval exercises are covering a wide area in the Persian Gulf where the U.S. spy ships are crowding the waterway and increasing the risk of collisions.

■ alcohol

continued from page 1

said he also opposed a ban, and wondered how a ban would be enforced.

"How will this be enforced? What's going to happen if a student drinks in his room?" Mozell asked. "How could a [resident assistant] do that to an other students?"

Elly Court, the SGA delegate to the Board of Higher Education, said she thought the effect of the Board's vote would cause the campuses' Boards of Trustees to reconsider their individual alcohol policies than to actually make all the campuses in the state dry.

"I support this motion because I think it is necessary that individual campuses re-evaluate their alcohol policies," Court said. "I do not support alcohol bans on any campus."

Students feel ban won't change behavior

Many UMass students said they opposed a ban on alcohol and feel that ultimately, students will continue to drink, both on campus and off, regardless of policy passed by the University.

"It is completely ridiculous," said Ernie Balabanis, a junior sports management major. "People are going to find ways to drink. It will just drive everything underground."

Ryan Bell, a junior sociology major, agreed with Balabanis.

"They'll just drink more hard alcohol, because it is easier to smuggle," Bell said.

HEY YOU!
IF YOU HAVE TIME TO READ THIS FILLER, YOU HAVE TIME TO WRITE FOR THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN, VOTED THE NEW ENGLAND'S BEST COLLEGE DAILY! CALL 545-3500 FOR MORE INFORMATION ON HOW TO GET INVOLVED OR STOP DOWN BY THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT TO TALK TO AN EDITOR.

Procter & Gamble
Career Information Session

Tomorrow

As the global leader in the Consumer Product industry, P&G sells over 300 brands in over 140 countries.

Students from ALL MAJORS

We offer starting FULL-TIME and SUMMER CO-OP positions in CUSTOMER BUISNESS DEVELOPMENT in major marketing areas throughout the United States. We're ONLY coming to UMass in the Fall, so don't miss this opportunity to learn more about how you can be part of our leadership team.

TWO LOCATIONS, TWO TIMES - REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED!

Thursday 10/16/97
Time: 7:30-9:00 pm
Where: SOM
Faculty Lounge 3rd floor

Thursday 10/16/97
Time: 4-6 pm
Where: Campus Center
Room 805-809

Tomorrow

Visit our website at www.pg.com

RIZZO ASSOCIATES, INC.

THE PERFECT Environment FOR YOUR CAREER

Rizzo Associates, Inc. is a leading engineering, transportation and environmental science firm. We have built our reputation by meeting the technical, regulatory, and management needs of public and private clients worldwide.

If you are looking for employment in the fields of engineering, transportation, or environmental science, we invite you to take a closer look at Rizzo Associates. Twice recognized by Inc. 500 as one of America's fastest growing companies, our firm strives for excellence and employs top professionals in the following technical areas:

- TRANSPORTATION ENGINEERING
- CIVIL/SITE ENGINEERING
- CAD DRAFTING
- ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT
- HYDROLOGY
- GEOLOGY
- ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE
- ENVIRONMENTAL COMPLIANCE/AUDITING

OUR CORE VALUES. These are the timeless guiding principles that define who we are and how we are bound together.

Honesty. We are honest, decent and principled: with each other, with our clients, with our competitors. We cannot envision any other way of doing business.

Openness. We manage our company in an open and participatory manner. We are open to ideas. We are open to change.

Responsiveness. We are a service-oriented business. This fact permeates our being and is a key factor in our professional success.

Involvement. We care deeply about the work we do and the society in which we do it. We are leaders and active participants in our profession, our community, and our company.

OUR PURPOSE. As employee-owners, our purpose is to create professional and personal opportunities for all members of our organization. As a corporation, our purpose is to use our strengths and our knowledge in the support of our clients' endeavors.

OUR GOAL. We aspire to be a $100 million global company by the year 2008 - our 25th anniversary. We know attainment of this goal will require that we take risks, and sacrifices will be likely be made. But, we believe the rewards are worth it, we want to do it, and we are not afraid to try.

*If you are unable to attend the career fair, please send your resume and cover letter to: Rizzo Associates, Inc., Human Resources Manager, 235 West Central Street, Natick, MA 01760. Fax: (508) 651-3401. E-mail: HR@rizzo.com.

We are committed to diversity and are an EEO employer.

RIZZO ASSOCIATES, INC.
ENGINEERS AND SCIENTISTS
AN EMPLOYEE-OWNED COMPANY

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

The world don't move to the beat of just one drum

Matt Pagnotta, a junior music education major, follows the instruction of Dr. Peter Tanner as the University Percussion Ensemble prepares for a Nov. 13 concert.

Blair jeered at after handshake with Adams

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Enraged Protestants jeered and jostled Prime Minister Tony Blair after he shook hands Monday with Sinn Fein president Gerry Adams. It was the first meeting in 76 years between a British leader and the IRA's allies.

Blair looked flustered when 100 Protestants mobbed him in a Belfast neighborhood, yelling, "Traitor!" and "Your hands are covered in blood!"

The protest erupted after Blair met with Adams and leaders of seven other parties involved in Northern Ireland peace talks at Stormont, Britain's administrative headquarters in Belfast.

"I treated Gerry Adams and the members of Sinn Fein in the same way that I treat any human being," Blair said when reporters asked him if he had shaken hands — a politically charged gesture that many of Northern Ireland's Protestants and Britain's Conservatives had urged the Labor Party leader not to make.

"We can either carry on with the hatred and despair and the killings, treating people as if they were not parts of humanity, or we can try and settle our differences by negotiation, discussion and debate," Blair said.

Blair's aides later confirmed that the prime minister had extended his hand to Adams and the rest of the Sinn Fein delegation before their 15-minute session, from which cameras were banned. It was the first meeting between a British prime minister and a Sinn Fein leader since David Lloyd George met Michael Collins in 1921 when they signed the treaty granting independence to the overwhelmingly Catholic Republic of Ireland.

The pact let six Protestant-dominated counties in the north remain under British rule, which the IRA has sought to end with a bomb-and-bullet campaign.

Britain allowed Sinn Fein into ongoing Northern Ireland peace talks after the Irish Republican Army called a cease-fire in July. Blair says Adams will be ejected if IRA violence resumes.

Monday's handshake infuriated many Protestants both in itself and because of the publicity it brought Sinn Fein.

Demonstrators donned rubber gloves and waved their hands at Blair, taunting him when he went to a predominantly Protestant district to meet a politician from a hard-line party, the Democratic Unionists, which is boycotting the talks.

As the crowd began to press in on Blair, bodyguards hurried him inside a bank. About 50 police formed a ring around him when he reemerged for a quick escape in a waiting limousine, which sped off in a motorcade with police sirens wailing.

"We have no faith in a man who talks to murderers," said Pauline Gilmore, one of the protesters.

Adams said Blair listened intently to Sinn Fein demands for the end of British rule and the unification of the province with the Irish Republic

"I said to him we want him to be the last British prime minister with jurisdiction in Ireland," Adams told reporters. David Trimble, leader of the largest pro-British Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, said Blair had reassured him that any agreement would be put to a vote in Northern Ireland, where Protestants are in a majority.

Netanyahu backs Orthodox control of religious affairs

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — In a step likely to anger American Jews, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu agreed yesterday to back legislation that will solidify Orthodox control over religious affairs in Israel and block recognition of Reform and Conservative Judaism.

Orthodox lawmakers said if Netanyahu goes back on his word, as he has done before, they will topple his government before the year is out.

The proposed legislation would alienate American Jews, including some of Netanyahu's most powerful supporters. More than 90 percent of U.S. Jews belong to non-Orthodox streams of Judaism, compared to less than 1 percent of Jews in Israel.

The move "will be seen by American Jews as delegitimizing their Jewish identity," said Rabbi Uri Regev, head of the Reform movement in Israel.

Since Israel was founded, the Orthodox have had a monopoly over official religious affairs. Only Orthodox rabbis sit on local religious councils, which provide various religious services, perform marriages and conversions and grant divorces.

The Reform movement in Israel has tried to challenge the Orthodox monopoly in court, while the Orthodox have pushed the government to pass legislation that would formally deprive the other streams of recognition.

In June 1996, Netanyahu promised the Orthodox that his government would pass legislation affirming that only Orthodox rabbis can perform conversions in Israel. Reform and Conservative conversions performed abroad are recognized in Israel.

But in an attempt to avoid a showdown with American Jews, Netanyahu got the bill put on hold while a committee headed by Finance Minister Yaakov Neeman, an Orthodox Jew, sought a compromise.

Orthodox rabbis were alarmed Monday when leaks from the committee suggested that Neeman would propose setting up a conversion institute with representatives from all three streams. Orthodox parties are also troubled by a Supreme Court case on whether Reform and Conservative representatives can sit on religious councils. The court ruling Oct. 29 is expected to be against them.

So six Orthodox legislators from three parties told Netanyahu they would topple his government unless he got the conversion bill and legislation to maintain Orthodox dominance in religious councils passed by November.

Group challenges race-based admissions at UMichigan

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

DETROIT — The organization whose lawsuit ended affirmative action at the University of Texas went after the University of Michigan on yesterday, challenging policies that helped the school double its minority enrollment in just 10 years.

The Center for Individual Rights filed a class-action lawsuit in federal court on behalf of two white students denied admission to the highly competitive university at its Ann Arbor campus.

The lawsuit claims the university's affirmative action policies discriminate against qualified whites in favor of unqualified blacks and Hispanics.

"This lawsuit should serve notice on college presidents everywhere that they will be held individually liable under federal civil rights laws if they do not act now to bring their admissions policies into compliance with the law," said center President Michael McDonald.

Michigan, one of the most selective public universities in the country, has boosted its minority enrollment over the past decade to about 25 percent of the 36,000 students at its flagship Ann Arbor campus through an aggressive diversity policy.

It said it would not back down.

"For almost 200 years, public universities have unlocked the doors to social and economic opportunity to students from many different backgrounds," university President Lee Bollinger said.

"We believe it is absolutely essential that they continue to do so."

The Washington-based advocacy group filed a lawsuit that led to a federal appeals court ruling striking down affirmative action at the University of Texas Law School. The U.S. Supreme Court let the ruling stand last year.

big.

big technology. Intelligent test programming environments. High speed digital instruments. Next generation superchips. And more. Teradyne is your source for innovation, quality and leadership in Automatic Test Equipment, complex connection systems and telecommunications and software test. Our ability to bring the most exciting products to market started more than 40 years ago with the introduction of the first automatic diode tester. Since then we've continued to set the standard with products such as the first tester with tester-per-pin architecture, the industry's first million dollar tester and the world's largest most complex backplane. And all the while continuing our excellence in innovation recognized by the R & D 100 award for the revolutionary tester device docking system.

big customers. While we can't possibly name them all, we help today's leading electronics companies deliver their products to a fast-evolving market. Whether it's automotive electronics, cellular phones, PCs, or computer networks, Teradyne is the power behind the products. We're a worldwide presence working in partnership with all the big names.

big possibilities. To an engineering or business grad, Teradyne represents the opportunity to gain real involvement on real projects from day one. As soon as you join us, you will benefit from an informal culture where creativity and teamwork prevail. Whether your specialty is Software, Hardware, Mechanical, or Application Engineering, or Business, Teradyne perfectly suits your background. We have exciting opportunities in all our locations from California to Boston, and even internationally.

not-so-big name
TERADYNE
www.teradyne.com

To find out more about Teradyne, see us on campus or send your resume to: Teradyne, Inc., Attn: University Relations, 321 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02118. Or e-mail joan.oday@teradyne.com. An equal opportunity employer

WE'RE COMING TO YOUR CAMPUS SOON!
See your placement office for details.

Boston, MA • Nashua, NH • Deerfield, IL • Agoura Hills, CA • San Jose, CA • Walnut Creek, CA • Dublin, Ireland • Kumamoto, Japan

EDITORIAL / OPINION

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Working girl

Seema Gangatirkar

Today is the School of Management Career Fair Day.

As an SOM major, things like this alternately excite and freak me out.

Anyone who is on the prowl for a job knows this feeling. It's almost like the first day of school: will the teacher like me? Will I have any friends? Who will I sit with at lunch?

Except this time we're talking about the rest of our lives here. Someone very helpfully pointed out to me over the weekend that the job I pick now (provided I find a job) will direct me from now until I retire.

Scary thought.

What if you pick the wrong job? If you've ever scanned the Boston Globe's help wanted section, you know that in order to get one job, you've had to have done something similar to it in a previous career life. And you can't have done it for any less than three to five years if you even want the company to look at you.

So basically, if you make the wrong choices now, you're pretty much stuck with your mistake for the rest of forever.

But before you can make the mistake of your life, first you need to make an impression on someone who can help you make that mistake.

In order to make that impression, you've got to have a resumé. Resumés are evil things. Anyone who has ever tried to write one knows this. Part of the reason is because everyone has their own ideas about what works in a resumé and what doesn't.

Most people agree you shouldn't put your prison record on a resumé (but I'm sure you could find someone who would advocate disclosing that information right away), but nobody can agree about whether your GPA ought to go on the damn thing or not.

At this point I'm going to jump on the bandwagon and add my two cents about resumés: do your own thing. Just remember to bullet.

After the resumé is nicely printed on 100 percent cotton or linen paper, you now need to write a cover letter.

Cover letters aren't quite as obnoxious as a resumé, but they are right in the same stratosphere.

The problem with cover letters comes from the idea that you have to sell yourself in one page or less.

Most people are modest about their accomplishments and tend to downplay their achievements. An example would be: "I recently won the Nobel Peace Prize for trying to ban land mines in my free time. But working for your company would mean more to me than the Prize ever would."

And you have to close this cover letter asking for the nameless Sir/Madam to call you for an interview. Most of the time, whoever is reading your cover letter won't give you the time of day — mostly because they've got a job and you don't.

But just suppose you are one of the lucky few who actually lands an interview.

Now the question comes up: what do you wear?

There's more agreement here than when it comes to writing a resumé. Most would agree that a suit would be appropriate — jeans and a torn sweater wouldn't be. But a suit has to be very specific. A lime green suit (which incidentally is surprisingly popular these days) wouldn't be cool for an interview — even if it looks great with your purple hair.

A good rule of thumb: something black and boringly conservative. Think the Republican party and you'll be just fine.

Now that you have an interview, you actually have to talk. Before, when you were doing all that writing, you didn't really have to write anything. You could have had your best friend or the dog write it and the company wouldn't be the wiser.

But now you actually have to open your mouth and speak. Coherence and confidence are key here and good answers to tough questions are always helpful. For example, don't be too honest when you answer the dreaded, "Why do you want this job?" Chances are the truthful reply, "So I can pay off the $35,000 I owe in loans" won't work so well. It's here where you make your mark, so try to be so intelligent and creative and subservient.

For example, try something like, "Your company offers plenty of opportunity for growth and that's important to someone with my goals."

But the one thing to keep in mind during a job hunt: be yourself. Trying to be someone else might get you a job, but it certainly won't help you keep one.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Taking a byte out of cyberspace

Jason Davis

If I sound a tad hysterical on the subject, it is because I believe that "cyberwear" is just a symptom of a larger societal disease Computeri Obsessionitis.

An Arts/Living piece that appeared a couple of weeks ago in the Boston Globe really caught my attention. It wasn't the usual banter about the celebrity of the minute or Al Gore's sexual indiscretions. It was about clothes, actually.

Now, I admit that I'm not much of a fashion buff. A good part of my wardrobe comes from the Garment District, that venerable Cambridge mecca for consumers of used clothing. I find articles about the latest trend in overpriced women's wear annoying, and I generally don't read them. This one was different, however. It was about the clothes we will all wear in the future.

Yes, folks, we are talking about "cyberwear," the inevitable melding of fabric and microprocessor. Forget about Levi's and Fruit of the Loom. Pretty soon all of our clothes are going to be made by IBM.

The inventor of these technical marvels, and the focus of the article, is one Steve Mann, the recent recipient of a Ph.D. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. To borrow a phrase from Mike Barnicle, this guy is obviously a total whack-job. At his interview he was wearing a computer screen in his eyeglasses, heat and respiration sensors in his tank-top, a face monitor, a keyboard, a miniature keyboard in his pocket, a hard drive in a pouch by his waist and an entire ham radio in his underwear.

But wait, it gets better. When the thermostat in his apartment broke, instead of calling an electrician, he simply rigged up the heat sensors to his skivvies. Now anyone dumb enough to visit this guy can instantly know the temperature of Mr. Mann's privates.

Why, might you ask, is this person driven to festoon himself with electronics? According to Mann, although the equipment is a tad lumpy and uncomfortable, it is a small price to pay for the "increased safety and freedom and improved quality of life" it allows. Improved quality of life? Carrying around a ham radio in your underwear?

If I sound a tad hysterical on the subject, it is because I believe that "cyberwear" is just a symptom of a larger societal disease Computeri Obsessionitis. It seems that our culture has fallen hook, line and sinker for the computer industry's propaganda that insists their product single- handedly pulled us out of the dark ages.

Take a look at our school. The bulk of the recent monetary grant to the library is devoted to putting computer workstations on every floor. Apparently this is to save us the trouble of taking the elevator when we want to look something up. That's fine, but this is at a University which says it cannot afford to pay for financial aid or childcare.

The computer craze does not stop there. I know that many of you were bullied into purchasing a perfectly useless CD- ROM which was shrink-wrapped to the introductory chemistry textbook. I wonder if the person who thought that one up realized that most of us don't have access to a CD- ROM drive. Maybe they thought we would have excess cash because our textbooks are so cheap.

Kidding aside, I realize that computer technology is not foisted upon us by profit-lusting megacorporations without some compliance on our part. People would not buy computers if they weren't useful — and they are — especially for things like word processing and e-mail. The trouble starts when we equate "progress" with more and better computers.

Maybe it stems from a lack of imagination, but it seems that as a society, we have done just that. We look forward to the era of "virtual schools" where students will be linked to each other via Internet, board meetings that are conducted on the Web and highways that "drive" cars themselves.

The headlong rush into cyberspace is the dead opposite of what should be going on right now. We are already dangerously cut off from the real world through violent and escapist movies, manipulating advertisements and entertainment masquerading as television news.

The artificial nature of modern communications gives us the impression that we are separate from the world around us. For too many people, visiting a national park is akin to taking a trip to an alien planet. Our imposed isolation from nature and humanity can only lead to a loss of respect for life itself.

Steve Mann eagerly anticipates a time when, in his words, "We'll feel naked, confused and lost without a computer screen hovering in front of our eyes to guide us." Let's do all we can to make sure that day never arrives.

Jason Davis is a UMass student.

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

If you are interested in writing on the topic of breast cancer for the Editorial page, please contact us at 545–1491.

Or better yet, submit a piece. Editorial should be between 500–700 words long, either typed or submitted in plain–text format on a PC disk. They can also be submitted via email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Letters to the Editor

THE EDITORIAL/OPINION PAGE IS SEEKING ARTICLES FOR A POINT/COUNTERPO INT FEATURE ON THE PROPOSED ALCOHOL BAN. THOSE INTERESTED SHOULD CONTACT DAN BODAH AT THE COLLEGIAN AT 545-3500. SUBMISSIONS ARE DUE SUNDAY, OCT. 19

Trash removal everyone's responsibility

To the Editor:

I read, with particular interest, your Oct. 9 article on classrooms. You did a great job presenting the concerns. Everyone in the Physical Plant Custodial Services Department can identify with the problems you so ably discussed.

We are committed to a program to bring the classrooms back up to an acceptable condition. During the past two summers, we have restored 37 classrooms and three auditoria. Additionally, over eight classrooms have been updated with the best available technology. Mahar Auditorium is the primary example of this work. The administration has also allocated additional budget resources this year for classroom cleaning.

But, we'll never have enough people to pick up after each class in every classroom every day. To provide a clean, well-maintained place for all to use, we need the cooperation of the entire University community. The custodians begin cleaning the classrooms at 5 a.m., and are still working on them at 1 a.m. the next morning.

However, there is no substitute for picking up after ourselves whether in a classroom or anywhere around the campus, for that matter. For me, it is a simple matter of respect for each other, by not leaving a mess for someone else to clean up. This approach also requires all of us to take the responsibility to remind the careless people that it is their fellow students they are [affecting].

I commend the Collegian for presenting this issue in a clear, comprehensive way. The dialogue this article will develop can do nothing but promote an improvement on our campus. The Physical Plant Division's Custodial, Grounds and Building Maintenance Departments are committed to providing the cleanest, safest and best maintained environment that resources allow.

Earl Smith
Director, Physical Plant

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savich Editorial Production Assistant
David Quinn Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Jewish singing group forms close friendship

By Morgan Tobor
Collegian Correspondent

Kolot, in Hebrew means "voices." To 12 University of Massachusetts students, it means the University's own Jewish a cappella group.

The group's members say Kolot is more than just an ordinary singing group, they feel that it gives them a sense of family. The relations go beyond coming together to create music and extends to true friendship.

"There are moments where we are singing, we are no longer separate people, separate voices but we all become one," said sophomore Aaron Philmus, a natural resource studies major.

Kolot is completely student run. It was founded two years ago by Louisa Shein and Ovi Wolf with the help of Louisa Writiam, a Jewish community member in Amherst.

This student–run group is affiliated with the Hillel House. For those interested, under the Judaic Studies major, Kolot is offered as a one credit course. However, members need to audition at the beginning of each semester in order to be a member of the a cappella group you must audition.

Kolot performs several times throughout the semester and at least once a month. Their practices, held once a week for two hours on Monday nights, take place in the downstairs lounge of the Hillel House.

The songs are in Hebrew, Yiddish and English. They have both religious and non–religious connotations. The actual songs are a variety of different a cappella and chorale tunes, sometimes even the occasional show tune.

The members of the group include: Jaimie Barrows, Stacey Burdick, Sarah Danzig, Josh Funk, Ivana Kurian, Julie Levine, Daniel Schwartz, Amanda Seigal and Michelle Veyvoda.

Kolot's next performance will be on Friday, Oct. 24 at 7 p.m. during Friday night services at the Hillel House.

BRIAN JACOBSMOTT/COLLEGIAN

Kulot rehearses in the Hillel House despite the long weekend. The five of the 12 members present are: Avi Wolf, Daniel Schwartz, Amanda Seigel, Louisa Shein and Julie Levine.

Finding a place to belong

Elsa Allen

Religion is a funny thing when it comes to the way people react around and about it. So many people get uneasy when the topic comes up, yet even more people have endless commentary to provide. There just doesn't seem to be a happy medium. Wars have been waged, and still continue today, because many people can't accept the fact somebody has a different belief, or a different opinion from their own. And let's face it — it's all about opinion.

In my mind, personal beliefs are personal. I don't try to push my beliefs onto others, and I don't expect others to try to convert me.

In this country we consider ourselves free to choose what we want to believe, how we want to live and to which group we want to belong. But when it comes to religion, these choices seem to be taken out of our hands. Our parents are the ones who force us to go to Hebrew school or Sunday school and wake us up early on weekend mornings for services. By the time we are able to make decisions and judgements for ourselves, we have been trained to accept what we are told: by our parents, by clergy or by each other.

It's difficult to find a place where you belong in a society that is now so preoccupied by labels and rules. Everybody has to belong to a group, a race, a culture or a religion. If we don't, who are we? But somewhere along the line we lost the ability to choose for ourselves what we believe, how we want to live, where we want to belong.

Instead, it all comes down to how and by whom we are raised. Rarely do people choose a religion other than what their parents have raised them as. For those of us who have been raised in the increasing number of cross–cultural, bi– racial or multi–denominational households, discovering and establishing oneself among these groups becomes extremely difficult.

I want to acknowledge and honor my entire heritage. But, having been raised by a Jewish mother and a Christian father, that becomes an extremely difficult task. Religion, in my eyes, begins to take on an entirely new connotation. No longer can I see it as a defining and dividing force among groups of people. In my case, I had to learn to accept and practically fuse the two sides of my life together; it became a way of uniting people.

But that still didn't help me to feel as though I had a place within either society. I felt, and still feel somewhat shunned by both sides every time I try to get involved and learn about who I am.

Today's society is changing. We all know this. We can see it every day with the increasing number of interracial marriages, cross–cultural marriages and, of course, marriages which cross religious boundaries. These may not be accepted according to the stringent rules of the churches or temples, but they happen, and we have to acknowledge them. We have to evolve to meet the needs of the new cultures which are created through all this integration. Otherwise, with the increasing rates of intermarriage, beliefs of all sorts are being confused and eventually lost altogether in people's lives.

We can't change who we are, and there's no reason why we should have to. Many of us, however, are forced to compromise ourselves, forced to find ways to integrate some very contrasting beliefs in order to acknowledge where we come from and who we are.

I don't know what's right, I doubt if anyone can say for sure that they do. But we can start working together, opening up and accepting that in this day and age, not everybody's lives are run strictly by the rules. The world is changing, the world is integrating, and many of us are getting lost in the process of trying to find out where our spirituality lies.

Elsa Allen is a UMass student.

The unbelievable truth

Shoshi Madmoni

Editor's note: This piece originally appeared in an Israeli English publication called News From Within. The introduction to this piece is written specifically for the Collegian.

In 1950, Israeli Parliament member Golda Meir asked if Jewish immigrants from Arab countries could be "elevated to a modern level of Western culture." While victims of racism themselves, Jews have committed and still commit acts of racism against other Jews.

Sixty percent of the Israeli Jewish population are Mizrahi Jews (from Arab Countries) and the remaining 40 percent are Askenazi Jews (from Europe and America.) The term "Sepharadic" indicates a specifically Spanish extraction and is frequently and incorrectly used instead of the term Mizrahi.

Askenazi Jews dominate the Israeli political and judicial systems, academia, media and the army. Mizrahi Jews have occupied the economic and the social margins of Israeli society from the mass immigration of the 1950's to this day.

According to research published by the Adva Center, for the Equality of Israeli Society, 21 percent of Israeli born Mizrahi adults have 13 or more years of schooling, compared with over 50 percent of Israeli born Askenazi adults. Only 3 percent of the faculty in all Israeli universities are Mizrahi, and a similar bias can be found in upper level positions in other fields.

To discuss racism perpetuated against Jews by Jews is not a popular thing to do in Israel; it is a lot easier to follow the popular Zionist narrative that all is well for Jews in Israel. This information is not taught in school or provided by the mainstream media. Just recently Meir Gal, an Israeli artist who lives and works in New York, published a work called "Nine out of four hundreds." He photographed himself holding his high school history book with the only nine pages, out of four hundred, dedicated to the history of Mizrahi Jews. Like the U.S. and many other countries with a history of state sponsored racism, racist stains are simply erased. No history, no facts, no resistance, no responsibility — nothing happened.

One of the most outrageous stories, concerning racism in the Israeli society, is the story of the kidnapped Yemenite babies. In the 1950's Yemenite babies were kidnapped from immigrants' camps and sold for adoption to American and European Jews. The governments subsequent silence on the story was total. While covering this story as a journalist for three years, I found myself mostly trying to convince my editors that this shocking event really happened. Only recently has this story surfaced in the mainstream Israeli media. Two weeks ago Rabbi Menachem Porush, a former government official, admitted that Yemenite children were systematically kidnapped from their parents. He admits as well that some people responsible for this intolerable act of racism are still alive, but he is afraid to name specific individuals for fear of retaliation.

The response from the official public committee investigating the matter is decidedly cool. Rather than taking the initiative to pursue the validity of these claims, the committee spokesperson declared to the press: "If Porush has something to say he should come and say it to the committee."

I am disappointed, but not surprised to see the government pursue its established policy of silence on this matter. Two years ago I published the following article in News From Within, the English language publication of the center for Alternative Information. This non–profit organization publishes information normally ignored by the mainstream media, including the Palestinian issue.

I would like to thank Michael Gerber for helping me translating my thoughts into Engiish.

Sometimes Truth is Stranger than Fiction

In 1949, my Aunt Hamama emigrated from Yemen to Israel when she was nine months pregnant. As soon as she arrived at the airport, Aunt Hamama went into labor and was immediately taken to the hospital, while the rest of her family was brought to the immigrant absorption camp at Rosh Ha'ayin. That same day — her first in Israel — my Aunt Hamama gave birth to a happy, healthy baby boy.

When it came time for her to leave the hospital and join the rest of her family in the immigrants camp, the nurses tried to convince her to leave the baby behind and proceed on her journey alone. Aunt Hamama clutched the fruit of her womb to her breast, refusing to part with him. The nurses understood that the resolve of this young woman could not be broken, and decided to take my aunt and her baby to the camp in an ambulance. When they arrived at the camp, one of the nurses said to my aunt, "Get out of the ambulance. I'll hold your baby for you." Aunt Hamama got out. Before she knew what was happening, the door of the ambulance slammed behind her; the nurse and her baby vanished.

I have heard this shocking story over and over from my father and other relatives. They were Aunt Hamam's neighbors in the camp, and some even witnessed the tragic incident. Many years later I came to understand that this terrible tragedy was not a unique misfortune that happened to befall my Aunt Hainama, but was rather an ordeal many other families were forced to endure. This ugly stain on the historical record of the State of Israel has even been given a sterile name of its own, "the Yemenite Children's Affair."

The affair was first brought to the attention of the public through the pages of Ha'olam HaZeh (This World, a now defunct Hebrew weekly edited by Uri Avnery.) The magazine reported that the kidnapped Yemenite children were sent abroad (for adoption) at a cost of U.S. $5000.00 per child. The investigative report revealed that a well known religious businessperson, who bore the title of "Rabbi" was involved, using his worldwide contacts as well as his free access to the immigrant camps to these ends.

As a result of this publicity, it was decided to appoint an official commission of inquiry to the matter. The Bahalul– Minkovski Commission's investigation lasted from 1967–68, during which the cases of 342 missing children were examined. The commission found that 316 of them died, and four were put for adoption under circumstances of dubious legality. The commission was unable to gather sufficient information to make a determination in the remaining 22 cases it investigated. Public outcry was placated for a while.

In 1988, Likud party Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir appointed a second commission of inquiry. This commission determined that the number of disappeared children came to 613, and that 70 of them were still alive. However, no efforts were made to locate them. Even though there was nothing earth–shattering about the commission's findings, the publication of these findings was delayed for six years, until 1994. Popular pressure to force the commission to publish its finding grew, until coming to a head with the police attack on the compound of Rabbi Uzi Meshulam and his followers in the development town of Yahud.

Rabbi Meshulam, himself of Yemenite origin, had collected followers — and a weapons cache — organized largely around the issue of the disappeared Yemenite children. In 1994, the Israeli police mounted an armed attack on the compound where he and some of his followers lived. One policeman was killed during the assault, Rabbi Meshulam is currently serving a six and a half year prison sentence.

Natan Shifris, a student of the history of the Jewish people who is close to Rabbi Meshulam, researched the Yemenite Children's Affair in the course of his studies at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Shifris was sentenced to six years in prison in connection with the incident at Yahud.

In an interview I conducted with him Shifris before his imprisonment, he noted that "over the course of the years the state has continued to send various official correspondence to these children, such conscription orders and various types of notices from the social security administration. Some of this correspondence continues, and some were even sent notices to pick up gas masks at the start of the Gulf War."

He claims that he has documented proof that the number of disappeared children is around 4,500, and that quite a number of them are not Yemenites.

"The scope of the affair is much wider than generally realized. We have evidence of disappeared Mizrahi children from a variety of countries of origin, and are therefore always careful to refer to the disappeared Yemenite, Mizrahi and Balkan children."

Meshulam had been conducting a struggle for the establishment of a state commission of inquiry whose proceedings would be open to the public. Such a commission was finally appointed in January of 1995. In the meantime, Meshulam and his co–defendants have appealed their convictions; the appeals are still pending. They have now spent more than one year at Ayalon prison.

In the course of the two years that I have been closely scrutinizing the "Yemenite Children's Affair," I have come across only one story with a happy ending. It is the story of Mira (not her real name) a 46–year–old mother of three. In 1988, after 40 years of desperate searching, her father was able to locate her. When she was 12 years old, Mira found out that she had been adopted. She was dark–skinned, whereas her parents were light–skinned, and this inevitably raised questions. She knew nothing of the real circumstances which had torn her from her biological parents.

Some of the facts are still unknown. "For years I tried to imagine for myself what my biological parents looked like. At the same time, I resented the mother who had abandoned me, as I then thought was the case. Can you imagine what I felt when I learned of the suffering and anguish that my biological family had to endure all those years, and the tremendous efforts they made to find me?"

The story of Mira's disappearance is quite similar to that of many other children during the 1950's. In most cases the scenario was similar; the parents arrived in Israel, were housed in one of the camps for new immigrants and were asked to send their infant children to the camp nurseries. The nurseries were housed in stone buildings, where as the older children and adults lived in tents. Parents would come to nurse or simply visit their babies several times a day. Then one fine day — often between the evening and morning visit — the child would be gone, never to be seen again.

David Shoker, 72, Mira's father, was one of the parents who sent his child to the nursery. Like most of the parents, he visited her frequently. One day he was astonished to discover that she was no longer there.

"I began asking where she was and they told me that no one knew, but that if I wanted, I could submit a formal complaint to the police. At every police station I went to they gave me the bureaucratic run–around until I gave up. Some years ago I met a lawyer, Zoreah Rosenblum, who agreed to try and help me."

Rosenblum discovered that the Bahalul–Minkovski Commission had determined that his client's daughter had been adopted by a family in Israel. For whatever reason, Mr. Shoker was never informed of this fact, although he had been given testimony before the commission. Rosenblum began an all–out campaign to compel the government to notify Mira that her biological parents had never given her away and were in fact still looking for her.

In 1988 after a long, crisis ridden path, Mira and her biological father Shoker finally met. For Mira's father, the moment was the climax of his long struggle.

"I will never forget how my whole body shook when she entered the room," Shoker said. "I looked at her and immediately knew that she was my daughter. It was like the first meeting of Jacob with Joseph, after years of believing that his son was dead. It is very difficult to describe in words. I felt a circle had been closed for me."

In the course of collecting testimony, I came into contact with nurses who had worked in the immigrant absorption camp at Ein Shemer. I was surprised at how freely they allowed themselves to express racist attitudes, even today, in the Israel of the 1990's.

"Maybe it was better for them [the disappeared children] in their adoptive families," Ahuva Golfarb told me, who was then a head nurse. "The parents were not active enough in looking for their lost children. A Yemenite parent searches for a lost child in one fashion, and an Ashkenazi parent in another. If they would have been more persistent, they would haKve found their children."

In her testimony before the commission of inquiry, another nurse called the disappeared children "retards" and "packages." A third nurse told a television interviewer that, "The parents should be thankful that their children grew up in good homes and received good educations."

Testimony from other staff members who were responsible for the children left me with the impression that a chaotic mess had been deliberately fostered. Children were removed from the tents without any prior registration process. Without such registries, putting these children back in touch with their biological parents became next to impossible. Matters only became more complicated when one considers the various ways the children were kidnapped; some were taken from infant nurseries in the camps between night and morning breast–feeding; some were kidnapped from hospitals; some were taken from their mothers at the airport upon their arrival in Israel, or at the immigrant absorption camp. Other parents made trouble for the staffs of the nurseries and as a result, to their astonishment, their "dead" children were returned to them!

The local burial society recently decided to refurbish some graves in the Segola cemetery; rows and rows of grave stones can be seen, some with names, others bearing such anonymous identifications as, "Yemenite girl" or, "boy from Yemen" and the like. The questions just get bigger; the mind refuses to absorb the information it's receiving, for denial is the most basic psychological defense mechanism.

The vast majority of parents whose children were taken from them in the 1950's have not seen their children since, and it is doubtful that many ever will. The various commission of inquiry that have come and gone over the years did no more than check into the situation and clarify a few matters. None acted as full commissions of inquiry. No senior political figure has ever really wanted to expose this festering wound to the light. The media, the so–called "watch–dog" of democracy, never does much more than bark a few weak yelps before going back to sleep.

The mandate of the commission is quite limited. It is only allowed to involve the cases of children born in Yemen who disappeared between 1948–1954. But much evidence points to non–Yemenite children being among the disappeared — and to disappearances occurring as late as the first half of the 1960's. Nor has the commission taken such "drastic" steps as opening the recently refurbished grave sites or taking skin samples from parents whose children disappeared and from adopted children in Israel.

Even the great media circus surrounding the Rabbi Meshulam story and the violent events at Yahud did not stimulate any discussion of the real issue. None of the political talk shows (a staple of evening television in Israel) ever addressed the most obvious question; why has the State of Israel, to this day, declined to establish a serious commission of inquiry to investigate the affair in depth?

Shoshi Madmoni is an Israeli journalist currently working on her Ph.D at the UMass Department of Communication.

Into the New Year

Debra Liebson

The Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, fell last Friday night, 10 days after the Jewish New Year. Yom Kippur is a day of reflection and remembrance, a time reserved for coming to terms with mistakes made in the past. During the holiday, Jews do not merely ask for forgiveness, but also pledge to learn from their mistakes and to try harder to overcome them in the new year.

On Rosh Hashannah it is written, on Yom Kippur it is sealed. This line, taken from a prayer recited during the Jewish High Holy Days, sums up the true meaning behind the ten day span between the two holidays. After the festivities of the New Year have passed, Jews are commanded to reflect on the year past and recall the mistakes they have made. They have until the final service of Yom Kippur, Nehilah, to make their apologies, to both G–d and the people important in their lives.

The holiday of Yom Kippur begins with the Kol Nidre service, which begins at sunset. From that mcment, until the sun sets on the following day, Jews fast and pray in order to atone for their sins. During the Kol Nidre service, an ancient prayer of the same name is chanted three times. The prayer, like most of the others said during this holiday, asks for forgiveness and the opportunity to atone. The next morning, in addition to Torah readings and traditional prayers, a Yiskor service is held. Yiskor serves as a memorial service, an opportunity to honor loved ones who have passed away. At the final service of Nehilah, the last prayers for forgiveness are offered and the fast is broken.

The seriousness of the Yom Kippur service is a far cry from the celebrations involved in the holiday of Sukkot, the next Jewish holiday on the calendar, which begins on Wednesday night. Sukkot is a holiday whose roots lie in the need for rain. In the ancient beginnings, it was during this festival that farmers asked for rain. In our modern observance of the holiday, it is a holiday of harvest, a celebration of growing things.

The holiday of Sukkot marks the beginning of the rainy season in Israel. Farmers in ancient times made their pilgrimage to the Temple in Jerusalem. There they held water–pouring ceremonies: glorious processions of water– filled vessels carried to the Temple mount and poured, along with wine, on the altar. It was a festival dedicated to the power of rain, and its integral part in the growing of crops.

Today, we celebrate Sukkot as a festival of the harvest and focus our attention to fruits of the season. The center of worship during Sukkot is not within the synagogue walls, but in a temporary structure called a sukkah. These booths must be built in the open, with at least two and a half walls, and a ceiling made from growing things. They are decorated with hanging fruits and vegetables, as well as paper birds and chains. Jews are commanded to dwell in the sukkah, to gather with friends for meals and sleep under the leafy roof, gazing up at the stars peeking through. During the seven day holiday, Jews who don't have the good fortune of having a sukkah of their own, often seek out the nearest one for a visit.

The sukkah is not the only symbol of Sukkot. Within the hut, Jews are commanded to shake the lulav and etrog. The lulav is made from the branches of the palm, willow and myrtle trees, bound together at the base. The etrog is a type of citrus fruit, round and bumpy, with a fragrant scent. The two are shaken together four times on the first day of the holiday and blessed.

The holidays of Yom Kippur and Sukkot not only bring the High Holy Days toward a close, but they signal the coming of another celebration, Simchat Torah, the day in which the last and first portions of the Torah are read. It a is season of celebration for the Jewish people, so go out and be a part of it. I hope that your fast was an easy one, that your prayers will be answered, and that your sukkahs stand tall.

Debra Liebson is a UMass student.

The Velvet Rope not Jackson's best

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

JANET JACKSON
The Velvet Rope
Virgin

What is The Velvet Rope? Millions of loyal Janet Jackson fans have been asking that very question ever since word first broke that her much anticipated album would be dropping this October.

Jackson herself says that The Velvet Rope (Virgin) is "The concept that allowed me to put into words and music so much of what I've gone through. The Velvet Rope is my most personal album." Unfortunately, it's also her worst.

In market flooded with King Puff Daddy style production, it's good to hear something smart, new and innovative. The Velvet Rope supplies none of these, even though you can feel recording legends Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis (who co–produced the album with Jackson and her lover of 11 years, Rene Elizondo Jr.) trying with every fiber of creativity to do so.

Where this album fails miserably is that, although personal, the production is weak and un–original.

You can hear the pain, emotion and energy that Janet is giving. Lyrically, this is some of the most interesting and soul searching joints she's ever done. But, the musical vehicles she chooses to carry her messages are unbelievably tired and dry.

The album starts out, in typical Janet fashion, with an interlude. Then, it breaks into the title track Velvet Rope, with all its synthesized, digitized, '80s rhythm tracks that you swore you'd never hear again. Yes, Janet brings them back. The whole album is chock–full of old, 80s samples that, although subtle, are still noticeable and out of place.

The two tracks following "Velvet Rope" ("You" and "Got Till It's Gone") are shining jewels on the album. The beat on "You" is fast and moving with a strong hook that Janet belts out with furiosity and power. And if you haven't heard the Joni Mitchell haunted first single, "Got Till It's Gone," then you're missing the best cut on the album.

Q–Tip of a Tribe Called Quest, accompanies Janet on a fun, well–produced track that screams number one hit single. After that, the album takes a huge plummet as we become subject to a series of misfires.

We all know Janet likes to dance. On her last album, Janet, the track "If" had everyone bustin' crazy dance moves. On this album, the two bonified dance cuts, "Together Again" and "Free Xone," miss hard. The dance hall, club beat used on "Together Again" is so done it's ridiculous, and she has the audacity to take an old–school Kid–N–Play beat from the House Party days and sample it on "Free Xone." Both cuts are incredibly boring and you can't skip them fast enough.

The bubble gum–esque, "Tonight's The Night," a Rod Stewart remake, sounds like it could have been a Debbie Gibson song from 1988 and Janet sings it like a lonely cowgirl. In one verse, she sings, "Take a good lowng drank," and you swear she was from some ass–backwards part of Alabama. That's long drink Janet, not lowng drank.

COURTESY MARIO TESTINO

On her sixth major release, The Velvet Rope, the glamorous Janet Jackson takes a temporary setback with her most disappointing album to date.

The closet thing to a bonified slow jam is the R–Kelly sounding, "Anything." This joint sounds nice, but it's not very original. The experimental, "Empty" (with its chimes and bells) works okay and the heart and soul driven, "I Get Lonely," are the closest Janet gets to a working formula.

The tragedy of this album is that Janet means well. The messages throughout the album are timely and provocative. It's a shame she's forgotten how to make those hits that took her from Lil' Penny to Ms. Jackson. A Rhythm Nation mourns. D+

H2O retains message, shows growth

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

H2O
Thicker than Water
Epitath Records

Hardcore–punk is a genre often constrained by boundaries that are placed on it by its fans; in other words it's often hard for bands to grow while maintaining a traditional hardcore–punk sound. That problem often manifests itself on the band's second album. H2O does not want to rehash their first album, but they do want to grow as a band. Those issues often lead to the band suffering from a sophomore jinx. Well, H2O does not seem to suffer from that in the slightest fashion; Thicker Than Water simply rocks.

The album starts off with the blistering attack of "Universal Language," a track that brings back memories of 7 Seconds at their best. "Everready" and "Talk Too Much" follow the opening song and bring about similar results. After the third song you realize something special is going on in this album. H2O has taken their melodic hardcore attack, which served them well on their debut album, and has sped it up. It's as if they took their Dag Nasty records off their turntables and replaced them with Minor Threat and 7 Seconds' albums.

While the only change in the band between their first album and this one is new bassist Adam Blake, formerly of Shelter — this is a much more mature band. Todd Friend is still the glue behind the rhythmic attack of this band as he is easily one of the best drummers in this genre. While guitarist Todd Morse has made his presence felt on this album with his Mick Jones inspired riffs and solos, he has also added song writing to his list of accomplishments. Rusty Pistachio, the other guitarist, has always been one half of the song–writing team but, if anything, he's gotten a little angrier since the last album. Finally, Toby is in fine fashion. His trademark vocals are still melodic and distinct, but he sounds a lot more pissed off then he did on the debut album.

So now that you understand that this band has grown and matured; that they've incorporated elements of The Clash, Minor Threat, and 7 Seconds; they've avoided the sophomore jinx. You can now begin to understand why this is such a great album. "I See It In Us" really brings all of those aspects together with its catchy chorus and mean guitar solos. For all you punk rockers who loved "I Know Why," you'll be pleased to see that "Sacred Heart" is the new H2O love song where Toby once again dedicates his love for his wife, Moon.

The lyrics have also really shown growth on this album. "Responsible" questions whether or not we are guilty of the thoughts in our heads and if we can really be a perfect person. "Universal Language" is beautiful in that it describes music as being the one language that can break down all walls and unite us all. Even "Innocent Kids" mirrors the attitude of the exploitation of hardcore, but from a mature standpoint.

The positive image of this band is perpetuated by songs like "Everready," "Responsible" and "Wake Up" — all songs that urge you to fight against opposition and to not let things get you down. Their sillier side shows through on "This Time," which questions when is it right to fight and warns that there definitely is a time. They cover "Friend" by Marginal Man and have "Phone Song" from a 7" and "Go" from their demo on here. There is also a little something at the end.

The best song on the album and the one that really sums up what H2O is about is the title track "Thicker Than Water" with the chorus "It's more, more than you can see/It's thicker than water/It runs so thick inside my veins/Through all the heartache and the pain/And everything I've come to be/It's more than you can

Turn to H2O, page 8

COURTESY B.J. PAPAS

H2O is keeping the torch of hardcore lit with its sophomore release — their first on the super punk label of Epitath.

RESTAURANT GUIDE
Coming Oct. 17, 1997

Contest !
Readers can enter to win a FREE dinner for two. Sponsored by:

OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-3699

RESERVATIONS Open 7 Days a Week Mon. - Fri. to Midnight Sat. - Sun. to 10:00 PM

CHEAP TICKETS INC.®
America's Travel Store...Since 1986®

Scheduled Major Carriers NO CHARTERS!

DOMESTIC		DOMESTIC
Albuquerque, NM	$329.00	Seattle, WA	$329.00
Atlanta, GA	$149.00	Tampa, FL	$159.00
Baltimore, MD	$143.00	Washington Dulles	$143.00
Colorado Sprgs., CO	$329.00	Washington Natl, DC	$143.00
Daytona Beach, FL	$159.00	West Palm Beach, FL	$149.00
Ft. Lauderdale, FL	$149.00	HAWAII
Ft. Myers, FL	$159.00	Honolulu, HI	$615.00
Jacksonville, FL	$159.00	Kona, HI	$705.00
Los Angeles, CA	$329.00	Lihue, HI	$705.00
Miami, FL	$159.00	Lanai City, HI	$705.00
Newark, NJ	$117.00	Maui, HI	$705.00
Norfolk, VA	$143.00	INTERNATIONAL
Ontario, CA	$329.00	Frankfurt, GERMANY	$455.00
Orange County, CA	$329.00	Paris, FRANCE	$385.00
Orlando, FL	$159.00	Birmingham, UK	$349.00
Phoenix, AZ	$329.00	London, UK	$355.00
Salt Lake City, UT	$329.00	Manchester, UK	$365.00
San Diego, CA	$329.00	Rome, ITALY	$499.00
San Francisco, CA	$329.00	Milan, ITALY	$489.00
San Jose, CA	$329.00	Lisbon, Portugal	$475.00
Sarasota, FL	$159.00	Madrid, SPAIN	$405.00

RESERVATIONS: 1-800-247-7587
All fares are subject to applicable fees and departure taxes. Fares does not include taxes.
Introducing our NEW INTERACTIVE website at:http://www.cheaptickets.com

The Undergraduate Business Club & SOM Placement Office present

SOM CAREER DAY 1997

All Students Are Cordially Invited to Attend!!

...day Oct. 15th
...Auditorium

...ress Preferred
...en, Skirt and Blouse for women)

Aerotek, Inc.
American Express Financial Advisors
American Power Conversion
Au Bon Pain
Barnes & Noble
Bay Networks
Black & Decker
The Boston Company
Caldor
C.W. Costello
Cigna Corporation
CSC
Data General
Deluxe Corporation
Digital Equipment Corporation (Financial Management)
Digital Equipment Corporation (Manufacturing - Nashua, NH)
E & J Gallo
EDS
Enterprise Rent-A-Car
Filene's
Ferguson Enterprises, Inc.
GE Financial Management Program
Great West Employee Benefits
Hart Re
Heublein
International Paper
J.C. Penny Catalog
J.C. Penny Stores
JohnHancock Financial Advisors
KPMG Peat Marwick
Lockheed Martin Corporation
Macy's
Marriott Hotels
NCR Systemedia
New England Funds
Northeast Utilities
Northwestern Mutual Life
Office Environments of New England
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbrokers
Osco Drug
The Pioneer Group
Pratt & Whitney
Procter & Gamble
Providian Bancorp
Putnam Investments
Sears Roebuck & Co.
Sherwin Williams
Smithkline Beecham
Solion
Stop & Shop
TJX Companies
Teradyne
3-COM
Travelers
Wallace, Inc.
Wolf & Co.

The Verve's sweet symphony highlights latest; Garrison Starr fails with new CD

THE VERVE
Urban Hymns
Virgin

First off, The Verve are from England (not Detroit) and are not the outfit behind the ridiculously awful single "The Freshman." They are, however, one of the few worthwhile bands getting MTV airplay these days and their new album, Urban Hymns (Virgin), is one of the finest releases this fall.

On the brink of becoming international rock superstars two years ago — thanks to vocal support from Oasis' Noel Gallagher — lead singer Richard Ashcroft abruptly disbanded the group amidst internal turmoil with guitarist Nick McCabe and his own personal problems.

Urban Hymns achieves the greatness hinted at on 1995's A Northern Soul through a unique sonic combination intertwined in their psychedelic flourishes. Featuring sparse guitar-based arrangements ("Sonnet") at times, and elsewhere showcasing sweeping choruses awash in cascading strings ("Bitter Sweet Symphony") Urban Hymns is a collection of tunes that each ponder life and its confounding circumstances.

Clearly, the time spent apart simmering down has reaped handsome dividends as both the musical and lyrical content of Ashcroft's and McCabe's songs have taken a marked leap forward in terms of both quality and diversity. Not as accessible as Oasis or Blur, not as overtly superficial as Menswear and not as stylish as Suede or Pulp, The Verve are a bit of an anomaly on the current Britpop landscape. They share more in common with Radiohead in that in the end, it's the music that matters above all else. What a novel concept. A
(Marty Keane)

EPMD
Back In Business
Def Jam

In the late 80's and early 90's, there was a duo from the 516 that terrorized MC's and wowed audiences album after album. Whether you were shaking it to "Gold Diggers" or "Business as Usual," EPMD were there for you to boom on the corner.

Unfortunately, Parrish Smith and Erik Sermon had some difficulties that led them to breaking up and two solo careers that produced less hits then Andy Petite vs. John Smoltz in the World Series. Reunited earlier this year, they've returned to the laboratory to once again challenge the top of the hip- hop community.

Erik Sermon and Parrish Smith are in fine form as they use their verbal kung-fu to slay any would-be challengers. Sermon's lisp is the perfect complement for Smith's harder approach. The duo light it up on tracks like "Richter Scale," "Last Man Standing" and "Never Seen Before."

The posse cut "K.I.M." featuring Keith Murray and Redman is the perfect example of four MC's trying as hard as possible to outdo each other. In fact it's that formula that makes EPMD so successful. Neither Sermon nor Smith are willing to let the other one get ahead, so they're always at their best.

On the flipside Sermon and Smith can't seem to get over the fact that they are back together and by the fifth track we get the point. The track "Never Seen Before" is ridiculous when you consider the fact that it's because we've seen it before that this album was necessary.

Either way, it's another solid album from EPMD — a group that began while most of you were rocking Fisher Price tape decks. Back In Business, no doubt. B+
(Adam Dlugacz)

LETTERS TO CLEO
Go!
Revolution

With a new drummer, a new producer and a new look for each band member, Letters To Cleo's latest release, Go! (Revolution), is a curious mixture of a harsher, more edgy sound and their signature brand of bubblegum pop that has won them a cult fan base in their native Boston and around the country.

After a short hiatus, the Beantown quintet's latest is not a drastic departure from previous releases, but it is different enough to take notice that the band wants to move in another direction.

On Go!, the Cleo's once again practice the method they perfected on their last album, Wholesale Meats and Fish by setting depressing lyrics to the most upbeat music humanly possible. With Go!, Letters To Cleo has gotten harder and more focused. The first track, "I Got Time," sounds more like the Pixies than the band that gave us the chirpy hit "Here and Now."

The first single, "Anchor," is surprisingly one of the weaker tracks on the album. The highlight of Go! is without question the cute, Beatlesque "Co-Pilot" — one of their best tracks to date. The final track, "Disappear," is another classic Cleo tune — combining the jumpy qualities of Wholesale Meats and Fish with the soft, moody sound of their debut, Aurora Gory Alice.

Lead singer/lyricist Kay Hanley's voice and songwriting skills have improved in the two years since their last album and new drummer Tom Polce does an adequate job replacing Stacy Jones, who left to join Veruca Salt. Along with bassist Scott Riebling, they create a pounding, powerful rhythm section. Riebling's bass is invaluable to Go!, while Michael Eisenstein and Greg McKenna's guitars have just gotten louder.

On the whole, Go! is better than their second album, but not quite as strong as their debut. The new Letters To Cleo are different, but not different enough to disappoint their longtime fans. B (Kevin Monahan)

GARRISON STARR
Eighteen Over Me
Geffen

Although this album would have likely caused quite a stir were it released a few years earlier (in the singer/songwriter 90's), Garrison Starr's Eighteen Over Me (Geffen) now manages only to keep itself from being pigeonholed as just another feminine-angst album.

While a few songs surge to the challenge with sharp instrumentation — such as the guitar-heavy "Passing" and the softer "Afterall" — listeners will quickly lose interest once the simplistic lyrics take over. The title track is probably Starr's best song, combining both introspective and melancholy elements similar to those that made the Cranberries so successful.

Eighteen Over Me is an album that will likely catch fire for a couple of weeks, have a few brief hits and then fade into obscurity — lost amongst the vast crowd of post-Alanis wannabes. C (Brian Surette)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Island Records History: Volume 2, 1964-69
Island Records

Even though Island Records' 40th birthday is not until 1999, they are working already on collecting their best and most successful singles and performances by artists from their huge and diverse catalog.

With the first volume dealing with mainly ska, this second disc deals with mostly the soul and R&B scene in Blackwell's home of London. The biggest hit and most recognizable song on this collection is the original "Gimme Some Lovin'" by the Spencer Davis Group, with the pre-Traffic Steve Winwood taking the declarative vocals. Other great soul here includes the songs from Jackie Edwards, the organ jazz of Jimmy McGriff, and the soul duo Bob & Earl's original "Harlem Shuffle," which the Rolling Stones later covered. There is also some ska from The Wailers, Desmond Dekker and The Skatalites among others. B+
(Joshua Boyd)

COURTESY EDDIE MUNSOON

Brit pop icons, The Verve, have released a stunning new album securing their position in the high ranks of British contemporary music.

chili's GRILL & BAR
ALL-YOU-CAN-EAT FAJITASSSS
EVERY WEDNESDAY
JUST $8.99*
FOR A LIMITED TIME
The best fajitas anywhere... and plenty of them. Flame grilled steak or chicken with peppers and onions, served with warm tortillas, guacamole, pico de gallo, cheddar cheese & sour cream.
*Per person, dine in only at Hadley Chili's
426 Russell Street (Rt. 9) • 413-253-4008
©MCMXCVII

Check out the new and improved Collegian Website. You'll find it at www.umass.edu/rso/colegian.

■ H2O

continued from page 6

see." While H2O is a positive band, they realize that life isn't easy and can't be solved with simple solutions, but they do realize that you can make it easier. H2O isn't trying to solve your problems they are simply trying to offer you alternatives.

H2O have risen to the top of the punk hardcore scene by staying true to their ideals and playing the music they love. So forget that this album is on Epitath or what you have thought of this band in the past because this album rocks. If you still remember that there isn't supposed to be a difference between punk and hardcore then you will love this album. If you remember that it's okay to dance with a smile on and have a good time at a show you will love this album. If you love hardcore you will love this album. Big ups to H2O for remembering what this whole hardcore thing is about. A+

STUDENT TRAVEL
STA Travel offers student discounts on domestic travel, too.
800-777-0112
www.sta-travel.com
STA Travel, the world's largest student travel organization
STA TRAVEL We've been there.

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS
ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • MATH
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – together, Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems and Raytheon TI Systems are driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com.
WE'LL BE ON YOUR CAMPUS ON OCTOBER 21, 1997.
CONTACT YOUR CAREER PLACEMENT OFFICE TODAY TO SCHEDULE AN INTERVIEW.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

Kariya takes the taco; 'Ask nice' for a big bite

Jorma Kansanen on The NHL

Is It me, or does the NHL, or more specifically, the NHL players, repeatedly give themselves the reach around (a hard thing to do) when it comes to their public relations?

Just when the NHL and its players get a chance to ethically distance themselves from other "high-browed" sports such as baseball and basketball, the figurative self-inflicted wedgie occurs — and I'm beginning to really get sick of it.

After the Minnesota Timberwolves gave their second-year forward Kevin Garnett a seven-year, $120 million contract, I was in my glory.

Once again, the NBA, or more specifically the agents of NBA players who receive 7 percent of signed contracts (2 to 3 percent more than other major sports), gave themselves another reach around concerning their public relations.

Added to the totally inconceivable contract signed by Michael Jordan over the summer (I think it was a billion dollars or something, with an estate named Rhode Island thrown in for giggles), Garnett's contract just reinforces the myth that NBA players live in another world filled with extreme pomposity and Hindenburg-sized egos.

Oh yeah, Kev, it wasn't about the money, it was about respect. Yeah sure... I freakin' bleed for you, buddy.

The NHL has always been a home to me in more ways than one. I played the game for 15 years, and I've always known hockey players to usually be down to earth, and conversations form over pints of beer in places where everybody knows your name.

Cheers to those players who still call this real world home!

Because truthfully, fellow puckheads, I don't where the hell Anaheim's Paul Kariya's head is right now, but it ain't in this world.

Just when the NHL, or more specifically, a big-time star in the NHL, gets a chance to counteract the mindset that all sports stars are not pompous and egotistical, Kariya takes the taco and then expels it out of a dark place.

A public relations nightmare for the NHL came forth when Kariya rejected a 10-year, $7 million per year contract the other day because — and get this — he didn't like the way it was presented to him.

Not the dollar amount on the contract, people, but the way the Mighty Ducks management offered it to him.

Does "hissy fit" come to mind?

With all of the poverty in our world, Kariya has the nerve to refuse a contract that would make him financially independent for the rest of his life because they "didn't ask nice." The Anaheim management has never been wise (ask former coach Ron Wilson who is doing fine in Washington so far), but I just don't get this situation.

Oh yeah, Paul, it wasn't about the money, it was about respect. Yeah sure... I freakin' bleed for you, buddy.

After respective PR flops with baseball and basketball a few years back, everyone talked about how the NHL could start to take a place in the top three sports in America.

Believe me, football will never be ousted out of that hierarchy.

So, what does the NHL Players Union do at that time? They go on strike, and now this fiasco. I swear, a puckhead just can't get any rest around these parts of the woods.

Hopefully, in the long run the real story will come out, and I can go back to respecting the hell out of one of the world's top forwards (as you can tell, people, this hurts me to write this).

However, if this story is true, then Kariya should have stayed at the University of Maine and let his maturity mature for a couple more years.

He has game, but if all that is inferred in this weird situation is truth, then his thought process is more gamey (as in a really bad smell) than his game.

• Okay. I can admit when I'm wrong... for the time being, that is.

Cross my heart and hope to die, in my season preview, I referred to San Jose as being the hockey wasteland of the NHL. Two consecutive years finishing in last place in the Pacific Division will do that to a team... and they're still not good. Damn, I slipped there.

Yet, they beat my Bruins into the ice this past weekend by a 5–2 score, and I repent my comments from last week... for the time being.

But hey, at least Ray Bourque scored for the B's. Yeah, that's nice — almost better than K-Mart.

I hereby state that San Jose (for the time being) is not the wasteland of hockey, and I might as well say that Viktor Kozlov is the second coming of Mario Lemieux.

Hey, at least that is what all those experts at The Hockey News said when the Sharks drafted Kozlov with the sixth pick overall in 1993. Duh, they can't be wrong, eh?

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

Keep going with your bad self...
Senior co-captain Caroline Steele and UMass face off against rival UConn in their final match of the fall season this Saturday.

CAN You SLAM?
Slam dunk contest prelims will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the Cage. Finalists will compete at Midnight Madness Friday night.

LOWEST FARES ★ GUARANTEED ★ FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
CONTINENTAL USA MAXIMUM $137 O/W CALL FOR DETAILS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228 TRAVEL MAKERS, INC THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson) AMHERST

Kemp to Baker to Brandon; NBA shaping up for season

Gregory H. Casimir on The NBA

'Tis the season...

Welcome back hoop fans! It's that exciting time of the year again — come on, you know what I'm talking about:

"Jordan's at the top of the key with three seconds left, and the Bulls are down by one. He shimmies, he shoots..." and the Bulls win their umpteenth championship, etc.

Yes, the NBA preseason is now under way.

But, as you all know, what happens in the preseason is only a small indication of the type of season that these teams are going to have.

After all, the Bulls are 0–1 right now, but when the ball drops at tipoff on Nov. 15, you better believe that His Airness and his squad are coming to play.

However, I predict that things are going to be a lot more difficult for the World Champions this year. During the offseason, many teams went shopping for players — marquee players at that. Everybody is trying to make a run for the ring this season.

Here's a little breakdown of who went where:

• Shawn "the Rainman" Kemp was part of the biggest three-way trade of the summer. Kemp was traded to the Cavs and Milwaukee received Terrell Brandon and Tyrone Hill. Vin Baker got a break and is now in Seattle, with an opportunity to play in the playoffs this year.

The Cavs, who have been getting better every season, have made a bonafide move in the right direction. With rookie Brevin Knight at the point and Kemp's marvelous athleticism, the Cavs are going to be the running team of the East; adding some much needed excitement to the routine half-court game indicative of the Eastern Conference.

• Antonio McDyess was traded to Phoenix from Denver, and for a rather large sum too. Hopefully, this will give the Suns some much needed low post offense as well as help on the boards.

• Lastly, yes, the Bulls did re-sign Dennis Rodman.

What Jordan wants, Jordan gets.

This season is also going to be exciting due to the crop of talented rookies this year. Teams got smart and picked players that could play the positions they need to fill, instead of sitting on players with big names.

The Nets racked up big time with their acquisition of Keith Van Horn from Philadelphia. Van Horn will definitely not be the bust that Ed O'Bannon was a year

Turn to NBA, page 11

SPOT THE COLLEGE FRESHMAN IN THIS PICTURE
It's just as difficult to spot the Massachusetts Army National Guard member in this picture as it is in your school. That's because many Guard members are students – just like you.
You can join your friends and receive training just one weekend a month and two weeks a year while attending college full-time!
The Guard can help you afford an education with the 100% Tuition Waiver, good at 28 participating State Colleges and Universities, and a great paycheck. And some colleges even give academic credit for Guard service and training.
If you have the desire to gain valuable skills and experience, you can in the Massachusetts Army National Guard. Find out how you can be in the picture.
Call today:
1-888-NGPRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)
MASSACHUSETTS
YOU CAN

amc There is A Difference!
$2.50 (Tax Line) Every Day
★ Special Engagements, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
MT. FARMS 4 - 584-9153 MT. FARMS MALL
Rocketman (PG) Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:20
The Edge (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
L.A. Confidential (R) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10
Most Wanted (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
The Peacemaker (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:20
U-Turn (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
In and Out (PG-13) Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:30
Soul Food (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:30
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10

We're The Perfect Antidote For Four Years Of College.
Calling All Grads!
If you want more than just a job, why not start your career at the world's leading independent software company? Right now, we're looking for programmers to develop, support and enhance systems and network management, database and application software. Computer Associates provides a dynamic training program, one that immerses you in key industry technologies and CA's technology strategy. Candidates should have both an educational and working knowledge of C, C++, UNIX, Windows 95/Windows NT, and networking technologies.
Why CA?
Just ask any of our 10,000 employees in more than 40 countries, and they'll tell you why. CA's the world leader in mission-critical business software, offering more than 500 software products from award-winning enterprise management software and cutting-edge object technology for the internet, to all kinds of business applications for manufacturing, financial management and human resources. In fact, CA makes more kinds of software for more kinds of computers than any other company.
We offer a generous compensation package with a long list of benefits that nobody else can match, including 401(k) and profit sharing plans, company-paid medical and dental coverage, tuition reimbursement and tremendous growth opportunity.
Call us today and find out why Computerworld ranked CA as one of the best places to work in the entire computer industry!
We'll be on campus Wednesday, October 29. For more information please contact your Career Center and sign up for an interview. Or send your resume to: Computer Associates Plaza, Dept. 1, Islandia, NY 11788-7000. Fax: 516-342-5734. Or visit: www.cai.com
COMPUTER ASSOCIATES Software superior by design.
Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/D/V. All product names referenced herein are trademarks of their respective companies. © 1997 Computer Associates International, Inc., One Computer Associates Plaza, Islandia, NY 11788-7000

JEANS SALE.
• Corduroy jeans • Flair leg jeans
• Boot leg jeans • Denim jeans • Velvet jeans
ZANA downtown Amherst

■ Green

continued from page 14

Developmental Program Regional camp held on campus, the 15-year-old forward was not too forward concerning the first impression of her future university residence.

At first, the shock of the regional camp on both competitive and personal bases took itself out on the distinct structural manifestations that make up our interesting campus (i.e. Southwest). Playing for the Minutewomen in the future was the last thing on her mind, but her teammates have made her the first thing on their minds.

"I remember staying in the dorms, and I said, 'I'm never coming here... I don't like this place!,'" Green said. "When I started to look at schools, I came here and was like, 'I'm not being put into one of those towers... and, I'm still never going here.'

"But, when I talked to coach Rudy, and came for my visit, I felt really comfortable with the girls. The seniors have done a real great job this year, and they've showed me how to fit in, and pick up my work ethic in practice."

In the end, both Green and Rudy have benefited from this burgeoning alliance between the coach and student of the game. The hard work Green has put into her game this season has transformed her from a little, fork-tongued devil to an angel with gilded wings in the coach's eyes.

"She's only just begun here," Rudy said. "As the game teaches her more, and we teach her more, she can become a bigtime player here... maybe one of the finest ever."

The feelings are mutual, even if the devil comes out of her mouth every now and then. On the field, Green lets it be known when she wants the ball, and she will get more than enough chances in the next four years here at UMass — but maybe at a lower volume level.

"Rudy has taught me a lot, and he knows how to coach the game," Green said. "I've never really had that kind of coach that could show me the different things I could do, and put it into words I can immediately understand.

"Rudy picks on me a little bit about the screechy voice he says I have, but I feel really comfortable with him and the team. I think these next four years here are going to be great, but I'll have to get rid of the screechy voice, because I don't think the coach will like that the next four years.

"I'll learn."

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Kara Green has worked both sides of the ball, leading UMass in scoring with 27 points on eight goals and 11 assists.

● Attention UMass Undergraduate Students ●

Join Head Coaches

Joanie O'Brien, Women's Basketball — Bruiser Flint, Men's Basketball — Joe Mallen, Ice Hockey

Wednesday, October 15 at 7:00 p.m.
Mullins Center VIP Room (3rd Floor)

Join the Minutemaniacs as we welcome Head Coaches Joanie O'Brien, Bruiser Flint , and Joe Mallen to speak about their upcoming seasons. This meeting is open to all UMass undergraduate students. If you have not signed up to be a Minutemaniac, you may do so at this meeting.

UMass Minutemaniacs

Minutemaniac Benefits:
- Advance Reserved Basketball Ticket Pickup
- Minutemaniac T-Shirt
- Game Receptions
- "The UMass Maniac" Newsletter
- Membership Card

Great Value at $25.00 to Join!

THE Minutemaniacs ARE LIMITED TO THE FIRST 500 UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS TO REGISTER!

If you have any questions, please call the Athletic Development Office at 545-9672
Complete form below, cut, and mail to Minutemaniacs at:

308 Mullins Center ● University of Massachusetts ● Box 35910 ● Amherst, MA 01003

Application for Minutemaniacs Membership

Student Name:_____ Student #: _____

Local Address:_____

Local Phone: _____ Year at UMass:_____

Home Address:_____

City:_____ State:_____ Zip:_____ Home Phone:_____

Make checks payable to: UMAF

Or Charge to your credit card: Visa ❑ Mastercard ❑ Discover ❑

Number_____ Expiration Date_____

providian financial corporation

where the people are as innovative as the products

To be innovative is to find new ways of doing, thinking, being. To be an innovator is to be a change maker — a creative problem-solver — with a unique approach to life and work. At Providian, innovation means we never leave well enough alone. In fact, many of our financial "firsts" have set the newest industry standards.

*To be an industry innovator takes an indomitable spirit. The courage to stand out and drive the industry down new roads. If you've got it, come engineer an exciting future at Providian Financial. We seek candidates with academic accomplishments in Engineering, Finance, Computer Science, Statistics, Business and Marketing.

Please see us at the Engineering Career Fair on Thursday, October 16 at the Engineering Student Center in Marcus Hall

If you are unable to meet with us, please send your resume to: Providian Financial Corporation, College Relations, 201 Mission Street, 13th Floor, San Francisco, CA 94105. FAX: (415) 278-6037. E-mail: college@providian.com. Website: www.providian.com. We value diversity of culture, professions and experience and are an equal opportunity employer.

WITH OFFICES IN SAN FRANCISCO, PLEASANTON AND SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

PROVIDIAN Financial engineering your future

FROM THE CREATOR OF "SCREAM"

I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER

MANDALAY ENTERTAINMENT ... I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER ... JENNIFER LOVE HEWITT SARAH MICHELLE GELLAR RYAN PHILLIPPE ... JOHNNY GALECKI ... JOHN DIGBY ... SIDNEY CHAPLIN ... COLUMBIA PICTURES

R

AT THEATRES OCTOBER 17

■ field hockey

continued from page 14

leads the team in goals and points, the trickle down effect is felt throughout the roster. Vicky Browne (6–7–19) and Chris Millbauer (4–2–10) have consistently backed up their junior teammate in the attack, while the freshmen trio of Kristen Schmidt, Lucy Koch and Sally Russo have all registered their first collegiate goals.

Additionally, UMass has a secret weapon for overtime, should the game last that long. Kerry Lyons has tallied her first two collegiate goals this season, both game winners in overtime.

A week after turning in a solid effort in their third straight loss, today's game gives the Minutewomen a chance to prove this past weekend's Top 10 upsets were no fluke.

"The effort from the Boston University [loss] carried over to this weekend," Shea said. "They started to so a lot of things well, and they also improved on other things."

■ water polo

continued from page 14

bing of the Rams.

Yet, Yarworth felt the team's concentration wavered a bit.

"I think we were looking ahead to the next game a little bit," Yarworth said.

The Minutemen had a reason to look ahead toward the next game — St. Francis was not only nationally ranked, but they were also coming off a 3–1 performance in the previous week's Princeton Invitational, including a rout of Navy.

However, UMass responded to this momentum with an 18– 11 win, highlighted by a career–high nine goal effort by Stahl.

"At the end, I only thought he had four or five goals, and that shows that he took his shots within the flow of the game," Yarworth said. "We haven't been doing that lately — we've been forcing it."

Yarworth further described the win as "one of the best total team games we've played in the last few years... It showed me that we can step up and play water polo with these teams."

Another Minuteman reached a career high in this contest, and goalkeeper Richard Huntley notched 14 saves.

"I think he's playing better than any goalie in the Eastern Conference right now," Yarworth said of his sophomore goalkeeper's performance.

The team will have no time to rest on its laurels, while returning to action this Friday against No. 3 California, kicking off a five–game stint in the Golden State. No UMass team has ever beaten the Golden Bears in their six previous matches.

"We have to play with intensity all the time," Yarworth said of Friday's matchup, also emphasizing that the keys to victory lie in "communicating on defense... and balancing the offense."

Above all, Yarworth is looking for "good team discipline and team attitudes. We might go 5–0, we may go 0–5 — I don't know. But I want to see good water polo."

From Poolside: The junior All–America, Stahl continues to lead the Minutemen in points scored with 82. Timmy Troupis, a sophomore is second (54) while juniors Gabriel Marrero (38), Aldo Roman (35) round out the leaders... Leaders in goals scored are Stahl (54), Roman (32) Marrero (26), Troupis (22), and Limardo (18)... Troupis, whose international experience makes him invaluable, leads UMass with 24 assists, while senior co–captain Marc Staudenbaur (21), Limardo (19), Slinguff (15), and Stahl (14) take spots in the top five... Richard Huntley has given up 106 goals but saved 164 for a percentage of .607. The opposition is scoring just 6.33 goals against him per game.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Senior co–captain Marc Staudenbaur was as steady as ever last weekend for UMass water polo.

■ football

continued from page 14

streak of mediocrity. Illinois used to be respected. Now they're just dookie.

Oh well. We all go through trying times. I'm just surprised they haven't pulled themselves out yet.

Uncle Bill's line of the week...

Didn't talk to Uncle Bill this week, but I'm sure he's thrilled about the Redskins' win on Monday night. Uncle Bill loves his Redskins.

Friends of the Program "Inside Tip" pick of the week...(2–3)

The wheels have come off the "Inside Tip" bandwagon. Three straight losses, the latest coming from a Clemson squad that choked to Virginia on Saturday. I'm all shook up. I'm struggling, trying to take back the season and end with my head above water.

It's gonna be a tough road.

I'm hitching all my hopes and dreams to Miami. They're six–point favorites at BC. Now we all now how bad BC is, and we all know how bad Miami is. My hope is that Miami can get those athletes of theirs to pull off one decent win.

That's all I ask.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's tennis

continued from page 14

efforts did not go unnoticed, because she did bring about improvements to the women's department.

"The men's department was given more luxuries, and I felt it was my duty to try and change that," Dixon said. "I felt I did a bold, but very just, thing."

Toward the end of Dixon's stay at Yale, she engaged in some broadcasting work for PBS and NBC affiliates, earning an Emmy nomination for her work. After leaving Yale, Dixon did some work in the marketing field, even though she graduated from USC with a psychology degree.

"I was approached out of nowhere do some work for PBS for team tennis matches," Dixon said. "Marketing was something I became very interested in. I really enjoyed my work in that field."

Dixon arrived in Amherst in 1982, and finished up work in marketing before buying into the Amherst Racquet and Fitness Center. After selling the club in 1992, she was hired by UMass as the head coach of the women's team.

It was the first year of competition after the reinstatement of the program. The following year she asked if she could coach a revived men's team as well. She was given the green light and has led both teams ever since. The rebuilding process was quick, and all of her teams have been over .500 since 1994.

"I really wanted to get back involved with tennis," Dixon said. "I really missed the game while I was working in marketing. Working with both teams has been a challenge ever since I came here."

Despite teaching her players about tennis, she strives to prepare them for life in general. With this method, she has gained the respect of all of her players.

"Coach Dixon has meant so much to me," senior men's captain Alex Aller said. "She has taught us so many valuable life lessons. She is practically family to me."

Her invaluable knowledge has really shown over the last two years. The men's team (4–1) is reaching for the sky this season, as they head into today's home match against St. John's at the Upper Boyden Courts at 3 p.m.

"We need to stay focused and prepare ourselves properly for these last few matches," Dixon said.

Look out for the Collegian's UMass Basketball Preview issue. Coming this November to a newsstand near you...

Yeah! Whoopie! Yee Haw! Yippy-ki-yay

■ NBA

continued from page xx

ago. Tim Duncan is the heir apparent to David Robinson's neighborhood, and is already putting up big numbers in the preseason. He, in my opinion, will be the rookie of the year.

There are a few sleepers out there as well. Kansas' Jacques Vaughn is an excellent choice for the Jazz, and he will complement John Stockton nicely off the bench.

Villanova's Tim Thomas, swapped in the Van Horn trade, will provide the 76ers with a big man who not only can rebound, but finish the fast break as well. They will definitely be a team that will give the better teams in the NBA a run for their money.

But, Knight is a player that you guys will definitely want to keep your eyes on. With the kind of gritty defense he played in college for Stanford, he has the potential to make it to the top in steals; not to mention the fact that he possesses a good perimeter game, too.

As for the other teams in the NBA, I suspect that some of them might improve from last season, but quite a few, like my Knicks, are soon to be part of the rebuilding stage.

Yet, the season will tell all.

See you at tipoff.

Gregory H. Casimir is a Collegian columnist.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $287
PARIS $209 $390
ROME $266 $497
MADRID $218 $407
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Foul Shooting (M/W/C).....10/20
3-Point Shootout (M/W).....10/20

STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Tennis Singles.....A.S.A.P.
Volleyball (M/W).....A.S.A.P.

LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

Don't Miss The ACTION
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

TONIGHT
LIVE MUSIC
FEATURING
JESSE FROM BOSTON
JUST PLAYED AT THE PARADISE AND THE ATTIC
-ALL ORIGINAL-
10-1
WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS
All Sam Adams Pints $2.00
Logan-Octoberfest Honey Porter seafood·salads
THE PUB
WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS
Miller Lite 20oz. $1.99
Rum & Coke 16oz - $2.*

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30 Sat 12:00-7:30 Closed Tuesday

Collegian Sports... Keep your eye on the ball.

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 0155

Computers
166 MHz complete systems
16 Meg Ram
1.7 Gig Hard drive
20X CD-Rom MM kit
Windows 95
$995.00
w/ 14" SVGA monitor
Web Sites Basic Page Perfect for On-Line Resumes $99 and up
College Pro Computers
206 Russell St. (Rte 9) Hadley • (413) 584-8857
http://www.javanet.com/~cpcusa

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE™
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 8th
7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
Shop Around & Compare!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
Act Now! Space is Limited!!

Even At Four, You Had A Good Head For Business.

Face it, you didn't come to college to be just like everyone else, so why not ally yourself with one of America's top internships? You'll make your resume stand out after graduation, plus earn real money while still in college. Some of our students earn a five-figure income. Put the Northwestern Mutual Life name to work for you, and realize that you're worth much more than you think. Maybe The Steffen Agency should hear from you. Internship openings available now.

For more information, stop by our booth at the Undergraduate Business Club Career Fair on Wednesday, October 15th

Kate Kane
The Steffen Agency
413/748-6000
katekane@javanet.com

Northwestern Mutual Life®
The Quiet Company®
www.NorthwesternMutual.com
For sales career opportunities 1-800-CALL-NML

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One bedroom apartment Downtown. $520 + utilities. 253-1903, 545-4003, 545-4002

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 VW Maroon Rabbit Low mileage. 95% mint condition. $1400 or B/O. Call 584-2940

1990 Chevy Barretta Great condition. Must sell. BEST REASONABLE OFFER takes it. 296-4549

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1990 Jeep Wrangler 5 speed, 85k, hard top/soft top. $6000. 256-0501

EMPLOYMENT

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

Teacher Needed
Kaplan Educational Centers has a current opening for an MCAT Instructor. Qualifications include thorough knowledge of course material, great presentation skills and superior MCAT scores. This is an excellent well paying part-time job, ideal for graduate students. Please visit us Mon-Thurs, 12-4pm, at 150 Fearing St., Amherst, or call us at 549-5789 to arrange an interview.

EMPLOYMENT

TUTORS
Bilingual Tutors for part-time paid assistance to students. Speaking Japanese, Khmer, and Punjabi. Contact ESL/Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857
Amherst Public Schools
170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01067
An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

International Marketing Firm seeks Spokesperson. $10 per hour. 8-10 hours a week. Models are encouraged to apply. Call Sean Sweeney (800)829-4777

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED
for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst.
Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0
COLLEGE NEWS SERVICE

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

BUY MY IBM PENTIUM: 166MHZ, 16M RAM, Zip Drive, 17" viewable monitor, too much software to list (i.e. Photoshop 4.0, Director). 64 bit 3D video card, Wacom Graphics Tablet. Complete for $1400 SOLID. You can't get this good of a deal in stores. CMPSCI Major who needs to sell his baby for rent. Call Bill @ (413)587-9972.

HELP! Baby Iguana needs home. Comes equipped. $80. Call Matt 546-2608

FOR SALE

Drum Set- 5 piece Yamaha All accessories. Moving, must sell. $650 or best offer. 5-3129 or 549-5981

KHS Montana Descent Mountain Bike Great condition. 247-5358

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Kona Mountain Bike Ridden off-road only 3 times. Shimano LX Shifter. $450 or B/O. Call Dan at 628-3857 Leave message.

Self Amplified Bazooka Base Tube 6 inches, great shape. Call 259-1984

Computers! Computers! Computers!
The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4850

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

FOUND

Watch Found Northeast Quad. 10/8/97. Call 546-4443 to describe.

INSTRUCTION

Computer Enthusiast:
Knowledgeable computer tutor wanted to provide individualized computer enrichment for girls ages 15 & 12. Female preferred. Hourly rate negotiable. Call Joan or Rob (413) 584-8086 or (413)586-6542

BARTEND WITH UNIVERSITY BARTENDING 50% student discount. On-campus classes starting soon! Call 1-800-U-Can-Mix for info.

LOST

CROSS PEN GOLD TONE Personal inscription. Grandfather's. Irreplacible. Reward. 253-5482

LOST: Keys with green bottle opener in Sylvan Parking Lot. Reward. Call Steve 546-4489

MISCELLANEOUS

Earn $75-$100
Exercise Science Study Needs non-weight trained males
Call Steve @ 253-4952 or 5-6072

FREE BLACK KITTEN! Needs loving home ASAP. Call 549-8770

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ADD A BORDER
www.movieposter.com
Vintage-Current
(416)391-0133

PERSONALS

TO DAVID ZAGER I love you and miss you. Phil

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room available on Main St. Very close to town. On bus route. 21+ please. Call 259-9282

ROOMMATE WANTED

One large bedroom available in Sugarloaf Estates. $333/month. Great place to live. Call 665-7701

ROOM WANTED

Sublet Needed January 1998- 1 month only. Bus access necessary. Preferably in Northampton. (617)623-3851

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Retired Faculty Member offers English Language Lessons and Editorial Expertise to International Students, all levels. Reasonable rates. Ms. Reed 253-3354

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

GUATEMALA: Learn Spanish and help Mayan children. Write: Rural Education Project, P.O. Box 9534, North Amherst, MA 01059

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH!
CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for brothers or sororities in personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, or announce events.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad. Used in on the spot/on order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 15

Blood Drive — Help the American Red Cross ensure a safe and adequate blood supply for all those in need by donating 9:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165-169. Call 1-800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Clinic — There will be an intramural volleyball officials clinic at 7 p.m. at Boyden, room 249.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural volleyball captains meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Meeting — There will be a meeting to learn more about and plan the National Young Women's Day of Action at 7 p.m. in the Student Union, Cape Cod Lounge. All are welcome. For more information, contact Ellen Donoghue at 546-4775 or ecd@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The Western Mass Linux-Unix User's Group (WMLUUG) is in the process of forming and is holding a meeting from 6–8 p.m. in Morrill South Building, room 319 OEB. Linux is a free computer operating system that runs on PCs, MACs and Mainframes. All are welcome and all members are new.

Meeting — University Resources Network is holding a meeting on expanding University 101 offerings for entering undergraduates noon – 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 803. For more information about this open campus meeting, contact the Office of Human Relations at 545-0851.

Service — Sukkot service at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House Sukkah. Celebrate the Harvest Festival with Hillel.

Speaker — The UMass University Democrats presents Governor Michael Dukakis on "Political Activism in the Modern Era" at 7:30 p.m. in Morrill I, room N329.

Theater — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players will perform in the Patterson Residence Hall Main Lounge at 8 p.m.

THURSDAY, OCT. 16

Clinic — There will be an intramural volleyball officials clinic at 5 p.m. at Boyden, room 223.

Discussion — Brian Tokar will lead a discussion around his latest book Earth for Sale, at 6 p.m. at Food For Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural tennis players meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Service — Sukkot service with Jewish community of Amherst, 10 a.m. at the Hillel House. Lunch following. free for all on any meal plan.

Speaker — The Smith College chapter of Students for a Free Tibet presents Ama Adhe, political prisoner of 27 years, who will be speaking as a woman, a prisoner and an activist for freedom, at 7:30 p.m. in the Stoddard Hall Auditorium, Smith College.

Speaker — Education reformer Lorraine Monroe will speak at 7:30 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College in the New York room, in Mary Woolley Hall.

Yoga — Yoga and meditation seminar by Dada Anantananda at 8 p.m. in the Butterfield Dorm Lounge. Includes lecture and practical experience. Free admission. Sponsored by Ananda Marga.

FRIDAY, OCT. 17

Meeting — Intervarsity Christian Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room posted at the info desk, continuing series on whole life.

Service — Sukkot special student/faculty/staff Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Sponsored by Hillel.

Tournament — Intramural tennis tournament begins at the lower courts at the Mullins Center.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation of Friday, Oct. 17, or 24. The free one-hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545- 0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406E or just bring the artwork by.

Course — The Interdepartmental Program in film studies is offering a certificate in film studies to all majors (equivalent to a minor). Includes six courses in film/video studies. For more information and to fill out an application, stop by the office in 101 South College or call 545-3659. Office hours Monday and Wednesday 8 a.m.–5 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Friday 8 a.m.–2 p.m. Or visit the webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Internships — Environmental internships offered. Campaigns this semester include: Hunger and Homelessness, Pesticides, Endangered Species, Updated Bottle Bill and Campaign Finance Reform. Looking for motivated students to take leadership positions. Call MassPIRG at 545-0199 or stop by 423A Student Union.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545-2726.

Notice — The women's basketball team will be holding walk-on tryouts on Oct. 20 at 6:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Proof of insurance and of a recent physical are required to participate in tryouts. For further information, call the women's basketball office at 545-2726.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

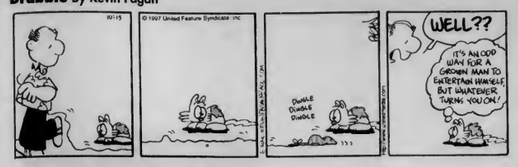
Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23	CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24	CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25	Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	28	UCTV
8	PBS/57	Springfield	27	TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28	BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29	TV Land
9	Weather	Channel	30	Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31	Comedy Central
			32	Cartoon
11	Fox/61	Hartford	33	Much Music
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

hurry before this opportunity passes you by

SPONSOR THESE TV LISTINGS.....CALL 545-3500



WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 15, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Ice Cream Show (In Stereo)		Great Performances: Carnegie Hall			Diana's Dress	Quest III: Energy
WFSB	3	(3)	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4)	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5)	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Wayans Bros.	Steve Harvey	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Marlins at Braves					News	Tonight Show
WTXX		(4)	Married...With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Grace Under	Sentinel "Inside Man"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	News	LAPD		Vibe
WVIT		(10)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Marlins at Braves					News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	(11)	Major League Baseball		Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Zap" (In Stereo)	News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	(22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: NLCS Game 7 – Marlins at Braves					News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(6)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Washbone (In Stereo)		Great Performances: Carnegie Hall		Foto-Novelas	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	11	(29)	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live		News
WSBK	12		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sentinel "Inside Man"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	News		NHL Hockey: Bruins at Kings
WTBS	22		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	★★ "Harlem Nights" (1989, Comedy-Drama) Eddie Murphy, Richard Pryor.					★★ "Above the Rim" (1994) Duane Martin, Leon.
A&E	10		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Securitate"		Biography: Loretta Lynn		American Justice		20th Century		Law & Order "Born Bad"
CNN	13	23	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	15	28	Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stain's Money	★½ "Trainwreck" (1995)		Comedy) Jeff Goldblum,		South Park	Viva Variety	Daily Show	Stain's Money
DISC	20		Wings "Sea Wings"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Together		Discover Magazine		Crash of TWA Flight 800		Justice Files "Parole"
ESPN	21		Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling:	Etonite Challenge (Live)		Golf: Wonderful World of Golf		Boogers		Sportscenter
LIFE	24		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Janet Leigh"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Alien: The Life of a Child" (1986, Drama) Craig T. Nelson,			Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	25		MTV Live	Viewers	Best of MTV (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Real World	Austin Stories	Duchovny	Lovelina
NICK	26		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years
SCIFI	27		Twilight Zone		Time Trax "Selma Is Missing"		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)		★★ "Bloodlust: Subspecies III" (1993, Horror) Anders Hove,				Time Trax "Selma Is Missing"
TLC	29	28	Hometime	Hometime	Home Again	Home Again	Wondr-Weathr	Sea Talk II	Rescue Squad: Fire and Water		Blast Masters: Explosion		Wondr-Weathr	Sea Talk II
TNT	30		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		★½ "Uncommon Valor" (1983, Drama) Gene Hackman,			★★ "Double Impact" (1991, Adventure) Jean-Claude Van Damme,
USA	31		Baywatch "Tentacles"		Highsender, The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		(Continuous" (1997, Suspense) Lindsay Wagner, (In Stereo)			Silk Stalkings "Partners"
HBO	49		(5:00)		★★★ "Dunston Checks In" (1996, Comedy) PG		★★½ "Drumline" Old Man" (1995) Jack Lemmon,		★★ "The Doglighters" (1996, Suspense) Robert Dev. R					"Josephine"
MAX	50		★★ "Last of the Dogmen" (1995, Adventure) Tom Berenger, PG				★★★ "Forever Young" (1992, Fantasy) Mel Gibson, PG			★★ "2 Days in the Valley" (1996) Danny Aiello, R			"Occasional"
SHOW	51		4:30)		★½ "Modern Problems" (1981) Chevy Chase,		★★½ "Get Shorty" (1995, Comedy) John Travolta, R			Dead Man's	Dead Man's Gun (R) (In Stereo)		Dead Man's

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

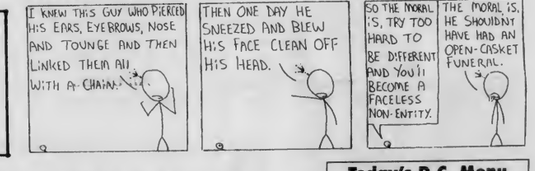
Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Loser Crew By Alan Demonde

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Loedoe By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You are a little more vulnerable than usual today, and you must take care that others know just where your limits are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Take care that you don't throw a wrench into the works by trying too much too soon. Pace yourself; schedule your efforts with care.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You will have a chance to get together with someone you respect on level ground, and test your ideas in a safe but challenging way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You are after a little more security in your life, and today you can improve matters on the homefront by facing a few important facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You will be attracted to someone merely because you have observed the unusual. Do not think that everything has to change, however.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can afford to be a little more assertive both at home and at the workplace. You can make others happy with you in every possible venue.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Seek out those who have more in common with you, and you'll find contentment working on projects that can turn into cooperative efforts.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — This is a good day to share with a friend some good news that you have been keeping to yourself for political reasons. Confide all details.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Today you are likely to discover that your goals are one and the same with those of someone who has been in the background. Cooperate!

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You needn't be so detached today; try to make contact with others and share both ideas and expertise. Working together benefits all.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may be quite unpredictable in many things today, but the fact that you are working toward a key goal will be recognized by those around you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Be sure to obey all the road signs that you encounter throughout your day. You don't want to put yourself in any unnecessary danger.

Quote of the Day

"A man is not finished when he is defeated. He is finished when he quits."
–Richard M. Nixon, 37th President of the United States

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Breast Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Chicken Pot Pie
Rotini w/ Tomato/Meat Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Cauliflower & Eggplant Casserole
Pastabilities/ Cheese Lasagna

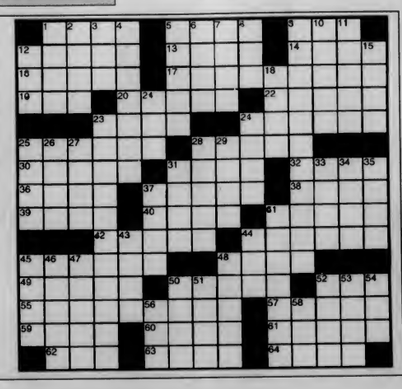
Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
BBQ Pork on Bun
Grilled Sneeze

DINNER
Roast Turkey & Fried Shrimp

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Rotini/ Tomato Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Hand-cut Cod Sub
Penne w/ Tomatoes and Spinach
Pastabilities

Night Editor: Seema Gangotirkar
Photo Technician: Kenny McDonald
Copy Editor: Lorraine Kennedy
Production Supervisor: Jaylyn Lombard
Production Staff: Mark McGrath, Samantha Mahon



ACROSS
1 Overwhelming defeat
5 Whimper
9 Tend the lawn
12 Zoo denizen
13 Huron's neighbor
14 Cosmetics company
16 Make laugh
17 Brother's home
18 "Certainly!"
20 Cowhand's loop
22 Nervous
23 Small amounts
24 Undergarment
25 Revolting
28 Giraffe relative
30 Basketball's Shaquille
31 Herring's cousin
32 Not at home
36 Saxophonist Getz
37 Tolerates
38 13-Across, e.g.
39 Lids
40 Tilted one
41 Protozoan's parts
42 Spanish father
44 Doughnut units
45 Redford and Newman
48 Show anger
49 Less than sufficient
50 Type of pants
52 — out: stretch
55 Certain one-piece garment
57 Daisylike flower
59 Location
60 End of a threat
61 Brief letters
62 Lightning — 63 Meshes
64 Twofold

DOWN
1 Frost
2 Musical work
3 — and downs
4 Pedicure target
5 Reminders
6 Son of Aphrodite
7 Champagne or sherry
8 Meadow
9 Appear
10 Kitchen appliances
11 Inferior
12 Insignificant amount of money, slangily
15 No, to Ivan
18 Pause
21 Unusual
23 Moved (cargo)
24 They're no gentlemen!
25 Party giver
26 "I'm — your tricks!"
27 Harvest
28 Chicago airport
29 Maiden of films
31 Scorch
33 Corduroy rib
34 Similar
35 Cheerleaders' cries
37 Garden plots
41 Give orders
43 Bohemian
44 Expected
45 Snakes
46 Preside at a meeting
47 Lone Ranger's sidekick
48 Releases
50 Golf-course unit
51 Helper: abbr.
52 Singer James
53 Entertainer Howard —
54 Sounds of hesitation
56 Layer
58 Old French coin

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-15-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

Minutewomen aiming to fry Friars

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Saturday it was No. 9. Sunday it was No. 10.

Today, the Massachusetts field hockey team will face off against the No. 8 team in the nation, when Providence College visits Richard F. Garber Field at 3:30 p.m. Confidence will be a big factor as UMass returns to its home field for the first time in two weeks.

"They played really well this weekend," UMass coach Patty Shea said of her 7–7 Minutewomen. "Those two games were the perfect building block in terms of the players gaining confidence in each other and themselves.

"We have been on the road for two straight weeks. But it hasn't just been small trips. We have been on the road. And it has been exhausting."

Indeed, the Minutewomen have. Last weekend's trip to Syracuse, N.Y., where UMass faced Ball State and the host Orangewomen, was preceded by a two–game swing to Chapel Hill, N.C., with contests against North Carolina and Wake Forest. Today's game starts a four–game homestand that will see UMass play against three nationally ranked teams, starting with the Friars.

"They are a good team with a lot of experience," Shea said. "They have a good midfield and strong forwards, which translates into a dangerous mix."

PC's strength has given the Friars a 11–3 overall mark and a 3–1 record in the Big East. But the losses have been within the last two weeks — a 2–1 defeat at the hands of an average Harvard squad in their last game being the most recent.

Field Hockey
UMass vs. No. 8 Providence
3:30 p.m., Garber Field

The Friars firepower has come from two main sources: Erica Hebert and Paula Wagoner. Hebert (25 points) has connected on 11 goals, while Wagoner (23 pts) has set up most of them. But their strength is not two players deep, and Heather Koopman (8 goals, 5 assists, 21 points), Mirandi Baig (6–1–13) and Katie Lachapelle (6–0–12) have also contributed to the Friar offense.

UMass, however, is not suffering from a lack of scoring punch. While its own Erica — Erica Johnston —

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Junior Vicky Browne and the Minutewomen face off with No. 8 Providence today at 3:30 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field.

Dixon's various experiences lift UM tennis

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Even the casual observer would know how much Massachusetts tennis coach Judy Dixon has meant to the burgeoning tennis program at UMass.

After all, the men's team has a 20–3 record over the last two seasons, and the women's squad was ranked in the Northeast Region to begin the season.

But only closer companions of the sport would know the extent and variety of Dixon's achievements before she arrived in Amherst. One of the contributing factors in the success of her coaching is her well–renowned career participating in tennis as a player.

Men's tennis
Massachusetts vs. Saint John's
3:00 p.m., Upper Boyden

Dixon first picked up a racquet when she was 10 years old and immediately formed a bond with the sport. She began playing tournaments at age 11, and by the time she was 18, she captured the National Indoors Championship.

Dixon then arrived on the professional tour where she competed for two years, competing in several Grand Slam tournaments, including Wimbledon and the United States Open.

Her playing career ended when she looked for a more lucrative line of work. Dixon did enjoy the thrill of playing alongside the legendary Billie Jean King in several doubles tournaments.

"At the time there was not much money to be made unless you were winning the major tournaments," Dixon said. "But playing with [King] was an honor I will never forget."

After hanging up her playing shoes, she accepted her first collegiate coaching job at the Yale University. She doubled as coordinator of the women's Athletic Department during her stay in New Haven, Conn. Her teams were exceptional at Yale, as evidenced by the 40–14 record she compiled there over three seasons.

An ironic achievement since "before I took that position, I had no intention of becoming a tennis coach," Dixon said.

Before leaving Yale, she filed a suit against the university regarding gender equity, and her

Turn to MEN'S TENNIS, page 11

Calendar time for Daddy; All in your best interest

Ladies and gentlemen, it's mid–October (uh, thanks Luke).

I know, I know. I'm not here to give calendar updates. (November's coming soon). But this is a significant time in the college football world. The time has come for the teams who think they might have a shot at the Orange Bowl and the national championship come January start to make their push.

Luke Meredith on College Football

It's also time for teams who have lost (but weren't supposed to) to lick their wounds and hope to rebound enough to make a decent New Year's Day bowl, so their athletic directors can take that big check from that big bowl and go, "Hey, I told you football is in the best interests of this school," and then take the chancellor out to a fancy dinner that the bowl committee pays for.

Oh, what a life they lead.

Here's a report card on the teams who have earned A's so far, and are banking on an Alliance bid — or at least a bowl in a place where the coaches' wives can get a decent tan.

Penn St. — They beat everyone they were supposed to, plus vanquished a very good Ohio St. team. Curtis Enis, the original Pimp Daddy, gives that offense a two–tiered attack. (you know, that Joe Jerivicius guy's good too.)

Nebraska — Beat Washington in Seattle, the biggest win by anyone in 1997 so far. Yeah, they almost lost to Central Florida at home, but hey, we all have bad days. Props to Scott Frost, who proved once and for all that he can lead the Huskers (they can't all be Tommie Frazier).

Florida St. — Spanked Miami 47–0. But of course, Miami sucks.

They've done all they can so far, but have to get by North Carolina to climb back to the top.

Michigan — Brian Griese has done more than they thought he would (he's made his dad proud, I'm sure). Their defense has been outstanding, which is key in a conference that doesn't light up the scoreboard like the WAC (hey, it's always fun to slip in a WAC joke every now and again.)

North Carolina — Yeah, they're 6–0, but they blew their "Inside Tip Pick of the Week" to Stanford. Prof. Luke never forgets (must be that Methuen public school education.) Beating Florida St. would be the icing on the cake to a so far outstanding season, and they're doing it while switching QB's every week. There are about 95 college football teams who wish they had the Tarheels QB problem.

Auburn — They've beaten everyone, but a hungry Florida team comes to town Saturday. Damyeune Craig is one of the best QBs in the country, I swear.

Booty Schwag of the Week Award...

I think it's about time for Illinois to step up and accept the Booty Schwag.

Illinois has been on the verge of Bootyville for a little while. But I kept them off the list because while they were losing every week, they weren't doing it outrageously. Plus, I used to like them (they used to have Johnny Johnson. He ruled.)

But now, they've lost 12 in a row since last year. This is not a lower–tier program on a long

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

For the No. 13 Minutewoman offense, freshman forward Kara Green has been...

The Devil Inside

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Soccer, the holiest of games to some people, and to those same people, regarded as "football" in its purest sense, is a game driven by emotion.

The calmest person can turn into Frankenstein on the field, with a dual personality evolving between the peace–loving everyday citizen and the Slide Tackler From Hell. All of this is due to one thing — emotion — and there is one player for the No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team who plays with a double helping of it.

Freshman forward Kara Green has leapt onto the regional and national scene this season for the Minutewomen (11–2, 7–0 in Atlantic 10), leading the team in points and assists (8 goals, 11 assists, 27 points).

Going into UMass' last two home games of the season against the defending A–10 champion in the University of Dayton (Friday, 3:30 p.m.) and Xavier University (Sunday, 1 p.m.), Green's scoring output has her in the top 10 of the Northeast Region, with her 11 assists ranking third, and her 27 points ranking sixth.

All of this success is due to one thing — the emotion she puts into the game.

The first thing noticed when Green gets the ball in the final third of the pitch is just that — emotion. Then, a chip at the ankle, or a pull of the shirt, from the opposition results in a change of Green's mood, and the peace–loving everyday cltizen evolves into a scoring monster.

In a purely metaphorical sense (and with Halloween in mind), the eyes begin to contort, the muscles in the face distort, fire comes out of her eyes and smoke rises out of her ears, and next thing you know, the opposition's defense is left "masticated" at her feet; otherwise known as "well– chewed," for all you non–scoring monstrosities out there in Valley–land.

Any references to the freshman from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., herself being an actual monster in real life aside, Green's fast start out of the gate this season has been devilishly beneficial to UMass. Like the song from INXS, Green is like every single one of us, and when it is needed, she has more than enough of the devil inside.

The success of the Minutewomen this season is due in part to the team rebounding from a series of injuries, but also to the fact that Green has brought her young and fearless approach to the game.

"I've always been a very aggressive person, and that's always been my game," Green said. "But I'm not surprised [with our success], because I knew that UMass can always pull out a strong program.

"We've had our ups and downs, with losing Robin [Smith] and Amy [Burrill], and not being able to have Kat [Machamer] in the lineup, but so far we're pulling it out with great support from them. I'm not surprised at all... but, to say the least, its been wonderful."

Leduc–ian work ethic

Comparisons in style of play between Green and UMass assistant coach (and former Minutewoman), Rachel Leduc abound. In her UMass career, Leduc brought a "never say die" attitude to the game, with that work ethic translating into a series of clutch goals; such as her 1995 gamewinner against Hartford in the first round of the NCAA's, and her two goals in the '92 and '93 NCAA's respectively, pushing UMass past rival Connecticut in both games.

Green has already come out with a huge gamewinning goal this season, scoring the first highlight of her career against then–No. 22 Michigan in the 87th minute for the exciting 2–1 win.

For Leduc, Green has the ability to go even farther than what she accomplished in her illustrious UMass career.

"If I was a freshman and I was at that level so early, I would be so psyched," Leduc said. "She's scrappy, and her skill work is a 100 percent better than mine in my freshman year. One thing she has that I didn't have at that time is she's not afraid to take on a defender.

"As a freshman, you might be a little hesitant to take someone on. She has no fear. Of course you're going to fail a few times, but she does not give up, and that's going to help her a lot down the line."

Those positive aspects of Leduc's playing style drew the talents of Green to coach Jim Rudy's eye. Since his assistant's last game for the Minutewomen in 1996, Rudy has been looking for a player who could try and replace her spot on the frontline, and it's safe to say he's found what he's been looking for.

"There are some similarities between Rachel and Kara, and we saw that when we recruited her," Rudy said. "One, she has a knack of scoring goals, and two, she has single– mindedness, a purpose, when she goes to the goal. She's a very determined player, and that focus, that scoring, is an impressive thing for a person her age."

Fork–tongued little devil

Unlike most incoming freshmen, UMass was not a strange place to Green — it was just strange. While attending a Olympic

Turn to GREEN, page 10

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Kara Green has splashed onto the national and regional scene for the Minutewomen this season.

UMass water polo wins three in rumble in Bronx

By Jim Eltingham
Collegian Correspondent

For Massachusetts men's water polo coach Russ Yarworth, last weekend was a long time coming.

He wasn't waiting — like everyone else — for the three– day reprieve from responsibility. No, the coach of the No. 14 Minutemen was anticipating the day when his already successful squad would reach a new level.

"I was much more pleased with our performance," Yarworth said of last weekend's Collegiate Water Polo Association (CWPA) Tournament.

The Minutemen went 3–0 in the competition, with wins over the United States Merchant Marine Academy, Fordham, and No. 19 St. Francis — all being highlighted by what Yarworth called "team water polo." The three wins lifted the Minutemen's record to 17–4 overall (7–2 CWPA).

The weekend began Saturday night in King's Point, N.Y., where UMass downed the USMMA, 15–3.

Massachusetts	18
Saint Francis	11

"The Merchant Marines have a developing program," Yarworth said. "So we played a lot of our freshmen and sophomores."

Billy Hunter, one of those sophomores, led the charge with four goals, with Rich Slingluff's three–goal performance also contributing to the rout.

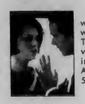
Massachusetts	19
Fordham	6

Sunday was no day of rest for the Minutemen, as they traveled into the Bronx, to take on the Rams and a nationally ranked St. Francis squad.

Massachusetts	15
USMMA	3

The afternoon opponent was Fordham, a team Yarworth told his squad to "pay attention to." They did more than that; 10 different UMass players scored — led by Brian Stahl's hat trick — en route to a 19–6 drub–

Turn to WATER POLO, page 11



THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Junior Aldo Roman and the Minutemen got back on the winning side, taking three matches last weekend.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 31 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, October 16, 1997

Film fare

Don't know what's good and what's not in film? The Collegian previews some upcoming releases (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Roll UMass

Sharon Hughes and the Massachusetts field hockey team beat #8th ranked Providence yesterday, 2–0. (see SPORTS, page 14.)

WORLD

Hurricane Pauline rocks Acapulco

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Drying mud turned Acapulco into a choking dustbowl yesterday, forcing thousands of residents to wear face masks or bandannas as they scrambled to find food and clean water amid shortages of tortillas, milk and other basic foods. The stench of sewage and rotting garbage wafted above Acapulco's mud-caked street market, where merchants rushed to reopen soiled shops even before sanitation crews could haul tons of storm debris away.

"I'm worried about this. It's not the usual dust. It's from the mountains, with the dead animals in it," said taxi driver Jose Solis.

Hurricane Pauline triggered floods and mudslides that roared into downtown Acapulco last week, killing at least 150 people here. As the mud dried yesterday under a blazing sun, a stifling haze rose over western Acapulco Bay. The hurricane swept through Guerrero and Oaxaca states Oct. 8-9, claiming more than 230 lives in all and leaving at least 50,000 homeless.

In Acapulco, the flood–damaged market, merchants offered piles of limp fish, fruit, vegetables and peppers, set beside mounds of garbage and leaking sewers. Flores Daniel, 17, piled dozens of mud–soaked sneakers and shoes atop a flimsy table for sale. "Five pesos! Five pesos!" he yelled.

NATION

GTE bids billions to buy out MCI

NEW YORK (AP) — GTE Corp. offered to buy MCI Communications Corp. for $28 billion in cash yesterday, escalating a bidding war for the nation's second-largest long-distance phone company. The bid would be the biggest all–cash deal ever, topping RJR Nabisco inc.'s $25 billion sale in 1989. It comes two weeks after WorldCom inc., the No. 4 long–distance company, offered $30 billion in stock and British Telecom earlier proposed paying about $21 billion in stock and cash.

GTE's board met yesterday to vote on the offer and made an announcement after the stock market closed.

GTE would pay $40 a share in cash for MCI, or a total of $28 billion. The combined company would have $40 billion in annual revenue.

WorldCom's offer would be worth more than either rival bid, but investors will typically settle for a lower price in return for the security of cash rather than stock. MCI is scrutinizing whether WorldCom's stock would retain its value.

With less than $1 billion cash on hand, GTE would need to borrow billions more to pay for MCI.

Buying MCI could make sense for GTE, a major seller of local phone service. GTE, which doesn't face the same restrictions placed on the Baby Bell regional telephone companies, has been expanding in long-distance.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 42	HIGH: 55 LOW: 39	HIGH: 57 LOW: 32

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Health Board finishes proposed smoking ban despite bars' protests

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST— The final touches were added to a proposed smoking ban by the Amherst Board of Health at their meeting Tuesday night, despite the defiance of a similar ban by bars in Belchertown.

The Belchertown Board of Health's smoking ban has been facing problems, culminating with a recent meeting of the Board, at which Belchertown bar owners said they would defy that town's smoking ban.

"[The Belchertown Board of Health] came up with a study saying 75 percent of the people in Massachusetts don't smoke, but they never polled a bar," Mill Valley Club manager Mike Opaceznik said, "we're having it forced down our throats."

Under Belchertown's ban, smoking is allowed in bars after 9 p.m. until Feb. 1, 1998, when smoking will be prohibited at all times.

Unlike the Amherst ban, Belchertown can only sue, and not issue immediate fines to the offending bars. Prosecuting the bars does allow for a fine to be collected, but the process is long and costly, and the fine money goes back to the state.

As a result, Belchertown cannot fully enforce its own ban, and is currently considering options which would allow it to do so.

"The board will take [McCarthy's Pub owner Janice McCullough] to court," said Teri, a full–time kitchen employee for McCarthy's. "I don't know if we'll win this, but we're not gonna give up without a fight."

Amherst Board of Health members said that they want their ban to allow non–criminal action, which would enable them to issue tickets to bars for non–compliance. Revenue from these tickets would go back to the town.

Failure to pay the fines for these tickets will result in the Board's taking the bar to court.

If the bar continues to defy the ban, the Amherst Board of Health can then pull the business's food license.

A loosely formed coalition of bar owners, employees and customers from Belchertown, Amherst and Northampton who have actively opposed the ban, appeared at the Belchertown Board meeting.

Belchertown bar owners, like many Amherst bar owners, feel that the ban will cost them business to surrounding towns that allow smoking.

The owners complain that smokers can go elsewhere, and have begun putting signs up labelling their bars as smoking establishments.

While they didn't show up on Tuesday, they appeared at the previous Amherst Board meeting.

The bus originated from Packard's in Northampton, whose owner Bob McGovern has actively opposed all attempts to impose smoking bans on bars in Hampshire County.

"People are getting tired of special interest groups running cities,"

Turn to SMOKING, page 3

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The Duke of Mass.

Former Governor Michael Dukakis spoke on "Political Activism in the Modern Era" in Morrill I yesterday evening.

Infected blood donations tracked at Mass. General

BOSTON (AP) — Federal officials say Massachusetts General Hospital did not properly classify 29 would-be blood donors who had tested positive for various infections.

The Food and Drug Administration was also concerned about the donor status assigned to a person known to be HIV-positive. However, his blood was only intended for use in lab research. None of the 30 blood samples was transfused into patients. Hospital officials say the blood samples could never have gotten to the point where they were available for patient use. Upon testing positive for any infectious disease, all blood products were immediately disposed of, officials said.

The FDA sent a warning letter to the hospital Sept. 8, saying the hospital's computer did not categorize donors properly.

"There was a real concern," said Paula Fairfield, spokeswoman for the agency's New England district.

Dr. Christopher Stowell, director of the hospital's blood transfusion service, said the computer did not immediately reject the 30 people from the donor category, although the system would never have allowed the blood to be transfused.

He told The Boston Globe that because of other safety measures, the blood "was never on the shelf to be transfused."

He said all blood is tested before it is used, no matter what the donor's status is in the computer.

He said the person who tested positive for HIV antibodies was giving blood only for use in research.

Twenty-six people had tested positive for hepatitis C antibodies in an original test, but a later and more accurate test on them was negative.

Two of the other three had tested positive for syphilis, and one had an incomplete test result for another infectious virus, and their blood was not used in patients, Stowell said.

The FDA had found during a routine inspection in August that the hospital's computer system had not flagged the 30 people, or placed them on a donor deferral list.

The system gave them an "R" status, which the computer interprets to mean "rare," the FDA said.

Stowell said hospital employees who use the computer have been trained to interpret "R" as meaning the donor is restricted or permanently deferred, and prohibited from ever giving blood to others.

He said the software also has been modified to issue an additional warning with the "R" status.

CSFCR protests Red Cross drive, says standards are discriminatory

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Mark Leichthammer, a sophomore resource economics major and member of the Concerned Students for Civil Rights, hands out flyers to protest to Red Cross blood donation.

By Lauren DiGeronimo
Collegian Correspondent

In a move of protest against the Red Cross blood bank, Concerned Students for Civil Rights (CSFCR) members and supporters picketed in the Campus Center Concourse and outside the Red Cross donation center yesterday.

Protesters who approached the donation table were turned down when they answered "yes" to the questions which asked, "For males: have you had sex, even once, with another male since 1977," and "For females" in the last 12 months, have you had sex, even once with a male who has had sex with another male since 1977."

These practices, according to the CSFCR, are discriminatory toward the gay community and effect the amount of blood the Red Cross can collect.

"Getting the blood in the first place is the most important issue," Jackie Crosby, a sophomore theatre major, said. "They are shutting out a whole pool of people. They are defeating their purpose."

The Red Cross responded to these concerns through a press release which stated that they, "have heard these concerns and initiated the appropriate process for addressing them."

"We have requested a review by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB)," said Melissa Croteau in her October press release. "[The AABB] is responsible for setting the standards for blood collection."

Protesters said that they hope that the pressure they put on the Red Cross will lead to the combined efforts of the two in changing the policy of the AABB.

Student awareness in resolving the issue is important to the CSFCR. Supporters educated students about the issues at hand by distributing flyers which highlighted the issues and asked students to boycott the Red Cross.

Red Cross volunteers, however, saw no drop in donations due to the protest, but feel that continued efforts could potentially harm blood donations.

Students voiced concerns over these conflicting issues. "As long as protesting merely puts pressure on the AABB to change policies and does not affect donations, I think it is a good idea." Jennifer Guerin, a sophomore journalism major, said.

Other students voiced concern over the patients in need of blood. "I don't agree with these discriminatory practices, but if blood supplies are low, the real victims are those who are dying waiting for it." junior sociology/psychology major Val Tenore said.

Although the protest did not resolve the issue, the protesters expressed a sense of accomplishment in regard to the day's events.

"Today's efforts were meant to educate the student population by sharing with them the information concerning the practices the Red Cross take part in," said Jesse Burchfield, the founder of the Concerned Students for Civil Rights. "If we are going to act, we first must educate."

Lorraine Monroe to speak at M.H.C.

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Lorraine Monroe, one of the nation's leaders in inner city youth education, will speak at 7:30 p.m. tonight at Mount Holyoke College.

Monroe, the former principal of the Frederick Douglass Academy in Harlem, N.Y., has received national recognition for transforming that school, which was riddled with violence and poor academic standards, into a model of excellence.

In her lecture, entitled "Nothing's Impossible: Leadership Lessons from the Field," Monroe will address the challenges of educating inner city youth and present some of her solutions for helping at–risk students to achieve academic excellence.

Monroe is currently the executive director of the School Leadership Academy at the Center for Educational Innovation in New York City and has written a book, also entitled Nothing's Impossible: Leadership Lessons from the Field, which will be published by Random House this fall.

Monroe was principal of the Frederick Douglass Academy from 1991–96. Prior to that, she taught at the Bank Street College Principals' Institute in New York City and at the Harvard School of Education.

Mt. Holyoke President Joanne Creighton said that Monroe was chosen to be recognized by the school for her contributions to public education.

"Through her leadership, her clarity of vision, and her willingness to compel positive change in our public educational system, Dr. Monroe represents the spirit that the Mary Lyon Lecture Series honors," Creighton said.

The lecture will be held at Gamble Auditorium in the Mt. Holyoke Art Museum and is free and open to the public.

Monroe's lecture is part of the Mary Lyon Lecture Series, which celebrates leaders in any field who have had a significant impact on society. The series is in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mary Lyon, Mt. Holyoke's founder.

COURTESY MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE

Lorraine Monroe will speak at Mount Holyoke College tonight

UM scuba group explores river's secrets

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Correspondent

A University of Massachusetts scuba–diving team of faculty and students has discovered a deep "abyss," and a new species of bloodworm while exploring the underwater world of the Connecticut River.

The abyss is located just above Turners Falls, near the French King Bridge, and has been estimated to be about 120 feet deep, although the dive team has explored about 105 feet down the hole.

"It's been a lot of fun," said Edward J. Klekowski, professor of biology, who has been leading the exploration of the river.

Klekowski attributes the discovery of the "deep abyss" to luck. "These deep water habitats have never been looked at," Klekowski said.

According to Klekowski, the Pleasant Valley used to be covered by an ice–age lake, called Lake Hitchcock, 12,000–15,000 years ago, that stretched "from Rocky Hill, Conn. almost to Northern–mid Vermont."

"No one knows exactly what this was caused by," Sean Werle, a graduate student in Entomology, and a part of the dive team, said. However, Werle believes that the abyss may have been formed by some sort of rift, or may have been on an ice–age fault line.

"It's pitch black," he said about the depths of the abyss. Werle also mentioned that there were whole trees trapped in the abyss.

In addition to the abyss, the team discovered a new species of bloodworm, a fly larva, at a different site.

Turn to ABYSS, page 2

SWAG to raise funds, awareness

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Staff

In an effort to raise awareness for National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the Southwest Residential Area is holding a fundraiser from 10 a.m.–3 p.m. on Friday in front of Berkshire and Hampshire Dining Commons.

Tables manned by Southwest Resident Assistants (RA), will be set up in front of both dining commons for those who wish to make donations.

Students are urged to donate, even if it's just a small amount of money, said Amanda Holmes, project coordinator.

Donators will receive a pink ribbon signifying breast cancer awareness, handouts on the deadly disease and five or six compact discs will be raffled off to participants.

Donations can also be made in memory of someone who has died of the disease and a small memorial will be placed in Southwest for all to see.

Sponsored by the Southwest Area Government (SWAG) and Residence Life Management, the fundraiser is meant to raise breast cancer awareness on campus in an interesting and creative way.

"I recognize this is not something people want to sit in an auditorium for an hour and hear about it," Holmes said. "It's easier to collect small donations and it'll probably make a bigger difference in the long run."

Holmes has been planning the event since the middle of September by making bulletin board kits for all RAs, hanging signs and distributing pink ribbons.

The event, Holmes said, has been receiving a lot of publicity.

"One of the RAs wore a pink ribbon to a party and met someone who asked him about it," Holmes said. "He told the RA his mom died of breast cancer, so it affects everyone."

Although Holmes has been receiving mixed feedback about the event, she said most students are supportive and want to help in any way possible.

"People know it's an important cause and any small way they can get involved, they do," she said.

This Southwest fundraiser for breast cancer is the first of its kind, and Holmes said she hopes her goals can be accomplished.

"My goals in raising money are secondary," she said. "Awareness is just as important, if not more. Whether it's $5 or $500, awareness and involvement are my goals."

■ abyss

continued from page 1

The team was exploring clay sediment in the river, when it noticed that some of the layers had holes in them. Team members took samples and discovered an unknown species of bloodworm.

According to Klekowski, the blood worms spend the winters inside the clay sediment, and in the summer they turn into a previously unknown species of fly which lives for approximately 24 hours.

According to Klekowski, the discovery of this new species may have added another layer to the food chain in the river.

As the discoverers of this new species, the team is responsible for describing the species. For this task it enlisted the help of junior biology and microbiology major James Shu.

Shu has the task of mapping the four chromosomes of the bloodworm and identifying any mutations.

"Since it's a new species, everything is new. We're just laying the groundwork for it," Shu said.

Andrew Wier, a microbiology graduate student working on the team, praised Shu's work, calling him a "chromosome expert."

Wier also explained the findings at a third site, railroad wreckage.

"In the flood of 1936, a lot of covered bridges and railroad bridges were washed in," he said. Werle continued describing the wreckage as, "a huge steel railroad bridge dumped in the river."

The work of this team is changing the way people look at the Connecticut River.

The team, along with graduate student Monica O'Guinn, has been diving two to three times per week, according to Klekowski.

"We have camera gear, underwater videography," Klekowski said of the equipment he is using.

Currently the team is working on a video of the sites in the Connecticut River, to lure tourists to the area. Klekowski said the video is meant to "promote diving in the area."

Klekowski said that the team relies on casual divers to alert them to sites which may require closer attention. "We use them as our eyes," Klekowski said.

"With science, there's always something right in your backyard that no one has looked at," Werle said about his experience. "Every dive we'll come up with something new."

Correction

In Tuesday's article entitled "Zionism and assassination redux," Ehud Barak was inproperly cited as the victim of an assassination attempt. The Collegian regrets the error.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Taking care of business!

Marc Giacoia, a senior accounting major, spoke to Brad Ayers from Lockheed Martin at the SOM Career Day in the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday afternoon.

CLUB KAI
MONDAY NIGHT
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
$2.00 HALF TIME BUFFET
50" TELEVISION
WEDNESDAY NIGHT
Ladies Night
no cover for the ladies
DJ Cool Reg
THURSDAY NIGHT
Live Band
Labb
FRIDAY NIGHT
Hip Hop & Heineken
Special Guest DJ's
SATURDAY NIGHT
COLLEGE HOUSE PARTY
with DJ PHIL
DRINK SPECIALS
M.G.D. BOTTLES $1.50
MILLER LITE PITCHERS $5.00
FOOD SPECIALS
PROPER ATTIRE & POSITIVE I.D. REQUIRED
• 21+
• 586-8776

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $287
PARIS $209 $390
ROME $266 $497
MADRID $218 $407
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

How Would You Score?
MCAT
Take a Free Test Drive and find out!
Take a 3-hour MCAT, proctored like the real test.
Receive individual feedback. Get strategies that will help you ace the real exam.
SATURDAY, 10/18 10AM
Call today to reserve your seat!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com
MCAT is a registered trademark of the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Daily Collegian - more than just random lines... more than just random words

Going Home?
Cheap tickets. Great advice. Nice people.
Los Angeles $355
Orlando $156
Chicago $217
London $393
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

Anyone interested in Broadcasting ie: News, Entertainment, Sports, Etc.
COME CHECK US OUT!
WMUA 91.1 F.M.
NEWS STAFF
105 Campus Center (next to collegian)
Ask For Elaine Milch or call 545-2876

YOU'LL FIND A HARVEST OF GREAT PRICES AT...
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Miller High Life. 24 PACK $10.49 + DEP. CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS. GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT
Bass Ale 12 PK. BOTTLE $10.99 + DEP.
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LT. $13.99 + DEP. CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
CATAMOUNT & RED HOOK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
ROLLING ROCK 18-12 OZ. CANS 2 PACK $8.99 + DEP.
½ KEGS $32.99 + DEP.
½ KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE, MICH., MICH. LT., AMBER ROCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG $39.99 + DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
Santa Rita 120 CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $4.99
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS 4.0L $6.99
KENDALL JACKSON VINTNER'S CHARDONNAY 750ML $9.49
CORBETT CANYON CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5LT $6.99
WALNUT CREST MERLOT, CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, SAUVIGNON BLANC 1.5LT $6.99
POLAND SPRINGS VODKA 1.75LT $8.99
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 750ML $9.49
Canadian Club 1.75LT $16.49
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN 1.75LT SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
TEN HIGH BOURBON 1.75LT SALE $11.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.49
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/16/97 THRU WEDS. 10/22/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

JEANS SALE.
• Corduroy jeans • Flair leg jeans
• Boot leg jeans • Denim jeans • Velvet jeans
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

■ smoking

continued from page 1

McGovern said.

The Amherst ban needs only to pass through a public hearing and the Town Select Board to be approved.

Minor changes made by the Health Board to the Amherst ban, and to tobacco control regulations in general, include exempting private clubs such as the Veterans of Foreign Wars, prohibiting the sale of rolling papers to minors and allowing for anonymous complaints to be filed.

According to Board member Dave Buchanan, the exemption of private clubs is "an acknowledgement of reality."

Anonymous complaints will result in follow-up investigations, and if infractions are found to occur, the bars will be ticketed.

If bars refuse to comply, and infractions continue to occur, the bars will be fined $100 a day until they follow the ban.

The Board also discussed the sale of tobacco to minors.

Members said that employers should be required to inform employees of tobacco sales policies, and that rolling papers should also not be sold to minors.

In cases where employees sell tobacco products to minors after being informed of the rules, the Board maintained that it would still be the business owner's responsibility.

"I have no question about what we should do [in regards to] tobacco and youth," Amherst Board member Sam Gladstone said, "I think the store owners should be fined."

The issue of whether minors should be allowed to sell cigarettes, or work in positions where they could sell cigarettes, was discussed, but no action was taken.

One person in attendance was concerned that some of the Board's requirements were micromanaging businesses, and questioned if requirements to keep the employer responsible for employees' actions and knowledge of the laws was not over-regulation.

The Board opted to keep the regulations in their tobacco control regulations.

By Eduardo Gallardo
Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile — Thousands of people in northern Chile sought temporary shelter yesterday, afraid to return to their homes after a 6.8-magnitude earthquake killed eight people and injured about 100.

The quake on Tuesday night destroyed or damaged about 1,000 houses, most of them made of adobe. But even residents whose homes were spared were unwilling to return to them with aftershocks still rippling through the region.

Worst hit was Punitaqui, a town 250 miles north of Santiago, where Jaime Munoz, his wife Eliana and their three boys, ages 2, 16 and 17, died when the walls of their adobe home collapsed. A neighbor, Jaime Ayala, told Radio Cooperativa of Santiago that he reached that family's home in the dark shortly after the quake. "But it was too late," he said. "All I found was the bodies, including the lady holding the baby in her arms."

Many other houses in Punitaqui, almost all of which are made of clay and straw, were so badly damaged they will have to be demolished.

The quake, which struck about 10 p.m., was felt along a 750-mile north-south stretch of Chile's narrow territory, including this capital city of 5 million people. In addition to the family that was killed, one woman died in Ovalle, another died in Coquimbo and a man died in Punitaqui.

Reports said the quake also was felt in a large area in Argentina, across the Andes mountains from Chile, but no casualties or damage were reported.

The quake was centered near Illapel, 190 miles north of Santiago, and had its epicenter 20 miles underground, the Seismological Office of the University of Chile said.

Yesterday, several aftershocks rocked the area, which is still recovering from three years of drought followed by heavy rains that caused severe flooding in July and August. President Eduardo Frei toured the region and said the government would widen the state of emergency declared for those disasters to allow additional aid.

Construction materials, blankets, food and medicine for the newly homeless were already on the way.

"We got a triple one here," Frei said. "First was the drought, then the storms and now the quake. Let's hope that would be it."

Figures on the number of people left homeless were not available due to poor communications. But schools were closed in several towns so classrooms could be used as shelters.

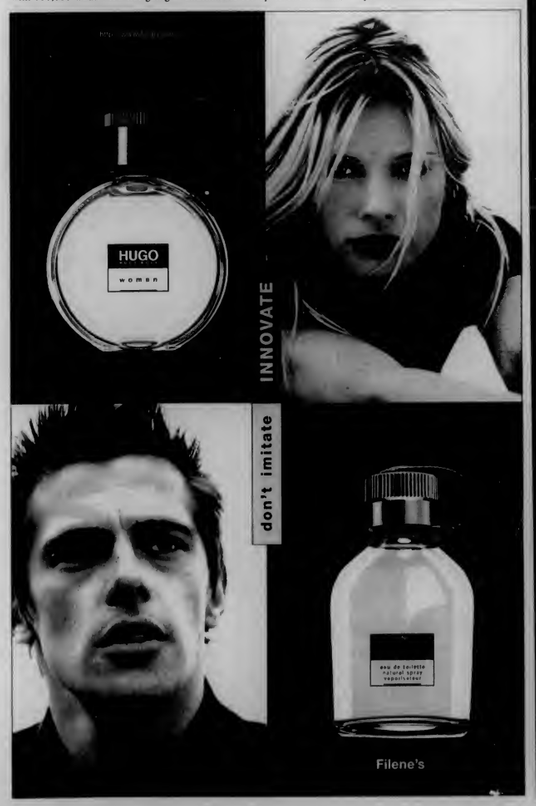
By John Howard
Associated Press

LAKE DAVIS, Calif. — After arresting protesters chained to a buoy, state agents dumped fish poison into a lake on yesterday, hoping to kill rapacious northern pike before they migrate downstream and devour the state's trout and salmon.

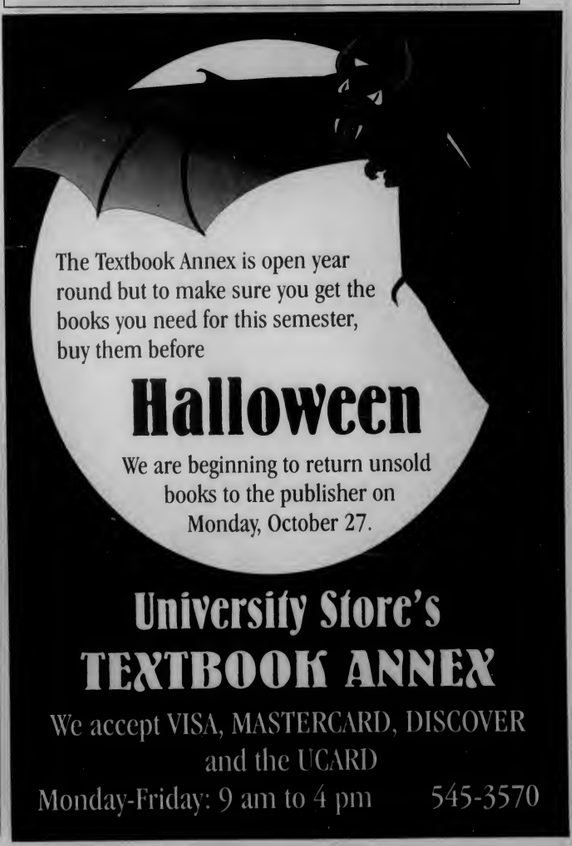
Seven people were arrested as agents in nearly two dozen state Fish and Game Department boats took to the water to pour 16,000 gallons of liquid and 60,000 pounds of powder into Lake Davis. State officials said the operation, which they hoped to finish by today, would kill all the fish in the 7-mile long lake within 48 hours. The poison will take four to eight weeks to dissipate; then officials will begin restocking the water with 750,000 trout. "It's not going to work. It (the poison) is going to get into the food chain, and the pike will be back," said protester Bill Miller, spokesman for a group called Hands Around the Lake. State wildlife officials said poisoning the lake was safe and the only certain way to kill thousands of northern pike, a nonnative variety that ultimately could migrate downstream and destroy the state's salmon and trout populations.

But virtually all of Plumas County's 20,000 residents opposed the plan, claiming that the poison could eventually go into the groundwater beneath the lake, contaminating scores of wells. The lake, about 175 miles northeast of San Francisco, is a source of drinking water for more than 4,000 people.

The poisoning will make the water undrinkable for up to two months, state biologists said. Until then, the city of Portola will rely on backup wells and other sources for drinking water. The poison includes cancer-causing trichloroethylene, or TCE. The amount of TCE, about 10 gallons in all, is diluted to about 0.5 parts per billion - about a tenth of the amount legally allowed in a municipal water supply, state biologist Patrick Foy said. Four people wearing wet suits and floating on inner tubes chained themselves to a buoy for nearly two hours. They were picked up by state agents, brought to shore and booked on charges of illegally entering the lake. Three were brought to the hospital for possible hypothermia.



Three other protesters were arrested for moving markers on the shore that the boats used for the poisoning operation, authorities said.



LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Evidence of Fall

Fallen leaves and grey skies were the predominant scene yesterday on campus.

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before
Halloween
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 27.
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
We accept VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER and the UCARD
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm 545-3570

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Alcohol ban a quick–fix; not a long–term solution

The Massachusetts Board of Higher Education's proposal to ban alcohol on campuses across the state is clearly a reaction to the death of UMass student Adam Prentice and the nationally publicized deaths of students at M.I.T. and Louisiana State University. While these deaths have turned the state's attention to alcohol abuse on campus, it was pre– existing problem.

Although a response to these deaths is both necessary and appropriate, a ban on alcohol does not adequately address this problem. Alcohol abuse on a campus such as our own has broad and complex social causes.

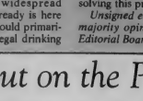
Attempts to legislate students' drinking behavior on campus will fail. A look at the campus police log suggests how widespread underage drinking already is here at UMass. This ban would primarily effect students of legal drinking age who have a right to drink in their residence halls.

A ban will solve nothing, while leaving the root of the problem unaddressed.

How will this policy curb underage drinking? How will this alter off campus drinking in the town of Amherst and surrounding communities? Most importantly, how will this policy foster individual responsibility?

We believe Chancellor Scott is correct in opposing a ban of alcohol on this campus. We strongly urge the Board of Trustees to oppose a ban as well.

Quick–fix policy changes may be politically advantageous but do nothing to address individual responsibility, which is the key to solving this problem.



Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian Editorial Board.

Jury is out on the Promise

"The first thing you do is sit down with your wife and say something like this: 'Honey, I made a terrible mistake. I've given you my role. I gave up leading this family.' I'm not suggesting you ask for your role back, I'm urging you to take it back. There can be no compromises here. If you are going to lead, you must lead. Be sensitive. Listen. Treat that lady gently and lovingly. But lead." — Tony Evans in "The Seven Promises of a Promise Keeper"

It is statements like this that have caused feminist organizations great concern over the rise of the Promise Keepers, the rapidly growing evangelical Christian men's group that recently met in Washington.

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

Groups like the National Organization for Women have provided a valuable service by voicing some skepticism about an organization that has received largely favorable attention by the mainstream press.

Because it IS important to know that although Promise Keepers claims to be a nonpolitical organization, they have received financial backing from the likes of Jerry Falwell, Pat Robertson of the Christian Coalition, and James Dobson of Focus on the Family.

And it is important to know that their leader, Bill McCartney, has said things like this: "We're raising our children in an effeminate society. It's not a proper climate."

However, I do not share NOW's alarm over the Promise Keepers. Because as much as I think the organization should be viewed with a wary eye, I don't think we should condemn them just yet.

The Promise Keepers have toned down the master-of-the-household rhetoric of late, though whether it was out of political savvy or a genuine revision of their philosophy is still unclear. At any rate, the stated message of the Promise Keepers has been that men have lost their way and that they must work hard to be better husbands and fathers. Being a man, say the group's leaders, is not about making a lot of money or logging in massive hours at work. It is about being attentive to your family.

This is unarguably a good thing — and probably the reason that many women have urged their husbands to attend Promise Keepers rallies. I also think that it's heartening to see men taking some responsibility for some of society's ills — rather than pointing the finger somewhere else.

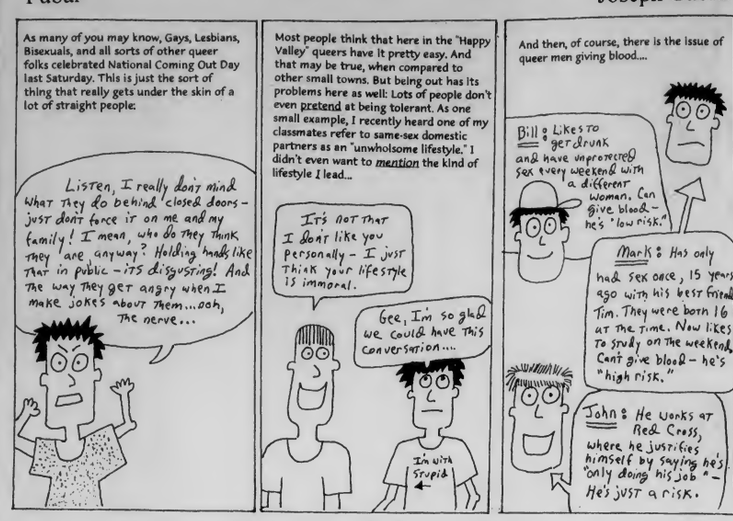
And I'm glad to see men trying to redefine the idea of masculinity. Women's lives have undergone tremendous change during the past 30 years, and this has necessarily had a strong impact on men. So I think an attempt by men to deal with this can be a positive thing.

And anyway, if the Promise Keepers' mission is to turn back the clock, they will fail. Women aren't going back to a submissive role, no matter how much some men wish we would.

The Promise Keepers may well be a wolf in sheep's clothing — the signs are definitely there. Nevertheless, they have a right to gather peacefully and thrash out their issues. And if their conclusion is that they want to be faithful to their wives and attentive to their children, then I don't think many American women really have a problem with that.

Footnote: Are you a Promise Keeper? Let me know your views on this issue. Is it your contention that men should be the head of the household? Or are just you just trying to be a better husband and father? Write to me at Newspaper Enterprise Association, 200 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10016; or send e-mail to saraeum@aol.com.

Sara Eckel is a nationally syndicated columnist.



Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Fubar

Joseph Gabiel

Yummy Mommies

So Slump (Housemate A) and I were at the deli counter at Stop and Shop when Slump turns to me and says, "Check out the yummy mommy."

Yeah, we're classy.

Anyway, I turn my head, look across the miles of onion rolls, deli tags and Syrian bread and see, just like Slump said, (Slump only lies to chicks, not me) a "yummy mommy." Now, I'm not saying she would have won the Miss America pageant, but that isn't the point. Moms have a whole different "hotness" criteria, and have to be regarded as such.

Luke Meredith

You don't want to know what that criteria is.

But the hottest moms in the world are, sadly enough, on TV. So while I sit here lamenting on the status of hot moms and Stop and Shop's, I though I'd should share some my thoughts on some personal TV mom faves.

Mrs. Arnold — "The Wonder Years"

Remember when Paul Pfeiffer got a crush on Mrs. Arnold? I knew what he was seeing. Mrs. Arnold never grabbed the spotlight like some others, but every once in awhile she would do something that made you think, "Damn, she must have been smoking in her day." I give Jack Arnold props. He landed himself a honey.

Maggie Seaver — "Growing Pains"

Rock star and hormone freak Rod Stewart once sang, "Oh wake up, Maggie, I think I got something to say to you."

Was it about Maggie Seaver? Debatable. But what isn't under debate is the overall smokability of Mrs. Seaver. She survived the "hairspray" era with class, and still managed to get some longing looks from Eddie, Mike Seaver's shady friend. And if Eddie thinks you're hot, you are.

(P.S. You should hear my theory of how you can break down the entire world into two categories: people who like Zach Morris and people who like Mike Seaver. There is no in–between. Just ask Slump.)

Elise Keaton— "Family Ties"

Not an obvious choice, but I'm putting my foot down. Elise was once a hippie who turned out to be an architect, and through it all, she never lost that "boom–boom appeal". But let's not lie to ourselves here. Anyone who has ever watched Family Ties has at one point thought, "Hey, how the hell did Mr. Keaton ever bag a chick like that?"

And then felt bad about calling Mrs. Keaton a chick.

Anne Romano — "One Day at a Time"

"One Day at a Time" was the epitome of the 1970's "Hey, everyone's liberated, yeah!" show. Mrs. Romano was a spitfire, a sparkplug, full of piss and vinegar. A divorcee with swagger, a sweet smile and a biting temper. One of the hottest moms to ever come out of Indianapolis, and Schnieder's secret fantasy for most of the late '70s and early '80s. Oh, Mrs.Romano. Could any man could tame you?

Peggy Bundy— "Married with Children"

Come clean with me. Deep down inside, you were attracted to Peg. I know she ate Bon–bons all day, I know she always stole Al's money and I know she never had a job. But hey, she gave birth to Kelly. Isn't that enough?

Kate Stratton — "Silver Spoons"

Just a stepmom, but further proof to the adage that "rich guys get the chicks."

But what I want to know is, do you ever think Mr. and Mrs. Stratton "knocked boots" on that little choo–choo train? Mr. Stratton did always wear that little engineer hat. (You know what I'm saying?)

P.S. Angela Bower, (or is it Bauer?) of "Who's the Boss" fame does not and will not make the cut. I mean, come on. We all have standards.

But then, neither does Mrs. Jetson, Mrs. Flinstone or Mrs. Simpson, because no cartoon could ever generate the fire of one glance from Anne Romano. (Oh, that little sparkplug).

I think Schneider knows exactly what I'm talking about.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Plan needed to stop binge drinking

To the Editor:

Chancellor Scott and President Bulger's decision to ban the consumption of alcohol during football tailgating is an inappropriate response to the death of Adam Prentice.

The University's decision will have more of a symbolic effect, while doing little to combat the widespread problem of binge-drinking on campus. The lack of responsibility by the administration, as well as students, in dealing with this problem effectively is a serious problem which needs to be addressed with more than a reactionary response.

A comprehensive plan needs to be enacted quickly which will not only educate the students to the dangers of binge drinking, but will prevent the opportunity to do so.

Evan T. Whitney
Cambridge

CRC responds to "detestable drivel"

To the editor:

Mark McGrath has done it again. I thought he had simply given up his middle-school-grade insulting of the Cannabis Reform Coalition, but his "Notes from the Campus Center Basement" (Oct. 14) proves me wrong. McGrath has developed a reputation for baseless CRC criticism in the last three years that usually dwells on outrageous stereotypes and complete untruths.

In Tuesday's editorial, McGrath even admits to "having taken a number of cheap shots at the Cannabis Reform Coalition," and then — in utter seriousness — proceeds to knowingly distort the truth yet again.

McGrath knows that the CRC advocates strongly against the "violation of shared [public] space with smoke" any kind, and that the "individual rights" the CRC educates the campus community about are the rights of an individual to privacy in her/his own home, unless a warrant is issued, etc.

I'm an RA in the dorms and have gladly written up students found polluting communal space with smoke and will continue to do so. McGrath has seemed perfectly aware of these facts in my many personal meetings with him, so I find this latest set of fabrications a bit more disturbing than his others.

McGrath, have you no shame that your detestable drivel continues to blight the pages of the Collegian? Maybe you should cultivate something other than the art of spewing lies onto the printed page.

John Lanzerotta
Cannabis Reform Coalition
Treasurer
Orchard Hill

Security important for state of Israel

To the Editor:

I write this letter in response to the article printed in Tuesday's Collegian titled "Zionism and assassination redux" by Hussein Ibish.

Beginning in 1948, when Israel declared statehood, it was met with hostility from every nation in the Middle East. Has Mr. Ibish forgotten the Six Day War, in which the Arab forces vowed to "drive the Jews into the sea?"

Let us discuss the PLO — this organization is not the peace–seeking group it attempts to play itself off as; from the very beginning it was a terrorist organization.

Now how about Hamas or Islamic Jihad? Are these not terrorist organizations? How many suicide bombings have they carried out upon non-military citizens?

Yasir Arafat is a man who has publicly embraced the leader of Hamas, yet pledged to battle this man's terrorist activity. He continues to exhibit maps of Palestine covering the entire Israeli territory, and has passed laws to kill his own people were they to sell land to Jews. These are the actions of a terrorist dictator in disguise, and Ibish has the nerve to accuse the Israeli government of corruption!

About Israel's stance in the world: with any Israeli issues brought to the table in UN conventions, the only countries that ever vote in favor of Israel are itself, the United States, and Micronesia. This is indicative of a world hostile to Israeli existence.

A few short years ago Israeli cities were bombarded with Iraqi missiles. There were also many wars with surrounding countries who are still hostile to Israel.

Israel now exists in a world which seeks to obliterate it with politics and a harsh double standard of security, rather than by force. Israel is a far cry from the murderous picture painted of it in Mr. Ibish's piece. His accusations are better suited for Israel's deceitful neighbors.

Kevin Rothman
Northeast

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

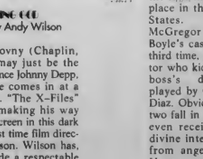
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

ULTIMATE The Fall Movie Preview Guide

DEVIL'S ADVOCATE
Directed by Taylor Hackford

The sappy director of An Officer and a Gentleman and Against All Odds takes a turn toward what should be a disturbing allegory of crime and corruption in the field of law. Keanu Reeves stars as a young hot-shot Florida defense attorney who is propositioned by a wealthy New York firm headed by Al Pacino, to join his team. Little does Reeves know that this newfound life of greed and riches is merely a temptation by the Devil. Pacino awaits Reeves at the gates of Hell, luring him closer and closer to a world of evil.



The premise of the Devil's Advocate seems as if it could either be a bit too cheesy for its own good or perhaps a decent look into the sleazy world of criminal law. Pacino can only help the film, even if the script is rather poor, as he did with City Hall. Reeves, on the downside, could only hurt the film, much like every movie he's been in, except of course Bill & Ted's in which he was nothing short of amazing. (Adam Levine)

PHOTO BRIAN HAHILL
Keanu Reeves and Al Pachino in "The Devil's Advocate."

PLAYING GOD
Directed by Andy Wilson

David Duchovny (Chaplin, Kalifornia) may just be the coolest man since Johnny Depp, or at least he comes in at a close second. "The X-Files" star is now making his way onto the big screen in this dark comedy by first time film director Andy Wilson. Wilson has, however, made a respectable name for himself in his native land of England, with the series "The Cracker Mysteries," and hopefully, has brought his British charm overseas for Playing God. Duchovny is a doctor who lost his medical license as a result of performing an operation while high on amphetamines. He is offered a second chance, but this time by a criminal played by Timothy Hutton, a previous Oscar winner who is now hoping for a career comeback. Hutton hires Duchovny as his personal doctor in order to take care of people who need medical attention but would risk arrest by going to a hospital.

This film has all the right elements for a slick action movie which refuses to take itself too seriously by having a humorous dark side. A talented cast and director should allow Playing God to reach a cult status. Having "Fox Mulder" in the lead can't hurt, either. The only hindrance this film could have is a lousy script, but we'll hope that isn't the case. (A.L.)

PHOTO RICHARD CARTWRIGHT
David Duchovny in cutting-edge thriller "Playing God."

A LIFE LESS ORDINARY
Directed by Danny Boyle

The same team responsible for Shallow Grave and Trainspotting is back with a new comedy of sorts, which for the first time for them takes place in the United States. Ewan McGregor heads Boyle's cast for the third time, as a janitor who kidnaps his boss's daughter, played by Cameron Diaz. Obviously, the two fall in love, and even receive some divine intervention from angels Holly Hunter and Delroy Lindo. In the tradition of Boyle's films, A Life Less Ordinary should feature very likeable quirky characters, unusually stunning cinematography, brilliant dialogue — thanks to Boyle's long term screenwriter Andrew Hodge — but most importantly a hot alternative soundtrack. A Life Less Ordinary may be the coolest date movie we have seen in, like forever — maybe. McGregor, who recently finished production shooting with George Lucas for the Star Wars prequels, has continuously proven to be a worthy 20-something icon. Diaz may, for the first time, have an adequate opportunity to prove how talented she is and the tight direction of Boyle couldn't possibly hurt. A Life Less Ordinary may just be a refreshing new film from a group of provocative filmmakers who really haven't let us down before. Besides, many directors have had their breakthroughs with their third releases, like Lucas with Star Wars or the Joel Coen with Miller's Crossing. (A.L.)

PHOTO JAMES BRIDGES
Barry (Ryan Phillippe, Julie (Jennifer Love Hewitt) and Helen (Sarah Michelle Gellar) on the trail of their tormentor in the suspense thriller "I know what you did last summer."

I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER
Directed by Jim Gillespie

From the writer of Scream and upcoming Scream II comes this darker, more conventional thriller about a hit-and-run accident and the cover-up that follows. Four teenagers try to bury a secret instead of confessing, but their decision comes back to haunt them, literally. Following the Scream formula of casting young, good-looking TV stars, "Party of Five's" Jennifer Love Hewitt takes the Neve Campbell role with help from Buffy the Vampire Slayer's Sarah Michelle Gellar. The movie, based on a book from Lois Duncan, features an intriguing story that should be enhanced by a truly talented screenwriter, but an unproven cast and director. In fact, this is exactly the type of movie Scream made fun of. (Brian McAllister)

PHOTO DARREN MICHAELS
Uma Thurman stars as Irene, an employee obsessed with her sole imperfection in "Gattaca," in theatres soon.

ALIEN: RESURRECTION
Directed by Jean-Pierre Jeunet

Sigourney Weaver returns as a cloned Ripley in this fourth edition of the Alien series. Through the magic of DNA, Weaver is replicated to fight a new breed of alien. Fighting's not the only thing she does — Ripley's DNA somehow mixes with the alien's, and one scene reportedly features Weaver involved romantically with an alien. Hollywood never ceases to involve sex somehow, but who's complaining? Also starring alongside Weaver is series newcomer Winona Ryder in a mission to save humanity, Resurrection should prove to top the disappointing Alien 3 both critically and commercially. The main question lies in whether Resurrection will be fresh and original, but the dark, highly-visual styles of director Jeunet and Seven photographer Darius Khondji should make Weaver's return from the dead a pleasant experience. (B.M.)

TITANIC
Directed by James Cameron

Making movies involving water has always been a mess, and Titanic was no exception. A $200 million budget, a fight between two studios, and a release date five months unplanned all plagued Cameron's epic. Will Titanic be a Jaws or a Waterworld? The most likely answer is — some-

Turn to PREVIEW, page 9

INSIDE THIS WEEK:
FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS (P.6)
TRAX ON/OFF (P.6)
ROLLING STONES (P.7)
JAZZ/BLUES WEEKLY (P.8)
ART GALLERIES (P.9)
DORM ROOM GORMET (P.9)

After a disappointing fall, what does Hollywood have in store for winter?

Adam Levine

Anyone seen any good movies lately? If the answer is no, as I am assuming it is for most of us, please don't give up hope just yet. Hollywood is finally about to complete its dormant stage which continues between the end of summer and the middle of fall. Nested within this period are films which, to put it quite bluntly, just take up space. With the conclusion of the summer big box-office blockbusters, Hollywood waits patiently until the year draws closer to an end before Oscar worthy contenders are allowed to invade theaters.

This does not mean that there weren't any well-deserved surprises in early fall; films such as The Game and L.A. Confidential at least proved there was an aura of hope for movie-goers. While the majority of recent releases were merely mediocre to say the least, perhaps this weekend will welcome in the new dawn. The end of the fall slump provides the industry's opportunity for redemption, but like all things in the shaky, inconsistent world of entertainment, only time will truly tell.

This may be the season for science fiction, with a string of big budgeted futuristic thrillers and dramas en route to theaters. Ethen Hawke vies for a comeback in Gattaca, a distopic look at a society where social position is based on one's genetic structure. For those who embrace ultra- violence and slick special effects, then stay tuned for Alien Resurrection. Sigorney Weaver reprises her pervious role as Lt. Ellen Ripley, despite the fact she died in the last film, as a clone of her previous self. Also, you may not want to miss Paul Verhooven's (RoboCop, Showgirls) return to the sci-fi genre, now that his fascination with nudity has proven unsuccessful with critics and movie-goers alike. His latest, Starship Troopers, gets the record along with James Cameron's Titantic as having the largest price tags of the year. Finally, Kevin Costner will hope to redeem himself from Waterworld with a new sci-fi action flick which he also directed, it's called The Postman.

This season will also bring in the latest James Bond adventure, Tomorrow Never Dies, which once again stars Pierce Bronan as 007. Action freaks may enjoy The Jackal as well, which stars Bruce Willis and Richard Gere as assassins pitted against one another by the CIA. Costa- Graves (Music Box) returns after an eight-year hiatus to direct Dustin Hoffman and John Travolta in Mad City, a film which seems to closely resemble the premise of Sidney Lumet's Dog Day Afternoon, about a disgruntled museum employee who holds up his place of work with the hope of receiving media attention.

On the more independent side of life, the latest releases from Woody Allen and Joel Coen will most likely be the biggest draws in the art house circuit. Deconstructing Harry marks Woody Allen's 27th film and stars Mariel Hemingway, who previously worked with Woody on 1979's Manhattan. The Coen brothers will hopefully not fall into a post-Academy Award slump with The Big Lebowski, their follow up to last year's hugely successful Fargo. Their latest quirky comedy stars Jeff Bridges and long time Coen brothers comrade John Goodman in a new film that has something to do with kidnapping and bowling.

This is perhaps the most intriguing period of Hollywood's fiscal year. This is the time when careers of both actors and directors are saved as well as destroyed and most likely we will witness the victor of February's Academy Awards ceremony. Predictable attempts for the Oscar prize may fail miserably in their outcomes and underground surprises may create respectable future stars. Let us now take a brief look at what the cold, bitter winter has in store for us this year? Who will rise to become the new champions of Hollywood and who will fall back down to the bottom? Here are our previews for what's up for this coming season and our humble predictions on who has a chance for the crown and who doesn't have a shot in hell.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

Layout & Design by Josh Sylvester

Annual celebration of Festival of Lights to take place at Bowker this Saturday

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

Every year, the Asian Music and Dance Program at the University of Massachusetts presents a calendar of events celebrating the diversity and richness of Asian cultures.

Part of that calendar includes the annual — and popular — celebration of the Indian Festival of Lights.

This year, the Festival of Lights will be celebrated Saturday, Oct. 18, beginning at 2 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

For Hindus in India, the Festival of Lights represents the culmination of many religious and secular events celebrated in the fall. Among the festivals celebrated in India during this period are: Ganesha Cathurthi, Durga Puja, Dussehra, Dipavali and Navaratri.

Each of these holidays honor Hindu gods, including Saraswati, the goddess of knowledge, and Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth. Also honored this month are the goddess Dpurga and the elephant–headed god, Ganesha.

With spectacular costumes and choreography by Ranjana Devi, the Festival of Lights is celebrated here at the University of Massachusetts with a court of the heavenly beings.

The pageant is a colorful procession conducted in the form of a journey or a Yatra of the Divine Beings accompanied by their attendants. Each arrival is proceeded by the announcement of each God, Goddess and demon to the mortals below — reciting their virtures and also their weaknesses.

For Indians, festivals (ustavs) and fairs (melas) have occupied a central part of life for more than 3,000 years. Festivals typically celebrate the glory of the gods, while fairs bring people together at a ritual center or place of pilgrimage. Some of these locations often include a temple and a sacred.

Many events — like UMass' celebration — intertwine both the festival and fair.

If the celebration of the Festival of Lights in the past is any indication, Saturday's performance ought to be a dreamy and compelling production — evocative of the rich religious and cultural background of Hindu background.

For those interested, a special performance will be held tomorrow at noon for elders and public school children. Tickets for that production will be a fixed cost of $4 and should be reserved in advance at 577–2486 or 545–1980.

Bowker Auditorium is located in Stockbridge Hall at the University of Massachusetts. Tickets are $10, with $5 tickets available for students, children and seniors. Please call the Fine Arts Center Box Office for tickets or information about this performance at 545–2511 or (800) 999–UMass. Parking is available at the Campus Center Garage.

COURTESY ASIAN & MUSIC DANCE PROGRAM

The annual performance of the Festival of Lights will take place this weekend at Bowker Auditorium.

COURTESY NEW WORLD THEATER

Generations

New WORLD Theater presents Flipzoids — a play about the lives of three Filipino immigrants in the United States. Flipzoids will run at Hampden Theater at UMass Oct. 16–18 at 8 p.m., with a matiness at 2 p.m. on Oct. 18. Tickets are $10 for general public and $5 for students.

Various releases from various artists

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Live From 6A: Great Musical Performances from Late Night with Conan O'Brien
Mercury

Perhaps a more interesting concept in theory, the 12 performances on Live From 6A nonetheless offer a couple of treats amidst a plentiful helping of mediocrity that will make it of interest to diehards more than curiosity seekers.

The inherent problem with such a collection of performances — each from a different performer — is that there can be no real continuity and coherence; a problem only exacerbated in the live setting.

Taken by itself however, David Bowie's acoustic performance of "Dead Man Walking" makes Live From 6A worth buying and is essential for any Bowiephile. As he strums his 6–string in rhythmic concurrence with Reeves Gabrels, it becomes clear that underneath all the glitz and studio trickery of the original (off this year's Earthling) is a memorable and reflective song, wrought with melancholy and elegance.

Trax On Trax Off

While much of the contributions on Live From 6A are little more than faithful live reproductions of studio versions, "Dead Man Walking," along with Bjork's "Human Behavior" and Edwyn Collins' "A Girl Like You" make Conan's first musical foray a success— albeit a mild one. B–
(Marty Keane)

LIONROCK
An Instinct For Detection
Time Bomb/BMG

While their moniker might suggest a musical style more akin to Korn or 311, Lionrock are quite the opposite; indeed, they do not even play guitars. Instead of the in–your–face attack favored by the above named, Lionrock's music creeps up

Turn to TRAX, page 8

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
Unique Best! 1997
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1987
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924 FAX: 253-1173
103 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Delivery Express: 549-0077

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692
THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
$hop Scott's & $ave Lot$!

Red Dog & Ice House	30 packs	$12.49 + dep.
Corona	12 packs	$8.99 + dep.
Michelob & Mich Light	18 packs	$9.99 + dep.
Bud, Bud Light & Ice	1/2 kegs	$39.99 + dep.

• Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials •

Kapali Coffee Liquer	$7.99/750ml
Southern Comfort	$16.49/1.75L
Skyy Vodka	$19.49/1.75L
Gallo White Zinfandel	$3.49/750ml
Boones Wines 3 for	$5.99

• Quantity discounts always available •
Unique
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We want to be your favorite Liquor store
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Rollers University Drive SCOTTS Victory Market Alumni Stadium

Looking for that dream job after graduation?
Why wait until then?
Come to a "Welcome to Field Experience" session to get a jump start on your future TODAY with internships and co-ops!
WHEN: Every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday
WHERE: Campus Center - Check Schedule for room number
WHY: Start getting real work experience right away!

Upcoming Events by the Campus Center Career Network

Data General Interviews	October 24	Computer Science, Engineering
Humanities & Fine Arts Workshop	October 29	Internships & Co-ops for H&FA
School of Management Presentation	November 4	Presentation by: Arthur Anderson, General Electric (Summer), IBM Putnam Investments, Filene's (Corporate - Summer)
IBM Interviews	November 5	Accounting, Finance and Economics

Resume Disk Registration for Seniors (until the end of October)
Mondays 3:45pm / Tuesdays 9am / Thursdays 1pm / Fridays 10:15pm
Campus Career Network University of Massachusetts, Amherst

What's new in comics

Four Color Commentary by Jeff Carter

Rejoice Vertigo readers, Neil Gaiman has returned. However, before you go into the closet and dust off the black clothing and Ankh necklaces, it's not The Sandman he's returning to. Nope, this project is called Stardust, and it's not even a comic book in a true sense. Stardust is a prose story with accompanying illustrations by artist Charles Vess, who worked with Gaiman on several issues of the critically acclaimed Sandman series.

Stardust follows the story of Dunstan Thorn, an 18–year old living in the small town of Wall, which borders on the mystical land of Faerie. Every nine years, the Faeries set up a large fair to sell their goods in an enchanted meadow bordering the town. At the fair, Thorn meets and becomes enchanted by a beautiful Faeire slave–girl. Later, the story shifts it's focus to Tristran Thorn, the product of Dunstan and the Faerie's love affair.

Okay folks, if you like quaint English villages, magic, lavish countrysides, top–hat wearing sorcerers, romance, magic and Faeries, then rush out and plop down your $5.95 immediately. You won't regret it. Gaiman's compelling descriptions of this stuff are masterful, and the illustrations by the talented Vess are whimsical and charming. This is exactly the kind of book I would show someone who thinks that all comic books are full of gaudy superheroes, bloody–clawed mutants, and balloon–breasted females. Aside from a few awkward sections — the "high grey rock wall" guarded by townsfolk to prevent people from entering Faeire is shown by Vess to be only four feet high — Stardust is an engrossing, fanciful change of pace from the normal comic book fodder. Women will love it and so should any guy with an imagination and an appreciation for excellent writing (just don't get carried away with this stuff and start dressing up and going to Renaissance fairs okay?).

This week's picks:

Astro City #10 (Homage, $2.50) If there are any doubts as to who is the best superhero writer in comics, Kurt Busiek lays them to rest every month in this outstanding series. In this issue, an aging but brilliant supervillain called the Junkman pulls off the perfect crime by robbing a high security bank, leaving no trace of his identity. However, the Junkman soon becomes haunted by the fact that he never got credit for robbing the bank and outsmarting Astro City's superheroes. Frustrated, the Junkman returns to the scene of his crime, but gets apprehended on purpose by Jack–In–The– Box (an Astro City hero), and gains peace of mind when everyone hears of his criminal genius at the trial. This is brilliant stuff folks. The concepts and stories in this book are standard superhero fare, but it's the way they're told that makes them so special. Astro City is a world inhabited by brighi superheroes, but their stories are told through common citizens, newspaper reporters, street buns, villains and sidekicks, thus giving readers the unique perspective of seeing what it would be like to live in a world inhabited by super–powered beings. By letting the reader see events unfold through the Junkman's eyes in this issue, we understand his inner demons, his reasoning for making the decisions he does. It's a fascinating spin on an average story that could be plugged into any issue of Spider–Man, but in Astro City, it's brought to soaring heights. A

Sin City: Family Values (Dark Horse, $10) Okay, I know what you're thinking right here, "Ten bucks? Hell, I could see a movie for that price, tough guy." Yeah, it's not cheap, but after being thrilled, shocked, scared, overwhelmed, and downright entertained by this 125–page epic, I would've paid five times that. I guarantee you no waste of celluloid at the local cineplex can compare with this Frank Miller masterpiece. Miller once again proves why it's very, very, bad for anyone to mess with the girls of "old town," a section of Sin City controlled by a lethal gang of prostitutes. Especially Miho, a nasty four–foot Asian death machine, whose brutal and creative killings of Mafia hit men will have you cringing in disbelief and laughing your butt off at the same time. Just like in all the other Sin City stories, Family Values delivers a suspenseful, violent crime saga that builds and builds to a sudden and unexpected conclusion. Frank Miller is still the most brilliant mind in the comics industry, and he does more with white sheets of paper and gallons of black ink than a $5,000 Macintosh equipped with the latest coloring software. Buy it. Buy it now. A+

Jeff Carter is a UMass student. Comments are welcomed at Scribe1974@aol.com.

Stones continue to defy time on Bridges

COURTESY VIRGIN RECORDS

The Rolling Stones build a bridge from the past to the present on their new release.

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

THE ROLLING STONES
Bridges To Babylon
Virgin

Since there is no need to review the illustrious accomplishments of the first band to truly epitomize the essence of the term "rock 'n roll," let us strictly consider the matter at hand.

Do the Rolling Stones break any new ground on Bridges To Babylon (Virgin)? C'mon, let's get serious. It's miraculous enough that Keith Richards can still stand up straight for crissakes. Even still, the Stones' 23rd studio album (38th overall) does provide a pleasant listening experience.

More importantly, Bridges To Babylon once again proves that Charlie Watts still keeps perfect time, Keith Richards and Ronnie Wood recycle (sleazy guitar riffs) better than any treehugger and Mick Jagger still says "baby" cooler than anyone. They also might just be the shrewdest guys in rock.

Jagger is no idiot and realizes the Stones' most creative period is behind them and the days of of writing revolutionary anthems like "Satisfaction" have long since past. But when you invented the whell that is rock 'n roll, such nuances can be excused. Besides, another album means another grandiose rock extravaganza

The Stones can tread water in their sleep and have never crossed the line into becoming a self–parody — an unfortunate fate that befell David Bowie in the mid–80s. Even though they haven't released a truly great record since Tattoo You in 1980, the Stones remain a vital part of the rock scene they helped to define some three decades ago.

Babylon songs like the Motown–ish "How Can I Stop" and the reggae–infused "You Don't

Turn to STONES, page 8

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

LIQUOR SPECIALS

Myer's Dark Rum	$11.99/750 ml
Jagermeister	$14.99/750 ml
J&B Select	$19.99/1.75 Lt
S.S. Pierce Vodka	$9.99/1.75 Lt
Southern Comfort	$8.99/750 ml

MICRO BREWS

Magic Hat (Ale, #9, Blind Faith)	$5.99/six
Flying Dog Ales (Old Scratch, Road Dog, Dogtoberfest, Dog Days)	$4.99/six
Pete's Wicked Oktoberfest	$4.99/six
Old Saddleback (Half Stock Ale, 17 &)	$4.99/six
1/2 Keg Special: Magic Hat	$95.00

BEER SPECIALS

Coors X-tra Gold (12-pack cans)	$10.99
Rolling Rock (18-Pack cans)	$8.99
J.W.Dundee Honey Brown (12-pack bottles)	$6.99
Warsteiner (12-Pack bottles)	$8.99
Michelob Reg & Light (12-Pack bottles)	$6.99

Micro Kegs In Stock | DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5384 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east | Full Redemption Center

RESTAURANT GUIDE
Coming Oct. 17, 1997
Contest !
Readers can enter to win a FREE dinner for two. Sponsored by:
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone: (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-3699

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
FIERY FLAMENCO
Maria Benitez Teatro Flamenco in Estampa Flamenco
The fluid passion of flamenco, presented by one of the globe's most renowned artists and her eight-member company of dancers and musicians. Seats are selling quickly—reserve yours now!
"The queen of Flamenco." –VOGUE
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26, 7PM
BOWKER AUDITORIUM

CONDUCTORS NEED NOT APPLY
The Orpheus Chamber Orchestra
One of the most ususual and highly acclaimed chamber orchestras, Orpheus works collaboratively without a conductor and has been called "the greatest chamber orchestra the world has ever heard." (Town & Country) Mezzo-soprano Milagro Vargas joins them for a program which includes Mozart's Symphony No. 14 in A major and Copland's Poems of Emily Dickinson. "... an ensemble of the first rank." –THE LONDON TIMES
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF LUNT DESIGN CENTER & MARKETPLACE AND WGBY-TV 57

UNIDENTIFIED FLYING OBJECTS
The Flying Karamazov Brothers in Sharps, Flats and Accidentals
They're not Russian, they're not brothers, and they don't fly. But this legendary troupe of actors/jugglers/techno-wizards make hilarious music together in a show that features giant xylophones, a hip-hop ballet, and the music of J. S. Bach—juggled. Fresh from Broadway—a must-see for the whole family!
"... the Stooges gone Zen." –THE LOS ANGELES TIMES
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF HOLYOKE MALL AT INGLESIDE AND WRSI 95.3 FM

MOVING IMAGES
GARTH FAGAN DANCE
Powerful elegance, wit and a style so cool it's hot make Garth Fagan one of America's greatest choreographers and his company "one of the era's most thrilling and inventive troupes." (The Washington Post) The program includes excerpts from the groundbreaking Griot New York, created in collaboration with jazz master Wynton Marsalis and sculptor Martin Puryear.
"... a true original." –THE POST
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 8PM, CONCERT HALL

TICKETS ONLY $5 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/fac/fac.html
CONNECT WITH YOUR CENTER!
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY THURSDAY • 9-2am
18+ THE AREA'S BIGGEST HIGH ENERGY Dance Party 93
PROPER DRESS & ID REQUIRED
21+ EVERY FRIDAY • 9-2am
SELECTROCUTION
THE GAME OF HI-TECH ELIMINATION
TOP 40 DANCE HITS
FREE BEFORE 10PM
LIVE MUSIC
Thurs. Oct. 16 @ 7:00pm 18+ THE PILFERS THUMPER/BIG LICK/DIRECTEL
Fri. Oct. 17 @ 8:00pm 18+ LEFTOVER SALMON
Sat. Oct. 18 @ 8:30pm 18+ THE MACHINE PINK FLOYD SHOW
Wed. Oct. 22 @ 7:00 pm 18+ MACHINE HEAD TREE ONE KING DOWN/SNOT/CATCH 13
Thurs. Oct. 23 @ 7:00pm 18+ BIOHAZARD 25 TA LIFE/HATEBREED
Fri. Oct. 24 @ 8:00pm 18+ THE NIXONS SEVENDUST/CELLOPHANE
Sat. Oct. 25 @ 7:30 pm 18+ GOLDFINGER SAVE FERRIS/KARA'S FLOWERS
Sun. Oct. 26 @ 7:30 pm 18+ JIM ROSE CIRCUS SHOW PROTEIN
Thurs. Oct. 30 @ 7:00pm 18+ OVERKILL TYRANT TROOPER/SHADOWS FALL SHED/RESTRAINT
Fri. Oct. 31 @ 9:00pm 21+ 14th ANNUAL HALLOWEEN MASQUERADE COSTUME PARTY
Prizes for best costumes and other categories. $3000 in cash and prizes. Concert tix, dinner for two. Downstairs do the ghoulie groove with STASH 21+
UPCOMING
SAT. NOV. 1 BOOMFUL OF BLUES all ages
JUST ADDED!
WED NOV. 5 BEN FOLDS FIVE all ages
THUR. NOV. 6 STRATOSOO all ages
FRI. NOV. 7 ITCHY FISH 18+
SAT. NOV. 8 GARY BORDON TRIBUTE 18+
FRI. NOV. 14 SLIPKNOT 18+
SAT. NOV. 15 MISFITS/SICK OF IT ALL all ages
TUES. NOV. 18 A Tribute to MUDDY WATERS 21+
THUR. NOV. 20 LIMP 18+
SAT. NOV. 22 SKAVOOVIE & THE EPITHONES all ages
FRI. NOV. 28 STAIND 18+
SAT. NOV. 29 TEXAS FLOOD 21+
MON. DEC. 7 TESTAMENT all ages
SAT. DEC. 13 MAX CREEK 18+
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 545-0600 • 800-THE-TICK, Amherst Record Annex, For The Record in Amherst, Almost Music in Greenfield, The Delivered at 12 Noon, Plantagenet Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield, & 8 Sale Records in Northampton 586-9550
TO PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl-street
•••••413-584-7771•••••

Looking at the best of Cuban jazz

Hola. I'm here again this week with some fine releases of the greatest in Cuban jazz and mambo. California's master- of-compilations label Rhino Records has released new collections of some of Celia Cruz and Tito Puente's career best.

Cruz, the "Queen Of Salsa," has always been a singer with one of the most powerful, seductive voice styles in the world, and the music she surrounded herself with was always some of the greatest dance music that Cuba has ever known. Starting with her first big hit, "Ritmo, Tambo Y Flores," from 1951 and continuing through to her New York City period around 1964, The Best Of Celia Cruz covers what Cruz calls her "Golden Age," when everything was creative and imaginative and her voice was at its prime.

The offbeat phrasing of "Burundanga," the merciless groove of "Carmelo," and the classic Cuban piano riffing of "Sauvecito" are all on this collection and it is well worth checking out. It was Cruz' voice with its exotic keys and pitch changes that inspired Dizzy Gillespie's and others' forays into the Cuban–jazz world.

The Best Of Tito Puente: El Rey Del Timbal! covers Puente's career basically from 1949 to 1964, with a couple of more recent tracks from the 80s included. All over the album, the original "Mambo King" keeps a hip-shimmying crazy dance beat going throughout more than an hour of music. "Tito Timbero" is a showcase for Puente's timbale playing, which is forceful and commands the listener to put melody and harmony in the back of the mind and follow the rhythms of drumming. I swear "A Gozar Timbero" has a bass line that you can feel vibrating your chest.

Puente, like Cruz, has left an indelible mark on American jazz as well as his homeland of Cuba.

Last week, I mentioned albums by trumpeter Randy Brecker, of the well-known Brecker Bros. (with his brother saxophonist Michael), and pianist Hank Jones (who is a brother to the late trumpeter Thad Jones and drummer Elvin Jones). This week's family connection is As We Were Saying (Concord) by The Heath Brothers.

Albert "Tootie" Heath drums, Percy is a bassist, and Jimmy is a saxophonist. They all have resumes that put them in the height of jazz history: Percy, the oldest, was the bassist for the Modern Jazz Quartet, and also played on albums by Thelonious Monk, Miles Davis, and Charlie Parker; Jimmy, the middle child, was in Dizzy Gillespie's big band and later in the '60s began his own group; Albert was a very active drummer beginning in the late '50s for J.J. Johnson and Herbie Hancock. In the '70s, the three brothers regularly began recording together.

"Okay, then," you ask, "what have they done for us lately?" Check out As We Were Saying. Unlike many veteran jazzmen from the Golden age of Prestige and Blue Note record albums, who usually stick to the old be–bop styles lazily, the Heath Brothers take all the rhythms, the most imaginative phrases and the most out–there voicings they can think of and combine them on this new album.

The "For Seven's Sake" track boils with an odd relaxing virtuosity, "South Filthy" is just "out there" in its funky, yet disconjunct melody and harmonic structure, and then the band chills out with plain ol' blues on "Dave's Haze."

Turn to JAZZ, page 9

COURTESY THE HEATH BROTHERS

The Heath Brothers released As We Were Saying on the Concord label.

■ trax

continued from page 6

from behind and slowly enraptures the listener.

Vocals, though used sparingly, are quite effective throughout An Instinct For Detection. Utilized selectively rather than intuitively, the words — mostly spoken in a plaintive monotone — resonate deeper. While the majority of Lionrock's grooves are derived from the type of trance– inducing sonic hypnotism favored by Tricky and Portishead, their approach is varied enough, though altogether coherent.

"Death Valley Clapperboard" is essentially loosely formed techno, curiously wrapped around a loop of Nancy Sinatra's "These Boots Are Made For Walkin'."

While An Instinct For Detection doesn't provide immediate gratification, it is a work filled with layers upon layers of rich textures that can only be fully appreciated through repeated listens. Musical enjoyment for sure, just not the quick fix most prefer — and that's not a bad thing sometimes. A– (M.K.)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
Zabriskie Point — Original Motion Picture Soundtrack
Rhino

In 1966, Michaelangelo Antonioni (the great Italian director) released Blow–Up, which is regarded as one of the most innovative films of all time. Four years later, Antonioni wanted to capture the essence of American culture in the late '60s. He failed. Zabriskie Point is regarded as one of quickest flops in film history. Relying on cliches and youth revolution statements, it was long regarded as Antonioni's downfall.

However, Rhino has released the music from the film, with new material from Jerry Garcia and Pink Floyd. The "Love Scene Improvisation" versions by Garcia features the quiet virtuosity of this often misunderstood musician. The Floyd cuts are quite spacey, ambient and ahead of their time.

Also lending to the double disc soundtrack is the country– rock of "The Kaleidoscope" and "The Tennessee Waltz" in a 1950 Patti Page recording, and copious liner notes written by David Fricke explaining the movie and the music's placement within the failed work. B (Joshua Boyd)

PIG
Wrecked
Wax Trax!/TVT

After last year's one–off album (Sinsation) on Trent Reznor's Nothing label, Pig — a.k.a. Raymond Watts — has returned to Wax Trax! Records, home of like–minded industrial terrorists and noisemakers.

Having a sound that is curiously close to a KMFDM side project is to be expected, seeing as Watts has been a major contributor on several of their recent releases, as well as fronting them in a whacked out Bono–on–acid incarnation on 1994's Beat By Beat Tour. Still, this is a proper Pig album — a solo effort by Watts that is a little rougher on the edges than KMFDM.

For all its atmospheric/ambient moments and scathing, abrasive guitars, Wrecked only scratches the surface of Watts' potential as a composer and effectively pigeonholes him into a KMFDM accessory. A raging and inventive mix of "Find It F#*k It Forget It" helps rescue Wrecked, but one song does not an album make. C (M.K.)

VARIOUS ARTISTS
What's Up Matador?
Matador

For the last decade, Matador Records (co–founded by former UMass student Gerald Cosloy) has virtually defined the term "indie rock." Their roster reads like a who's who list: from the campy Japanese soul–revue of Pizzicato Five to the idiosyncratic two–minute gems of America's finest rock band Guided By Voices, Matador has never been afraid to introduce daring new sounds.

It's no surprise then that What's Up Matador?, a two–disc collection of old favorites and unreleased tracks (including Pavement's cover of the Echo & The Bunnymen standard "The Killing Moon") is such a gem. A (M.K.)

■ Stones

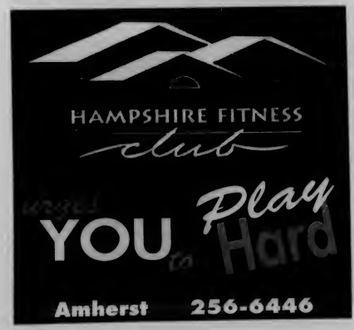
continued from page 7

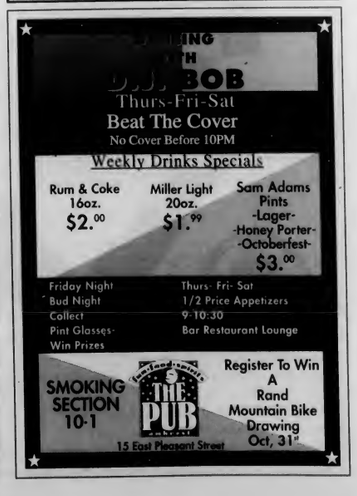
Have To Mean It" illustrate how they've done it; through deftly incorporating different styles without losing the vaunted Stones sound, deeply rooted in Chicago blues.

While adding little to the Stones indomitable legend, Bridges To Babylon does nothing to diminish it and is a more than competant run through the motions. Hey, they partied like hell, lived to tell about it (most of them at least), and can still rock like men half their age. How many groups that formed in the year JFK was assassinated can rightfully stake such a claim. I can count them on one hand. Father time? Who's that? B–

Collegian Arts & Living

Without it, you'd spend your weekend alone and confused.





Marshall Steinbeck
Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service
(413) 256-8157
53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #1398

~Art Gallaries~

Amherst College — Mead Art Museum. Currently on display: The Fold Art of Twentieth–Century Japan (through July 1998), Branching: The Art of Michael Mazure, AC '57 (opens Oct. 17), Illegal Camera: Photography in the Netherlands during the German Occupation, 1940–45 (opens Oct. 24) and Picasso's Women (through Dec. 2). Hours: Mon–Fri 10 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call the Museum at 545–2335.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery, Harold F. Johnson Library. Hours: Mon–Fri 8:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; weekends 12– 4:30 p.m.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. Currently on display: How to Remember? Designing the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum (through Dec. 14), Italian Paintings and Modern Sculpture form the Collections (through Oct. 28), Looking Inward: Contemporary Haitian Painting (through Oct. 26). Hours: Tue–Fri 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Sat–Sun 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245 for more information.

Smith College — Print Room, Museum of Art. Currently on display: Prints by Abraham Bosse (through Nov. 1). Hours: Tue, Fri & Sat, 9:30 a.m.– 4 p.m.; Wed–Sun, noon–4 p.m.; Thu noon–8 p.m. Call 585–2770 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House. Currently on display: CHICAGO: Memories and Fantasies, The Malcolm X Series (through Nov. 21) and Conditioned Responsibility (opening reception to be held on Oct. 28). Hours: Mon–Tues 1–7 p.m.; Wed–Fri 1–5 p.m. Call 545–5177 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area. Upcoming exhibitions: Pat Lasch, Survey of 25 years (Oct.16–Nov. 7). Hours: Mon–Fri 3–7 p.m., Sunday, 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Graduate Student Lounge, Campus Center. Upcoming exhibition: The Second Chinese Calligraphy Exhibition: In memory of Fred Fangyu Wang. Exhibition opens Oct. 17 and runs through Nov. 7. A free demonstration will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 22 from 4–5 p.m. in the Grad Lounge. For more information, e– mail xwang@cs.umass.edu.

University of Massachusetts — Herter Art Gallery, Herter Annex. Current exhibitions: Fragments Metamorphosis: The Work of Iwan Nimmer and Yuriko Yamaguchi (through Oct. 31) Hours: Mon–Fri 11 a.m.–4 p.m. Call 545–0976 for more information.

University of Massachusetts — Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, Student Union Building Over the Edge. Current exhibitions: Paintings and Objects (Oct. 9– Oct. 30). Hours: Mon–Thurs 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Friday 10 a.m.– 3 p.m. For more information, call 545–0792.

University of Massachusetts — University Gallery, Fine Arts Center. Currently on display: Cigoli's "Dream of Jacob" and Drawing in Late Sixteenth–Century Florence (through Dec. 14), The Louis Beurman Torf Print Collection (through Oct. 17), Seven by Six (through Oct. 17). Hours: Tues–Fri 11 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sat–Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–3670 for more information.

The University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery, Central Residential Area. Upcoming exhibition: Student Drawings: The Figure (opens Oct. 17, 4–6 p.m.) Hours: Mon–Thurs 4–8 p.m.; Sun 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680 for more information.

— Compiled by Seema Gangatirkar

■ preview

continued from page 5

where in between. Part love story, part action spectacle, the movie centers around a Romeo–and–Juliet romance between Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet, and of course the struggle to survive once the "safest ship ever built" sinks. Cameron, always the picky perfectionist, even demanded that ship passengers be given fake chilled breath through digital effects. While it most likely never earn back its costs, insiders who have seen Titanic have called it awe– inspiring and jaw–dropping. (B.M.)

AMISTAD
Directed by Steven Spielberg

Like Titanic, Amistad takes place on a boat. Unlike Titanic, Spielberg's newest film cost less than 1/6 the price. Shot mostly in New England and based on a true story, the movie focuses on a slave revolt aboard the ship Amistad in 1839. Newcomer Djimon Hounsou stars as the leader of 50 West African slaves who take over the ship and land in New York, where lawyer Matthew McConaughey and former president Anthony Hopkins plead the slaves' case. Forget The Lost World, Schindler's List proved that Spielberg is our most inspiring filmmaker, and Amistad, conscripted by Schindler–scribe Steven Zaillian, is already drawing Oscar talk. My only complaint is the bland McConaughey playing another hot–shot lawyer. Anyway, even with well–known costars like Morgan Freeman and Pete Postlethwaite, the biggest problem facing Amistad will be shipping people to the theater. (B.M.)

JACKIE BROWN
Directed by Quentin Tarantino

After a few years of really bad acting, Tarantino makes a much–anticipated return to the director's chair with this adaption of the Elmore Leonard novel Rum Punch. Robert DeNiro, Michael Keaton, Samuel L. Jackson and Bridget Fonda join blaxploitation queen Pam Grier to make a stellar ensemble cast. Grier stars as the title character, a flight attendant busted for smuggling her boss's gun money across the Mexican border. Rather than go to jail, she offers to help the cops arrest her boss. Instead, she teams up with her bail bondsman to keep the money for herself. Featuring a killer 70's soundtrack and more Pulp Fiction–style dialogue, Jackie Brown is destined for more praise and an easy 100 million at the box office. (B.M.)

Cooking pork chops Japanese–style — a simple but rich dinner dish

The Japanese have this way of perfecting things. They never seem to settle for anything other than mastery, especially when it comes to food and cooking. For them, it is an art form that represents the harmony and beauty that exists between the natural balancing forces of nature.

Most people, when they think of Japanese food, think sushi. Well, sushi is just one aspect of a rich and diverse culinary tradition that spans the full spectrum of food preparation, techniques and ingredients.

One of my favorite dishes, Tonkatsu (crispy pork cutlets) is a study of the simplicity of preparation, the contrast of textures and the richness of flavor that is found in all Japanese food.

In other words, this is a slamming meal that's fast and simple to prepare and fulfills all the requirements to land itself a degree in the school of comfort food. And like all of these dorm room recipes, it uses easily available ingredients in a new ways to result in one terrific meal.

The Dormroom Gourmet

Now for my invariable disclaimer: think safety and flavor first. Have a fire extinguisher nearby and provide proper ventilation. Rock and boil!

Tonkatsu Style Pork Cutlet

Just a note before we start: This dish calls for breadcrumbs. The best crumbs to use are called Panko and can only be found in Asian markets, but the best substitution I found was stale or toaster–oven dried Wonder bread, with the crusts removed. You can grate the bread like cheese or use any other method you can think of to break the bread.

Ingredients

For the cutlet:
- 4 boneless pork loin chops
- 4 tbs. all–purpose flour
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 1/2 cups breadcrumbs
- salt and pepper to taste
- vegetable oil for frying

For the sauce:
- 2 tsp. Dijon mustard
- 4 Tbs. tomato ketchup
- 4 tsp. soy sauce
- 4 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 4 tsp. white vinegar
- 1/4 tsp. ground allspice
- dash of ground cloves

Procedure:

• One at a time, place each pork chop between two pieces of plastic wrap and put them on a solid surface. Take a meat mallet (or any other heavy object) and pound the cutlet flat until it is about 1/4 inch thick.

• Salt and pepper each side of the chops and dredge them in the flour and then dredge them in the beaten egg. Quickly place chops in a bowl containing the breadcrumbs.

• Preheat a pan over medium heat. Add enough oil to come up half way on the cutlet.

• Place the breaded cutlets carefully into the pan, making sure not to burn yourself. Cook for about 1 1/2 to 2 minutes on each side or until golden brown. Remove from pan and drain on paper towels.

•To make the sauce, simply combine all the ingredients and mix well.

Serving suggestion:

Slice the cutlets into half inch strips and lay out over a bed of sticky white rice. Use the sauce for dipping.

Thanks for all the great responses I've been getting from all those who have tried and liked my recipes.

Louis Davis is a UMass student. You can e–mail him with any culinary questions or with any comments about this column at LouieXO@aol.com.

■ jazz

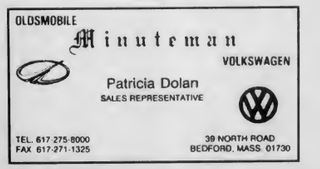
continued from page 8



There are great contributions on piano by Sir Roland Hanna, Jon Faddis on trumpet, and percussion by Jimmy's son M'tume, who lent his skills back in the '70s to Miles Davis' electric groups.

Rodney Kendrick's diverse piano styles most definitely stem from his eclectic history. In the '80s he began his career by touring on keyboards with James Brown, George Clinton's solo troupe, and Harold Melvin & The Blue Notes. However, he soon switched to jazz piano with the help of veteran Barry Harris, and by '93, he was the regular piano behind singer Abbey Lincoln.

Now, he's on his own and has been making some of the most interesting piano jazz around for a few years now (newcomer Marc Cary has taken his place in Lincoln's band and is also a very creative pianist). The drums and bass (by Taru Alexander and Tarus Mateen, respectively) on his new trio recording We Don't Die We Multiply (Verve) are often quite hypnotic and create vamps that are often as soulful and raw as grooves in a Clinton tune, especially on "Around The Corner." Kendrick plays sublime solo piano on "Just One Of Those Things" before the rhythm section kicks in again, painting a picture of solid trio jazz in the '90s.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

tired of standing out in the cold waiting for the bus? interested in writing for the paper?

Write for Arts!

(we have heat.)

call 545-3500 and ask for Seema

INTERVARSITY CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP
Results of the IVCF BEST PIZZA CONTEST
Best Pizza: The Antontio's and Papa John's Best Topping: Papa John's
Best Crust: Pizza Hut
Thanks to all Participants!!!
IVCF meets Friday @ 7:00 in the Campus Center
Call 259-1052

Electrolysis
Disposable Sterile Needles
Student Discount
Free Parking
On Bus Line from Campus
John V. Ryan, R.E.
664 Main Street
253-9534

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and, System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30
Sat 12:00-7:30
Closed Tuesday

LOWEST FARES
★ GUARANTEED ★
FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
CONTINENTAL USA
MAXIMUM $137 O/W
CALL FOR DETAILS
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC.
THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson) AMHERST

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Genuine Draft & Light" 30-pk $10.49
Cider Jack $4.99 6-pk. all flavors
Celebrate "OKtoberfest"!
Otter Creek OKtoberfest
Blue Moon "Pumpkin ale"
Pete's OKtoberfest
Catamount OKtoberfest
$4.99 6-pk. Your Choice!
"Fantastic Pricing!"
Sam Adams Lager $17.99
"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum $17.99
Devil Mountain Red Hook
ALL FLAVORS!
Shipyard Otter Creek
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.95
Wow!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

North Carolina's Smith to be missed by Duke fan

The feelings I will have watching television on Feb. 5, 1998 will be different than what I have grown accustomed to over the past few years. Not bad, really, just different.

That is, you see, the night that the Duke men's basketball team will play the Dean Smith–less North Carolina Tar Heels in Chapel Hill, N.C. for the first time.

I confess, I am a Duke fan from way back. I love the Blue Devils. I love Duke basketball. So when Dean Smith announced his retirement from the only profession that seems suited for him, I felt a strange emptiness.

Casey Kane

Far as far back as my memory takes me, at least as far as basketball is concerned, I have hated UNC. Not dislike, not care little about, not hardly be concerned with — I hate the Tar Heels.

It is a simple fact. If you are going to root for Duke, you root vehemently, with all of your being, against North Carolina. If you choose to back the Tar Heels, the venom points 10 miles northwest toward Durham, N.C.

Still, as I put down Eric Montross and George Lynch to my high school friends, I couldn't help but have respect for Smith. Respect, not necessarily admiration, though I can now admit there is probably a bit of that too.

Dean Smith is college basketball. College basketball is Dean Smith. There is a legendary picture of Smith, sitting on the bench during a time-out or pre–game talk during his playing days. His coach, who is also in the picture, is Phog Allen.

Phog Allen learned the game of basketball from James Naismith, the man who invented it. Simply put, Smith is only two steps away from the humblest beginnings of the game.

He is a legendary man. Last year, he surpassed former Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp for career wins. He is among a handful of coaches who have won more than one national championship. Those things alone would put him in the upper echelon of coaches, but that is just a small portion of Smith's resume.

He has finished among the top three in the Atlantic Coast Conference — arguably the toughest league in college hoop — 32 times in a row. He has 26 consecutive 20–win seasons, 22 consecutive NCAA tournament appearances. He has 17 ACC regular season titles and 12 conference tournament titles.

But perhaps the most impressive of all Smith's achievements, even more noteworthy than the fact that he routinely attracted crops of NBA–caliber talent, is that he ran a clean program. When he took the head job at North Carolina, the Tar Heels were on probation and coming off point shaving troubles.

Since then, UNC has been squeaky clean. Ninety–seven percent of Smith's players have graduated. And the NCAA spends its time in Chapel Hill handing out accolades rather than sanctions.

Although I still root against Smith, I maintain a silent deference toward him. The same has and will hold true for Rick Pitino, Roy Williams and, at times, Bob Knight.

The situation I am in as a Duke fan rooting against Carolina is similar to the predicament I face when UMass plays Temple.

John Chaney does not have to say a word in order to command respect. Like many others, I have the utmost admiration for him, the way he coaches, his teams and his philosophies. But I do not root for the Owls. As a Minuteman fan that just would not be right.

When I watch Duke–Carolina, part of the excitement is knowing that if the game comes down to the wire (and in that match–up I usually prefer a reasonably close game), Smith is prepared to challenge to the end. With him gone, that fact is not guaranteed.

It will be strange to see the Blue Devil players compete in the Dean E. Smith Center on Feb. 5, 1998 and to know that the legend who built the arena, who gave UNC hoop a wondrous home, whose name is plastered on the front of the sky blue stadium, will be sitting in the stands just like an average fan.

It is strange for me now, because even though I have never cheered for North Carolina (not even when the Tar Heels played against Boston College in the 1994 NCAA tournament), I feel that something will be missing from my favorite collegiate rivalry.

Dean Smith you will be missed — even by Duke fans.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Tennis looks to improve ranking

By Justin Rudd
Collegian Correspondent

Some of the comments overheard about the Massachusetts women's tennis team and its fall season could be "See, I told you so," or "They are not ready yet."

One could say that the Minutewomen were just not up to the challenges at hand in their new, improved and challenging schedule.

However, in regards to UMass' tough fall schedule, coach Judy Dixon said, "We are taking on a completely revamped schedule, with this new challenge we are looking for some breakthrough wins."

Taking on these new and more challenging teams, the goal for the Minutewomen is to prove they deserve their new schedule and Northeast regional ranking. UMass was ranked No. 15 in the Top 15 of the region's school ranking at the beginning of the season, and the team took on a schedule filled with "big" schools such as Syracuse.

"The next step for us is a national ranking," Dixon said.

Unfortunately, the fall season has not been as profitable as most had hoped. The Minutewomen have a 4–4 record with just two matches left, and are coming off of two straight defeats. The Minutewomen will be finishing out their season against Amherst College this Thursday at 4 p.m., and Connecticut this Saturday at 10 a.m., with both matches at home on the Upper Boyden Courts.

Now that the fall season is coming to a close, Dixon and her two co–captains, seniors Caroline Steele and Lana Gorodetskaya, are looking forward to the spring season.

"We will be a lot better and we are looking to prove that we are No. 15 and deserving of it," Gorodetskaya said.

"I think that we had a really good fall season, and fall is prep for the spring," Steele said.

The two captains have been a part of this UMass squad for their entire collegiate careers, with Lana and Caroline both coming into the UMass program playing schools of a lower caliber.

"We want to leave behind playing "big" schools, such as Syracuse," Steele said. "We want to leave our mark on UMass, because when we first arrived at UMass we were playing 'smaller' teams."

When it comes to playing the role of co–captains, both do a great job, and Gorodetskaya feels they possess two sides to the coin.

"We have two different personalities," Gorodetskaya said. "We both set good work ethics to practice hard and never give up, show vocal support and most importantly we try our hardest to set examples for the underclassmen."

The most recent loss for UMass came to Dartmouth 9–0. The Minutewomen could not take a win in either singles or doubles play.

The score may be deceiving, Steele said.

"I think that we played hard, with an element of toughness that is there, we never gave up in today's match," Steele said.

In singles action, except for freshman stand–out Robyn Lebovitz, every player was taken out in two sets. In doubles play, the losing streak continued with UMass losing all three match–ups, 8–4, 8–5, and 8–1.

One would think that the Minutewomen must be feeling pretty bad about themselves right now, but Steele says otherwise.

"We know that we can hang with these teams, and we're looking forward to beating UConn with a breakthrough win this weekend," Steele said.

ON-LINE AT WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLLEGIAN

■ NFL

continued from page 14

3–0 within their division and also have wins over Jacksonville and Carolina. They now stand at 5–1 and appear to be the top team in the NFC.

• It's funny how, all of a sudden, the Buccaneers are starting to suck. Now what are all of you who bought Tampa Bay paraphernalia going to do?

I think Arizona's playing well.

• I'm now 61–33 on the season and week No. 8 is a freakin' mystery.

With so many teams in limbo it's hard to decide.

The teams that have always been good could win at any time. Then again, there is always that one team lurking around the corner waiting to piss me off. You know the one, when Indianapolis beats Green Bay in an offensive battle, that sort of thing.

But this week, I'm not holding back.

1. Denver's first loss of the season could come in Oakland this Sunday, but don't quote me on that.

Oh, what the hell. If Jeff George and Tim Brown can click and the defense can hold off some points and penalties, the 2–4 Raiders have a legitimate chance.

Plus, the Broncos are undefeated and need a spanking.

I'll take Oakland over the Broncos, 28–24.

2. The Pats are playing in the Meadowlands against the Jets. This game needs to be a blowout for New England. There can't be anymore close games against bad football teams. That's right, bad. As long as the Jets wear those ugly uniforms and have Neil O'Donnell as their quarterback, they suck.

New England wins, 38–17.

Let's face it, I'm accepting the Patriots' record. I'm picking them for the rest of the season and will take whatever they give me.

I'm a homer, deal with it.

3. Finally, in one of the most important games of the decade, in an edge of your seat thriller, I'm going to pick Seattle to travel all the way down to St. Louis and beat the pants off of the Rams. I know what you're saying, it's just as crazy as picking the Bears over the Pack, but I'm feeling a little daffy.

Seahawks 18, Rams 13.

Tell me I can't pick football games. Go ahead, I want you to.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

Firestone
BRIDGESTONE
Northampton
327 King Street
586-1584
Store Hours
Monday to Friday
7:30 to 6:00
Saturday
7:30 to 5:00
Firestone 45,000 MILE Limited Warranty
Domestic FR360 RADIAL
4 Tires For $99.99
13" 4 for $131.99
14" 4 for 151.99
15" 4 for 171.99
AUTOPAS FIRESTONE
NO PAYMENT FOR 90 DAYS
*No Interest No Annual Fee
Shuttle Service Available, Call For Details
OIL CHANGE & FILTER
Firestone
$9.88
SALE PRICE $19.99
BRAKE SERVICE
FOR SURE STOPS, WE INSTALL BRAKE PADS / SHOES, RESURFACE DRUMS / ROTORS AND ADJUST BRAKES (ON SERVICED AXLE)
$79.99 ORGANIC PADS
$89.99 SEMI-METALLIC
FALL TUNE-UP PACKAGE
OIL CHANGE & FILTER
•SPARK PLUG REPLACEMENT
•4–TIRE ROTATION & WHEEL BALANCE
•COMPLETE VEHICLE INSPECTION
ADDITIONAL $10–BCYL / $20–BCYL
$59.99 ECYL

Here's A Try Out Even You Can Pass:
Write for Collegian Sports
Held Daily at
113 Campus Center

At the top 25 U.S. law schools, 3 out of 4 students who prepped for the LSAT chose Kaplan.
—1997 Bruskin-Goldring Research Study of Students at the Top 50 Law Schools
Call today and find out why 3 million students have chosen Kaplan to help them score higher.
LSAT
Free Class Thursday 10/16 7:30pm!
Learn how experts ace the exam!
expert teachers superior materials smart technology proven results
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
www.kaplan.com
"LSAT is a registered trademark of the Law School Admission Council.

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
All Ages, All The Time!
OCT 6 MICHAEL BRECKER QUARTET 7 & 9:30 pm
OCT 8 Aggie The Handle opens HYPNOTIC CLAMBAKE 10 pm ★
OCT 10 The Instigator Meet The Rumble JUNE RICH 9 pm
OCT 11 Wetlands Hot BURLAP TO CASHMERE plus NATIVE 10 pm ★
OCT 12 Valley rock legends return CLEAN LIVING 7 pm
OCT 13 Blues-rock guitar wonder ROBBEN FORD 7&10 pm SOLD OUT
OCT 14 Multi-instrumental world music explorer DAVID LINDLEY with WALLY INGRAM 7 pm
OCT 15 Smoking Southern groove band AGENTS OF GOOD ROOTS 10 pm ★
OCT 16 Divine Jazz Wonders — one stage TRIO: JOSHUA REDMAN, CHRISTIAN McBRIDE & BRIAN BLADE 7&10 pm
OCT 18 Celtic rock shamrocks THE DROVERS plus THE PAPERBOYS 10 pm ★
OCT 19 Boots-kish songwriters supreme ANDY STEWART & GERRY O'BEIRNE 7 pm
OCT 21 Magic Hat presents: GALACTIC plus JAZZ PHARMACY 10 pm ★
OCT 24 Bluesy folk master CHRIS SMITHER 7 pm
OCT 25 Amherst's African reggae wonders THE BLACK REBELS 10 pm ★
OCT 26 Rock's original guitar hero LINK WRAY 7 & 10 pm
OCT 30 Discover Klezmer: KAILA FLEXER & THIRD EAR and NAFTULE'S DREAM 7 pm
TUE 31 Folk music's vocalist of the century JUNE TABOR 7 pm
NOV 12 "Fantastatto-jazzadelic bluegrass" THE STRING CHEESE INCIDENT 7 pm
THU 13 The man in the Panama hat LEON REDBONE 7 pm
FRI 14 Dobrovolc folk star LUCIE BLUE TREMBLAY 7 pm
SAT 15 Melodic, blues-edged groove rock GROOVASAURUS 10 pm ★
SAT 25 Pop-jazz balladeer KENNY RANKIN 7 pm
Available Now: "Live at the Iron Horse" CD: Michael Thompson, Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Mason Proffit, Dar Williams, Richard Shindell, Tom Rush, and the Northampton Brew Chorus. $40.00
24 Hour Concert Information (413) 584-0610
www.virtual-valley.com/ironhorse
Coming: Teenage Fanclub, Michael Hay & the Cosmic Brews, Soumaya Wade Band, Susan Werner, Greg Brown, Michael Hedges, Cordelia's Dad, K.L. Bennett, Beryl Wilson, Sutherland Road, Mo Fatadoo Thompson, Patty Larkin, Elysian, Ina Mann, Todd Snider, Jonathan Edwards, Tom Rush, Richard Shindell, Mike Viola, Luther "Guitar Jr." Johnson & the Magic Numbers, Livingston Taylor ★ Dance Floor!
20 CENTER ST. NORTHAMPTON
ALL AGES • FULL RESTAURANT
(413) 586-8686

Big Guys Liquors
Big Give away
Come check it out from 2-6pm on Saturday, October 18th
We will be giving away
tons of great prizes.
Free stuff with every purchase
Free raffle tickets for bigger prizes like:
Celtics Tickets
Bar-B-Q Grills
Rolling Rock Chair
Giant Miller Lite Cooler
Free pizza bites
See the Magic Hat guy for hats and T-Shirts
Live at Mullins Center
"We're Big on Friendly Service"
Rte. 116 Sunderland, MA (413) 665-5030

SKI & Snowboard from $229
College Ski Weeks '98
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
55 SLOPES, Walk to Lifts from the condos
25 Black Diamonds, Expiry River Jumpy Bumps
1-800-848-9545

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Catch the Adams Family!
Samuel Adams Draft Beers
On Sale in October
$3. pint
• Sam Adams Lager
• Boston Ale
• Honey Porter
• Octoberfest
• "New" Boston Cream Ale
Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

The 5th Annual
AMHERST ANTIQUARIAN BOOK FAIR
Sunday, October 19, 1997 (10AM - 4PM)
Amherst Regional Middle School
(formerly Amherst Regional Junior High)
Amherst, MA
55 Antiquarian Booksellers
Admission $3.50 ($3.00 with this ad)
Information: Barr Promotions (413) 772-2839

GLBT Issues

Thursday, October 16, 1997

National Coming Out Week quite an opportunity

This last week was National Coming Out Week here on the University of Massachusetts campus. The Queer community celebrated this with speak–outs, speakers, a coffeehouse and various types of demonstrations. In fact, I am writing this after returning from the Thursday night coffeehouse.

Saul Accetta

Most folks on my hall and who have met me perceive me as a gay man. This is correct. Well, I am bisexual, but I tend to see that as "nitpicking." However, that isn't the whole truth about who I am. I am a second semester freshman and just returning to school full–time after working for three years and attending night classes at various Boston area colleges and universities.

I was, and still am, a very "out" person in the Boston area. I was a meeting facilitator at Boston Alliance of Gay and Lesbian Youth (BAGLY), and a member of the BAGLY Speaker's Bureau. But I didn't speak of facilitate as a gay or bisexual man.

When I moved out to Amherst I made a conscious decision to not be fully "out" for at least the first semester. I had forgotten about National Coming Out Day since I had been doing temp work and a temp worker is in too precarious a position to utilize that kind of opportunity for celebration of identity.

The woman who lives across the hall from me doesn't understand why I feel the need to be out. The reasoning is thus: everybody makes perceptual judgements on everybody else. When you meet someone, be it consciously or unconsciously, you judge them on whether you think they are attractive, male or female, and straight or gay. You then utilize those judgements to figure out how you should interact with them.

Today, after helping others celebrate their individual identities, I feel like a hypocrite. I mentioned to a friend of mine this feeling and, since I owed a story of some sort to the Collegian anyway, I wanted to write an essay and come out. She reacted in a very concerned way for my safety. I reminded her that everyone of my floor already knew that I was gay, but she stated that this was a different story. Unfortunately, she is right and all I know is that I hate the fact that I let the opportunity this week offered go to waste.

Many people would wonder, "If everybody knows you are gay, then how can you still come out of the closet?" The fact is that my closet is shaped slightly different than your average gay man's. There is a lot more to my physical history than people perceive.

On July 22, 1997, I spent almost $6,000 on a surgical procedure that would help my back, the circulation in my arms and hands, and the ability to deal with my gender. You are probably thinking, "Gender? — what the hell does gender have to do with a surgical procedure that will help your back and circulation?"

Between the hours of noon and 9 p.m. on that day, I had a double mastectomy. In layman's terms, I had breasts removed from my body. They were not small breasts, which is why it took so long to remove them. They were very large breasts. In fact, I have had to wear a bra since I was 12–years–old. Now you are probably thinking, "You had tits?" Yes, I had very large tits. I last wore a bra that measured 38 inches with a DD cup.

You see, I am a transsexual. I lived as a woman for 21 years and I failed totally and miserably. I just celebrated my 22nd birthday and on Nov. 15, I will celebrate the first anniversary of my second puberty. Yes, I even sang Mezzo soprano" for many years in a choir. Now I live my life as a man.

Now, according to a published woman's studies professor here on campus, I am a token. You see, as a female–to–male transsexual I am being used by male–to–female transsexual lesbians to justify their sharing of women's space. Personally I would like to see this particular professor even try to make me anyone's token.

The woman who lives across the hall from me doesn't understand how it can be easier for me to live as a gay man now than it was to live as a masculine woman in the past. She is confused, as many both in and out of the GLBT community are, because I refuse to hide my history as a female–bodied person.

The first time a woman crossed the street late at night to avoid me, a man, it hurt like hell. But even though the gender "man" is in some ways just as constricting as the gender "woman," I find "man" is a much better fit. Some people will decry me as misogynistic, a sell–out, and say that I am doing all this just to gain male privilege. The fact of the matter is that I don't hate women. I just am not one. The fact is that I am not selling out to the patriarchy. I am not butting into traditional gender roles. I am trying to live my life, not just survive it.

And as for the "male privilege" I am now receiving... well, how many men you know could get fired if someone saw their birth certificate? How many men you know could be dying on the street with an ambulance right there and have the EMT's feel justified in allowing them to die because of the configuration of their genitals? For that matter, how many men do you know could be tossed into jail for fraud because of the sex on their driver's license or passport?

I am a female–to–male transsexual. I am a transsexual man. A transman. A transfag. A female–man. I own my history. When women are raped or beaten, I feel the pain as if it were my own. I feel the pain as if it were my own when queer youths are kicked out of their own homes and beaten by their "families." I feel the pain as if it were my own when people, who are good people, are denied what they need because someone somewhere can't handle who or what they are.

The fact that makes so many people fear me is that I refuse to live by their rules. I take life on MY terms, not theirs. I am making my life my own and then living it. I do not lie unless my life or someone else's life is on the line. I help others whenever I am able. I work hard and appreciate whatever I have at the moment, because it may be gone tomorrow. I am a transsexual–fag–identified–bisexual man and I am proud to be alive today.

Saul Accetta is a UMass student.

Just how supportive is the GLBT community?

UMass celebrated National Coming Out Week recently. While there were many benefits, there were also some drawbacks to the week's events. At every event I went to, I realized that almost all of the participants were white. As a member of the Pride Alliance steering committee, I see very few faces of people of color in our leadership, our activities, or our constituency. This is a problem that I can no longer remain silent about.

As people gathered after a Pride Alliance meeting to create the names on the triangles for National Coming Out Day (NCOD), one woman asked, "Who's writing down queers of color?" I realized at that moment that virtually all of the names of people who we were writing down were white. What was more unsettling was that I had a hard time trying to come up with gays who were also people of color.

From UMass to mainstream images of gay people, almost all the faces are white. Yet I know full well that gay people come from all cultures, creeds and colors that have ever and will ever exist. Almost all of the people who spoke at the NCOD Rally, coffee house and panel discussion were white. From Pride Alliance meetings to our steering committee, from Ellen to Roseanne, from movies such as Jeffrey to In and Out, I am surrounded by a sea of white people. I am not only upset by this, I am embarrassed: not because I am white, but because of the lack of diversity in the gay community.

The rainbow flag (which was taken as a symbol of gay pride) is not relegated to the GLBT community alone. The rainbow flag is a symbol of diversity — not just a tolerance, but an appreciation and celebration of the differences between us. I have become increasingly aware in the past few years of what diversity really means. It means that when I stand behind that flag, I am not just rallying against homophobia. I am rallying against hate in all its forms.

Katie M. Thoennes

There are many important messages to take away from this. Mostly, I take away questions: Why is the out community at UMass mostly white? Why is the history of queer people of color so hidden? What privileges do I carry in the GLBT community as a white person? What action do I still have to confront within myself? I do not hold the answers to all of these questions.

As time moves on, I realize that not having an answer is never a reason to be silent. I am frustrated to see racism in the gay community. I am angry that my GLBT friends of color are often isolated and tokenized. I am committed to doing something about it. The solution begins when we start doing something about it. The solution begins when we can start to unite our struggles. We must not struggle to end homophobia alone; we must recognize the greed and hate behind all oppression.

From here on out, we must begin to draw a more unified picture. We cannot hold a rally about gay issues without confronting sexism, racism, classism and anti–Semitism. We must support other organizations with action and understanding. Fighting hatred is not a queer issue; it is a human issue. My commitment to ending hate means that I will be aligning my voice with voices of other oppressed people. When I raise my voice against homophobia, I expect those voices of oppressed groups to be behind mine sending out a unified cry, which surrounds hate until it exists no longer.

Furthermore, while I shout out, I must also look inside. Racism has seeped into me from my family, the television and the society at large. My continual job is to seek out those messages inside me and dismantle them. Oppression will not end until I challenge it within myself. Homophobia will not end until others check themselves.

My challenge to you is this: look inside, look around you. "If your not outraged, then your not paying attention."

Queers fight back.

Katie M. Thoennes is a UMass student.

"Hey Lady, You Have a Piece of Food Stuck in Your Mustache!!"

A stranger yelled at us while we walked together in the center of Northampton.
The red light stopped him long enough to proclaim his ignorance.
Our softly joined girl hands somehow reached out to twist his threatened face which failed all understanding
of what only his eyes could see.
This little boy, not yet big enough for his man's body, doesn't feel safe in the world.
He drives around winning out of windows
about his insecurities.
What he really meant was,
"THIS SOCIETY HAS
OPPRESSED MY MIND
AND STOLEN MY ABILI-TY TO PERCEIVE REALI-TY.
PLEASE, SOMEONE HELP ME!!"
o you poor little man,
don't cry out to us
we have no empathy.

Sarah Crozier is a UMass Student.

Gay and Greek?

Tyger, Tyger burning bright
In the forests of the night
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry.
— Blake

WOMAN

We are the tiger.
Today.
earth cracks under our tread and forests bend for our passage as the fat brass sound of purpose glissandos through our stride.
Vociferation recycles across aeons
as we gnaw the bones.
Our tendons scrape the edge of discontent perilously strangling our tongues until no longer would we suck your silencing swords.
You are now our whetstone.
We are Diana,
hunting flaccid bellowers across senate marble pulling equality's piercing sting from a grieving quiver of justice.
We work our rolling hips into your mountains and reshape Rushmore's dead smiles.
We are Mother Earth.
We ply the wind
as power sheets from our feline musculature.
We are no longer contortionists.
We refuse to find our fit– craving an egress
through malleability;
through stirrings and burnings
we stand pillar.
Our carpals are extended and these claws fit with precision.
We are thick with a cobalt hue midnight.
Fear of this beauty will fester your sleep, making your knuckles crack with rolled expectation until you accept–
We are here.
And our voice is louder than a whisper.

Danielle Curriveau is a UMass graduate student.

Author wants us to read her lips

By Rachael Pepe
Collegian Staff

Riki Anne Wilchins, author of Read My Lips: Sexual Subversion and the End of Gender, is in the process of visiting colleges around the nation encouraging students to speak their minds to end gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender (GLBT) oppression.

One of the leading voices of the growing transgender movement, Wilchins is the executive director of the Gender Public Advocacy Coalition (GenderPAC) — an organization that frequently lobbies Capital Hill on issue's such as hate crimes.

"There is a common cultural machinery that oppresses all bodies; it stigmatizes them then flushes them out the bottom," Wilchins said. "We [GenderPAC] try to tear down the machinery by attacking the machine, not just the piece we are stepping on."

Her book, of which she read excerpts from at the University of Massachusetts GLBT Study Lecture Series last week, focuses on her own personal experiences as a male–to–female transsexual, and was written as a way for her to get the message out to large numbers of people.

"People made assumptions about my body which were painful and disempowering," Wilchins said. "The feminists, gay men and lesbians didn't want me as part of their group... people started referring to me as a 'transsexual.'

"That's when I became involved [in the transgender movement]," Wilchins added. "I stopped answering questions and started looking at the political effects."

There is a certain amount of Post–modernism hidden in Read My Lips, which plays out through real–life GLBT politics.

"There is an assumption that gays and lesbians have to decide who they are and then identify their political goals based on those assumptions," Wilchins continued. "We have been concentrating on freeing our desire, but if we fight on a 'non–identity' basis, we will have freed everyone."

Wilchins also works with national politics, trying to stop Intersex Genital Mutilation (IGM) and Gender Identity Disorder (GID), both of which attempt to stigmatize and treat queer behavior and police homosexuality in children, according to Wilchins.

"GID and IGM are both used as a 'back doorway' to police kids' gender and control homosexuality," Wilchins said. "For instance, a kid may be cut up because of the belief that an enlarged clitoris will somehow turn the child into a masculine lesbian."

The message is starting to get out that this is wrong, according to Wilchins, and this is where it becomes important for college students and others to get involved in the effort to stop these practices.

"We [the GenderPAC] are targeting college students because of the fact that they haven't yet learned that idealism is impractical and they are still willing to aim as high as they can," Wilchins added.

"I am trying to get ordinary people to talk about these issue's and, in turn, help them to feel empowered [as a result]."

Wilchins is trying to get as many people as she can involved in the National GLBT Lobbying day on Capital Hill in the Spring of 1998, where these issue's and more will be addressed to Congress.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN STAFF

American Red Cross protest again!

A UMass student rallies in front of the Red Cross donation table at the second protest this semester.

Being an ally at UMass...

I live with a lesbian. She is one of my most intimate friends. I feel comfortable with her. We share something that is very private and deep, although I am not a lesbian.

When people find out that my roommate is gay, they are kind of shocked (some find it to be exciting). They ask me all kinds of questions like, "Does she ever hit on you?" or "Isn't it strange to see her with other women?" I'm sure that many of them (although secretly) question my sexuality. When I encounter such ignorance, I just laugh and tell them that it isn't strange for me at all because, first and foremost, she is my friend. No matter what.

Emily Trask

On last week's episode of "Ellen," Paige (Ellen's heterosexual best friend) became envious when she thought Ellen had a date with another woman. Of course, because it's a sitcom, the whole situation turned out to be a big misunderstanding and Ellen's "date" was really a straight women looking for a room to rent.

But in any case, the feelings of envy that Paige experienced were real. While watching the show, I realized that I have experienced similar feelings of resentment towards my friend's partners.

While some may think that these emotions are homosexual, I believe that they stem from much deeper roots. Because we are so close, when another person enter's my friend's life, I am naturally fearful that our relationship will become less meaningful to her. I am also very protective of the people that I love, and never want to see her get hurt.

My roommate and I have always shared a special relationship. She confided in me when she began to question her sexuality, because she knew that I would always except her. And to tell you the truth, I believe that our relationship has become even stronger since she has "come out of the closet." Because she is more comfortable with who she is, she is now able to be even more comfortable in our relationship.

In our friendship, we are beyond the confining perimeters of sexuality, and we know that we will always be there for each other.

Emily Trask is a UMass student.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One bedroom apartment Downtown. $520 + utilities. 253-1903, 545-4003, 545-4002.

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 VW Maroon Rabbit Low mileage. 95% mint condition. $1400 or B/O. Call 584-2940

1990 Chevy Barratta Great condition. Must sell. BEST REASONABLE OFFER takes it. 296-4549

Purchasing a usad car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1990 Jeep Wrangler 5 speed, 85k, hard top/soft top. $6000. 256-0501

EMPLOYMENT

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

Teacher Needed
Kaplan Educational Centers has a current opening for an MCAT Instructor. Qualifications include thorough knowledge of course material, great presentation skills and superior MCAT scores. This is an excellent well paying part-time job, ideal for graduate students. Please visit us Mon-Thurs, 12-4pm, at 150 Fearing St.,

EMPLOYMENT

Amherst, or call us at 549-5789 to arrange an interview.

International Marketing Firm seeks Spokesperson. $10 per hour. 8-10 hours a week. Models are encouraged to apply. Call Sean Sweeney (800)829-4777

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED

for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst.

Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0 COLLEGE NEWS SERVICE

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridga Rantels 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Party Time- Naad Mora? Learn excellent time management skills- shortread booklet. $8.95 Call 527-2506

BUY MY IBM PENTIUM: 166MHZ, 16M RAM, Zip Drive, 17" viewable monitor, too much software to list (i.e. Photoshop 4.0, Director). 64 bit 3D video card, Wacom Graphics Tablet. Complete for $1400 SOLID. You can't get this good of a deal in stores. CMPSCI Major who needs to sell his baby for rent. Call Bill @ (413)587-9972.

HELP! Baby Iguana needs home. Comes equipped. $80. Call Matt 545-2608

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Kona Mountain Bike Ridden off-road only 3 times. Shimano LX Shifter. $450 or B/O. Call Dan at 628-3857 Leave message.

Self Amplified Bazooka Base Tube 6 inches, great shape. Call 259-1984

Computers! Computers! Computers!
The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Mullins Center.

FOR SALE

Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4850

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

INSTRUCTION

Computer Enthusiast:

Knowledgeable computer tutor wanted to provide individualized computer enrichment for girls ages 15 & 12. Female preferred. Hourly rate negotiable. Call Joan or Rob (413) 584-8086 or (413)586-6542

LOST

CROSS PEN GOLD TONE Personal inscription. Grandfather's Irreplacible. Reward. 253-5482

LOST

LOST: Keys with green bottle opener in Sylvan Parking Lot. Reward. Call Steve 546-4489

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000
Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive a FREE T-SHIRT.

Earn $75-$100
Exercise Science Study Needs non-weight trained males
Call Steve @ 253-4952 or 5-6072

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

www.movieposter.com
Vintage-Current
(416)391-0133

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room available on Main St. Very close to town. On bus route. 21+ please. Call 259-9282

ROOMMATE WANTED

One large bedroom available in Sugarloaf Estates. $333/month. Great place to live. Call 665-7701

ROOM WANTED

Sublet Neaded January 1998- 1 month only. Bus access necessary. Preferably in Northampton. (617)623-3851

SERVICES

Transcription, Editing, Typing for students, professors & businesses. Domenichelli Transcription Services (413)783-8607 domenbus@javanet.com

Ratired Faculty Member offers English Language Lessons and Editorial Expertise to International Students, all levels. Reasonable rates. Ms. Reed 253-3354

Pregnont? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call (888)SPRING-BREAK Today!

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH!
CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplash-tours.com

SPRING BREAK
Cancun From $399
Jamaica From $619
Bahamas From $429
Florida From $99
Best Deals
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center basement

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or frivolous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refine or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 16

Chmie — There will be an intramural volleyball officials' clinic at 5 p.m. at Boyden, room 223.

Discussion — Brian Tokar will lead a discussion around his latest book Earth for Sale, at 6 p.m. at Food For Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for intramural tennis players at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249.

Service — Sukkot service with Jewish community of Amherst, 10 a.m. at the Hillel House. Lunch following. free for all on any meal plan.

Speaker — The Smith College chapter of Students for a Free Tibet presents Ama Adhe, political prisoner of 27 years, who will be speaking as a woman, a prisoner and an activist for freedom at 7:30 p.m. in the Stoddard Hall Auditorium at Smith College.

Speaker — Education reformer Lorraine Monroe will speak at 7:30 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College in the New York room at Mary Woolley Hall.

Yoga — Yoga and meditation seminar by Dada Anantananda at 8 p.m. in the Butterfield Dorm Lounge. Includes lecture and practical experience. Free admission. Sponsored by Ananda Marga.

FRIDAY, OCT. 17

Celebration/Meeting — Hindu Students Organization will hold a celebration of Dusshera at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 903. The Pooja will be followed by a general meeting. All are welcome. Contact Jai at 546-1511 for more information.

Meeting — Intervarsity Christian Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room posted at the info desk, continuing series on whole life.

Rally — Join Arise, Earthfirst, Native Forest Network, Greenpeace, PACT and more in Springfield to rally against Monsanto's chemical and genetic contamination of our environment. Rides available from the Visitor Center at 11 a.m. Call 625-0141 for more information.

Service — Sukkot special student/faculty/staff Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Sponsored by Hillel.

Tournament — Intramural tennis tournament begins at the lower courts at the Mullins Center.

SUNDAY, OCT. 18

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition, which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation on either Friday, Oct. 17 or Friday, Oct. 24. The free one-hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545-0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Contest — The Spectrum, Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec. 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 408E or just bring the artwork by.

Course — The Interdepertmental Program in Film Studies is offering a Certificate in Film Studies to all majors (equivalent to a minor). Includes six courses in film/video studies. For more information and to fill out an application, stop by the office in 101 South College or call 545-3659. Office hours MW 8 a.m.–5 p.m., TuTh 10 a.m.–5 p.m. F 8 a.m.–2 p.m. Or visit the webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Internships — Environmental internships offered. Campaigns this semester include: Hunger and Homelessness, Pesticides, Endangered Species, Updated Bottle Bill and Campaign Finance Reform. Looking for motivated students to take leadership positions. Call MassPIRG at 545-0199 or stop by 423A Student Union.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545-2726.

Notice — The women's basketball team will be holding walk-on tryouts on Oct. 20 at 6:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Proof of insurance and of a recent physical are required to participate in tryouts. For further information, call the women's basketball office at 545-2726.

Open Forum — Come meet the final candidates for the Assistant Director of Disability Services search as they attend a campus-wide open forum. All sessions will be held in the Campus Center from 4-5:30 p.m. Wayne Husted on Friday, Oct. 17 in room 917. Dori McCracken and Susan Pliner to be announced.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups is happening now. Call 577-5316 for more information.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, N.H. on Friday Oct. 24-26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Cenier. Any questions, call 545-2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech, voice, auditions on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 11 a.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. Must RSVP 545-0415.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

GET THE MOST OUT OF YOUR ADVERTISING DOLLAR...
SPONSOR THESE TV LISTINGS 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

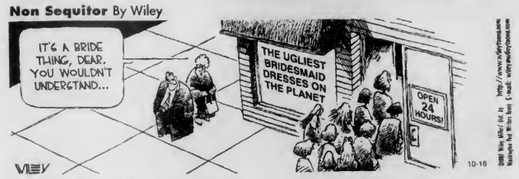
2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23	CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24	CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25	Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	26	UCTV
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27	TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28	BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29	TV Land
9	Weather	Channel	30	Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31	Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32	Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33	Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

545-3500

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 16, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Washbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Mystery: Blue		Wait for God	Keeping Up	Murder-Horrid	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV (R)	Promised Land "Crushed" (R)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours "In the Line of Fire" (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra (R)		Ent. Tonight		Promised Land "Crushed" (R)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Nothing Secred (In Stereo) (R)		Cracker "Hell Hath No Fury" (R)		20/20 (R)		News	Nightline (R)
WLVI	56	Full House (R)	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★ "Emma (Goes to Jail" (1996, Comedy) Jim Varney,				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Friends (R)		Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica		ER "When the Bough Breaks" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married... With	Cheers (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Grace Under	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids (R)		Fame L.A. "Premiere" (R)		News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT	40	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy (R)	Friends (R)		Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica		ER "When the Bough Breaks" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Indians or Yankees at Orioles or Mariners						News	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Friends (R)		Union Square	Seinfeld (R)	Veronica		ER "When the Bough Breaks" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	C-reatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		This Old Hse.	Doctors	Mystery: Blue				Bridesheid Revisited	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Nothing Secred (In Stereo) (R)		Cracker "Hell Hath No Fury" (R)		20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	★★★ "Escape From Alcatraz" (1979, Adventure) Clint Eastwood,				News	M*A*S*H (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Reel TV (R)
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach (R)	Coach (R)	★★ "Steel Dawn" (1987, Science Fiction) Patrick Swayze,				★★½ "Red Dawn" (1984, Adventure) Patrick Swayze,
A&E	80	Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order "Conspiracy" (R)		Biography "Kirk Douglas" (R)		Tales (R)		Unexplained "Hauntings" (R)		Law & Order "Benevolence" (R)
CNN	20	21	WorldView (R)		Moneyline (R)	Crossfire (R)		Prime News (R)	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live (R)		World Today (R)	Sports Illus.	Moneyline (R)
COM	26	Comedy Hell	Meke-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Just One of the Guys" (1985, Comedy) Joyce Hyser,				Comedy Hell	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	53	Wings: Combat Aircraft		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery "Diving Alone,		Into Unknown	Movie Magic	Wings "Eagles of the Crown"		Justice Files "All in the Family"
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		Wkend Kickoff	Major League Soccer: Conference Final (Game 1 -- Teams TBA				63 -- Bikes, Blades & Boards		Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Voices of Hope		"The Hired Heart" (1997, Comedy-Drama) Penelope Ann Miller, (R)				Homicide: Life on the Street (R)
MTV	39	MTV Live	Viewers	Duchovny	Best of MTV	Beevis-Butt,	Beevis-Butt,	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Tbl (In Stereo)		Oddville, MTV	Loveline
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Secret of Alex	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years
SCIFI	66	Lost in Space		Lost in Space			Lost in Space		Lost in Space		Lost in Space		Lost in Space
TLC	97	28 Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect	Without Wern.	Inferno-Storm King Mtn.		Miracle Planet (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	42	Kung Fu: Legend		Pro Football Tonight (R)		NFL Football: San Diego Chargers at Kansas City Chiefs. (In Stereo Live) (R)						Post Game Report
USA	59	Baywatch "Rescue Bay" (R)		Highlander: The Series (R)		★★½ "Fried Green Tomatoes" (1991, Comedy-Drama) Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy, (In Stereo) (R)						Silk Stalkings "Glory Daze" (R)
HBO	15	(5:30) ★★★ "Top Gun" (1986) Tom Cruise. PG		★★ "Cocoon" (1996, Comedy) Tom Arnold. PG		"Exception to the Rule" (1997, Suspense) Kim Cattrall. NR						Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (R)
MAX	65	★★½ "She's Having a Baby" (1988) Kevin Bacon. PG-13 (R)		★★★ "Independence Day" (1996, Science Fiction) Will Smith. (In Stereo) PG-13 (R)						★ "Bullet" (1997, Drama) Mickey Rourke. R (R)
SHOW	69	★★½ "Things Change" (1988, Comedy) Don Ameche. PG		"The Defenders: Payback" (1997) E.G. Marshall. (R)				★★★ "Dead Man Walking" (1995, Drama) Susan Sarandon. R				"Intimate"

Bruno By C. Baldwin



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You are going to have to work long and hard today to achieve your goals, but you can do it with the help of a trusted friend — and self-discipline.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Reflect on where you have been, and look forward to where you are going today. It is a good time to put all the pieces together in your mind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Distractions may be all around you today, but you will be so focused that nothing seems to touch you. You will get things done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — It is not so much the challenges others offer that are important at this time, but rather those you set for yourself that really count.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Even surrounded by those who know and love you, you may feel rather aloof and isolated today. A coming phase will offer numerous challenges.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You have been taking better care of yourself lately, physically and emotionally, and it shows. Others are impressed with how you carry yourself.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You needn't fear that someone else's bad mood is contagious today; you can maintain your positive outlook no matter what!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You have no need for distractions today, so do your best to steer clear of those things that can only serve to pull you from your course.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Take more time than usual preparing for routine efforts today, and you'll find that the rewards you enjoy are anything but rote.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Some may consider your behavior unusual today, but you are channeling a great deal of creative energy at this time.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Share promises with a loved one today. Concentrate on those things that foster truth and unity among those in your inner circle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You can avoid many of the pitfalls that have threatened to trip you up in the past simply by keeping your eyes and ears open at all times.

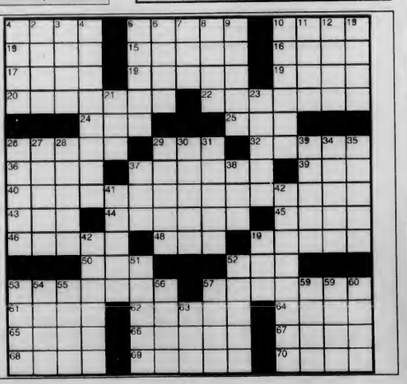
Quote of the Day

"For extra fun, pop eyeball out of eye socket!"

–packaging from Taco Bell Monster Eye Straws

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Well, Mr. Floor-It-We-Can-Make-It, do you still want me to rush home so you don't miss the Packers game?"



ACROSS
1 Harlow of film
5 Chart
10 Geodesic —
14 Not in use
15 Western event
16 Lamb's pen name
17 Chow (on)
18 Caravan stops
19 Hunter's trophy
20 Private place
22 Reads
24 Alley —
25 Polka follower
26 Dressmaker's aid
29 Cal. abbr.
32 Feathered talkers
36 Reed instrument
37 Lady from Madrid
39 Boxing great
40 Time, e.g.
43 Musical notes
44 Columbus native
45 Sharp flavor
46 Lies
48 Plus
49 Move a bit
50 Crumple up
52 Type of pie or wrestling
53 Misted
57 Diplomatic maneuvering
61 Chef
62 Bright
64 Singer Diamond
65 Poker stake
66 Like Princeton's walls
67 Discussion
68 Adolescent
69 Verdant
70 Wild plum

DOWN
1 Lively dances
2 Poet Millay
3 Astronaut Shepard
4 Recent arrival
5 Bunch
6 Be a gadabout
7 Classifieds
8 Chirp
9 Used a gardening tool
10 Sheriff's assistant
11 Bullfight cheers
12 Speed unit
13 Has a meal
21 Miniature, as a dog
23 Speaker of Latin
26 Tips one's hat
27 German sub
28 Computer accessory
29 Multi or mass follower
30 Hamburger garnish
31 Wanderer
33 River nymph
34 Onward
35 Char
37 "Be quiet!"
38 Slimpy's pal
41 Now
42 Pupils
47 Respond to the alarm
49 Coffee-break treat
51 New Jersey hockey player
52 Loose blouse
53 "Out, feline!"
54 Cornbread
55 By — one way
56 Use a springboard
57 Feudal land
58 Make waterproof
59 Rural sight
60 Actress Sommer
63 By way of

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-16-97 (c) 1997 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Veal Parmesan Sandwich
Broccoli Royale

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
Grilled Cheese

Worcester
LUNCH
Lightburger™
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Scrod

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Chicken Cacciatore
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Veal Parmesan Sandwich
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
(while supplies last)

Berkshire
LUNCH
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Hamburger on a Roll
Worcester Breakfast Sandwich
Lightburger

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Chicken Cacciatore
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Pastabilities

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Mark McGrath
Photo Technician	Lauren Koeky
Copy Editor	Laura Stock
Production Supervisor	Sam Smullin
Production Staff	Leon Latino, Mike Krozy

SPORTS

Crazy bits from a cluttered mind

Bob and Mindy Torbin are a little behind the times when it comes to music and the technology associated with playing it in particular. They don't own either a CD player or a tape deck and just have the one I left at home a few years ago. Subsequently, their CD collection is hardly extensive and consists mainly of people like Mary Chapin Carpenter and Kim Ritchie.

Those names probably mean something to you if you grew up somewhere like Schnecksville, Saskatchewan or even Sunderland. For most of us though, it's like convincing the parents that there actually is a popular song today called "Tub Thumping" and that it isn't a term for some kinky aquatic way of hooking up with your girlfriend.

Leigh Torbin

They do own a stereo that predates myself and it is used maybe twice or three times a year, mainly to listen to Oldies 103. One frequent visitor to the antediluvian turntable when I was younger, so much younger than today, in between Mindy's old Beach Boys albums and Bob's Beatles tunes, was John Denver's Greatest Hits.

Sunday afternoon, not long after country roads took me home to this place, Denver carried on a great tradition set by rock stars from Buddy Holly on up through Stevie Ray Vaughan. He died in a plane crash.

So, in honor of the pop/folk singer who was also named the Country Music Association's Entertainer of the Year the year I was born, today's column will, like Denver's music, have a little bit of everything.

Forza Fabio!

The best name I've ever seen for a hockey player is Jean- Yves Roy, a former All-American at Maine and current Providence/Boston Bruin. Other than Parisian aristocratic snob, there just isn't much else that name was meant for other than playing hockey. Likewise, there may not be a better pure soccer moniker than that of UMass forward Fabio Mariainty.

With a name like that, the pride of Greenfield could just walk on to the Azzurri, which is having massive difficulties qualifying for the 1998 World Cup on the heels of Saturday's 0-0 draw with England. If the Italians need someone up front, especially to replace Fabrizio Ravanelli, Fabio Mariainty's the man for the job.

Italy will have to face Russia in a two-game World Cup play-in, and I can almost hear the commentators now…

"Gianluca Pagliuca boots this one out to Paolo Maldini…a long serve from the midfield up to GianFranco Zola…over to Roberto Baggio…across for Fabio Mariainty and it's a gooooooooooal!" Nooooo fleeeeas. Try to live a life that's completely free.

There was a woman who lived in my Puffton palace before me who took in a stray cat. My housemate was violently allergic to the scrawny fur ball, always coughing and sniffling, but she still kept it around the house. If it wandered near our rooms upstairs, my housemate was there to valiantly defend our territory and heave the cat off the ledge (it's true, they do always land on their feet). The woman left in August and took her cat with her and there was much rejoicing.

But, the damn cat (and it just had to be a black one too) left us a present. Fleas. So, the Puffton people bombed the place on Tuesday causing major headaches, but hopefully fewer itchy feet in the long term.

What does this have to do with sports? Nothing. Just needed to vent, although my housemate did qualify for the 2000 Finnish Olympic cat throwing team.

I wish they all could be Tonawanda girls

Just when you think that those who brave ungodly cold to root on the Buffalo Bills on the frozen carpet of Rich Stadium are some of either the most dedicated or stupidest fans in America, you're wrong on both counts. They aren't there no more. Buffalo's an odd town to have fair weather friends (it's only fair for three days in July), but it does.

Case in point: a friend of mine organizes a large group every year to catch the Patriots game in Orchard Park, N.Y. Usually he calls well in advance and at best winds up tucked away in a corner of the upper deck not too far below the Goodyear Blimp. This year he waited, called just last month, and got 60 seats right at the 50-yard line.

Perhaps the prospect of a starting quarterback from Walpole scared them off. If that didn't do it, the prospect of Billy Joe Hobert starting after Tedy Bruschi broke Todd Collins last week should increase local beer barrel sales and subsequently casket sales at the base of Niagara Falls.

So, I asked a friend of mine from nearby Tonawanda (Ann Sands for anonymity) for her opinion. She just said it was all sadder than Denver's passing or Atlanta's passing attack.

In lieu of watching Sunday's game she played a round of golf, then returned for the third quarter, saw it was 26–0 Patriots and started worrying about her 2–3–1 Buffalo Sabres. Now that's how you should handle this situation.

Midnight Madness kicks off hoop season

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Fans will get a chance to sneak their first peek at the 1997–98 Massachusetts men's basketball team on Friday night, when the Minutemen celebrate the opening of the NCAA's practice period with their annual Midnight Madness ceremonies at the William D. Mullins Center.

According to UMass administrative assistant Brian Gorman, who is coordinating the event, this year's Midnight Madness promises to be a little more "action–packed" than in previous years.

"Midnight Madness has been a little laid back in the past, so this year we've tried to spice things up a little bit," Gorman said. "We're having a pyro–technical show, a student slam dunk contest and student giveaways. We're just trying to make it more enjoyable for the students."

Among the events planned is a shooting contest between UMass head coach James "Bruiser" Flint, assistant coaches John Robic and Tony Barbee and three Minutemen yet to be determined. There will be a slam–dunk contest, involving three finalists from the student body. There will be performances by the UMass cheerleaders, the UMass dance team, the Pep Band and the Funk Club.

There will be prizes given out, such as Nike apparel and trips to Las Vegas and Florida. In addition, everyone who attends Midnight Madness will receive a free UMass basketball poster.

In addition to the men's basketball team, UMass coach Joanie O'Brien's women's hoop team will be introduced, along with UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen.

After an Elite Eight finish in 1995 and a Final Four appearance in 1996, the UMass basketball team finished 19– 14 last season and were eliminated in the first round of the NCAA tournament by Louisville.

Student attendance was down at home games last year, one that saw the Minutemen go 8–4 at the Mullins Center. UMass entered the 1996–1997 season 39–2 at home in the six–year history of the Mullins Center. Massachusetts started the season 6–9, including a 21–point loss to Fresno State in the Mullins Center. According to Gorman, it was the shaky start that kept many students away, and the Minutemen are hoping they get those students back this season.

"I think we lost student support a little bit because of the rough start," Gorman said. "We didn't get the support we wanted, so we feel as though we need to get them back."

Midnight Madness is the first chance for this edition of the Minutemen to be introduced to the public. Most of the players have been through Midnight Madness before, but for freshmen Rafael Cruz, Ronnell Blizzard and Jonathan DePina, this is their first exposure to a college basketball atmosphere.

"The freshmen are more pumped up than ever," Gorman said, "It's nice to see the kids get juiced up, because they don't get to play for another six weeks."

The emcee for Midnight Madness is Kevin Flynn, a standup comedian and former UMass soccer player. The event will be carried live by Channel 40 in Springfield, with Mike Ratte as host.

Doors open at 10:30 p.m. Every student must have a ticket to enter, which are free and can be picked up at the Curry Hicks Cage.

HUI GAO/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Charlton Clarke and the Massachusetts men's basketball team look forward to their season opener versus Fresno State on November 22.

Bruiser and Co. ready for tough schedule

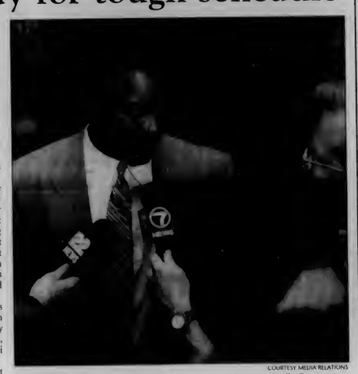
By Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.
Collegian Staff

After a turbulent, yet still successful, first campaign at the high helm of the Massachusetts men's basketball team, James "Bruiser" Flint has entered a comfort zone — or at least as comfortable a zone as any Division I basketball coach can find himself in his second season.

"Everyone tells me the first year is the hardest. I hope so," Flint said. "I'm real excited [for this season]. It was a learning experience for everyone last year… myself and the players. I thought they did a great job, we had our ups and downs, but hopefully we'll do a little better this year."

Flint and his young squad were introduced to the media yesterday at the annual UMass Men's Basketball Media Day. The second year coach was genuinely excited about his team's prospects and was chomping at the bit to get the season under way.

"I can't wait for Saturday [the team's first real practice]," Flint said. "Friday night [Midnight Madness] is for the fans and the families, but Saturday is for me."



Again, the Minutemen are faced with one of the toughest schedules in the country. "UMass is always going to play a tough schedule," Flint said. "That's our philosophy. 'Any time, any place, any team.' Not only did it help us get into the tournament last year, but I think it was one of the reasons we went on the winning streak down the stretch [last season.]"

Flint will bring his charges out to California to start the regular season against a tough Fresno State squad, which whooped up on the Minutemen early last season, 102–81, in the William D. Mullins Center.

After participating in the Great Alaska Shootout where the Minutemen may face either North Carolina or UCLA, Flint has one of the most intriguing games of the year on the docket — on Dec. 10, UMass travels out to the Great Midwest to take on perennial national power Kansas at hallowed Phog Allen Field House.

As if a battle with the Jayhawks wasn't enough, that national clash will be followed consecutively by games against Boston College, Colorado, Connecticut, Cincinnati and St. Joseph's.

In addition, the Minutemen can't forget about fierce Atlantic 10 rival Temple and new conference power Xavier.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Men's basketball coach Bruiser Flint took questions at Media Day yesterday.

Pats take edge; Raiders seek win over Broncos

Close, but no cigar.

Last Sunday, my insane prediction almost came true.

To most people's astonishment and bewilderment I picked Chicago to defeat Green Bay. I picked an 0–6 team that hasn't beaten the Pack since 1993.

The Bears had a chance to win the game on their last play of the game and failed. They lost 24–23.

My decision was not made in jest or for shock value. No, it had legitimacy behind it. As most people have surmised by now, the Packers have not played the kind of football that took them all the way last year. They boast a 5–2 record, but that includes close calls against the Bears, Miami and Minnesota, along with losses to Detroit and Philadelphia.

While it is true that most teams facing the defending Super Bowl Champions play better than usual, the Packers have yet to dominate a single game. They have pulled out victories with sub–par performances, but how much longer can this go on?

And look how close I came to being your hero.

Down one point ,24–23, with the point after yet to be kicked, the Bears elected to go for the win by attempting a two–point conversion. They called a play that the team had been practicing all season. There was no question in the huddle what was going to be called. It was to be a quick screen pass to the running back on the right side of the field, but Erik Kramer couldn't handle the pressure, and when the time came to get into the endzone, he choked. The ball went sailing over the head of his running back and so did my chance of being a legend.

The Bears lost.

My prediction failed.

Or did it?

By picking the Bears, I brought up a point — that the Packers are not the team they used to be. If this had been last year, I would have chosen the Pack without hesitation, but this year is different.

The throne in the NFC is now totally up for grabs.

In other NFL news:

I went with the Redskins against the Cowboys on Monday night and I was right.

Damn, I am tired of being right.

The 'Skins are proving to be a deadly football team. They are young and explosive, with some maturity, in the form of Darrell Green, to lead the way (He's still one of the best cornerbacks in the game and he's 64 years old.) Gus Frerotte is not their answer as the quarterback, but he has a great arm and could bring them to the playoffs. They're a perfect

Turn to NFL, page 10

Jonathan M. Place
Collegian

Myers returning to UMass; this time, with the other side

Where in the world is Rebecca Myers?

The last time the former Minutewoman was reportedly seen was last weekend in Washington, D.C., disguised as an assistant coach for the University of Dayton women's soccer team. Somewhat reliable, yet definitely overly metaphorical, authorities (i.e. UMass coach Jim Rudy) had her slightly "scouting" her former team for the Flyers — as if that really could be done.

"Rudy is an amazing coach," Myers said. "What you see one week from his team might be something totally different the next. There's no way you can scout him."

Jorma Kansanen

Yeah, right. But, anyway…

Disregarding any sort of phantom news report, a ghost (of UMass Victories Past) did cross the path of the No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team last Sunday. Myers' mere presence (even if it was for Dayton) at the matchup between George Washington and UMass, the biggest rivalry in the conference's history, might have done the trick.

A 4–0 victory resulted for the Minutewomen, calming any talk that the Colonial Women are ready to unseat UMass as the top program in the Atlantic 10 — for the time being.

Yet, Myers' presence might have been a ghost of UMass Losses Past, with the Flyers already holding the biggest loss in UMass' history for their own.

Last November 10, Dayton rolled with the gusts at the URI Soccer Not–Too–Complex, upsetting the heavily favored Minutewomen by a 3–2 score in the postseason tournament final. To say the least, it was awful to witness — for all parties concerned — but especially Myers.

A season ending knee injury midway through last season left the all–time leading scorer in UMass history on the bench for the rest of her collegiate career. Her strong midfield scoring presence was gone, and fellow senior midfielder Julie Magid must have been wondering what the hell to do with herself (after covering her runs downfield for three years). But, anyway…

Now, Myers is on the other side of the field, and on the other side of playing, with her focus now centered on coaching her new team to the level of UMass.

It has been tough trying to put the past behind her — especially with how her career ended — but tomorrow's match at 3:30 p.m. at Totman Field will finally put a period on her Minutewoman career.

"I will be an emotional wreck after the game, but this will help me realize that it's all over," Myers said. "I had so many unrealized goals, and now, I'll never reach those goals. But this game will help me officially put an end to my playing days, and help me realize that it is all over."

For Rudy, visiting former star Minutewomen has become easier and easier over the years, with them almost always returning to Amherst as coaches themselves. Myers now joins Michigan's Debbie Belkin ('84–'87), Syracuse's April Kator ('87–'90), and Penn State's Paula Wilkins ('89–'93), amongst others, who now coach at the Div. I level.

"Its always nice when one of your own comes home," Rudy said. "Her coming back in that capacity is just a sign of our success."

A success that will be tempered by a ghost of either a victorious past for UMass, or better defeat.

Ooh, scary stuff, isn't it?

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

Field hockey defeats PC

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Over the past weekend, the Massachusetts field hockey team upset the Nos. 9 and 10 teams in the nation.

Yesterday at Richard F. Garber Field, the Minutewomen went a step further and knocked off Providence College, the nation's eighth–ranked squad, 2–0.

"These girls have knocked off 8, 9 and 10 in the span of four days," UMass coach Patty Shea said. "Their confidence is building, they believe in each other and it shows."

One position that has benefitted from the confidence surge — and a key component to UMass' three–game winning streak — is goaltender. After a trio of hard–to–take losses, Tucker has anchored the team's recent winning efforts.

"The worst part about being a goalie is the backboard in the cage," Shea said. "Hearing the ball bounce against that board only solidifies that you've made a mistake. And if you hear that a number of times, you tend to drop your head and drop your shoulders.

"So we made some changes with Zowie," she continued. "And in the last three games she has given such a solid effort. Her confidence is increasing and the team's confidence in her is increasing."

That the Minutewomen's confidence in their netminder is on the rise comes with good reason. Yesterday, Tucker stonewalled the Friars, making three saves, all in the first half.

Tucker's efforts in front of the net came on Providence penalty corners. The Friars were awarded seven corners in the first half, but were unable to convert any.

"Corners are such a fine point of the game," Shea said. "Defensively, we have Zowie laying down when the other team takes its shot. She's 5–foot–9 and she can cover the entire cage."

UMass, on the other hand, had no trouble connecting on the offensive end of the corner. On the first opportunity of the afternoon, Erica Johnston rifled a shot past Friar keeper Jamie Soteriades after Vicky Browne and Amy Ott set up the shot with 19:09 remaining in the first half.

Massachusetts increased its lead with an insurance goal just over 10 minutes into the second half. Johnston carried the ball into the Friar circle, where she cut past two defenders, but a shot was not immediately available. Instead, she found a charging Kristen Schmidt with a pass, and Schmidt sent the ball home.

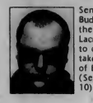
"I saw E.J.," Schmidt said. "Her stick skills are great and she was taking the ball in. But I wanted to give her the opportunity to shoot or pass the ball. She sent a great pass over and I just got it past the goalie."

Schmidt said the increasing level of confidence has also boosted the front line.

"We put in a good game at [Boston University, last Wednesday]," she said. "All through our last few practices, we have tried to work off where we ended up the day before. We always try to build on what we have already done."

The Minutewomen built off their first half momentum with a solid second half. After intermission, Providence was not able to get a shot on goal, a penalty corner or a substantial attack in the UMass zone.

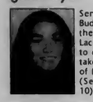
"We changed how we press the ball," Shea said. "We wanted to take away their passing areas and cut off their speed.



"At the half, I challenged them to not allow another penalty corner in the game, and they moved well defensively, as a unit, and anticipated."

Yesterday's game starts a four–game homestretch for the Minutewomen, who have been on the road for two straight weeks.

"It is fabulous to be home," Shea said. "We knew this would be a tough stretch on the schedule, and we knew we would have to be patient. But now it feels great to be back home."



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 32 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, October 17, 1997

Pixies release new album

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts Lacross team travel to chestnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College, (See Sports page 10)

Seniors say good–bye

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts Lacross team travel to chestnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College, (See Sports page 10)

WORLD

Tajikstan presidential guards killed in attack

DUSHANBE, Tajikistan (AP) — Gunmen attacked the headquarters of the presidential guards in strife-torn Tajikistan yesterday morning, killing 14 servicemen, some shot to death at point-blank range as they slept.

The raid began shortly before 3 a.m., when more than 70 gunmen descended on the compound in this former Soviet republic with automatic weapons and grenade launchers, guard commander Maj. Gen. Gaffar Mirzoyev said.

They seized two guard posts and stormed a barracks, where they shot to death five guards as they slept, he said.

More than 20 guards were wounded in the ensuing gun battle, which raged for an hour and a half before the attackers were driven away, he said. There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, Mirzoyev said. Tajik opposition leader Davlat Usmon blamed renegade rebel groups who do not recognize the authority of the opposition coalition, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

NATION

U.S. bans Japanese ships in trade dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a major escalation of a tense trade dispute, the United States yesterday ordered Japanese cargo ships barred from U.S. ports, but delayed enforcement for a day in hopes that last-minute talks could resolve the issue.

The U.S. Maritime Commission, an independent government agency, ordered the move after receiving word from Japanese shipping companies that they do not plan to pay an estimated $4 million in fines levied by the United States.

The fines were imposed after negotiators between the two countries were unable to reach agreement on American demands for freer access to Japanese harbors.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the United States and Japan were in negotiations over the matter and that the White House had sought a delay in the commission's actions while the talks were going on.

Clinton has the authority to overturn the commission's vote on national security grounds, but McCurry refused to predict whether he would.

Bruce Dombrowski, an attorney at the Maritime Commission, said the orders to the Coast Guard and the Customs Service were being prepared. He said the agencies would not begin carrying out the orders until they are formally received, most likely Friday afternoon.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 39	HIGH: 57 LOW: 37	HIGH: 57 LOW: 41

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 2
Sports.....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Million Man March anniversary celebrations conclude with vigil

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Students held silent vigil last night at the Campus Pond in commemoration of the 1995 Million Man March.

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

In an exhibition of unity, leadership and solidarity, University of Massachusetts students, staff and faculty gathered around the Campus Pond last night to commemorate the third–year anniversary of the Million Man March on Washington.

Both men and women walked from the Malcolm X Cultural Center to the Campus Pond, holding lit candles the entire way. Once at the pond, a passing of the torch ceremony was performed, where seniors and graduate students passed the torch of responsibility and leadership to the undergraduates.

The vigil marked the end of a day that began at the Malcolm X Cultural Center and had been filled with activities, lectures and group discussions regarding the significance of the Million Man March.

Spearheaded by Minister Louis Farrakhan, October's Million Man March on Washington received a great deal of skepticism as to what the true meaning behind it was. Even in the midst of subjective reports, columns and criticisms from all forms of media, the march went on as planned. From CNN to NBC, television and radio stations across the United States broadcast the day of events that took place at the Million Man March.

Among those who spoke at the march were Jesse Jackson, Maya Angelou, Ben Chavis and Minister Louis Farrakhan.

Despite varying reports as to the actual number of black men in attendance at the march (figures ranged from 400,000 to 3 million) the memory and impact the march had on those in attendance continues to be felt and expressed today.

The underlying theme of the march, other than the gathering of one million black men, was the concept of atonement and the idea that black men are to take responsibility for themselves, their families and their communities. This too was one of the main themes at last yesterday's functions.

"Atonement, in the sense of this day, is taking responsibility for prior mistakes and also taking responsibility for ourselves to keep moving in a positive direction," said James F. Callahan III, a doctoral student and one of the organizers of the event.

The first major activity was a roundtable discussion, where students discussed their individual perspectives on the march and the lessons they've taken from it. Many talked about how they did not attend the actual March in 1995, due to a variety of reasons. Many said they were not in the right mindset to go to the march, but upon seeing the march on television, regretted not going.

Others spoke of not thinking something like a Million Man March could ever have taken place and remembered doubting

Turn to VIGIL, page 2

Wong's revised referendum ballot questions featured in SGA's second election day

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

After low student–turnout nullified last month's elections, the Student Government Association (SGA) has slated a second attempt for Wednesday, Oct. 22 at the University of Massachusetts, with five referendum questions appearing on the ballot.

Referendum questions have been submitted by Lia Wong, SGA president, addressing three controversial issues on campus — the Honors College, the University Picketing Code and the proposed alcohol ban on campus.

"They [the issues] have all been major questions that will impact the University enormously," Wong said.

The first question reads: "Should the Student Government Association support an Honors College at the University of Massachusetts?"

While the SGA itself has a difference of opinion about the Honors College, they will stand behind the vote of the students, whatever it may be.

"Regardless of what the SGA feels, we are here to represent the students… it's our responsibility," Wong said.

"If the student body is opposed [to the Honors College] we would take steps to try and get the University and state to invest the money into other services," said Jason Vecchio, student coordinator for SCERA (Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy).

The second question involves the Picketing Code guidelines: "Should the Student Government Association challenge the University's Picketing Code Guidelines?"

"This is an issue on campus which is not clear to us how students stand on it," Vecchio said.

Wong's third question concerns the proposed alcohol ban by the Board of Higher Education: "Should the entire University campus be alcohol free?"

"The political landscape is making this issue hot, they [the administration] needs to have a clear understanding of how students feel," Vecchio said, referring to recent alcohol– related deaths on college campuses around the country.

These questions were written to address issues pertinent to the University campus as a whole and is an effort to bring out more voters as well.

"This should pull some segment of the campus community who didn't vote in the last election… we need to get people out there so they think that their vote is worthwhile," Frankie Mgrell, SGA chief of staff said.

Two questions written by student trustee Brian Tirrell will remain as they did on the original ballot, which was nullified due to lack of voter turnout.

Question one reads: Do you want video cameras in the lobbies of residence halls?

In a statement issued by Tirrell, a "yes" vote would support the viewing of videotape by police to catch a perpetrator should a crime or violent act occur.

"Video cameras could possibly save lives and the University [and you] a great deal of money by curbing vandals," Tirrell wrote.

A "no" vote would convey disapproval with this proposal as video cameras in the lobbies could be considered as an invasion of privacy.

Tirrell listed five questions to explain this side to voters.

"Do you want housing to spend tens of thousands of dollars to prevent the extremely few incidents where the offender would be caught on tape?" Tirrell wrote.

Turn to BALLOT, page 2

History, sociology graduate students demand contract

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts graduate student employees in both the history and sociology departments delivered letters to the office of Chancellor David K. Scott yesterday, demanding a contract.

Following a similar march by the sociology department at 1 p.m. yesterday, approximately 20 graduate students from the history department gathered outside Herter Hall at 2 p.m. with banners and signs.

Marchers circled Herter before heading to the Whitmore Administration building.

"This is a large GEO (Graduate Employment Organization) movement between now and Halloween. One department a day will be doing this," said Jeff Balfour, one of two stewards for the GEO history department.

"We've been negotiating a contract for 19 months. We deserve and want a fair contract… it's a pattern with the administration, to bargain very slow. They aren't bargaining in good faith and they have the money," Balfour said.

The issues that the history department was focusing on were affordable childcare, affirmative action, healthcare and wages.

According to member Richard Aviles, a proposal from the administration was rejected last night by the GEO. Currently, they are asking for $10,000 for the current year and $11,000 for the 1998–1999 academic year.

"We're fighting for respect. It's disrespectful when there's only 8.8 percent representation of students of color in the graduate student body… we're here to make a statement to say we are going to determine what our lives are going to be like and what kind of society we want to live in," Aviles said.

Participants went to the office of Deputy Chancellor Marcellette

Turn to CONTRACT page 3

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Richard Aviles (far left), a history graduate student, talks to Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams (far right).

UM Consumer studies department to offer "Hot Topics"

By E. M. Baumgartner
Collegian Correspondent

The Department of Consumer studies at the University of Massachusetts held a reception to introduce its new outreach initiative, the Retail Resource Program, on Wednesday.

Campus dignitaries, department heads, students and local industry leaders were on hand in the Helen Mitchell Lounge at Skinner Hall to celebrate this innovative program.

The primary offering of the Retail Research Program, Hot Topics is the brainchild of University professors John Donnellan and Martha Moran. Hot Topics is a unique outreach opportunity for local industry to capitalize on the abundance of teaching resources at UMass through a series of seminars and workshops.

The seminars will cover a broad range of topics pertinent to modern industry such as: "New Rules for Cooperate Dressing" and "The Juggling Act : Managing Work and Family."

LAUREN KOSTY/ COLLEGIAN

Speaker John Donnellan with Sheila Mammen, Robert Helgesen and Stephen J. Demski.

The ultimate goal of Hot Topics is to provide a valuable service for businesses through which they can educate their employees, keeping them current to industry needs while raising their professionalism and self–esteem.

Lee Williams, the executive vice– President of Country Curtains and the chairman of the Retail Studies Advisory Board, said that he is very excited about the new offerings.

"It gives us an opportunity to have someone form within our industry come and educate us about news which concerns us. They're a training resource and a consulting resource," Williams said.

According to Williams, both the University and the business profit through such a relationship.

"We employ students from schools like this so it [Hot Topics] gives us the chance to meet perspective employees for Country Curtains. I'm thrilled to be a part of it," Williams said.

"The link between this department and industry is critical in the way of our students finding jobs," Donnellan said. The Retail Resource Program is an intricate network of faculty, industry and students through which we all reap the benefits of our affiliation with each other."

Robert Helgesen, Dean of the College of Food and Natural Resources said, "Access is the key. Making faculty and programs available to students and then giving access to the private sector through events such as Hot Topics. The agriculture department has been involved in outreach since the turn of the century, by providing knowledge to farmers.

"We see that as a college, making programs and faculty expertise accessible to the interest outside

Turn to HOT TOPICS, page 2

Student's death ruled a suicide

NORTHAMPTON — Andrea S. Reischerl, 23, a student of Smith College, was found dead October 2 in her room at the school's Jordan House. The death, by asphyxiation, was ruled a suicide.

Smith College will hold a memorial service, Public Affairs Officer Ann Wright said.

Born August 17, 1974, in Manchester, Conn., the daughter of Frank R. and Susan (Perras) Reischerl, she was a lifelong resident of Manchester.

Reischerl was a senior at Smith College, and was formerly employed as a cashier by Blockbuster Video in Manchester.

In addition to her parents, she is survived by her maternal grandmother, Anna Perras Fortier of South Windsor, Conn.; a sister, Pamela N. LaPointe and her husband Christopher of Manchester, Conn.; a brother, Karl C. Reischerl and his partner Thomas Schultheis both of Brooklyn, N.Y.; her nephew and godson, Nicholas LaPointe of Manchester; a special friend, Douglas Gaskill of Hawaii; and several aunts, uncles and cousins.

She was buried on Monday, October 6 in St. Bridget's Church in Manchester.

— Paul Hayes

■ hot topics

continued from page 1

of the University as one of out mandates. This of course is what the Chancellor has been saying to the whole campus," Helgesen said.

UMass is the first university in the country to offer such a program that integrates the assets of the University with the expertise of outside industry.

In a summation of the program, Sheila Mammen, head of the Department of Consumer Studies, said, "It started off as a very small idea, but John and Martha gave life to a beautiful idea."

■ ballot

continued from page 1

Question two reads: Do you support students being able to have legal council (lawyers) to defend them in University judicial hearings that may result in eviction, suspension or expulsion?

A yes vote would support students having lawyers present at such hearings.

"The right to enter evidence, ask your accuser questions, not incriminate yourself and have a fair judge and jury can be infringed and students can be taken advantage of by administrators that have more experience in such matters. Currently, the University allows you to have representation from anyone in the University community, except a lawyer," Tirrell wrote.

A no vote would restrict students from that legal representation, as is currently the case.

"In the collegiate atmosphere that we try to promote at the University, pitting the University against students is not the point of a judicial hearing. There are very few cases that may result in a sanction of suspension, expulsion or eviction," Tirrell wrote.

Dukakis lectures to UM students

Samantha Poulten
Collegian Correspondent

Michael Dukakis, former governor of Massachusetts, spoke to a group of University of Massachusetts students Wednesday night urging them to get involved in the political process.

At the event, sponsored by the University Democrats, Dukakis spoke about topics ranging from health care reform, tax cuts and modern campaigning, to former Gov. Weld's bid for Ambassador to Mexico.

Dukakis urged all students to make their voice heard by voting in elections.

"There is nothing more satisfying and fulfilling then being actively involved in the political process," Dukakis said. "Anyone can get involved, no matter what race, sex, or ethnic background. This is the most open political system in the world."

Dukakis said being in public life makes him an optimist. According to Dukakis, people in the public life are "good people working together to make the world a better place." He said that student should become part of this group by volunteering and voting for candidates whose issues they believe in strongly.

Dukakis said the greatest challenge in the United States today is "what's happening to the broader middle class." According to Dukakis, there is now the greatest income gap ever between the rich and the poor. All of the income growth in the country is going to the wealthiest two percent of Americans, leaving the middle and poorer classes to make 60 percent less money in real terms then 20 years ago.

According to Dukakis, raising the minimum wage more would help to increase the middle class' income level. However, he said, it would take a rise to $7.50 per hour in order to put a family at the poverty level.

Dukakis spoke about getting involved in the health care issue. According to Dukakis, there are over 41 million Americans without health insurance, and most of them are working class citizens. The number rises about one million every year.

"Universal health care should be government mandated," Dukakis said. "Every company should be required to provide health care to all their employees, a system already being practiced in Hawaii. Hawaii's health costs are 30 percent lower than in California," Dukakis said.

He said the main reason why President Clinton's health care reform bill failed was it was too complicated.

"Mario Cuomo once said 'If you can't explain it to mother, don't send it to your legislator'," Dukakis joked.

Speaking about taxes, Dukakis said that 75 percent of the tax cuts are going to the highest paid 20 percent of Americans. "Where's the little guy [middle class]?" Dukakis asked.

Blaming some of the regressive tax problems on special interest money, Dukakis said the government should stop getting money from special interest groups, which would allow all Americans can participate fully in the political process.

Asked how he felt about former Gov. Weld's campaign for Ambassador to Mexico, Dukakis said it was undemocratic that Weld couldn't even get a hearing. However, "being governor of Massachusetts is the best job in the world. I don't know how anyone could be bored as governor," Dukakis said.

Dukakis called for a change in the campaigning process, citing his 1988 presidential campaign. "One thing happening today is that neither party is doing the grass roots campaigning they used to do," Dukakis said. "When is the last time someone knocked on your door and said, 'I'm a democratic party committee member'."

Dukakis said he had 400,000 private contributors during his presidential campaign. Each was contacted personally by a Dukakis spokesperson, and the average donation was $45 per person.

■ vigil

continued from page 1

the possibility of such unity.

"Brothas joke about how that's one thing you'll never see — unity. That day, I saw it," said biology major Neal Harris, who was on one of the three bus–loads of 150 UMass students attending the march.

Along with group discussions, video clips of various documentaries, television specials and movies where shown for those who may not have ever seen them. The selections included the award winning documentary Eyes On The Prize and the epic saga, Roots.

In addition to the videos and discussion groups, Challahan, Dan Lizana and Vice Chancellor of Campus Activities, M. Ricardo Townes, gave lectures ranging from maintaining high G.P.A's to finding your niche at UMass.

In observance of the day, students were asked to not attend classes or participate in other activities, but give their full attention to the day's program.

Of course, not everyone could make the academic sacrifice of missing a whole day of classes, and organizers of the event were understanding.

"We do understand, but I feel that it just shows how brainwashed many of us are, here in America, because if we really felt that this was important than all of us would be here," Callahan said. "Our suffering isn't recognized as being important. If it were, there would be more people here."

Even if there was limited attendance (numbers topped out at about 71 the entire day) there were plenty of high spirits for those who did make it and the sense of urgency to make change for all people of color was addressed.

"We may not be responsible for our current situation, but we are responsible for getting out of it," Callahan said.

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES PRESESNTS:

SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY

For more info: Campus Activities Office 545-3600

Comedian Teddy Smith

Student Opener: Chris Walsh

"Full Of Tooth And Explosive Comedy!"

Movie will be shown at 9:30p.m. following the performance & also on Sunday, October 19, 1997 at 8 and 10 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom

Sponsored by the Chancellor for Student Affairs and Auxiallry Services

JEANS SALE 20% Off

Corduroy Jeans • Flair leg Jeans
Boot leg jeans • Denim jeans • Velvet jeans

ZANNA downtown Amherst

KEANU REEVES AL PACINO

The newest attorney at the world's most powerful law firm has never lost a case.
But he's about to lose his soul.

DEVIL'S ADVOCATE

Evil has its winning ways.

OPENS OCTOBER 17 EVERYWHERE

Special Benefit Package
Developed especially for UMass Employees!

UMass

Preferred Checking
A No Fee Checking Account For All University of Massachusetts Employees.

- $10. minimum opening balance
- No per check charge, unlimited check writing
- No monthly service charges
- Free first order of checks (fifty of our selected checks)
- Free ATM card
- Free ATM transactions at GSB ATMs (25¢ per POS/75¢ per ATM withdrawal elsewhere)
- Automatic overdraft protection (our Greenline Account, to qualified applicants)
- Free MasterMoney debit card (with Greenline, to qualified applicants)
- Free MasterMoney transactions anywhere
- No annual fee Visa/MasterCard (to qualified applicants)

$10.00 CASH* BONUS
Sign up for Direct Deposit by 10/31/97

CALL US FOR 1-STOP SERVICE...We handle all required paperwork, no need to visit the UMass Human Resources Office!

In addition to the UMass Preferred Checking Account, we have many others which may better fit your needs including:

Green Action Account
This is a combined checking and savings account. It includes all of the above features, plus it pays high tiered money market interest and has no ATM or POS charges anywhere, provided the minimum opening balance of $1,000. is maintained.

N.O.W. Account
This interest bearing checking account has a minimum $200. opening balance. It includes all of the above features, plus it pays interest and has no ATM or POS charges anywhere, provided a minimum balance of $500. is maintained.

GREENFIELD SAVINGS BANK
SINCE 1889
61 North Main St., South Deerfield 665-4011
Corner of Federal & Main St., Greenfield 774-3191
195 Avenue A, Turners Falls 863-4316
Corner of Main & Bridge St., Shelburne Falls 625-9827
Member FDIC/DIF
info@greenfieldsavings.com
www.greenfieldsavings.com
*GSB will deposit $10.00 in your GSB checking account with the first UMass Payroll direct deposit, offer expires 10/31/97

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Sarah J. Kimmel • Photos by Chris Cesnek

If UMass is made into a dry campus, what affect do you think this change will have?

Peter Ervin landscape architecture sophomore

"I don't think that it will have any affect on dorm alcohol consumption."

Jessica Feeney
communications
Junior

"Little to none."

Brian Naylor
environmental science
Junior

"I think it will just move the drinking off campus and push the problem elsewhere."

Robin Popplestone
computer science professor

"Students will get into their motor cars... buy large quantities of alcohol and kill themselves on the drive back."

Judah Hughes psychology senior

"Kid will probably continue to drink... This is not dealing with the problem directly."

Michelle McDonald
BDI/Cmusic therapy
junior

"I agree with the Chancellor because if students have to travel off campus they will be driving back. It's safer to walk drunk than to drive drunk."

■ contract

continued from page 1

Williams because they had heard that Chancellor Scott was out of town. The letters, however, are still addressed to Scott.

The door to the Deputy Chancellor's office was shut and locked as the marchers reached it.

"That's the administration's attitude, 'close the door'," said history teaching assistant Joe Gabriel.

Marchers instead entered Chancellor Scott's office and Williams appeared to speak with the graduate students who presented her with the letter.

"We really need a contract. You have the power to help us out. We're hard workers and we're dedicated. We need your help," said Gabrielle Clark, a history teaching assistant and steward.

"Thank you for the message. I'll convey it to the chancellor. Thank you for coming," Williams said.

The administration has received GEO's counter proposal and will be waiting for a response at the next formal bargaining session.

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
All Movies $.99 / Day
The best of the new releases
Sell-Trade Games & Systems
Call us 549-4[illegible]
Mon-Thurs: Mon, Wed, Thurs 10-8
Fri-Sat: 10-9

CREATE A MONSTER AT THE SALVATION ARMY
ADDITIONAL 50% OFF 1 ITEM (CLOTHING) WITH COUPON AND $7 PURCHASE
YOUR PURCHASES HELP US TO HELP OTHERS
138 N. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST MA. 01002 (BEHIND THE MOBILE STATION)
OPEN MON-SAT 10-8

Cheap tickets.
Great advice.
Nice people.
London $369
Paris $566
Costa Rica $460
San Francisco $355
Travel
44 Main St.
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

Northwestern College of Chiropractic

At Northwestern College of Chiropractic, we feel strongly about the quality of education we provide to our 650 students and their preparedness for satisfying careers. As our 3,000 alumni know, we can provide you with an unmatched educational experience featuring:

- A well-rounded, rigorous educational program.
- Emphasis on clinical, hands-on education and experience.
- 11:1 student-to-faculty ratio, individual faculty attention;
- Clinical internships in 100+ community and four College clinics;
- Extensive interdisciplinary clinical learning opportunities;
- An internationally-known research center;
- Final term full-time private practice internships globally;
- A beautiful 23-acre campus featuring superior facilities;
- A Career Services Office to assist graduates in job placement;
- New state-of-the-art library to support education and research.

For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern Admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777
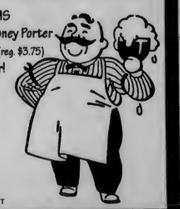
Committed to Clinical Excellence and Preparedness for Professional Success
NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE OF CHIROPRACTIC
2501 W. 84th St. • Minneapolis, Minnesota 55431

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No Child under 6 in any R rated films after 6 p.m.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9150
MT. FARMS MALL
Rocketman (PG)
Today at(5:10 @ $2.50), 8:00, 10:50 • Sat at 2:00, (5:10 @ $2.50), 8:00, 10:50 • Sun at 2:00, (5:40 @ $2.50), 8:40
Playing God (R)
Today at (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:10, 10:50 • Sat at 1:50, (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:10, 10:50 • Sun at 1:50, (5:50 @ $2.50), 8:20
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at (4:50, @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:30 • Sat at 1:40, (4:50 @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:30 • Sun at 1:40, (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:10
I Know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at (5:00 @ $2.50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sat at 1:50, (5:00 @ $2.50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sun at 1:50, (5:30 @ $2.50)8:10



Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Kiss The Girl (R)
Today at(5:00 @ $2.50), 8:00, 10:50 • Sat at 2:00(5:00 @ $2.50), 8:00, 10:50 • Sun at 2:00, (5:40 @ $2.50), 8:40
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at(5:00 @ $2.50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sat at 1:50, (5:00 @ $2.50), 7:50, 10:40 • Sun at 1:50, (5:30 @ $2.50), 8:30
U-Turn (R)
Today at 7:50 • Sat at 1:50, 7:50 • Sun at 1:50, 8:30
In And Out (PG-13)
Today at (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:10, 10:50 • Sat at 2:00, (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:10, 10:50 • Sun at 2:00, (5:50 @ $2.50), 8:20
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at (4:40 @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:40 • Sat at 1:40, (4:40 @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:40 • Sun at 1:40, (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at (4:40 @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:40 • Sat at 1:30, (4:40 @ $2.50), 7:40, 10:40 • Sun at 1:30, (5:20 @ $2.50), 8:20
Most Wanted (R)
Today at (5:10 @ $2.50), 10:50 • Sat at (5:10 @ $2.50), 10:50 • Sun at (5:50 @ $2.50)

Students Want It. Students Need It.
STUDENT TUESDAY DISCOUNT CARD
Hampshire Mall Advocate
A Student Reward Program!
Students Get It Every Tuesday.
Save 10%-25% at 25 Stores.
Isn't It Good To Be A Student?
Student Tuesday Discount Cards Available at Customer Service
(Valid Student I.D. Required, Restrictions Apply)
Hampshire Mall
Shopping Hours:
Mon - Sat 10am - 9pm
Sundays 11am - 6pm

COUNTING CROWS
plus special guest
dog's eye view
recovering the satellites
on sale now!
saturday november 1
MULLINS CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE THRU OUTLETS (ARM MUSIC • RECORD TOWN • TOWN & CHARGE BY PHONE (413) 7[illegible] 2 00 • (203) 525 4500. FOR MORE INFO CALL (413) 54[illegible]
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP an concert entertainment company VISIT US AT WWW.METROENT.COM

LIVE
SECRET SAMADHI WORLD TOUR

REEF
THURS • NOVEMBER 13
MULLINS CENTER
PRODUCED BY DELSENER/SLATER ENTERPRISES
FOR MORE INFO, CHECK OUT THE LIVE WEBSITE AT live-corf.net OR CALL 610-866-3661 Celebrate Oktoberfest with OctoberBest Values!

SAMUEL ADAMS
Lager • Octoberfest • Honey Porter draft ...only $3. pint (reg. $3.75) during October!

THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street

Think about breast cancer now

Every 12 minutes a woman falls prey to a silent killer. They are our mothers, friends, sisters and children; they are the ones who fought hard but never made it back from their battle with breast cancer. October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. In an effort to raise awareness of this disease, the news media has been running stories on breast cancer, and it seems that everyone is wearing their pink ribbons (to symbolize breast cancer awareness). As you watch the stories, it is easy to think that this does not affect younger women. The sad fact is that it does.

Brandee Helbick

On Monday i lost a friend to this disease, she was not the typical patient that you see in the news. Allison was a vibrant 30–year–old woman in the prime of her life. A mother of two and a former collegiate athlete, she was diagnosed with breast cancer at age 28. Like 29 percent of breast cancer patients, she discovered a lump in her breast through chance. It did not seem like a big deal at the time; she was young and did not have a high risk background. (The average age of diagnosis for breast cancer is 51 years old.) So, like many other young women, she dismissed the thought, because she thought she was too young to have breast cancer. As the lump increased in size, so did her concern.

The American Cancer Society currently recommends mammograms for women ages 40 and up. Allison was only 28, too young to need a regular mammogram. The fact of the matter is mammography remains our best tool in the race against time that is breast cancer. The average malignant lump that is found by women who get a regular mammogram is 0.3 centimeters. The average lump that is found by occasional self–exam is 2.5 centimeters. it is suggested by the American Cancer Society that women under the age of 40 do regular self–exams once a month. The five–year survival rate of women who do only breast self–exams is 65 percent. Compare that with the 95 percent five–year survival rate of women who receive regular mammograms.

I do not mean to sound bitter when i say that, but it is simply not fair to young women to cut our survival rate because of our age. It is true that younger women have a lowered risk of developing breast cancer, they also have a lowered risk of cervical cancer (as long as they have not contracted certain STDs) which is what a pap smear tests for. One in eight women have or will have breast cancer. Prospects for those receiving late diagnosis are grim; all women should receive a regular mammogram along with their pap smear during a gynecological exam, no matter what their age. Allison was not 40, nor are thousands of other breast cancer patients. She left behind two children; one of them is a little girl who may someday ask why her mom did not get the mammogram in time, and someone will have to answer, "Because she was too young."

Brandee Helbick is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Defending the Greek area

To the editor:

This past Thursday I glanced upon an interesting section of the Collegian called "Women's Issues." Here I was greeted by Sissy Andrews "ranting" about how appalled she was that two young gentlemen discussed their plans to have a keg at their house for the weekend and invite, of all people, girls.

Well Sissy, big deal! On behalf of all men who like beer and enjoy the company of a lady, let me say this is a perfectly normal activity for some college students. If they somehow offended you by mentioning how intoxicated they wanted to get, suck it up. They don't have to ask you for permission to drink beer, talk to girls, or wipe their ass. If you didn't like what they said you should have opened your mouth.

Where do you get off making the assumption that these men were members of a fraternity? Nowhere in your article did you give any reason for your assumption. Why haven't you found a way to blame to fraternities for that blackout on campus, the problems in the middle east, or your inability to get a parking spot in Amherst?

The truth of it all is that they have a right to say what they want, just like you have a right to complain. It would make no difference whether or not those comments were made by a fraternity member or some random man walking around campus. You still would have written an article disparaging fraternities.

You stated that you "didn't get" what the Greek area was all about. You're not "supposed" to get it unless you experience fraternity and sorority rush and pledging. All over the country, Greek areas are held in the highest regard; only in the politically correct bastions of the Northeast is it common to bash fraternity and sorority members. Eighty percent of our Congress were Greek members.

If you really want to know "what it's all about," try talking to one of us instead of regurgitating a stereotype. We might just surprise you!

Jeffrey Semon
Pi Kappa Alpha

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

School of Education reorganizing

As members of one of the three School of Education departments, we are troubled by the rush to judgement concerning alleged program eliminations in the School. These allegations, made in the press and in a number of public forums over the past few weeks, are misinformed and divisive, and we believe that they constitute an inexplicable smear campaign against the dean and the School. It is time to present a different perspective in the context of SOE reorganization.

The major factor behind this controversy is the need for the SOE to reconfigure our graduate degree programming in light of an almost 50 percent reduction in faculty over the past decade. Clearly, changes had to be made on purely academic grounds, as faculty attrition resulted in some doctoral programs staffed by two or three faculty. The result of this need for change has been a long, stressful, sometimes contentious but ultimately collaborative process under Dean Jackson's leadership, which has meant that all of us gave up something to arrive at a more coherent, streamlined and effective program structure. It is critical to note that faculty made all academic decisions within the resource limits clearly established by the Dean early on in our restructuring process.

Given the painful and difficult process of restructuring we have all been through, we are especially angered that several faculty have placed themselves outside the faculty planning process by insisting on the approval of degree programs beyond the number that can be adequately staffed and supported in the Strategic Plan. These faculty do not accept and are to overturn the outcome of two years of faculty deliberation. We consider it seriously misleading for them to claim to education students or to other members of the University community, that a failure to recognize the Curriculum and Learning Program, or Indigenous Studies, constitutes a program elimination or "cut." There is not now, and has not been, a formal program called Curriculum and Learning, or to Indigenous Studies, and therefore neither one could have been "cut." What was and is available to students interested in curriculum and learning, or the education of indigenous peoples is participation by concerned faculty in one of the larger program units by mutual agreement.

Maurianne Adams
William E. Cross
Pat Griffin
Barbara Love
Bill Matthews
Gary Stoner

All restructuring in the School was premised on the constraint that our resources cannot support more than seven doctoral programs across the three departments at the present time. The Curriculum and Learning program is beyond this budgetary limit and represents a refusal by the three faculty involved to participate in the tough restructuring discussions in which most of our faculty have been engaged. The newly configured degree programs that have emerged from the planning process are built on the expectation that faculty will work together in collaborative graduate programs of high quality and of more than three faculty.

We believe that the current Strategic Plan provides an excellent program of graduate study for our students. The crux of the dispute, to our thinking, is whether or not the SOE can move forward with reorganization in the context of limited resources, in a way that allows for a reasonable number of graduate programs per department, and that has placed in the hands of the faculty the painful decisions about how we will combine forces to staff these programs.

There are two further points: 1)The concern, accepted as fact in a recent Graduate Student Senate vote, that graduate TA's are allocated in unequal ways that favor one unit over another, is factually incorrect. Decisions about resources are made among the three department heads, and the Teacher Education and Curriculum Studies Department (to which the faculty and students alleging this inequality belong), has in fact the major proportion of TA instructional resources in the School. 2) The SOE need yield to no other in its long record of serious, explicit attention to diversity and social justice. We are proud of this record and of Dean Jackson's consistently strong and articulate leadership in this and other areas; we believe that the Dean and the current reorganization of the School of Education support this tradition.

It is essential that the past two years of arduous decision– making, that have brought us as a School to the current Strategic Plan, not be derailed by the public campaign of faculty and students who do not like the outcome, who circulate misinformation, and who have placed themselves outside the planing process. It is critical, and still possible, for them to develop program linkages with their departmental colleagues, and to get on with the important academic work before us, but in the atmosphere of collegiality, integrity and honesty that we have every right to expect of one another.

Maurianne Adams, William E. Cross, Pat Griffin, Barbara Love, Bill Matthews and Gary Stoner are members of the Department of Student Development and Pupil Personnel Services.

The Editorial/Opinion page is seeking pieces for a counterpoint feature on the proposed alcohol ban. Those interested should contact Dan Bodah at the Collegian at 545–1491. Submissions are due at the latest by Sunday, Oct

Doonesbury — BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangasirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Presten Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jadyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Revere to host Grateful Dead party Sat.

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

In an event that will unquestionably light a fire any Deadhead, this upcoming weekend marks the release party for Dick's Picks 9, which is happening at the Wonderland Ballroom on Route 1–A in Revere this Saturday evening.

Fans of the Dead's music (and especially the WHCN broadcast of the nationally syndicated radio show "The Grateful Dead Hour") might want to head out to Revere for what promises to be a non–stop, six–hour party from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m. With new vault–released music played under a great sound system by Dick Latvala (the controller of the Dead vaults), along with help from Grateful Dead Hour host David Gans, it is sure to be a special treat for local Deadheads.

Despite the fact that the Dead's music is typically all one needs to have a fun time, there will also be psychedelic light and laser show throughout the night as well as slide and film presentations focusing on the band culled from throughout their career.

Latvala and Gans have been doing this type of thing for two years now — since the Dead split up soon after the death of Jerry Garcia — and New England is finally being treated to one of these "vault parties." This party is due to the special occasion of the latest in the long continuing line of Dick's Picks releases that began in 1993 and are issued through Grateful Dead Mercantile at quite affordable prices.

In conjunction, on Sunday there will be a "Dead–fest" around the Wonderland with live music from Slipknot! and other local bands.

To get to the Wonderland Ballroom, get on the Mass Pike East to its endpoint in Boston and continue through the Callahan Tunnel and follow the signs to Route 1–A, on which the Ballroom is located.

The Dick's Picks 9 release party Revere happens tomorrow night from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m. Tickets can be purchased by calling 1–888–THE–DEAD or at the door. Dick's Picks 9 will be available beginning Oct. 18, and can be purchased by calling 1–800–225–3323.

BE CREATIVE BE REAL BE ORIGINAL WRITE FOR ARTS..... AND JUST BE... AT THE COLLEGIAN

The Pixies: UMass' finest export

COURTESY JOHN MURPHY

The Pixies, whose sonic style paved the way for the '90s alternative music breakthrough, return from the dead on the newly released retrospective, Death To The Pixies.

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

PIXIES
Death To The Pixies
Elektra/4AD

From 1987 until their implosion in 1993, the Pixies invented music, as we know it. Make no mistake: if not for Black Francis, Kim Deal, David Lovering and Joey Santiago, it is highly doubtful that anyone outside of Seattle would have ever heard of Nirvana, Alice In Chains and the like. Oh, and before I forget, for those of you obsessed with the faux–angst of Bush, take a listen to the Pixies and learn where all those "original" catchy guitar chords came from.

Francis (a.k.a. Charles Thompson, a.k.a. Frank Black) was a student here at UMass–Amherst in the mid–'80s, and after a trip to Puerto Rico to study Spanish during his sophomore year, he promptly dropped out of school, moved to Boston and decided to form a band. The rest, they say, is history.

Death To The Pixies (Elektra/4AD) is a two–disc retrospective on the band's brief but brilliant career — a discography consisting only of four albums and an EP. While one can never get enough of the Pixies, this fond look back serves as a good introduction for those unfamiliar to the band that paved the way for alternative music's commercial breakthrough in the '90s.

The first disc serves as a sort of "greatest hits" type collection (containing only previously released material), which is somewhat of a tough thing to grasp seeing as the Pixies didn't really have any "hits" in the traditional sense: radio and MTV virtually ignored them.

Considering that most people interested in buying Death To The Pixies probably already have all or most of this material, a better choice would have been to compile their unusually solid (and increasingly difficult to locate) b–sides and alternate takes or even release the rest of their original 1987 17–song demo.

Still, most of the major Pixies songs are here — although "Alec Eiffel" has been curiously omitted — including the classic "U–Mass," a hilarious commentary on Francis' time spent in the "Valley full o' pioneer." Hearing him repeatedly scream "It's educational!" typifies what every student here says in their head while studying for those dreaded final exams each semester.

Another song of special significance to UMass students is "Debaser," one of the greatest songs ever written. The opening track off 1989's Doolittle, it's the Pixies magnum opus, where the words and frenetic paced music meld together as one mutually fulfilling entity. Francis wrote it in a twisted tribute to UMass Comparative Literature professor Don Levine's course on avant garde film.

Disc 2, a live recording of a complete 1990 Dutch concert, will be of greater interest to longtime Pixies fans. While it takes a little while for Francis' voice to warm up, the playing is hard, fast and clean — in other words it's a typical revelatory Pixies performance, epitomizing their oft–imitated hallmarks. "Into The White," a little heard b–side from the Doolittle sessions is a nice surprise, as is the slowed–down version of "Wave Of Mutilation."

With a price tag around $20, Death To The Pixies is worth buying if only for the live disc. Thanks to the petty policing of The Dave Matthews Band and their lawyers, where else can you find a top quality CD of a live concert these days without having to fear legal recrimination? B+

Come On In Out Of The Plain!

3 floors • stores galore • food & mark dictionary / six bucks • cup o'Joe / a buck • "For Dummies" guides / nineteen bucks beaded curtain / nine bucks • book bags / from eighteen bucks

Genko (for mental sharpness) / fifteen bucks • magic stone / twelve bucks
Armani hoseiry / nine bucks • Lucky jeans / sixty eight bucks shower caddy / eleven bucks • CK boxer shorts / eighteen bucks
Hard Candy lipsticks / sixteen bucks

THORNES 150 MARKETPLACE
"under the big green awning"

On the bus route • Open Mon–Tue: Wed 10–6, Thur–Fri: Sat 10–9, Sun 12–5
150 Main Street, Northampton

ATTENTION GRADUATING SENIORS!
get Ready for MAY now!
Meet Filene's New Chairman,
J. Kent McHose!
Tuesday, October 21, 1997
From 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. at Memorial Hall
Refreshments served
FILENE'S
A Division of the May Department Stores Company www.maycompany.com

Hungry?
$5.99 NO LIMIT OFFER EXPIRES 10/31/97
COLLEGE SPECIAL NO COUPON NECESSARY
Large One-Topping Pizza
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.
Call 586-7772
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley

UM V-ball toils in A-10

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team will look to rebound on the road this weekend after a season-high five game homestand they'd like to forget.

The Minutewomen will travel to Philadelphia today for matches against Atlantic 10 foes Temple and La Salle. UMass will face Temple tonight at 7 p.m. and La Salle tomorrow afternoon at 1 p.m.

After winning four matches in a row, the Minutewomen have dropped four of their last five.

"Temple is a well-rounded offensive team with a consistent middle," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said. "They have a very good outside hitter and we need to be aware of that."

Tonight's matchup will prove to be a test of the team as far as how they stack up against the best in the A-10 Conference. The Owls are perched atop the A-10 with a perfect 8-0 record.

Volleyball
Massachusetts @ Temple
Tonight 7 p.m.

UMass hopes to continue their success over La Salle as they currently hold a pristine 8-0 mark versus the Explorers. The Minutewomen dominated in their two matches last year, winning all six games they played.

"La Salle has shown improvement this year as they've beaten several teams that they lost to last year," Kenny said. "They're bigger than us and our ball control has to be better than it has been."

The Minutewomen will look to senior outside hitter Lesley Nolan and sophomore outside hitter Kari Hogancamp to lead by example this weekend as they are each coming off a double-doubie in the Fordham match last Saturday.

Senior middle blocker Michelle Paciorek enters tonight's match as the all-time block leader for UMass. Paciorek became the undisputed block champion by unifying all three blocking records. She hoids the all-time marks for total blocks, solo blocks, and now block assists after passing graduate Dionne Nash in the match versus Fordham tomorrow.

UM polo takes on Golden Bears

By Jim Eltringham
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team posted a 3-0 record in a Collegiate Water Polo Association tournament last weekend, the result of the team playing some of the best games of this season — the capper being an 18-11 victory over No. 19 St. Francis, was called the squad's "best total team game" by UMass coach Russ Yarworth.

The hot streak could not have come at a better time. Tonight, the No. 14 Minutemen (17-4 overall, 7-2 CWPA) will face No. 3 California at Diablo Valley College, and follow up with an appearance in the 16-team NorCal Tournament.

UMass has not fared well against West Coast teams in the past, especially California. The Minutemen have lost all six matches against the Golden Bears, including a 10-6 defeat in a semi-final of the 1995 NCAA tournament.

Men's Water Polo
No. 14 Massachusetts @ No. 3 Califonia
Tonight

Things will not get any easier when the weekend starts. The NorCal tournament will have UMass paired up with UCLA, Long Beach State, and USC. Aside from being ranked No. 6 in the nation, the UCLA Bruins also hold the last two NCAA championship banners.

Yarworth is treating this competition with a'level head. "We have to continue to communicate on defense," he said, adding that this will help "close out the counter attack... in the St. Francis game, I think we only gave up one counter attack goal."

The Minutemen will have to continue to focus on defense, according to Yarworth.

"Our weakness is man-to-man defense," said Yarworth pointing out that this was exposed by many of St. Francis's players who had European experience. Yarworth also continues to stress the importance of "balancing our offense.

"We have to play intensely all the time... I'm looking for good team discipline and good team attitudes... I want to see good water polo."

Anyone interested in Broadcasting
ie: News, Entertainment,
Sports, Etc.
COME CHECK US OUT!
WMUA 91.1 F.M.
NEWS STAFF
105 Campus Center (next to collegian)
545-2876

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
GUIDING YOU THROUGH THE NIGHT

Kai Chi
Monday Night Football
$2.00 1/2 time buffet
We Deliver
Sun-Weds. Noon-Midnight
Thurs - Sat Noon-2am
586-2774 • Mt.Farms Mall, Hadley

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS
ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • MATH
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – together, Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems and Raytheon TI Systems are driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com.
WE'LL BE ON YOUR CAMPUS ON OCTOBER 21, 1997.
CONTACT YOUR CAREER PLACEMENT OFFICE TODAY TO SCHEDULE AN INTERVIEW.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED
for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst
Call John Riley
at 253-7804
or
1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0
COLLEGIAN NEWS SERVICE

■ women's soccer

continued from page 10

year in the A-10 tournament.

"I think we both have something to prove here," coach Jim Rudy said, "It will be a hard fought, head-to-head, end-to-end kind of game."

For the most part, the Flyers haven't really been tested at the national level, playing within the Atlantic 10 and smaller, non-ranked teams. Their only loss is against league opponent Xavier, a 1-0 defeat.

Dayton plays a dump-and-run style, where they carry it up the flanks and knock it in the middle for the forwards to rush the goal.

"They play a different style, more than anyone we have faced," Rudy said. "They have a non-stop turnover of players, and their second team is almost as good as their first — whatever works for them."

Dayton's scoring has been equally spread throughout the squad with team leaders freshman Melissa Buck (19 pts), senior Julie Wilde (17 pts), senior Angie Beecroft (14 pts), sophomore Danielle Gillespie (13 pts), and freshman Ingrid Zielke (12 pts) all in double figures. Fourteen players have scored, with nine tallying two or more.

Wilde is a powerful player, with skill, speed and deception, according to Rudy.

"She plays much like a withdrawn center-forward," Rudy said. "Like Myers once did for UMass."

The Musketeers have a 10-2 record, posting an undefeated 5-0 record in the A-10. Senior Amanda Gruber has 15 points, and her sister, freshman Annette Gruber, has racked up 11 points so far this season. The sibling duo has scored 26 of the team's 56 goals, and are considered second to only North Carolina as far as power forwards.

Sophomore Amy Reinshagen is the rover on the field, playing like an attacking midfielder and providing either the offense of defense the necessary boost.

■ football

continued from page 10

Shipp, Jim Pizano, and Matt Jordan the tailback position will always have fresh legs. Each runner will be given a drive to work, no matter if the drive is two plays or 15. Jordan will also be used on every third down situation as either a tailback or fullback.

"Tailbacks get quite a pounding throughout the game," Colbert said. "By rotating the three of them, they will be able to last longer and be more useful throughout the game."

On the defensive side of the ball, there are still three Minutemen that are dominating the Atlantic 10. Senior free safety Bryan Mooney leads the A-10 for the third week in a row with 78 total tackles, 45 of which are unassisted. Standout linebacker Khari Samuel is second in the league with 74, but leads UMass with 46 unassisted grabs. Samuel also leads the Atlantic 10 with 10 tackles for losses.

Sophomore outside linebacker Chris Price has been an unsung hero this season placing fourth in the conference with 66 tackles, 39 unassisted.

"We try to score enough points to win," Colbert said. "We didn't score 50, Villanova scored 49. The name of it is to win the game."

Women's XC gearing up for NE Championships

By Jim Eltringham
Collegian Staff

Before the season began, Massachusetts women's cross country coach Julie LaFreniere said her team's goal was to "train through" September and October, aiming to heal their wounded for the big races.

The big races are here.

The Minutewomen are now in the midst of the toughest part of their schedule. Today, they will compete in the New England Championship. They will take on 49 other teams from across the region in what promises to be their biggest race thus far.

Women's Cross Country
New England Championships
Today Noon

"The New England area is very strong with distance races," LaFreniere said. Indeed, this competition will provide some tough competition for the Minutewomen. Providence College, Boston College and Dartmouth are all nationally ranked. Also, schools from all divisions are competing.

"It's very rare to be able to compete with some of these schools," LaFreniere said, referring to the non-Division I teams involved. "It's a great opportunity."

There is some concern regarding the course itself providing some obstacles. "There's a point where it funnels in... there could be a bottleneck," LaFreniere said. "I'll be holding my breath." The cause of this bottlenecking can be traced to the fact that 350 runners will be on the course. The Minutewomen have been trying to avoid this setback by focusing on quicker starts in practice.

The same type of situation happened at UMass's last race, the Paul Short Invitational two weeks ago. Runners from 30 schools created a glut on the course. The results for that race were not finalized until two hours after the race had ended. The Minutewomen finished fifth — just three points behind fourth place Cornell.

"Some of [the runners] ran their best races against tough competition," LaFreniere said of the team's performance at Paul Short.

Despite the looming powerhouses in today's New England Championship, the team is "excited for this race," according to LaFreniere. "There's a lot of tradition involved."

■ men's soccer

continued from page 10

the A-10 conference.

Now the Minutemen are finding themselves struggling to to stay afloat in their own conference. Although every conference game is an important one, the games this weekend are especially so for UMass. They are must-win situations. How the team performs this weekend will greatly affect whether or not they qualify for the NCAA's at the end of the season.

Looking to help the UMass pull out wins this weekend will be senior forward Mike Butler. Butler began this season as one of Massachusetts' biggest scorers and has only continued to build on his past success.

He has 12 points in the last three games, and leads the team with 25. He is currently tied for second all-time in career points with 88, tied for third in goals with 33, and second in assists with 22.

■ field hockey

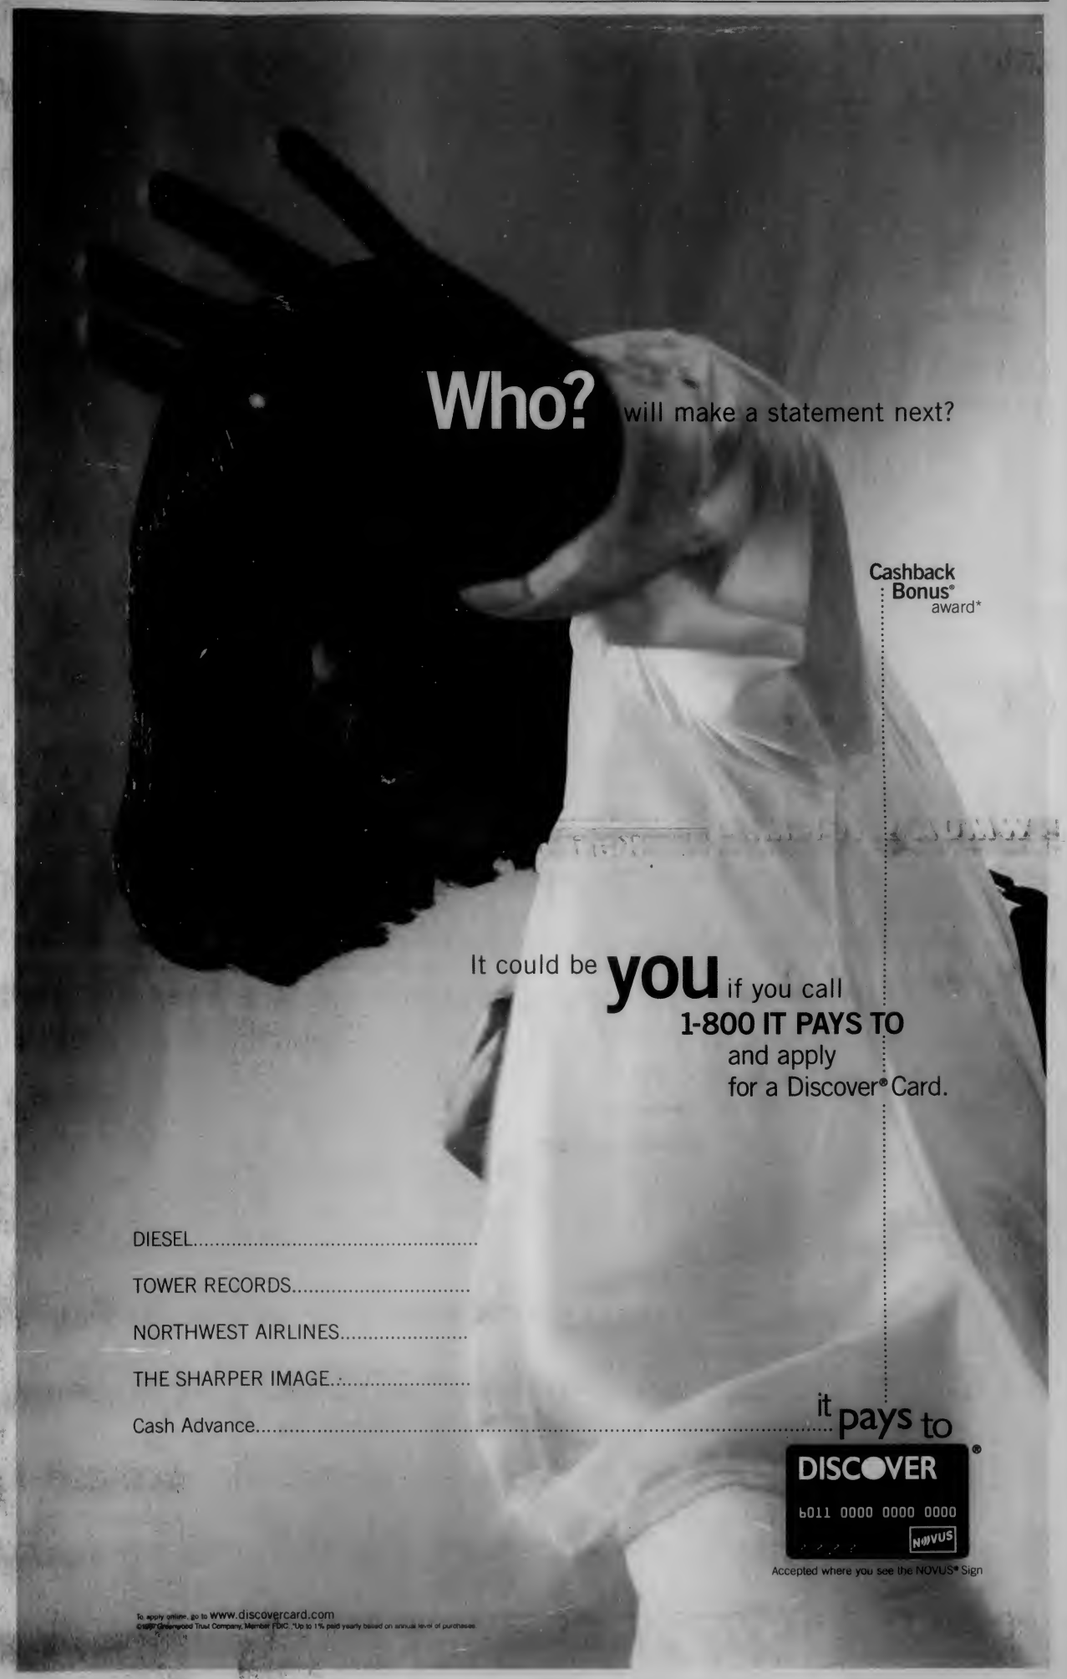
continued from page 10

upped the team's scoring punch.

"Penalty corners are such a specific, fine point in the game," Shea said. "We look to work on them, both offensively and defensively, every time."

Defensively, it will be important for UMass to concentrate on denying La Salle corners — and stopping them if they are awarded.

"They get a lot of corners and they take a lot of shots," Shea said. "We will have to be very disciplined against them."



Four Explorer players are in double digits in the shot category, but only one La Salle player, Alishia Faller, has collected four goals. Three players follow with three goals, and four have two apiece.

Concentration should not be hard for the Minutewomen to come by, especially considering that the Explorers are a conference opponent. From the start of the season, Shea has emphasized that Atlantic 10 games are a main focus for her team.

"Conference games are huge," Shea said earlier in the year. "They represent a season within the season."

La Salle has limited experience against A-10 opponents thus far. The Explorers have racked up a 1-0 record against conference foes, a victory that has come against a weakened St. Joseph's squad.

The Minutewomen, on the other hand, have reaped a perfect record in A-10 play, with wins against Temple and Rhode Island.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Sigma Kappa Sorority Open House BBQ Sat., Oct 17th from 1-3pm. For more info call Beth at 545-7035. Sigma Kappa is located on 19 Allen St. (behind Hillel)

APARTMENT FOR RENT

One bedroom apartment Downtown. $520 + utilities. 253-1903, 545-4003, 545-4002.

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k. Fiberglass Shell Calif Truck. No rust. $4500. Call 582-9872

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std., power everything. Very fast. $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

1984 VW Maroon Rabbit Low mileage. 95% mint condition $1400 or B/O. Call 584-2940

1990 Chevy Barretta Great condition. Must sell. BEST REASONABLE OFFER takes it. 296-4549

1990 Jeep Wrangler 5 speed, 85k, hard top/soft top. $6000. 256-0501

EMPLOYMENT

Abt Associates is looking for a few reliable people with good communications and computer skills who are available to work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Evening and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training. The starting wage is $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Free transportation with PVTA Bus Line is provided. For more information or to arrange a personal interview call (413)587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

$1,000's WEEKLY!! Stuff envelopes at home for $2.00 each plus bonuses. F/T, P/T. Make $800+ weekly, guaranteed! Free supplies. For details, send one stamp to: N-113, 12021 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 552, Los Angeles, CA 90025

Needed Immediately Firestone of Northampton needs part-time Sales/Customer Service Rep. 25-30 hours a week. Starting salary $7.50 per hour. Call 586-1584

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

EMPLOYMENT

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED

for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst

Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0 COLLEGE NEWS SERVICE

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

International Marketing Firm seeks Spokesperson. $10 per hour, 8-10 hours a week. Models are encouraged to apply. Call Sean Sweeney (800)829-4777

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

EMPLOYMENT

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Kona Mountain Bike Ridden off-road only 3 times. Shimano LX Shifter. $450 or B/O. Call Dan at 628-3857 Leave message.

Self Amplified Bazooka Base Tube 6 inches, great shape. Call 259-1984

Computers! Computers! Computers!

The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4850

FOR SALE

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 20th Birthday Amy! Sigma Love, Your Big Sis

Happy 20th B-Day! To the man who completes me! Love, D

To A Great Friend: Happy 20th Birthday Jess! Did somebody say party? Love JB!

LOST

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6 Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

Earn $75-$100

MISCELLANEOUS

Exercise Science Study Needs non-weight trained males Call Steve @ 253-4952 or 5-6072

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room available on Main St. Very close to town. On bus route. 21+ please. Call 259-9282

ROOMMATE WANTED

One large bedroom available in Sugarloaf Estates. $333/month. Great place to live. Call 665-7701

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Retired Faculty Member offers English Language Lessons and Editorial Expertise to International Students, all levels. Reasonable rates. Ms. Reed 253-3354

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Port Antonio Jamaica Seaside Cottages Real Jamaican Neighborhood $150/Week 367-9350

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Earn $125 Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study. 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

SERVICES

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS

available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center basement.

Special Classified Features

BOLD WORDS	$.50 / word
GREEK LETTERS	$1.50 / line
BLACK REVERSE BOX	$2.00 / run
BORDER BOX	$2.00 / run

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad included in order to be printed. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 17

Celebration/Meeting — Hindu students organization will hold a celebration of Dusshera at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 903. The Pooja will be followed by a general meeting. All are welcome. Contact Jai at 546–1511 for more information.

Meeting — Intervarsity Christian Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room posted at the Info desk, continuing series on whole life.

Rally — Join Arise, Earthfirst, Native Forest Network, Greenpeace, PACT and more in Springfield to rally against Monsanto's chemical and genetic contamination of our environment. Rides available from the Visitor Center at 11 a.m. Cell 625-0141 for more information.

Service — Sukkot special student/faculty/staff shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. Sponsored by Hillel.

Tournament — Intramural tennis tournament begins at the lower courts at the Mullins Center.

SATURDAY, OCT. 18

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

SUNDAY, OCT. 19

Hike — Carpool to Notch Visitors Center to enjoy the Holyoke range at its foliage peak and experience a bit of Judeism's wisdom in nature. Meet at noon at the Hillel House. Sponsored by Hillel's Jewish Environmental Group.

MONDAY, SEPT. 20

Lecture — A work–in–progress presentation "The Last Hermits: Women's Education in Korea at the Turn of the Century" by Hyaewool Choi from the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye Hall, room 207, Smith College. Sponsored by the Project on Women and Social Change.

Lecture — Department of Biological Sciences presents the 1997 Christianna Smith Lecture featuring Donald Ingber, M.D., Ph.D. from Children's Hospital of Boston entitled "Cellular tensegrity. integrin signaling, and control of morphogenesis" at 7:15 p.m. in Hooker Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Talk/Signing — Author talk and signing to feature Peggy Claude–Pierre, author of The Secret Language of Eating Disorders: The Revolutionary New Approach to Understanding and Curing Anorexia, Bulimia at 7:30 p.m. in Mary Woolley Hall, the New York room, Mount Holyoke College. For more information, call The Odyssey Bookshop, 534–7307, or the College's Health Education program, 538–2466.

Talk — Works–in–progress talk entitled "African–American Females and Gender Dysphoria" given by Constance Johnson, a Five College Women's Studies Community Associate from Center for Human Development, at 4:30 p.m. at the Women's House Living Room at Mount Holyoke College.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation on Friday, October 17, at 24. The free one–hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Hertzer 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545– 0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the '97–'98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406c or just bring the artwork by.

Course — The Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies is offering a Certificate in Film Studies to all majors (equivalent to a minor). Includes six courses in film/video studies. For more information and to fill out an application, stop by the office In 101 South College or call 545–3659. Office hours MW 8 a.m.–5 p.m., TuTh 10 a.m.–5 p.m., F 8 a.m.–2 p.m. Or visit the webpage: www.umass.edu/film.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www–ureg.admin.umess.edu.

Internships — Environmental internships offered. Campaigns this semester include: Hunger and Homelessness, Pesticides, Endangered Species, Updated Bottle Bill and Campaign Finance Reform. Looking for motivated students to take leadership positions. Call MassPIRG at 545-0199 or stop by 423A Student Union.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545-2726.

Notice — The women's basketball team will be holding walk–on tryouts on October 20th at 6:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Proof of insurance and of a recent physical are required to participate in tryouts. For further information, call the women's basketball office at 545–2726.

Open Forum — Come meet the final candidates for the Assistant Director of Disability Services search as they attend a campus–wide open forum. All sessions will be held in the Campus Center from 4–5:30 p.m. Wayne Husted on Friday, Oct. 17 in room 917. Dori McCracken and Susan Prior to be announced.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups is happening now. Call 577-5316 for more information.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, N.H. on Friday October 24–26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545– 2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech, voice, auditions on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 11 a.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. RSVP by Oct. 24 call 545-0415.

FYI's are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: YOU COMPANY NAME HERE ----------545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23	CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24	CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25	Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	26	UCTV
6	PBS/57	Springfield	27	TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28	BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29	TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30	Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31	Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32	Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33	Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

545-3500

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 17, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		McLaughlin	Religion	Nova "Faster Than Sound"
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Family Matters	Meego	Gregory Hines	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Blackout"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Meego	Gregory Hines	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Blackout"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	You Wish	Teen Angel	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince		★★ "Ernest Scared Stupid" (1991, Comedy) Jim Varney.		News				Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Pilot"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Married... With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Grace Under	"Seduced and Betrayed" (1995, Suspense) Susan Lucci.				News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Players "Pilot"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Visitor "Remember" (In Stereo)		Millennium "Monster"		News		Seinfeld	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Players "Pilot"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Follow Money	National Desk (Part 3 of 3)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	You Wish	Teen Angel	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★★ "Internal Affairs" (1990, Drama) Richard Gere, Andy Garcia.				NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Vancouver Canucks. (Live)
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	★★★½ "Back to the Future" (1985, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox, Christopher Lloyd.				★★★ "Risky Business" (1983) Tom Cruise.
A&E	32	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Virus"		Biography: Mia Farrow.		America's Castles		Grand Tour		Law & Order "Wedded Bliss"
CNN	42	World/View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	35	John Heinon	Meka-Laugh	Mike MacDonald: Happy		Gallegher: Stuck in the '60s		Sinbad: Brain Damaged (R)		Left Field	Howie Mandel	Mike MacDonald: Happy
DISC	48	Wings "Wings Over the Gulf		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Loath		News	Storm	Fengal (R)		Justice Files "Con Artists" (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		World Series	NHL Hockey: St. Louis Blues at Chicago Blackhawks. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Nurses on the Line: The Crash of Flight 7" (1993, Drama)				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	MTV Live	Viewers	Fight for Right	Week In Rock	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Beavis-Butt.	Ag. 3F (R)	Oddvilla, MTV	Loveline
NICK	59	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!		Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years	Wonder Years
SCIFI	60	(4:00)	Swamp Thing	Night Stalker "Zombie"		★★ "Midnight Offerage" (1951, Suspense) Melissa Sue Anderson.				Friday the 13th: The Series		Night Stalker "Zombie"
TLC	49	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours "Fire"		Firefighters (R)		Volcano Park (R)		Real America: 48 Hours "Fire"
TNT	25	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superman		Basketball: McDonald's Championship.					Basketball: McDonald's Championship.
USA	29	Baywatch "The Life You Save"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★½ "Field of Dreams" (1989, Fantasy) Kevin Costner.		★★★ "A Time to Kill" (1996, Drama) Sandra Bullock.		★★½ "Shocker" (1989)
HBO	45	(5:00) "For the Moment" (1993)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		Garth Live From Central Park		Boxing: Jose Luis Lopez vs. Ike Quartey. (In Stereo Live)					Chris Rock
MAX	55	(4:45)	★½ "Spill" (1996)	Brian Bosworth. PG-13		★★★ "Sweet Nothing" (1995, Drama) Michael Imperioli.				★★★ "A Time to Kill" (1996, Drama) Sandra Bullock.
SHOW	54	(4:30)	On the Set (R)	★★½ "Kingpin" (1996, Comedy) Woody Harrelson. PG-13				"Joe Torre: Curveballs Along the Way"		(1997)		Stargate SG-1 "Fire and Water"	Hunger (R)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

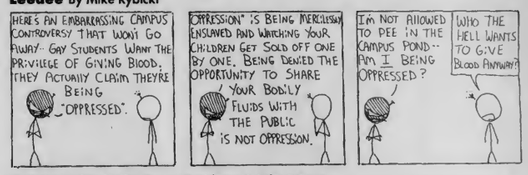
Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Children for Sale By Jon Braidman & Luke Degnan

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — What you see is not always what you get, but today things may seem unusually easy to comprehend in this vein. Hidden meanings are few.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You should be able to make good use of any spare time you may have today; in fact, you can double up your efforts quite often.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Today, you may be tempted to kill two birds with one stone, but you'll realize that each will demand your utmost attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — One phase is ending while another is beginning, so you had better know which is which as you tend to each. Give yourself a break this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — What you find most annoying about a rival may prove to be the one thing about yourself you cannot tolerate. Be fair in your appraisals.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may not be able to choose what others are impressed by today, but it is recommended that you take all the praise you can get!

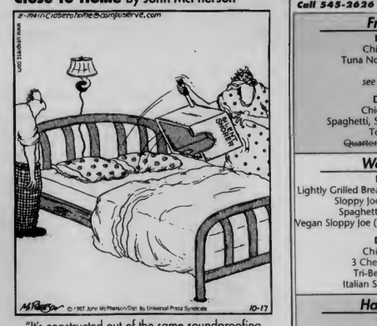
ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Do not let onlookers know that you are uncomfortable with the attention; rather, use it to fuel your endeavors. Results are improved.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — During any down–time today, you are best to tend to one or two personal issues you've been neglecting recently. Talk openly with a loved one.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Start talking about what upset you most today, and you'll learn that things are better than you think. Listen to a son or daughter.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You have had your chance; now you should hand over the baton to someone else with a creative spark and a drive to succeed. Be a teacher.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You will be playing multiple roles today, so you will have to work hard to keep things straight in your thoughts and imagination.



VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Give others a break today, and don't demand that they live up to your almost impossible set of standards. You are being too picky!

Quote of the Day

"the sky up above... zing boom is caving in... wow bam"

–Björk
"It's oh so quiet"

Close to Home By John McPherson

"It's constructed out of the same soundproofing material that NASA uses on the space shuttle, and it's hypoallergenic."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Puks
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Pizza
see Horoscope

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Spaghetti, Sausage and Sauce
Tofu Fajita
~~Quarter Pound Burger~~

Worcester

LUNCH
Lightly Grilled Bread with Cheese Sandwich
Sloppy Joe (aka. Messy Ed)
Spaghetti/Tomato Sauce
Vegan Sloppy Joe (vegans can be sloppy too)

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
3 Cheese Macaroni
Tri-Bean Casserole
Italian Sausage Grinder

Hampshire

LUNCH
Cowburger
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Handcut Cod Sub with Fish on a Roll
Grilled Sneeze

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Baked Fish with Herb Stuffing
Baked Herb Stuffed in Fish
Fajita of Chicken

Berkshire

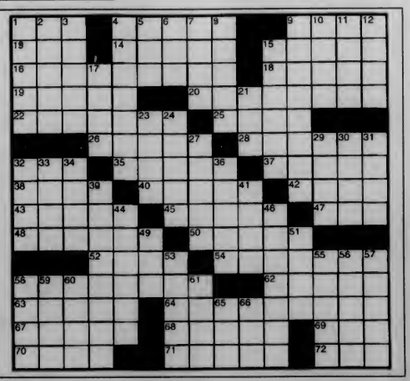
LUNCH
Grilled Sneeze
Pizza
Vegan Sloppy Joe
Grileed Sneeze on Wheat

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Duchess of Berkshire Meat Pie
Tri Bean Casserole
Italian Sweet Sausage Grinder

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Laura Stock
Photo Technitian	Chris Cesnick
Copy Editor	Luke Meredith
Production Supervisor	Leon Latino
Production Staff	Keren Charles, Teresa Rodrigues

CROSSWORD



ACROSS
1 Suitcase
4 Ascend
9 Docile
13 Indignation
14 '30s comic actor Jack
15 Queen Elizabeth, e.g.
16 Karate ranking
18 "Our Miss Brooks"
19 Weighed down
20 Be inactive
22 Holes for shoelaces
25 Adams or Brickell
26 Duckling's papa
28 Make beloved
32 Coffee holder
35 Traffic sign
37 Okra dish
38 Anguished wail
40 Dwelt
42 Alehouses
43 Clumsy
45 More agreeable
47 Utter
48 Cotton Bowl site
50 Type of energy
52 Territory
54 Lasagna cheese
58 Salty snacks
62 Des Moines resident
63 Major artery
64 Field goal attempt
67 Light measure
68 Luau dances
69 None
70 Shakespearean king
71 Real estate —
72 Sault — Marie

DOWN
1 — Belt
2 Assortment
3 Hollow stone
4 007 portrayer
5 Hunting dog, for short
6 Pres. nickname
7 Wire measures
8 Midler or Davis
9 Made an appearance
10 He was "Hawkeye"
11 Bump into
12 Sea eagle
15 Storming about
17 Tuesday of films
21 Citrus beverage
23 Follow
24 Coil of yarn
27 Graceland name
29 Ostrich's cousins
30 Swedish rock group
31 Optimistic
32 Servant
33 Arm bone
34 Celt
36 Style of a room
39 Splash
41 Where to get a hero
44 Jane's mate
46 Most risqué
49 View
51 Chess piece
53 Omega's opposite
55 Some siblings
56 Unspoken
57 Place for a bracelet
58 Become tiresome
59 Lecherous man
60 Columnist Bombeck
61 Garden pest
65 Malt brew
66 Container

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

JEAN GRAPH DOME
OBOE SIERRA ALII
GNAW OASES PELT
SANCTUM PERUSES
OOP DOT
DUMMY MON MYNAS
OBOES SIERRA ALII
FOURTH DIMENSION
FAS OHIO AN TIANG
STEAD AND BUDGE
WAD MUD
SPRAYED FINESSE
SOCK VIVID DELL
ANTE TVTED TALK
TEEN LEAFY SLOE

10-17-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

College hoop overshadows World Series

I fully realize that as sports fans we are on the cusp of a historic and potentially amazing World Series. With Florida the first expansion team to rise to the top of the baseball world so quickly and loaded with the weapons needed to take home the trophy, the '97 Series has the promise of history in the making.

But there is something else that is pulling at my interest as a fan — Midnight Madness. That's right, the official start to the 1997–98 college basketball season is something I have been waiting for since last April.

This season promises to be a great one, despite the departure of the legendary Dean Smith and the preseason problems at Michigan and Arizona State.

Casey Kane goes Around the Horn

At Michigan, Casuell Russell, a three–time All–American while a Wolverine, is the front–runner for the head job. No word on ASU applicants, although the school was reportedly talking to Utah coach Rick Majerus.

The spotlight will shine on first–year players this year, specifically the second coming of the Fab Five, Duke's recruiting class.

And many will be waiting to see the effect of the players who will join their teams at mid–year: St. Joseph's Yah Davis; Duke's Ricky Price; Kansas's Lester Earl; and, if things go well in the classroom, Lamar Odom at Rhode Island.

The clock strikes at midnight tonight and the fun won't end until March. The NCAA Championship is only 164 days away.

• Speaking of college hoop, the regional cover of The Sporting News' collegiate preview has three players pictured on the front: Syracuse's Jason Hart; St. John's Zendon Hamilton; and Villanova's John Celestand.

The headline reads, "Who's the team to beat in the Big East?"

Honestly, who cares? For years the Big East has floundered, while the Atlantic 10 has risen in prominence. Proof positive was that the A–10 garnered five NCAA tournament bids last year to the Big East's four.

This year looks to be more of the same for the big money, big disappointment league neighbor. And with Rhode Island on the way up, Temple and UMass consistent, and the success of last year's St. Joseph's and Xavier's teams to build upon, the real question is "Who's the real Beast of the East?"

The answer is the Atlantic 10.

• Could there be a better example of what baseball should be like than the American League Championship Series?

The best–of–seven series went to six games, two in extra innings, and only the first game was decided by more than two runs.

The Florida Marlins and Atlanta Braves provided a grand series, too. But the grittiness of the ALCS was what captured so many. That, and the fact that with Albert Belle out of Cleveland, makes it not so bad for the Indians to win.

Still, this Series poses problems for hardball purists. Cleveland, after all, held the worst record of the AL play–off teams, and Florida received the NL wildcard. Still...

• The first line of yesterday's Boston Globe story about the New Jersey Nets, who faced Rick Pitino's Celtics at Rupp Arena in Lexington, Ky. Wednesday night, was: "Jayson Williams, a male, says he must be pregnant."

Say what?

Apparently, while Williams was keeping a journal detailing life in the NBA during the summer for GQ magazine, he wrote that he had a "better chance of becoming pregnant" than returning to Jersey.

Pitino — whose homecoming to the arena where a jersey with his name hangs from the rafters was ruined by Williams and Co. — is slowly getting things into order in Boston.

A rigorous conditioning program in the preseason left several — players and fans included — questioning his methods, but as Ron Mercer and Antoine Walker well know, the stamina is necessary for Pitino to run the court the way he is accustomed to.

The new coach is presented with strength at the guard position. Pitino has co–captain Dee Brown and rookies Mercer and Chauncey Billups available. Also in Celtic green will be Tyus Edney, who played in Sacramento last season.

I want to see Mercer get as much time as possible, but my motives are personal. Mercer joins fellow Celtic Walker on my fantasy basketball team.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Seniors (l–r) Liz Rutherford, Danielle Dion, Erica Iverson and Amy Burrill (not pictured) will play their last home games this weekend.

UM seniors take last kicks on home pitch

Dion, Iverson, Rutherford and Burrill play out careers

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Danielle Dion

The last home game is always an event.

The whole family, including your black sheep brother, comes to see you. But it's a little different for the senior athletes, because after four years of playing a game you've dedicated much of your life to, you begin to realize that your college playing days are coming to an end.

It's a bittersweet time for four players on the Massachusetts women's soccer team, who will be looking around Totman Field as players for the last time this weekend.

It's Senior Day on Sunday for the Minutewomen, as they prepare to battle it out this weekend with Dayton today at 3 p.m., and Xavier on Sunday in a 1 p.m. start. Both games will be held at Totman.

Woman's Soccer
No. 13 Massachusetts
vs
Dayton
Today 3 p.m.

Sunday's game versus Xavier will be last home game of the season for the Minutewomen, and the last time Erica Iverson, Danielle Dion, Liz Rutherford, and Amy Burrill will don the school colors at Totman. According to UMass coach Jim Rudy, it will be a very meaningful weekend for the Minutewomen.

Dayton brings a team with a 12–1–0 record and the return of Massachusetts all–time leading point scorer Rebecca Myers, now an assistant coach with the Flyers. Dayton also brings the memory of their upset win over UMass last

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 6

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Erica Iverson

Minutemen run with the Bulls

UMass to build from last week's strong showing

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Last week, the Massachusetts football team (1–5, 1–5 Atlantic 10) lost its second game in a row to No. 3 Villanova, in a game that even though goes down as a loss might have turned their season around.

Although the Minutemen lost 49–27, they posted all of their points in the second half, never once giving up the fight against the Wildcats.

"It all comes down to we didn't give up," senior quarterback Anthony Catterton said. "The offensive line gave there best performance of the year. They controlled the line of scrimmage."

That's the key to tomorrow's game against Buffalo.

The Minutemen will face the Bulls tomorrow afternoon in Buffalo. Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m.

The Bulls are 2–5 and are also on a losing streak — four games in a row — suffering blowouts in the last two weeks from Connecticut (55–0) and No. 1 Youngstown State (52–17).

With UMass in need of a victory to salvage what little is left of this season, and with the two–game winning streak the Minutemen have against the Bulls. Saturday's non–conference game is shaping up well for UMass.

"Its a very important game, just like any other," Catterton said. "We played a good second half last week and we've just got to carry that over into this Buffalo game. We have a really good chance of winning. I hope things go our way this time."

Last year, the Minutemen cattle–prodded the Bulls 41–20, led by former fullback Ron Brockington, who ran for a career–high 120 yards. It was the last game that UMass' offense dominated the line of scrimmage for 60 minutes.

Last week was the first time the Minutemen's offense was able to sustain any form of a drive. Led by Catterton under center, UMass was able to pick up 431 total yards against the No. 3 team in the nation.

"We've made some subtle changes at blocking," offensive coordinator Bob Colbert said. "It makes me feel good in terms of what the kids gave in effort. We ask them to challenge themselves and challenge the highly ranked team that they are playing and they responded well to that."

Football
Massachusetts
@
Buffalo
Saturday 1 p.m.

For the second week in a row, Anthony Catterton will get the start at quarterback, replacing sophomore Jeff Smith. Catterton has started since the second half of the UNH game Oct. 4.

One change that has been made has been the rotation of running backs throughout the course of the game. Colbert has made the decision in hopes that keeping his running backs fresh at all times will help the Minutemen in the long run. Between Marcel

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 6

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior quarterback Anthony Catterton takes the Minutemen up against the Buffalo Bulls tomorrow.

Minutewomen on a roll down stretch

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

This is an inopportune time for the La Salle field hockey team to visit the University of Massachusetts, because the team they will face tomorrow at noon on the turf of Richard F. Garber Field is on a serious roll.

In the span of four days, the Massachusetts field hockey team (8–7) has upset three of the nation's Top 10 teams. Wednesday, in their first game in two weeks on their home field, the Minutewomen took care of No. 8 Providence, 2–0.

Feild Hockey
Massachusetts
vs
La Salle
Saturday Noon

"It feels great to be back home," said freshman forward Kristen Schmidt after Wednesday's win. "The crowd [of parents] is always there, even on the road, but it is so much nicer to be home."

But more importantly, UMass' winning streak has brought the team increased confidence.

"They are playing as a unit," said UMass coach Patty Shea after this week's win over the Friars. "With each win their confidence in the team and their confidence in each other goes up."

That fact is evidenced by the Minutewomen's play. Their strength on both offensive and defensive penalty corners improved, and against PC, UMass did not allow a corner in the entire second half.

A few changes have enhanced UMass' defensive corners, while continued refinement on offense has

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 6

A–10 rivals present test for No. 22 Minutemen

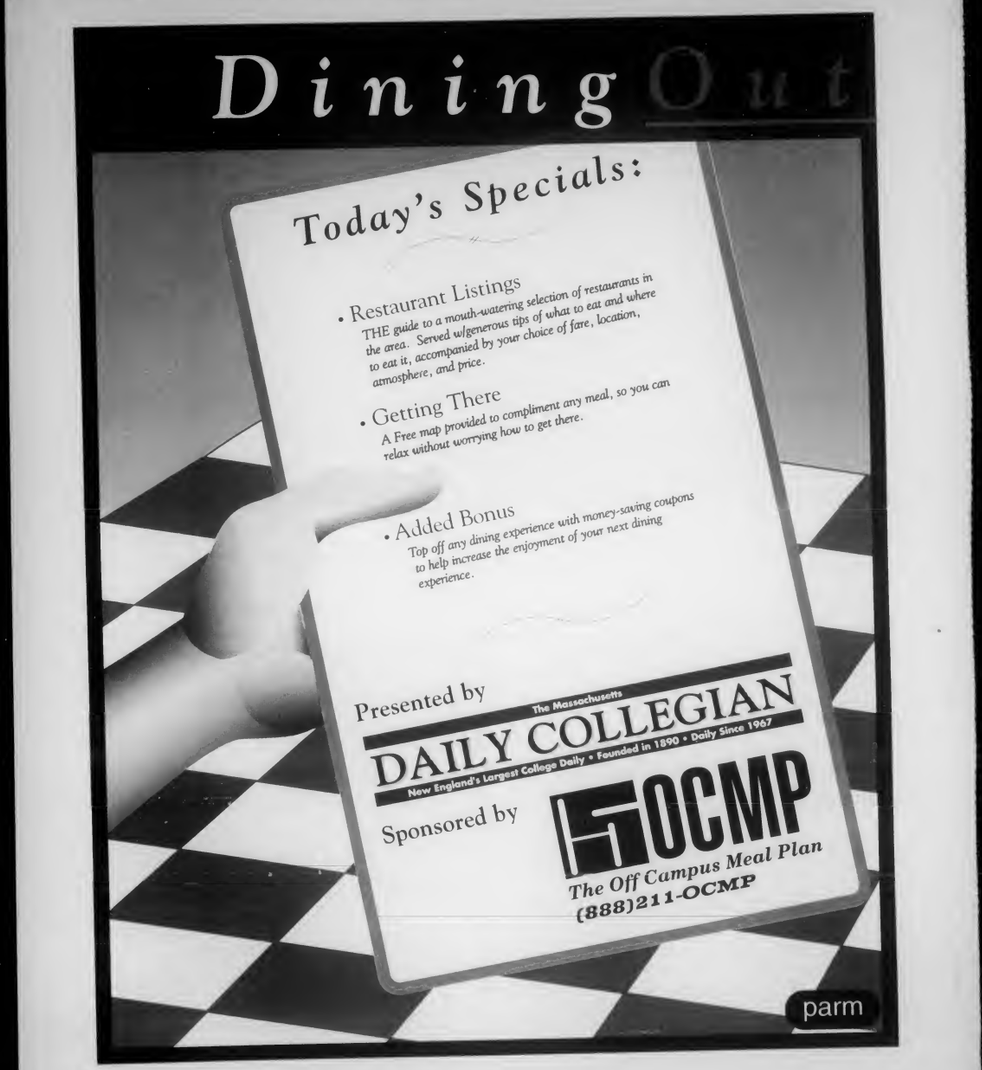
By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team hits the road this weekend, looking to bring their up and down play to the top once more.

They will take on Dayton on today and Xavier on Sunday, both Atlantic 10 conference opponents. Both games are crucial to the future of the Minutemen.

The Dayton Flyers have been struggling, with an overall record of 5–6–1 (2–3, A–10). They have, however, yet to be beaten at home. The Dayton squad has been led this year by Emmanuel Ayim and Godfrey Tenoff. Ayim leads the team with 14 points, followed by Tenoff with 11.

Men's Soccer
No.22 Massachusetts
@
Dayton
Tonight 7:30 p.m.



Dayton is tied for eighth in the A–10 conference with George Washington, to whom UMass lost last weekend. The Flyers are in the midst of a slew of conference games, with wins over St. Bonaventure and St. Joseph's and losses to Duquesne and Temple.

Xavier should prove to be the toughest challenge for the Minutemen. UMass and Xavier are tied for first in the A–10 rankings. Xavier has an overall record of 7–6–1, and are unbeaten in the conference, at 5–0–0.

The Musketeer's attack is led this season by Koen Kuiken, who has 13 points, including five goals. Xavier has outscored its opponents by a margin of 15–6. They are coming off a 0–3 loss to Bowling Green on Wednesday, prior to which they had a four–game win streak, all over A–10 opponents.

After enjoying a four–game win streak of their own, the Minutemen hit a losing skid last weekend, dropping games to conference foes Virginia Tech and George Washington. After upset wins over nationally ranked teams, UMass had found themselves in the Top 25 national polls and riding high atop

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 6

Welcome to the Fall 1997 installment of the Dining Out guide.

This guide is a special publication of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian and is designed to help you choose where to dine in the Pioneer Valley.

Restaurants are separated by town and listed alphabetically.

Amherst Delicatessen

233 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-549-6314

Atmosphere: Casual
Type of Food: Delicatessen
Average Price: $4.50-$6.95
Most Popular Dish: Lizzie Special or Deli Club

Amherst Chinese Food

62 Main Street, Amherst
413-253-2813

Amherst Restaurant & Pizzeria

1185 North Pleasant Street, North Amherst
413-549-6643

Atmosphere: Family Style
Type of Food: Breakfast, Lunch, Dinner, Pizza, Calzones, Pasta
Average Price: $2.00 and Up.
Most Popular Dish: Breakfast-Brie + Scallion Omelet, Pizza-Amherst Special Manager's Quote: "Still serving the best breakfast in town, formally Daisy's"

Andy's Pizza

175 University Drive, Amherst
413-256-8147 / 413-256-8148

Atmosphere: Family Oriented
Type of Food: Pan Pizza, Italian Dinners
Average Price: $6.00/ Person
Most Popular Dish: Pizza

Bananarama / Good Thyme Deli

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

D I N I N G O U T S T A F F

Advertising Manager ..... Luis A. Luna
Advertising Production Manager ..... David Voldan
Production, cover & spread design ..... David Parmenter
Advertising Production ..... Keren Charles
Marianne Hayner
Andrew Haywood
Mike Phillips
Typist ..... Jen Kulm

The Collegian wants to send you and a friend to dinner!

Fill out this form and return it to 113 Campus Center by October 30th for a chance to win!

Enter me to win a FREE dinner for two!
Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone: _____

Return to the Collegian at 113 Campus Center. (basement)

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Limit one entry per person. Employees of Collegian are not eligible

Be sure to submit your entry for a FREE dinner for two on page 2 of this issue!

25 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-253-2774

Bell's Pizza House

65 University Drive, Amherst
413-549-1311

Atmosphere: Plenty
Type of Food: Pizza, Grinders, Spaghetti, Salad
Average Price: $5.00
Most Popular Dish: Tuna & Meatball Grinders, all Pizzas
Manager's Quote: "We are the oldest pizza in Amherst; 30 years old."

Bertucci's

51 East Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-549-1900

Atmosphere: Fun and Lively
Type of Food: Italian
Average Price: $6.00- $10.00
Most Popular Dish: Rigatoni with broccoli and chicken
Manager's Quote: "The World's Best Pizza!!"

Classé Café

168 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-253-2291

Atmosphere: Casual- Home Style
Type of Food: Homemade Breakfast, Baked Goods, Soups, Burgers & Salad
Average Price: $3.00-$5.00
Most Popular Dish: Super Veggie Omellette and Grilled Cheeseburgers with fresh cut fries
Manager's Quote: "Get in here, the sooner you find us, the happier you'll be."

Delano's

57 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-253-5141

Atmosphere: Fun
Type of Food: Award Winning Burgers, Hand Cut Fries, & Salads; Home of The Original Overstuffed Deli Sandwich
Average Price: Under $5.00
Most Popular Dish: Burger/ Fries or CBC
Manager's Quote: "Champagne dining with beer prices."

D. P. Dough

96 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-256-1616

Atmosphere: Take Out & Delivery
Type of Food: Calzones
Average Price: $4.50
Most Popular Dish: Calzones
Manager's Quote: "Fast food, Low Prices, Great Calzones."

Judie's Restaurant

51 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-253-3491

Atmosphere: Upscale Casual
Type of Food: Creative Continental, Lots of Vegetarian Dishes and Low Fat Specials. Famous for Popovers and Deserts
Average Price: $4.99 for Lunch Special to $8.99- $10.50 range
Most Popular Dish: Chicken Ravioli and Walnuts w/ Salad w/ Poppy Seed Dressing and French Bread
Manager's Quote: "Home of the Popover."

La Cucina Di Pinocchio

30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
413-256-4110

Atmosphere: Casual but Elegant
Type of Food: Italian with Mediterranean Influences
Average Price: $13.95
Most Popular Dish: Lobster Fettucini

New India Restaurant

17 Kellogg Ave, Amherst
413-253-4200

Atmosphere: Casual
Type of Food: Indian
Average Price: $6.50- $10.95
Most Popular Dish: Chicken Masala, Chicken Shah
Manager's Quote: "Best Indian Food in the Valley."

Panda East

103 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-256-8923

Pioneer Valley Coffee

96 North Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-253-5900

Atmosphere: Quaint Coffee Shop Setting
Type of Food: Specialty Coffee (Hot or Iced); 18 Flavored Coffee
Average Price: $1.10

THE Hatch FOOD COURT

BLOCK & BARREL
Terri Yaki's
Bowl & Bread
The Union Grill
T-MEX Totally Mexican

Card accepted

So Much Food...So Many Choices...So Join Us...For Lunch

Located in the Basement of the Student Union brought to you by: Campus Center Food Services

Most Popular Dish:
Gourmet coffee from around the world.

Manager's Quote:
"We offer our customers the Best of the Best."

The Pub
15 East Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-549-1200

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Ten Page Menu with Sandwiches, Mexican, Dinner and Sunday Brunch

Average Price:
$5.00- $7.00

Most Popular Dish:
Half Pound Fresh Ground Angus Beef Pub Burger

Manager's Quote:
"You won't find us on Route 9."

Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant
422 Amity Street, Amherst
413-549-4040

Atmosphere:
Casual Sports Motif

Type of Food:
Informal and Huge Servings

Average Price:
$6.00

Most Popular Dish:
Buffalo Wings and Burgers

Manager's Quote:
"Front row seats for all sporting events."

The Raw Carrot
9 East Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-549-4240

Atmosphere:
Casual, Cafe

Type of Food:
Fresh Juices, Soups, Chili, Salads, Sandwiches

Average Price:
$5.50

Most Popular Dish:
Pesto Melt Sandwich

Manager's Quote:
"You are what you eat, fresh food is best. "

The Sub
43 East Pleasant Street, Amherst
413-549-5160

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Pizza, Subs

Average Price:
$6.00

Most Popular Dish:
Everything!

BELCHERTOWN

Club 21 Grill
Route 21 Belchertown MA
413-323-4118

Atmosphere:
Ocean Paradise

Type of Food:
Steaks, Prime Rib, Munchies

Average Price:
$5.99 & Up

Most Popular Dish:
Greek Fare

Manager's Quote:
"Atmosphere, food, & entertainment second to none!!."

Seasons Restaurant
529 Belchertown Road (Route 9), Belchertown 1 1/2 miles East of Amherst Center 413-253-9909 & 413-256-8700

Atmosphere:
Rustic and Romantic

Type of Food:
Tradition New England Dinner and Sunday Buffet Brunch

Average Price:
$9.95- $17.00

Most Popular Dish:
Prime Rib and Seafood

Manager's Quote:
"A Special Place for a Special Occasion."

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN

MEMBER O.C.M.P.

WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS.

Can We Build One For You?
Serving Sandwiches, Bagels & Lox, Fresh Soups & Salads, Take Out.
★ DELIVERIES CALL 549-6314 ★
★ OPEN UNTIL 9p.m. ★

"The Dinning Out guide? That's awesome."
– phAt Nick

Kai Chi
Restaurant & Sports Bar
Chinese American Restaurant
Dine In or Take Out
Sunday - Wednesday
11:30 am - Midnight
Thursday, Friday, Sat 11:30 -2 am
Open 7 Days
Monday Night $2.00 Buffet
Drink Specials
50" TV w/ Primestar
10% off Delivery Order
Mt. Farms Mall Rt. 9 Hadley • 586-2774

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the SUB
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
Pizza
Subs
Calzones
and more...
WE DELIVER!
Hours: 11am - 2am
549-5160
member O.C.M.P.
UMass Best! ★ 1997 ★

HADLEY

Burger King
353 Russell Street, Route 9, Hadley
413-584-5110

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Fast Food

Average Price:
$2.99

Most Popular Dish:
$ .99 Whoppers

Casa Antonio
Rt. 9 Hadley
413-586-3880

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Italian

Average Price:
$8.95

Most Popular Dish:
Charbroiled Swordfish

Manager's Quote:
"Try us once, and you'll stay with us forever."

Chili's Grill & Bar
438 Russell Street, Hadley
413-253-4008

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Southwest Cuisine

Average Price:
$5-$13

Most Popular Dish:
Fajitas

Manager's Quote:
"Give us a try."

Friendly's
455 Russell St, Hadley
413-253-7640

Atmosphere:
Family Restaurant

Type of Food:
Family Dining

Average Price:
$5.00-$8.00

Most Popular Dish:
Turkey Club Supermelt and Steak Dinners

Manager's Quote:
"Friendly, fast service everyday."

Kai Chi
335 Russell Street, Hadley
413-586-2774

Atmosphere:
Contemporary, Casual

Type of Food:
Sze-chuan & Hunan Cuisine

Average Price:
$8.00

Most Popular Dish:
General Tso's Chicken

Pete's Drive-In
287 Russell Street, Route 9, Hadley
413-585-0241

Atmosphere:
Casual, Outdoor

Type of Food:
American, Fast Food

Average Price:
$1.50-$4.00

Most Popular Dish:
2 Burgs for 2 Bucks

Manager's Quote:
"Burgers the way they're meant to be!"

Pizza Hut
424 Russell Street, Hadley
413-253-9787

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Pizza

Average Price:
$12.00 for two people

Most Popular Dish:
Pizza

Manager's Quote:
"All You Can Eat Buffet, Monday-Friday 11:30-2:00"

Fill out the form on page 2!

Taipei & Tokyo
Chinese & Japanese Restaurant
DINE-IN OR TAKE-OUT
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE
(413) 582-1888
Open 7 Days
18 Main Street
Holyoke, MA 01060

EARTHFOOD'S CAFE
EARTHFOOD'S CAFE
EARTHFOOD'S CAFE
A COOPERATIVELY MANAGED, STUDENT RUN CAFE PROVIDING DELICIOUS- YET INEXPENSIVE VEGETARIAN MEALS.
ONE OF THE FEW PLACES ON CAMPUS WHERE STAFF, FACULTY AND STUDENTS COME TOGETHER TO CREATE COMMUNITY.
DON'T BE LEFT OUT.
SERVING 11-3, MONDAY THRU FRIDAY IN THE STUDENT UNION.
SUPPORT STUDENT BUSINESSES
EARTHFOOD'S CAFE
EARTHFOOD'S CAFE
EARTHFOOD'S CAFE

The Ground Round
25¢
BUFFALO WINGS
ON
SUN, MON & TUES NIGHTS
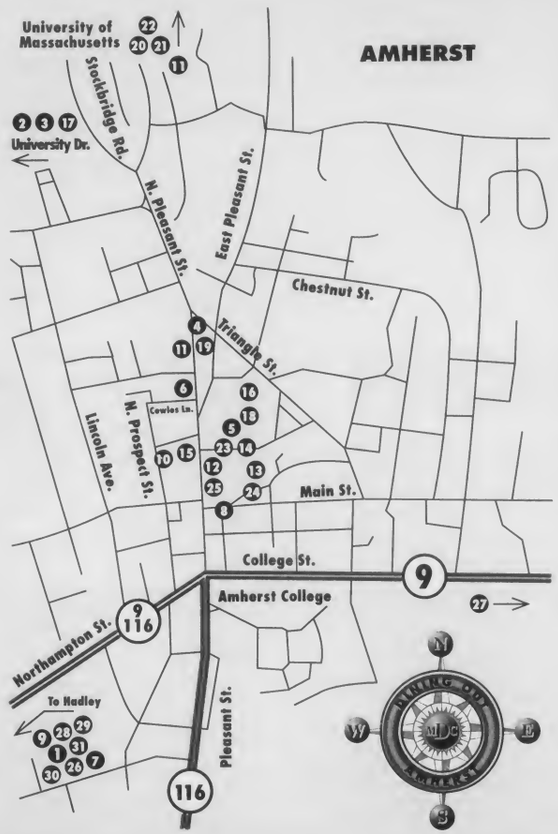
7PM TILL CLOSE
BUD DRAFT
ON SPECIAL
WE NOW ACCEPT
OCMP

the Dining Navigator



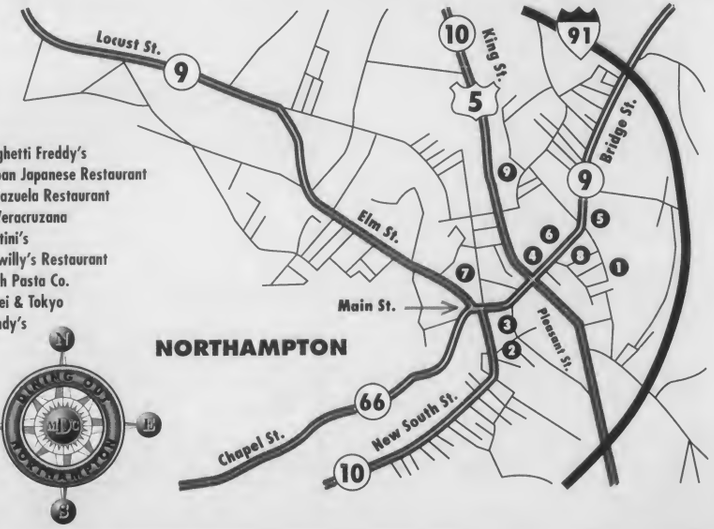
PRESENTED BY The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

OCMP

The Off Campus Meal Plan

(888) 211-OCMP

Not all of the restaurants listed are members of OCMP.



1) Applebee's
2) Andy's Pizza
3) Bell's Pizza House
4) Bertucci's
5) Amherst Deli
6) Classé Café
7) Ground Round
8) Delano's
9) Papa John's
10) D. P. Dough
11) The Hatch
12) Judie's Restaurant
13) La Cucina Di Pinocchio
14) New India Restaurant
15) Pioneer Valley Coffee
16) The Pub
17) Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant
18) The Raw Carrot
19) The Sub
20) People's Market
21) TOC Bar & Grill
22) Earthfoods
23) Panda East
24) Amherst Chinese
25) Bananarama/Good Thyme Deli
26) Pete's Drive-In
27) Season's Restaurant
28) Pizza Hut
29) Burger King
30) Chili's Grill & Bar
31) Kai Chi

Restaurants Not Appearing on Maps

BELCHERTOWN
Club 21 Grill
Take Rte. 9 to Belchertown, right onto 202, left onto Rte. 21

SUNDERLAND
Goten
North on Rte. 116, approx. 1/2 mile past Cliffside Apts.

NORTH AMHERST
Bub's Bar-BQ
Rt. 116 North heading towards Sunderland

1) Spaghetti Freddy's
2) Ichiban Japanese Restaurant
3) La Cazuela Restaurant
4) La Veracruzana
5) Martini's
6) Fitzwilly's Restaurant
7) Fresh Pasta Co.
8) Taipei & Tokyo
9) Wendy's

NORTHAMPTON

Fitzwilly's Restaurant
23 Main Street, Northampton
413-584-8666

Atmosphere:
Casual

Type of Food:
Eclectic

Average Price:
$5.95-$12.95

Manager's Quote:
"Serving great food until Midnight, every night!"

Fresh Pasta Co.
249 Main Street, Northampton
413-586-5875

Atmosphere:
Casual & Friendly

Type of Food:
Fresh Pastas, Grilled Specials, Salads & Sandwiches

Average Price:
$4.50-$6.95

Most Popular Dish:
Parmesan Chicken Asparagus & Pesto and Salmon Caesar Salad

Manager's Quote:
"We're a small neighborhood restaurant that serves unpretentious fare in generous portions at reasonable prices to a loyal clientele"

Ichiban Japanese & Korean Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton
413-585-1185

Type of Food:
Sushi, Seafood, Meat

Average Price:
$8.50- $18.50

Most Popular Dish:
Sushi

La Cazuela Restaurant
7 Old South Street, Northampton
413-586-0400

Atmosphere:
Casual Table- Cloth Dining

Type of Food:
Cuisine from Mexico and the American Southwest

Average Price:
$5.00-$9.00/ entree

Most Popular Dish:
A great new special menu comes out every 4-6 weeks

Manager's Quote:
"We offer an extraordinary tequila list, superb margaritas, a tasteful wine selection, and warm hospitality that reflects western heritage."

La Veracruzana
31 Main Street, Northampton
413-586-7181

Atmosphere:
Family, warm

Type of Food:
Mexican

Average Price:
$5.00

Most Popular Dish:
Burritos

Martini's
5 Bridge Street, Northampton
413-584-1197

Atmosphere:
No dress code- Casual

Type of Food:
French & Italian

Average Price
$12.95- $14.95

Most Popular Dish:
Shrimp stuffed center cut tenderloin topped w/ lobster sauce

Manager's Quote:
"Honest food in the Valley."

Taipei & Tokyo
18 Main Street, Northampton
413-582-1888

Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers
203 King Street, Northampton
413-584-0718

Atmosphere:
Fast Food Restaurant / Casual Dining

Type of Food:
Salad Bar, Hamburg w/ Combo Special, Baked Potatoes, Chicken Sandwiches & Frostys

Average Price:
$5.00

CHOW DOWN
AT THE
CHEW CHEW STATION

Catch these dinner specials Monday through Thursdays from 4-7pm; Fridays 4-6pm and Sundays 1:30-7pm

$6.99 - $10.99

Choose from
PRIME RIB, SHRIMP & SCALLOPS DEPOT, LASAGNE, CHICKEN PARMESAN AND LOTS MORE!

$2.00 OFF Sunday Brunch with this ad!

THE DEPOT
HOME of spaghetti freddy's
125A Pleasant Street
Downtown Northampton 586-5366

Hungry?
I thought so.

Goten
In Sunderland

We are open
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues - Weds - Thurs - PM and Sat - Sun 'til close
Sunday 2 till close

Excellence in Japanese Cuisine
OF JAPAN

COOKING AT YOUR TABLE

TWO DINNERS FOR $ 18
SHRIMP AND STEAK COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $ 18
SHRIMP AND SCALLOP COMBINATION
TWO DINNERS FOR $ 15
STEAK AND CHICKEN COMBINATION
SPECIALS SERVED UNTIL 8:00 TUES-FRI & SUN

Please call for reservations today!
(413) 665-3628
Rt. 116
Sunderland

All Dinners include salad, vegetable, noodle, soup, rice tea & ice cream
Function Room available for your party

Casual Dress • Full Bar • Exotic Specials • Take the Sunderland Bus from campus -get dropped off at our front door

Most Popular Dish:
Salad Bar, Combos, Pitas

SUNDERLAND

Bub's Bar-B-Q
Route 116, Sunderland
413-548-9630

Atmosphere:
No Frills

Type of Food:
Bar-B-Q

Average Price:
$8.95-$9.95

Most Popular Dish:
Ribs

Manager's Quote:
"Best BBQ in the Northeast."

Goten
Route 116, Sunderland
413-665-3628

Atmosphere:
Food prepared right in front of you at tappan style tables

Type of Food:
Excellent Japanese Cuisine

Average Price:
$11.00/meal, $15.00-$18.00/ two dinner specials

Most Popular Dish:
Steak & Seafood

Manager's Quote:
"Relax as our chefs prepare your meal entirely at your tappan style tables."

UMass (ON-CAMPUS)

Earthfoods
Commonwealth Room (UMASS Student Union)
413-545-1554

Atmosphere:
Pleasant

Type of Food:
Inexpensive, Vegetarian/Vegan Healthy Food

Average Price:
$3.00/meal

Most Popular Dish:
Sesame Tomato Tortellini, Soup, Salad, Dessert

Manager's Quote:
"Live well, eat at Earthfoods and help support student collectives."

People's Market
Rear of Student Union (UMass)
413-545-2060

Atmosphere:
Fun & Funky

Type of Food:
Healthy Alternative Snacks

Average Price:
Under $1.00

Most Popular Dish:
Bagels and Coffee

Manager's Quote:
"We are 25 students working together to serve you."

TOC Bar & Grill
11th Floor Campus Center
Amherst
413-545-3217

Atmosphere:
Casual. great view , sports bar

Type of Food:
Pub style menu

Average Price:
$1.95-$5.75

Most Popular Dish:
Chicken Wings & Burgers

Manager's Quote:
"At the TOC, we are down with OCMP."

WEST BROOKFIELD

Salem Cross Inn
Route 9, West Brookfield
508-867-2345

Atmosphere:
Early American

Type of Food:
Traditional New England Favorites

Average Price:
$10.95-$22.95

Most Popular Dish:
Fireplace Roasted Prime Rib of

Pizza Hut

All-You-Can-Eat
Lunch Buffet
Monday - Friday
11:30 AM - 2:00 PM

Lunch Buffet! Buy One, Get One FREE!
All-You-Can-Eat Lunch Buffet Available Monday - Friday 11:30 - 2pm
Includes pizza, breadsticks, salad, and dessert.
20 oz. Pepsi® $1.20
Please mention offer when ordering. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® locations. Not valid in combination with any other offer or coupon.
© 1997 The Horizon Collective, Inc
Expires 11/30/1997

2 MEDIUM 1-TOPPING PIZZAS
$10
Please mention offer when ordering. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® locations. Not valid in combination with any other offer or coupon.
© 1997 The Horizon Collective, Inc
Expires 11/30/1997

Lunch Buffet! Buy One, Get One FREE!
All-You-Can-Eat Lunch Buffet Available Monday - Friday 11:30 - 2pm
Includes pizza, breadsticks, salad, and dessert.
20 oz. Pepsi® $1.20
Please mention offer when ordering. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® locations. Not valid in combination with any other offer or coupon.
© 1997 The Horizon Collective, Inc
Expires 11/30/1997

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
$6.99
Please mention offer when ordering. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® locations. Not valid in combination with any other offer or coupon.
© 1997 The Horizon Collective, Inc
Expires 11/30/1997

• Hadley Pizza Hut • 424 Russell Street (Next to Stop&Shop) • Hadley • 253-9787 •
• WE ACCEPT MOST PAPA JOHN'S AND DOMINO'S COUPONS •

Beef, Chowder of the Sea

Manager's Quote:
"A warm welcome awaits UMass students and parents."

fin.

Heads Up!

The Daily Collegian
Hoops Magazine
comin' at ya

December
2nd

PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S

Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.

Call: 586-7772
331 Russell Street – Route 9
Hadley, Massachusetts
Delivery & Carry-out – Limited Delivery Area

La Cazuela
SINCE 1981
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST

Hand made cooking . . . seasonal menu
. . . superb margaritas . . . extraordinary tequila list
. . . warm hospitality!
Please join us.

Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage

7 OLD SOUTH STREET
NORTHAMPTON
413 • 586 • 0400

classé café

GREAT
BREAKFAST
TILL 3 P.M.

REMEMBER:
-all HOMEMADE-
YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT.

Mon - Sat 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3

Eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart, eat natural, eat veggie, eat soup

EAT GOOD IT'S HERE

168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291
O.C.M.P. Welcome

A Little Neighborhood Place Serving Up All Your Favorites!

FIRST THINGS FIRST

Buffalo Chicken Wings $5.49
Spicy wings with celery sticks & bleu cheese dressing.

Quesadillas $5.49
Two cheeses, bacon & pica de gallo grilled between tortillas with guacamole, sour cream & salsa.
Fajita quesadillas with your choice of fajita-marinated chicken breast or sirloin steak. $6.99

Supreme Nachos $6.25
Crispy tortilla chips with chili, Cheddar, jalapeños, lettuce, tomatoes, sour cream & fresh guacamole.
Topped with fajita-marinated chicken breast or sirloin steak. add $1.00

THE PERFECT COMBO

Chicken Fajita Rollup Combo $7.29
"Combo-sized" flour tortilla topped with melted Jack & Cheddar, fajita chicken, shredded lettuce & pico de gallo & served with Mexi-Ranch dipping sauce. Combine with your choice of a bowl of soup, bowl of chili, a dinner salad or small Caesar salad.

Salsa Club Rollup Combo $7.29
Sliced smoked turkey breast & ham rolled in a "Combo-sized" flour tortilla, topped with melted Jack & American & served with salsa. Combine with your choice of a bowl of soup, bowl of chili, a dinner salad or small Caesar salad.

BURGERS TO ORDER

All burgers are one-half pound of 100% pure ground beef, char-broiled & served with lettuce, tomato, pickle & red onion slice. Burgers are served with your choice of Fries, Onion Peels, or Mixed Green Salad.

Applebee Burger $6.49
Double-decker quarter pound patties, grilled with two cheeses, sautéed onions, lettuce, tomato & creamy mustard sauce on a toasted hoagie roll.

DAILY SPECIALS

MONDAY:
Steak Special - All Day - $2.00 OFF
House Sirloin, Smothered Sirloin and Bourbon Street Steak

TUESDAY:
Fajita Special - All Day - $2.00 OFF
Steak or Chicken Fajitas

WEDNESDAY:
All-You-Can-Eat Riblets - $9.99

SUNDAY - THURSDAY: 10 pm - Close
1/2 Price Nachos, Mozzarella Sticks & Onion Peels

NEIGHBORHOOD SPECIALTIES

Applebee's House Sirloin $9.49
A 9-oz. choice sirloin steak served with your choice of two sides. Served with Bobolí® Oven Bread.
Smothered with sautéed onions, mushrooms & green peppers. $9.99

Riblet Platter $9.39
Over a pound of slow hickory-roasted rib tips in our spicy Bar-B-Que sauce served with your choice of two sides.

Smothered Chicken $8.89
Our char-broiled, marinated chicken breast topped with Monterey Jack & Cheddar, sautéed mushrooms, green peppers & onions & served with your choice of two sides. Served with Bobolí® Oven Bread
Without cheese, mushrooms, green peppers & onions. $8.29

LOW FAT AND FABULOUS

Low-Fat Garlic Chicken Pasta $7.29
Angel hair pasta tossed in a rich garlic herb broth then topped with fresh steamed vegetables & a lemon herb chicken breast. Less than 10 grams of fat.

Low-Fat Veggie Quesadilla $5.49
Fresh mushrooms, red peppers, onion, broccoli & carrots smothered in non-fat shredded Cheddar/Mozzarella blend & sandwiched between two wheat tortillas. Served with fat-free sour cream & shredded lettuce. Less than 10 grams of fat.

BETWEEN TWO SLICES

Bacon Cheese Chicken Grill $6.25
A char-broiled, marinated chicken breast with bacon strips & Cheddar on a multi-grain bun with lettuce, tomato & onion. Served with creamy Dijon Mustard sauce.
Without bacon & cheese. $5.49

Club House Grill $5.69
Applebee's signature hot club sandwich with warm sliced ham & smoked turkey, Cheddar, tomatoes, mayonnaise & Bar-B-Que sauce on thick-sliced grilled sourdough bread.

Smoked Turkey & Jack Croissant $5.25
Shaved smoked turkey breast, served warm with Monterey Jack & maya.

FIELD OF GREEN

Grilled Chicken Caesar Salad
Medium: $5.29 Full: $6.99
The classic combination of crisp romaine, garlic croutons & fresh grated Parmesan, all tossed in a tangy Caesar dressing. Topped with a char-broiled chicken breast. Served with Bobolí® Oven Bread.
Classic Caesar without chicken. $4.99

Oriental Chicken Salad
Medium: $5.29 Full: $6.99
Crisp Oriental greens topped with chunks of crunchy Chicken Fingers, toasted almonds & crispy rice noodles tossed in a Oriental vinaigrette.

JUST ENOUGH

Riblet Basket $6.99
A hearty portion of slow hickory-roasted rib tips basted in our spicy Bar-B-Que sauce & served with fries.

Chicken Fingers Basket $6.49
Breaded chicken tenderloins, fried & served with French fries & honey mustard sauce.

Fajita Quesadillas $6.99
Your choice of our famous sirloin steak or chicken fajita meat tucked into crisp cheese, pico de gallo & bacon quesadillas. Served with guacamole, sour cream & salsa.

Small Sample of Entire Menu

YOU BELONG AT APPLEBEE'S™

We're Open:
Sunday - Thursday 11:30 am - Midnight
Friday & Saturday 11:30 am - 1:00 am

Try Our Delicious Brunch:
Sunday 10:00 am - 3:00 pm

Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar

You'll Find Us At:
100 Westgate Center Drive
(Route 9 & 116 - next to Staples)

Phone: 253-5799

TOC Bar & Grill

Pub Style Menu
Weekly Drink Specials
Draft, Micro Brews, Full Bar
"At the TOC we're down with O.C.M.P."

Positive ID Required

Monday – Friday 4 –12:30 | Saturday 5–12:30

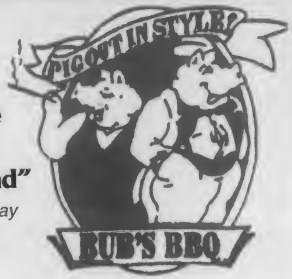
11th Floor Campus Center • 545-3217

OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan



Orange Lo · The Ground Round · The Black Sheep Deli & Bakery · Amherst Delivers Deli · Classe Cafe · Superior Pizzeria · Newman Center Cafeteria · TOC Bar & Grill · Applebee's · Olano's · Amber Waves · Subway · Wilber's Grill · Buena Y Sano · Charlie's Tavern · Cutty's · Antonio's Il Sempre Buona · Friendly's · Good Thyme Deli · Bananarama Yogurt · Rafter's Sports Bar & Restaurant

And your mom thought you couldn't live without her...

Supplemental Plans Available for those on campus

FOR MORE INFO: 1-888-211-6267

"Best Barbecue Joint in New England" from USA Today to Yankee Magazine

Ribs • Chicken
Hickory Smoked Pork
Catfish • Red Snapper
Gator Tail w/Hushpuppies

Open Daily
LUNCH AND DINNER
Eat in or Under the Tent

RTE. 116 • OLD AMHERST RD • SUNDERLAND
413/548-9630

HEALTHY CHOICE BIRTHDAY PARTY!!

Authentic Japanese Restaurant

ICHIBAN いちばん

NORTHAMPTON
413-585-1185

Gift Certificates Available

SUSHI BAR
TATAMI ROOM
JAPANESE STYLE
PARTY ROOMS FREE!!!

FRESH PASTA CO.

Homemade
FRESH PASTA, TORTELLINI, RAVIOLI & SAUCES
SOUPS, SALADS, SANDWICHES
Charcoal grilled ENTREES
ROTISSERIE CHICKEN

~ QUICK SERVICE ~ ~ GREAT PRICES ~

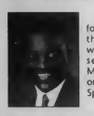
TAKE OUT AVAILABLE ANYTIME!!

Open Sun. 2 - 9 p.m.
Mon. - Thurs. 11 - 9 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. until 10 p.m.
249 Main Street
Northampton 586-5875
FAX 585-5882

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVII Issue 29 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Monday, October 20, 1997

"Here and now"

Letters to Cleo hit Boston last week, promoting their new album Go! Check out Kay Hanley's interview with the Collegian (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Midnight Madness hits Mullins

It's a new year for Bruiser Flint and the Minutemen, who kicked off the season with Midnight Madness on Friday night (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Embryo creation may lead to human cloning

LONDON (AP) — British scientists have created a frog embryo without a head, a technique that may lead to the production of headless human clones to grow organs and tissue for transplant, The Sunday Times reported.

None of the embryos grown by scientists at Bath University were allowed to live longer than a week, the newspaper reported in its early edition Saturday.

But the scientists believe the technique could be adapted to grow human organs such as hearts, kidneys, and livers in an embryonic sac living in an artificial womb.

Many scientists believe human cloning is inevitable following the birth of the sheep Dolly, the world's first cloned mammal, at a laboratory in Scotland. Scientists at The Roslin Institute in Edinburgh created Dolly using cells from the udder of a dead sheep. The Sunday Times said the two techniques could be combined so that people needing transplants could have organs "grown to order" from their own cloned cells.

The genetic composition of grown organs would exactly match those of the patient, eliminating the threat of rejection. It would also ease the shortage of organs for transplant.

NATION

Bombs found at train wreck site

ROSEVILLE, Calif. (AP) — A military bomb squad yesterday destroyed eight unexploded Vietnam War-era bombs which railroad workers found while replacing tracks in an area where a similar bomb was discovered two weeks ago.

The bombs were found Saturday as the workers replaced tracks in a spot where a single bomb was uncovered Oct. 6. The site is near an area where a train load of bombs exploded 24 years ago. About 500 people living nearby were evacuated late Saturday before the bomb squad dug holes and blew up the bombs. There were no injuries, but the blasts caused minor damage to dozens of nearby homes, including broken windows and wall cracks. Residents were later allowed to return.

It is "very, very possible" that the site, where a train filled with ammunition exploded in 1973, is harboring additional unexploded bombs, sheriff's Sgt. Jim Cooper said.

Union Pacific officials have suspended renovation work at the yard until at least today, when railroad and sheriff's officials were to begin determining whether any other bombs are hidden. Experts from the Army Corps of Engineers were expected to inspect the yard.

Six of the bombs were described as being in good condition, with the other two badly damaged by workers in their earth-moving equipment.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 55 LOW: 40	HIGH: 53 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Students at Westfield State say alcohol ban has been ineffective

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

WESTFIELD — While the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees decide on whether or not to make UMass a dry campus in December, students at Westfield State College say that making their school a dry campus has not worked, despite the assertions of campus officials to the contrary.

Westfield's ban, which is in its first semester of enactment, is accompanied by new, tougher enforcement policies.

The duty of doing rounds in the dorms, formerly performed by resident assistants, is now done by Campus Institutional Police Officers.

Violations of the alcohol ban result in greater penalties as well.

First time offenders are suspended from the Westfield campus for five consecutive weekends, are required to perform five hours of community service and have to pay $50 to take an alcohol and drug education class.

Second time offenders are suspended from housing, third time offenders are expelled from the school.

"They're trying to scare you out of drinking," one underage sophomore female said. "It hasn't solved anything."

Jon Berman, 22, a senior elementary education major at Westfield, said the policy is a joke.

"You can't take alcohol away from kids no matter how hard you try," he said. "It's impossible to enforce, they're just trying to appease the public."

Marino Deterlizzi, an Institutional Security Officer (ISO) at Westfield State for four years, said students may be drinking as much as ever, but still thinks the alcohol ban has been highly effective.

"The quality of life is 100 percent better," he said. "There has been less vandalism, fire alarms, and fights this year."

According to Deterlizzi, in the first month of the last school year, campus wide damage was in excess of $4,000, while it only amounts to $146 this year.

"Students may still be drinking, but they're doing it responsibly, in their rooms, not attracting attention," he said. "Because if they do, they attract us, and we bust them."

Every minor questioned about the alcohol ban, responded that they do drink and often do so in the dorms, and that it's easy to get alcohol into dorms.

One underage freshman male, Mark, who lives on campus said he knew approximately 10 people found in violation of the alcohol policy, and that he and his friends still "drink everything."

There are three sections of the school where drinking is allowed, two being sections of about 10 rooms in the dorms, and the senior apartments located on campus.

People of age, including Sarah Gladis, 21, are not allowed to bring alcohol into their rooms if they live in the majority of dorm areas affected by the ban.

Minors can live on the alcohol permitted floors if they have a roommate who is 21 or over, one student said.

Other minors said that if students know a resident of the alcohol permitted floors, it's very easy to obtain alcohol.

Sean Delaney, 21, an alcohol permitted floor resident, said he lived in an alcohol free section of the dorms the semester previous to the campus wide ban.

"We drank more then than anyone in the alcohol permit-

Turn to ALCOHOL, page 2

Howard Ziff honored upon retirement from journalism

COURTESY JOURNALISM DEPARTMENT

Howard Ziff

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Stalling for time
Ken Leung, playing the part of Redford in Flipzoid, a theatre production brought to UMass on Thursday night by New World Theatre.

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

You can tell a lot about a man by the residents of his bookshelf.

The shelves which house the works of retiring Professor Howard Ziff's study are overcrowded with the masters: Aristotle, Frost and a few Greeks live across the way from folks like Amis, Vonnegut and Dostoevski. Dead white males, living black females, conservatives, liberals — they live side by side in this idyllic neighborhood of pages.

In the middle of it all, literally, is Ziff, puffing away on one of two corncob pipes as he reclines in his new, onyx- colored rocking chair — a gift he received at a dinner in his honor Saturday night for 26 years of service, ending in December, to the University of Massachusetts. The Holyoke- born, Amherst College-educated Ziff has the bear-like build of the former football player he is, and might be mistaken for Wilford Brimley's bushier-maned, intellectual brother.

He is landlord to the impressive collection of tomes, and in some respects is like a great Russian novel: His storied stories are sprawling and almost certainly never succinct; several characters emerge during the course of a single conversation; and there is no shortage of reward for the patient individual.

"Howard is a changeable personality," said Norman Sims, Ziff's former student at the University of Illinois and the current head of the UMass journalism department. "He changes with your age. I figured that after I knew Howard for about 10 years, I'd really seen the real Howard. But I hadn't because he has several different personas."

But those of little patience will never pick up on this observation. The person who makes haste of Ziff-speak may never hear about the fledgling days Rocky Marciano, may never understand precisely what a running guard's job on the gridiron was, and may never know quite how the Finns perfect the art of javelin throwing. And these are the details related by a man who says, "I'm not really a great sports fan."

What Ziff does with the details is nothing short of extraordinary. He seems to have internalized them all his life, just the sort of perpetual harvest of information one would expect from a newspaper man. Sure, the chair might mislead the casual fellow to conjure up a grandfatherly image, but the steely, sharp eyes beneath his mischievous white brows are unmistakably those of a man who's made a life of journalism.

"He's one of the most curious scholars I've ever met," Sims said. "He will find something he's interested in and just start researching. Most of us are trained in special areas and our interests are somewhat confined. I've never seen Howard limit his interests.

"He's an accomplished actor. I've seen him in lots of plays, Shakespeare, many things. He's a fan of opera. He's a bird-watcher. He's an expert on classic Hollywood movies. He can do a lot of things."

Included among those things is Ziff's ability to spur the success of his former students with four little words: "You'll never make it." Although he was one of the proud recipients of the bizarre blessing, and joined Ziff at UMass in 1980, nine years after his Illinois professor made the trip home, Sims maintains a close friendship with the gruff, brainy, character he said "has mellowed his age."

"He was the first [teacher] who I ever had a personal relationship with," Sims said. "As a junior in college, I had never had dinner at a faculty member's house. I had never had a beer with a faculty member. So I got to know Howard, I got to know his kids, I got to know his wife."

Ziff, his colleagues note, is that rare case of a man who has a defining effect on many around him, yet in their estimation, is virtually impossible to steal a trick or two from.

Dean of Humanities and Fine Arts Lee Edwards was an English professor when Ziff arrived on campus in 1971, and watched with keen admiration as her "witty colleague," the "defender of justice" separated the journalism department from its hold-

Turn to ZIFF, page 3

Former UM student found dead in woods after 3 days

AMHERST — Former University of Massachusetts student Jennifer Skolski was found dead Saturday, three days after her roommates reported her missing.

According to Amherst Police, at approximately 9:30 a.m. Skolski's body was found in the Mt. Pollux Conservation Area off of Southeast Street in Amherst.

Skolski's car was discovered by an officer on patrol Friday at approximately 9 p.m. A search of the area was immediately conducted by all available police personnel. The search was suspended at 11 p.m. and resumed Saturday morning. Several off-duty police officers and members of the Amherst Fire Department were involved in the search, which was coordinated by Captain Charles Scherpa.

Skolski's body was removed from the scene by the Medical Examiner's office at noon Saturday.

The cause of death has not yet been released by the Medical Examiner, however foul play is not suspected.

The matter continues to be under investigation by the Amherst Police Department, Massachusetts State Police and the Crime Prevention and Control division of the State Police.

According to University Spokesperson Barbara Pitoniak, Skolski was a music major who was on leave from the University this semester. Last semester she was an off- campus resident on Belchertown Road in Amherst.

Pitoniak said University Mental Health Services has been in contact with Skolski's roommates, who are also UMass students. Anyone who wishes to speak with Mental Health Services should call 545-2337.

— Laura Stock

Monroe discusses educational excellence

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

SOUTH HADLEY — Advocating passion and excellence in teaching, Lorraine Monroe, the former principal of Frederick Douglass Academy in Harlem, N.Y., spoke at Mount Holyoke College last Thursday evening.

Etha Paus, the director of the Center for Leadership and Public Interest Advocacy at Mt. Holyoke, introduced Monroe, who spoke for almost two hours to an enthusiastic audience of 150 persons at Gamble Auditorium.

"Ms. Monroe is this fall's second speaker in the Mary Lyon Lecture Series, which celebrates speakers whose courage, commitment and conviction have made a serious impact on their communities," Paus said. "Ms. Monroe has had an effect on Harlem, New York, the nation, and, increasingly, the world."

In her lecture, entitled "Nothing's Impossible: Leadership Lessons from the Field," Monroe discussed her experiences as a teacher and administrator in New York City schools over the past 30 years and issued her prescription for achieving academic excellence in the inner city.

Monroe began by saying that good teachers must above all serve their students.

"The work that we do as educators falls into service and leadership," Monroe said. "To take away the obstacles for real growth and development... that has been the work of my life."

Monroe then talked about teachers that she had as a student, and what they had taught her about good teaching.

Her first grade teacher, Monroe said, taught her to encourage, not hold back, students who are excelling.

"When kids can fly, let them fly," Monroe said.

She also taught Monroe to take kids' problems seriously, even if they seem trivial to an adult.

"The lesson is that what is important to the kid has to be important to the teacher," Monroe said. "You take kids seriously. It's a balance of being tough and having heart."

Her third grade teacher, Monroe said, taught her to allow students to be with her.

"I remembered that when kids would linger after class was over, it is because they need to be with you," Monroe said. "She was smart enough to know that. You allow students to be with you, because there is a depth of longing and wanting that you are supplying."

The next teacher Monroe discussed was her sixth grade teacher, who encouraged her to run for student council and when she was elected, taught her how to run a meeting.

"He taught us how meetings were run," Monroe said. "And that taught me children will learn anything that you are willing to teach them."

The last teacher she talked about, her millinery teacher, Mrs. Graves, invited Monroe and a group of her classmates to her home for tea all throughout the students' careers, until they graduated from college.

"She kept us coming, until we graduated from college," Monroe said. "One teacher took the time to be with us and support us."

Graves, Monroe said, is a model of what a teacher

Turn to MONROE, page 3

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN

Dry campus?
This Washington Tower room display is a voice in itself. Everyone will be able to vote on the issue on Wednesday, Oct. 22.

General promises free elections in first public speech in Congo

By Kamanga Mutond
Associated Press

BRAZZAVILLE, Republic of Congo — As his looting soldiers swaggered through a capital gutted by civil war, a former dictator promised to bring to Republic of Congo what it never had when he was last in power.

"We are going to offer Congolese people national reconciliation," Gen. Denis Sassou-Nguesso said Friday as he proposed forming a national unity government followed by "free and democratic elections."

The general did not offer details in his first public appearance since declaring victory over ousted President Pascal Lissouba. But he did vow to end the fighting between the country's militias after four months of civil war.

"Congolese people must have peace again in their country," said Sassou-Nguesso, 54, a former Marxist who ruled this country as a one-party state from 1979-91. Demands for political change and economic improvements led to his being stripped of power at a national conference.

On Friday, he sipped celebratory champagne after receiving a hero's welcome in his hometown of Oyo, 250 miles northeast of the capital.

In Brazzaville, however, things were not peaceful. While the fighting that has wracked this riverside city has ended, some of Sassou-Nguesso's Cobra militia were plundering whatever they could. The heavily armed soldiers, many of them swigging beers, loaded trucks with refrigerators and televisions, carried heavy sacks of food or pushed along wheelbarrows.

In front of the presidential palace — once home to Lissouba — soldiers were piling goods into trucks.

"This is the home of the people, this is not his house," a soldier said before ordering visitors to leave.

The Cobras, who marched into the capital Wednesday and claimed control of the country, have acknowledged the looting but blamed it on Lissouba and said they would stop it.

"For five years Lissouba didn't invest one cent in the country," said Jean-Marie Tassoua, a Cobra commander.

After four months of fighting, the city center was a wasteland, block after block of destroyed buildings and rubble. Visitors to one office building were greeted by the stench of dog carcasses in the foyer.

Human bodies were also strewn in the streets, bloated in the hot African sun.

Lissouba, whose whereabouts are unknown, has refused to concede defeat, despite the loss of Brazzaville and the oil capital, Pointe Noire. But there appeared little the president's forces could do to dislodge Sassou-Nguesso's militiamen and allied Angolan troops, who helped capture Pointe Noire.

Angola's interest came from its desire to crush rebel armies that supported Lissouba and used his country as a base.

The Angolan intervention and witness reports that its troops virtually control Pointe Noire raised fears in the United Nations and among African countries that the Republic of Congo war could spread across the region as old alliances rise to the surface. France, meanwhile, evacuated 59 expatriates from the southern cities of Dolisie and Loudima. French helicopters took French, Germans, Portuguese, Italians, Swiss, Burkino Faso citizens and Mauritians to neighboring Gabon, the foreign ministry said. Republic of Congo's oil wealth and the interest of foreign petroleum giants make it a prime target for the power grabs that have afflicted the region for decades. Political ideology played little if any role in the war, which began June 5 when Lissouba tried to disarm the Cobras before presidential elections.

■ alcohol

continued from page 1

ted floors now," he said.

According to Delaney, there were a few people who didn't drink in the alcohol free section, and said the school probably couldn't fill it up with non-drinkers.

"Living on the drinking floor is like every other semester on campus," said Pat Flynn, 22, a senior living on an alcohol permitted floor.

Flynn said the ban was mostly for the parents.

"[Parents] will sleep better at night knowing it's a dry campus," he said.

Berman said that one thing the ban does is to make students drink off campus and drive back.

According to Deterlizzi, drinking off campus is less of a concern than drinking on campus.

"One good thing about [students] going off campus is that they always designate a driver," he said.

Yet a number of students, many of them minors, said that this is simply not the case.

"The policy helps kids get drunk off campus and drive drunk," Ben, an underage male freshman said.

It was observed that a number of students drove while intoxicated.

Another underage student, Andrea, a sophomore female, said that she feels safer drinking off campus because there is no worry of getting caught.

"I might consider drinking on campus if the penalties weren't so high," she said.

There was worry that the ban would cause students to move off campus, and a large freshman class has made it unclear if that worry was legitimate.

According to Deterlizzi, the rumor of students moving off campus was untrue.

Yet the freshman class was the largest in years, and the campus was faced with a 103 percent student capacity this year, so the number that moved off is possibly offset by the 3 percent over-enrollment.

John Welch, 22, a junior business major, moved off campus in part because of the ban.

"There were a lot of factors involved [in the decision to move off]," he said, "but [the ban] was definitely one of them."

Ryan, an underage male student, said he moved off campus because of the alcohol policy.

Many Westfield students said they thought making UMass a dry campus was "funny" and "ridiculous."

Rick, an underage freshman male, said that the alcohol ban at Westfield hasn't solved anything.

"Rules like this don't work, and it's easier to control [at Westfield], where the campus only has 5,000 [students]," he said. "How will it work at UMass where there's 20,000 students?"

Berman said that he thought the proposition of making UMass a dry campus was a reactionary move.

"It's stupid that one kid gets drunk at MIT and then the entire state college and university system decides to take matters into their own hands," Berman said.

"It's a waste of money which could be better spent on education and sports," he said.

ALEXANDER KOROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

There's a party in the house
AASA, AHORA, and BSU sponsored a DJ event called La Bomba last Friday night.

Castaway Lounge
Presents
FOR LADIES ONLY!!!
SPEND THE NIGHT WITH A CENTERFOLD
Appearing at Castaways Lounge
Monday, October 20th
$8 adv, $10 door
show 7 pm - 11:30 pm
THE NEW YORK CENTERFOLDS
Rt. 5 & 10 • Whately, MA
413-665-8733

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 7.50 3.75
Sweet Potato Fries 4.99 2.50
Shrimp Tempura 6.25 3.13
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1997
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionist, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Tuesdays or Fridays Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Wednesdays 4:30 - 6 pm, at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 577-5168.

We've seen your account balance. We know you can't afford to bounce a check.
-Hey man, don't rub it in.
Chuck
(6th year senior)
At other banks, you bounce a check, you pay a penalty. Up to $25. But with Overdraft Protection, there are no bounced checks and no penalties.* It comes free with every Student Value Package, along with a stack of Papa Gino's coupons. Use them to save 20% at Papa Gino's when you show your BankBoston Card, a Papa Gino's coupon, and student ID.* To open a Student Value Package, stop by any branch or call 1-800-2-BOSTON.
BankBoston
It's Amazing What You Can Do.
Papa Gino's
Member FDIC. www.bankboston.com/students *Overdraft Protection has a credit limit of $300. Normal monthly fees apply. For qualified applicants only. Offer good through May 31, 1998. Not valid with other discounts or specials. Tax not included. Limited delivery areas. Delivery charge applies. $7.50 delivery minimum. Not valid on alcohol purchase.

CHRISTOPHER CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

What ya reading?
Kevin "Mel Gibson" Collins, a junior English major, was discovered reading by the Campus Center concourse bike racks.

Graduate studies are the best prescription for career advancement.
The Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.
You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Bouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's finest medical research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as a full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the late afternoon and early evening.
For more information, call Mary Beth at (617) 373-2708 or fax (617) 373-4701 or write Graduate School, Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Sciences Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115.
ATTEND OUR OPEN HOUSE
Saturday, November 1st, 9:00 - 12:00 pm, 3rd Floor, Curry Student Center
Graduate Programs and Degrees
Counseling Psychology, Rehabilitation and Special Education:
Master of Science
• Applied Behavior Analysis
• Applied Educational Psychology
School Counseling
School Psychology
• Rehabilitation Counseling
• College Student Development & Counseling
Master of Science in Counseling Psychology
Master of Science in Education
• Intensive Special Needs
• Special Needs
Certificate in Early Intervention
Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Communication Disorders
Master of Science
• Audiology
• Speech-Language Pathology
Certificate in Early Intervention
Health Professions
Master of Sciences
• Clinical Exercise Physiology
• Perfusion Technology
Master of Health Professions
• General Optics
• Health Policy
• Physician Assistant (previous admission PA Certificate program required)
• Regulatory Toxicology
Biomedical Science:
Master of Science
• General Biomedical Science with specializations in Pharmaceutics, Toxicology and General
• Medical Laboratory Science
• Medicinal Chemistry
• Pharmacology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Biomedical Science with specializations in Medical Laboratory Science, Medicinal Chemistry, Pharmaceutics, Pharmacology, Toxicology, Interdisciplinary
Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Northeastern University

■ Monroe

continued from page 1

should be, because of the way she impacted her students' lives.

"That is why you become a teacher," Monroe said. "You do this because of the impact you have. This is three generation work — you are reaching the kids in front of you, their parents at home, and the kids they will have in the future. That is why you can't be shabby."

The new "Monroe Doctrine"

Monroe then outlined her version of the "Monroe Doctrine," which are 11 primary roles of good schools.

The first point, Monroe said, is that the primary purpose of a school is to transform children's lives.

"All children every single day," Monroe said. "You have to say, children are changed by what I do today."

The second point is that school is the only predictable, stable thing in most children's lives.

"School has to be sterling," Monroe said. "It has to be a place with rules and regulations, where kids are not afraid and where teachers are not afraid of kids."

The next point is that a school must begin strong from the first day of classes.

"School has to be fine all the time, from day one," Monroe said. "You can not ease up to excellence."

The fourth point is that teachers must make specific plans so that high expectations are met.

"If you plan high, you get high," Monroe said.

Tailoring the plans to each specific group of students and to make them flexible was Monroe's next point.

The plans must also be evaluated and fine-tuned periodically, Monroe said, in her sixth point.

The seventh point is that teachers must know great methodologies.

"You have to know how to do hands-on, large-group, small-group, portfolio — you can not teach kids the same way all the time," she said.

The next point Monroe made was to stay away from the "drainers" on the staff — the people who would rather complain than work to make positive change.

"Eliminate the drainers in your life," Monroe said. "You can not do this kind of work with them in your ear."

Monroe's ninth point is to get other people to support you, both financially and with their time.

The tenth point is to love and respect all children.

"Kids know phony adults," Monroe said. "They notice which children get touched and which do not, which get to sit next to the teacher and which sit in Siberia."

The final point is to bring passion, courage and perseverance to teaching.

"Use your head, heart and hand," Monroe said. "Believe that but for you and the work you do, those children would die. You can change them forever."

Monroe accepted questions from the audience for the next half hour, and was sent off with hearty applause from the crowd of students and faculty.

Trisha Tanner, a sophomore education major at Mt. Holyoke College, said she found Monroe to be a vital and riveting speaker.

"She was more than inspirational," Tanner said. "There was a sense of being alive that she can express and put into words."

Julienne Guerrero, a sophomore history major and education minor at Mt. Holyoke, agreed with Tanner and said Monroe had motivated her to return to the summer camp where she worked with inner city students this past year.

"She talked about magic and she was acting her magic," Guerrero said. "She confirmed my choice to go back [to the camp] next summer."

Monroe, who is currently executive director of the School Leadership Academy at the Center for Educational Innovation in New York City, has written a book, also entitled Nothing's Impossible: Leadership Lessons from the Field, which is due out in the next two weeks.

Patriarch of Orthodox Church visits U.S.

By David Briggs
Associated Press

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. — Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew, in his first U.S. visit as spiritual leader of 250 million Orthodox Christians, embarked on a 16-city tour yesterday vowing to learn about the American dream and praising the "splendid mosaic of faith" of his church here.

His black robes swirling in a rain-swept wind, the "first among equals" of Orthodox patriarchs worldwide quickly moved inside a hangar where he was greeted by around 500 faithful waving patriarchal flags.

In the opening address of his month-long visit, Bartholomew said his spiritual mission echoes America's commitment to freedom, justice and opportunity for all.

"We look forward to the coming days when we shall have occasion to experience the rich diversity of America, as we journey through her brilliant landscapes," Bartholomew said. "And it is with fatherly joy that we commence our voyage across this great land."

Bartholomew was greeted at the airport by Mary French, the U.S. chief of protocol, and in the next few days will meet with President Clinton and receive a Congressional Gold Medal. In Santa Barbara, Calif., he will participate in a major conference on the environment. Throughout the country, he is celebrating the 75th anniversary of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese in the United States.

■ Ziff

continued from page 1

ings in her department and molded it into its current, sovereign form. She remains one of his closest professional ties to the University.

"His style is irrepressible, inimitable," Edwards said. "You can't emulate Howard Ziff. You either are Howard or you are not Howard."

The adjective most often used to pin down the Ziff style is "gruff," a trait which Sims says has calmed considerably since the days Ziff graded his papers nearly 30 years ago.

"He would come across that way and throw a couple of hurdles in front of you to see if you were ready," Sims said. "All he wanted to know was if you were willing to work and to work hard."

"Once you got to know Howard at all, anything you perceived as gruffness or fierceness was not to be taken personally, and always — at least often — had a hint of amusement behind it," Edwards said, accenting a Sims observation of Ziff's "theatrical" side.

Bryan Harvey, now director of planning and assessment for the University and a former Ziff student, said his first impression of Ziff didn't leave him convinced that Ziff wasn't in fact an actual thespian.

"I thought, 'My God, it's true,'" he said. "'There are people like this. Hard-driving, hard-bitten reporters who defy authority and so forth.' It was like Hollywood. It was like Central Casting."

In a sense, Ziff is a tad too unbelievable a character to be true. He can ease into a savvy discussion about the great political cases of the 20th century, shift effortlessly into a rave about Detroit Tiger slugger Hank Greenburg and speed smoothly into how he and his Amherst buddies got booted by townies from a roadhouse while in college. The secret: He teaches without trying.

From his childhood as a first-generation Jewish emigre to the Korean warfront to the Chicago Daily News to professorial positions at Illinois and Massachusetts, he has, with an unpretentious wink and a smirk, put together a life that belongs in one of the hundred upon hundreds of books which line his study.

And to think the University is only fortunate enough to get a few chapters.

COMPUTER ENGINEERING • COMPUTER SCIENCE • PHYSICS
ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING • MECHANICAL ENGINEERING • MATH
TAKE TECHNOLOGY TO THE NTH POWER.
When something is too extreme for words, it's to the Nth degree. And that's the level of technology you'll experience at Raytheon.
Raytheon has formed a new technological superpower – together, Raytheon Electronic Systems, Raytheon E-Systems and Raytheon TI Systems are driving technology to the limit. And we're looking for engineers who want to push the envelope. Break new ground. Make their mark.
At Raytheon you'll take technology – and your career – to the highest possible level. You'll take it to the Nth. We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office now to schedule an interview, or check out our website at www.rayjobs.com.
WE'LL BE ON YOUR CAMPUS ON OCTOBER 21, 1997.
CONTACT YOUR CAREER PLACEMENT OFFICE TODAY TO SCHEDULE AN INTERVIEW.
Internet: www.rayjobs.com • E-mail: resume@rayjobs.com
U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.
Raytheon
EXPECT GREAT THINGS

Auto Glass Center
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

SPRING BREAK
Cancun From $399
Jamaica From $399
Bahamas From $429
Florida From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.ondisssummertours.com

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30
Sat 12:00-7:30
Closed Tuesday

SKI & Snowboard from $229
College Ski Weeks '98'
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
55 SLOPES, Quiet in Lifts from the condos
22 Black Diamonds, Triple Quad and 2 Exp.
1-800-848-9545

It's time to take responsibility

Okay kids, this is how it is: people are dying. Students are being struck down by causes that are completely, 100 percent preventable.

A little bit of common sense should tell us all that a death caused by alcohol poisoning or alcohol related causes should not happen, ever. We are all responsible for these tragedies; we need to accept this responsibility, it won't go away until we make a move to ensure that incidents like this no longer occur.

"An alcohol ban may not be the end–all solution, but it will show that the Board is making an effort. They will be saying that students dying on campuses across the country has got to stop."

Elsa Allen

But make UMass a dry campus? "Not my UMass, not the 'ZooMass' that I applied to because of its reputation as an extreme party school." Well kids, it just might happen.

That's right, we may all just have to suck it up and say goodbye to those fun–filled days of sneaking cases of Natural Light into the dorms, rolling kegs into the parking lot before a football game or inviting our friends to a Round Robin on our floor. Yup, buh–bye!

But before you start ranting and raving, blaming everyone else and blatantly disregarding the ban (all of which will inevitably happen), listen to me for a moment.

We are all to blame for this course of action. It's about time something was done to let us know this. Because it's for exactly the reasons listed above that we get the idea that it's okay to drink irresponsibly, especially if we're on campus. "Hey," we think, "I'm on campus, I'm home, I'm not gonna get hurt. Pass me another Jell–O shot." Then we go out, do something stupid, and somebody does get hurt. In the most recent case, one of us died.

The incidents that took place over homecoming weekend, specifically in the parking lot before the game, show that as a student body we are asking — practically pleading — to be reprimanded for irresponsible drinking. Obviously, if we continue to push the boundaries in the way it was done in the parking lot that day, people will begin to notice. It shouldn't surprise anyone that was in the parking lot drinking, having fun, watching people get out of control, perhaps getting out of control themselves, that measures are being taken to stop this sort of activity. Apparently, nobody that day realized the tragic turn that activities like that can take.

Although there is a certain amount of distance that we can put between ourselves and Adam Prentice, especially if we didn't know him or any of his friends, it was this sort of "party before people" mentality that added to his unnecessary death. It is the very attitude that causes us to push and fight to get to a keg of cheap beer at a fraternity party, or crowd into an uncomfortable bar to have drinks spilled on us, while yelling at a friend so they can hear what we're saying.

An alcohol ban on campus may be the only way that we can get through to people, to let them know that if we help perpetuate this attitude, we will be held responsible. We may not be to blame for very specific incidents, but overall, it should all be put on us: you, me, the faculty, our parents, our friends, everyone.

I know it sucks for those underage students stuck in the dorms with nothing to do. I'm underage, I know how it is. But we can't risk the life of another UMass student. Any step that can be taken to curb the dangerous activities that go on here must be taken.

An alcohol ban may not be the end–all solution, but it will show that the Board is making an effort. They will be saying that students dying on campuses across the country has got to stop.

Point/Counterpoint

Elsa Allen is being punished for somebody else's stupidity, just do me this favor. Take every step to ensure that the next victim to fall prey to an alcohol related death is not your roommate, your friend, your neighbor, that guy in your class that you always see at parties. Be responsible. Because if we all had been acting responsibly in the past few weeks, this may not even have been an issue.

An alcohol ban will probably not end drinking on campus. We're not dealing with a stupid administration here, despite what popular opinion may be. They must know this.

What we are dealing with is a Board that recognizes that measures must be taken, starting slowly, to try to turn this place around. Perhaps all it will take is the threat of having a dry campus that will force people to smarten up. Who knows?

The fact is that we won't know what methods will help until we, ourselves, make the conscientious effort to make them work — until we say that it's not okay if our friends drink themselves to death. Until we stop acting stupid.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian staff member.

Another law isn't the answer

UMass student Adam Prentice died Sept. 27 from injuries received when he fell through the glass roof of a Morrill Science Center greenhouse. MIT student Scott Krueger died Sept. 29 after a three–day coma induced by his consumption of alcohol. Tests showed Krueger's blood–alcohol level to be .410 percent.

Some have said these incidents indicate a deeper problem with alcohol abuse on campus that absolutely needs to be addressed, and that is true.

Eric Petersen

Then someone cried. "Well, there ought to be a law! They should just outlaw drinking entirely!"

The Massachusetts Board of Higher Education (BHE), in the kind of knee–jerk reaction that has come to characterize so many aspects of politics, voted Oct. 14 to push for an all– inclusive ban of alcohol at all 29 state college campuses.

The ban, however, can not go into effect unless approved by each school's Board of Trustees. They've been asked to vote before Dec. 15.

We can only hope the UMass Board of Trustees thinks to ask the question the Board of Higher Education seeks to avoid. Such as:

Will an all out ban of alcohol on campus really decrease alcohol abuse? If passed, the penalties for a student who breaks the alcohol ban will include expulsion. I have trouble imagining many of the party–goers I've seen turn down a drink and say, "Naw, man, I don't want to get thrown out of college for one drink." It is more likely that the threat of punishment and the necessity for "underground" activities will add to the mystique already attached to drinking.

There will also be what I call the "witch–hunt effect." The University will see the first few students caught breaking the ban as opportunities to set an example and send a message to other students. For each student caught, however, there will be dozens of others who go unpunished simply because they are better at getting away with it.

"Laws are not 'magic;' they don't fix problems automatically. Often, as in the case of this proposed alcohol ban, they skirt the disease while swatting weakly at symptoms."

Eric Petersen

What will be the result when students are forced to go into town to drink alcohol? If the ban is approved, many students will simply go off campus to drink. Increased travel distances will mean more students driving and, inevitably, more driving drunk.

Drunk driving is not only a risk to the driver, but also anyone else who's on or near the road. Even on foot, there are sure to be other negative effects to having increased numbers of intoxicated students in town.

What right does UMass have to spend University funds on enforcing an alcohol ban? It takes some nerve for the BHE to propose that more money be spent on things other than classes. I pay more than $8,000 for things such as room and board, the library, sports facilities, and security each semester; but foremost, I expect my tuition to pay for classes — that's why I go to college. Every student here has the right to receive what they pay for.

Should UMass tell students over the age of 21 that they can't drink alcohol? Absolutely not. The U.S. Constitution and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts have given us the right to drink or not to drink as our own wills dictate. UMass should not interfere unadvisedly.

The point is moot for students under 21; there is already a law against under–age drinking. How will the ban be so different that it succeeds where the law has not?

What alternatives to an all–out alcohol ban are there? Enforcing this ban is going to be an up–hill battle without much hope of success, because the ban doesn't really face the underlying problem beneath the symptoms.

Better courses of action include promoting education about alcohol abuse among the students and providing students with fun alternatives to drinking–oriented events. There are some great organizations around campus that strive to do just that, such as the Residential Education Alcohol Program (REAP).

We in America often see a situation that isn't right and say, "there ought to be a law," but our blind reliance on laws is misplaced. Laws are not "magic;" they don't fix problems automatically. Often, as in the case of this proposed alcohol ban, they skirt the disease while swatting weakly at symptoms.

UMass students will have the opportunity to vote on the Alcohol Ban on Oct. 22. The vote will not directly effect the proposed ban but it is an opportunity to make the views of the students known to the Board of Trustees, who will vote directly on the issue. I urge everyone to place their ballot.

Eric Petersen is a UMass student.

The rewards of competition

With last week's announcement of a push for a zero tolerance policy with regard to alcohol at this and other state universities, no one has addressed the real problem.

The problem is not alcohol abuse in and of itself. The problem is the system of competition and those who uphold it. In this country and at this University, there is a system of competition that has been in place since the very beginning — alcohol abuse is just one problem that stems from distress caused by competition.

We have all been competing for most of our lives and will probably continue until the day we die. In general terms, we must destroy lest we be destroyed. Why? By each other. Why? Because that's the way our system is constructed by those who stand to profit. Let me explain in more specific terms.

Joe Sullivan

Each of us is born into this world and competition is something we are unaware of, for the most part, until we enter school. This is where we're sucked in.

In our formative years, there are teachers that give us support and try to teach us to share with one another, to love one another, to be kind to everyone. This might go on from preschool to the first grade. When we begin to learn certain essential things, like how to read and how to add and subtract. We begin to notice that certain people are less able or more able to do these things at a good level, a level that may be arbitrarily judged from how well our parents do these things. This is when competition awareness takes hold.

Fast forward to the beginning of middle school. By this time grades are being given, and it is an all–out war to see not necessarily who can get the best grades, but who can give the best answers and look the smartest. Grades are the outcome of this desire. The competition is heightened as a warm–up for high school.

In high school we are forced to compete head to head with our peers to see who can get the best grades while participating in the most extracurricular activities in order to get into the best college possible. In this era of education, the competition is even fiercer in high school since funding for college is at a minimum, due to legislation coming from state and federal governments — those working to uphold competitive institutions.

At college the competition is about getting the best job or getting into the best graduate program. The stakes have once again been raised. After college you get a job, but now you are competing to hold it, and if you're able to do that well, you compete to be promoted or be regarded at the top of your field. All the while you are succumbing to the whims of those who make the rules of business.

This continues for about 40 years, and you retire if you're lucky. If you're unlucky, you compete during your retirement years just to be able to have things like health care, maybe in exchange for foregoing a pension. You die having competed your entire life.

With this continuous competition, it is not hard to see how a certain level of distress is created in an individual. This is manifested in a number of ways.

The individual may decide at some point that the competition is too stiff, and decide to commit suicide.

Racism in this country is in part a result of the system of competition, because people feel it necessary to put other people below themselves.

Competition breeds acts of violence. In less extreme cases, individuals may be verbally abusive to those around them or have violent mood swings.

Substance abuse is no doubt partially caused by the pressures of intense competition. People look to drugs or alcohol for some kind of escape from the rat race.

Though alcohol abuse can be problematic, the problem is that competition breeds distress, leading to distressed behavior. Banning alcohol doesn't address the bigger problems of dealing with the pressures of competition: it merely scapegoats a resulting behavior.

The alcohol abuse problem has been, in effect, created by those who've called for the alcohol ban. By making competition an imperative part of university existence they exacerbate the problem.

Joe Sullivan is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Not just the white man's burden

To the Editor:

I was truly sad to read about just how "embarrassed" Jamie Haslam is (Oct. 6) to be a white male in today's world. An unfortunate backlash of the age is guilt on the part of the traditional holders of privilege.

However, if one wishes to be a truly "progressive" or "enlightened" male, then he should not judge their identity by the deeds of their fathers like some hero of antiquity. We must create our own legacy; the idea that our genealogy defines our roles is archaic and outmoded at best. I have never personally killed a Native American and taken their land. I have never owned slaves or killed in the name of God. I assume the same goes for Haslam.

I am sorry that you have been taught that your own history, though full of conquerors and supremacists, is not as important as those of the victims; that you feel Western society was somehow forged in blood. Does this mean that all of our accomplishments are therefore null and void?

In no way am I suggesting that we are not responsible for changing the wrongs of society past. But we do so in order to create our own society, not merely to bury that which came before us.

On a final note, I also do not believe that you are unable to understand how discrimination and inequality feel. One of the great qualities of the human condition is not only sympathy, but also empathy.

We are all people first and foremost. Drawing a boundary around the mysteries of race and gender harkens back to a time where unmarried women were evil enchantresses and non–Caucasians were spawned in hell.

I am a white male, also. Whether or not I have suffered prejudice or discrimination is moot. I am filled with the same capacity for emotion as every other person on this planet. I urge you not to mourn the loss of your dignity or criticize the flaws of our forebears, but to create your own name, your own society, and your own ideas of equality among humankind.

Jesse Recinos
Northeast

Computers do more than alienate us

To the Editor:

I had several thoughts about Jason Davis's editorial "Taking a Byte out of Cyberspace" (Oct. 15). I agree with Davis on one point — I do not think computers are something to worship. Computers are dumb machines that simply have the ability to do basic operations extremely fast.

However, some of Davis's other opinions and conclusions I do not agree with. He does not support the library's investment in computer workstations for each floor of the library. I am tired of standing and waiting five minutes to take overcrowded elevators up and down when I am trying to work on a research paper. Those workstations will probably cost small change compared to other amounts of money spent at this University. I do think the University must provide enough financial aid as well as child care, but not by sacrificing the upgrading and increase of the computers it currently has.

Computers provide powerful tools for dealing with more than just word processing and email. Calculus is enhanced by the use of math–graphing software. Computers aid with spread sheets, graphing charts, animation, design work, and text layout that are annoying and tedious when done by hand.

Now that the Internet and technologies that can link up people via video have arrived, there really is no going back. They have provided me with many ways of contacting friends and relatives that I would not contact as frequently otherwise. The Internet, email and other new technologies don't isolate people from the "real world" unless those individuals are trying to escape.

I like the idea of classrooms connecting to the Internet. It is amazing that students today can sit in a classroom and talk live via a video link–up to students in another city. I don't see that as isolating.

What I worry about is that, due to socio–economic status, more and more of a technology divide will grow between people.

Sarah Pendergrass
Northampton

The Editorial/Opinion page is seeking pieces for a Point/Counterpoint feature on the proposed alcohol ban. Those interested should contact Dan Bodah at the Collegian at 545–1491. Submissions are due at the latest by Sunday, Oct. 19.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prester Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majcrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A lesson is learned

By Millicent Jackson
Collegian Staff

A Lesson Before Dying
Ernest J. Gaines
Vintage Books

In his own words, author Ernest Gaines said, "We all know — at least intellectually that we're going to die. The difference is being told, 'Okay, it's tomorrow at 10 a.m.' How do you react to that? How do you face it? This is the ultimate test of life."

Set in a small Louisiana Cajun community in the 1940s, A Lesson Before Dying brings to life the story of five men as they struggle to come to terms with their individual, yet linked, destinies.

Jefferson, a young, illiterate black man, is an unwilling party to a liquor store shoot–out that leaves three men dead. The sole survivor, Jefferson is tried as something less than a man, falsely convicted of murder and sentenced to death by electrocution.

Grant Wiggins, who left his hometown for the university, has returned to the plantation school to teach. As he struggles with his decision whether to carry out his duty to his community or to escape from this perceived burden to another state, his aunt and Jefferson's godmother persuade him to visit Jefferson's cell and "humanize" him by imparting his learning and his pride on the young man before his death.

The first few times Grant frequents the jail are often spent with him talking and Jefferson staring at the wall. Jefferson had labeled himself a hog not worthy of being spoken to. Eventually, throughout Grant's visits to the jail, both Jefferson and Grant forge a bond as they both come to understand the simple heroism of resisting and defying their fates. Grant learns the importance of compassion and Jefferson learns the importance of trust and the value of his worth as a man.

The first selection of the second season of Oprah Winfrey's book club, A Lesson Before Dying is a brilliantly written, heart rending novel. Its lessons are profound, in turn forcing each reader to take an inward look at themselves and the way they deal with others. Gaines demonstrates a profound understanding of the human psyche and, above all, a compassion for people.

A Lesson Before Dying will surely take its place among great stories of identity and destiny of our time.

Cries of the faithful

It is early morning and the sun has already cast its unrelenting heat upon the parched ground of this small village in central Sudan. A young family on the northern edge tries to sleep in its grass hut. Suddenly a group of soldiers storm in, shouting orders and motioning with their guns.

The children huddle in fear beside their mother. One of the uniformed men grabs the two oldest children. He drags them outside and ties them up to the back of a horse. The boy will be sent north to a Muslim religion school, where he will be forced to embrace Islam.

For the little girl of nine, childhood is over. She will be sold as a concubine to a government official. The mother watches helplessly, protecting her young baby in her arms. Before leaving the hut, the soldiers molest the mother repeatedly. When they were finished, they cut off her breasts, knowing her child will soon die of starvation.

A stillness falls over the hut, but the rest of the village reels in mass confusion. The families who were not yet taken by the soldiers know that any appearance of order is now just a memory. They must now flee south, no time to grab a few precious belongings. The best scenario they can hope for is to remain united with their family, knowing that they face a future of struggling for their next meals in remote areas far from the village they call home. Those who escape the village face a grim future, but they are more fortunate than many.

This is a story of faithful people. A people who will not deny Christ. A people who will not turn their backs on their Savior, even if it means death.

The Sudan is experiencing persecution unparalleled since the first century church. The Muslim government, in an attempt to Islamize the entire population, has taken the lives of about 2 million people who would not convert. This government also sanctions mass crucifixions, the burning of Christian villages and churches, and the sale of children into slavery. This systematic persecution of the Southern people has forced 3.5 million to flee their homes for relative safety.

The people of Sudan are brothers and sisters who look just like you and me. We need to get on our knees every day and thank God every other second for the fact that we're here today.

Jeff Belizare

Meanwhile, my brothers in the Sudan are being lowered into dry wells and set on fire.

Meanwhile, my sisters are being raped and having their limbs cut off.

This is all happening because of their love for Christ. This is real, and it's happening while you sit and read this.

They are our people, and they need our help. If you would like to help, please call or write to:

The Voice of the Martyrs
P.O. Box 443
Bartlesville, OK 74005–0443
(918) 337– 8015 or (800) 747–0085.

Jeff Belizaire is a UMass student.

One Time for the Mind

Sexuality is a word that is often feared and silenced in regards to women. Because both males and females are not used to discussing the issue. For a taboo that plagues our nation through the media, it poses a threat to individuals when it is talked of as a matter that is truly important and looked at as a respected topic of concern.

Sexuality is something that, for black women, has been a silenced concern. Maybe in the kitchen or the living room, with our mothers, aunts or other relatives, we were able to get the Sexuality 101 course, but usually not in depth.

One could look at our past history in the black struggle and link the stigmas that are posed about black women to understand where we see ourselves from an internal perspective.

"The fact is that we need to be in control of our bodies. We cannot allow circumstances to be the determinant of how we see ourselves."

Allana E. Todman

Before the first wave of feminism, coverture was well intact. During this time, white women were looked at by their husbands as child bearers whose main goal in life was to keep house and home.

Black women were dealing with this type of sexism, but in a different form. The slave masters would often rape them in the plantation fields. With this occurring, the black man held no position as a "bread winner" like the white men did to their wives, by depriving them of their sexual rights; black female slaves had no options.

With a patriarchal society the white man's dominance played a part in the consistent development of sexism. The men, whom we'll call the subjects, looked at women as objects who were to make them happy.

To expand on the facts of women being treated as objects, we can observe the Industrial period. Capitalist Industrialism clearly relates to the sexuality of women, because wives and husbands only had intercourse for reproduction purposes. This was only the beginning of how women would perceive their "sexual roles" in a relationship. This occurence predetermined how the present would effect women.

Having the understanding that women were viewed as objects, we can observe the role that women take, often times in between the sheets. Whether a long time companion, partner or friend, the thoughts that run through a woman's mind during and after intercourse can be embarrassing for her to openly discuss.

There is no need for embarrassment. As women, we need to take pride in our beauty and whom we choose to share our intimacy with.

In the article "Making the Sexual Revolution Work for Women," Virginia Reath speaks of the effects that women encounter when they silence themselves, and succumb to believing that their pleasure is not important. She also says the reason why there is a communication gap is because women do not know which literal terms to use. Reath says that if women were to use clinical terms in conversations with their partners for sexual pleasure, it would make the two in the sexual relationship become turned off from one another.

The fact is that we need to be in control of our bodies. We cannot allow circumstances to be the determinant of how we see ourselves. The challenge is to claim our sexuality and decide how we will use it.

Many women, in these modern times, are claiming their sexuality liberty. Other women, like author Sharon Thompson, are trying to "reclaim," their bodies and sexual urges until they find the right one.

"I looked around and saw that in heterosexual relationships, the women were subjugated. In addition, I began to realize, in a real way, that black women were overlooked. Black men continually make that clear when they choose white lovers, partners or wives," she said.

Many black women have taken this avenue, and it has allowed them to feel more confident and in control of their lives. Unfortunately, time has shown that some black women depend on the black man heavily to provide emotional and physical support, often times when the man cannot provide this type of intimacy.

Nathan McCall, a journalist and author of Makes Me Wanna Holla, said that the unhealthy relationships that occur are due to the male not finding a place in society, therefore not knowing how to define his true masculinity.

As women, we can not allow situations like unhealthy relationships to determine what goes on with our bodies.

We cannot allow for anymore "unexpected pregnancies."

We must vow that we will try our best to accept ourselves and our bodies. We must also form a consciousness that will allow us to react quickly in our minds when we are in intimate situations. Yes, we can be patient in waiting for our men to get their heads on straight, but we must be in control of our lives.

Sexuality defines whom we are intimate with and to whom we choose to give ourselves. When we are in control of our bodies, and are able to use our own minds, like one said, "we can no longer be captive to the old passive way."

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian columnist.

The Plight of a People

Edgar Barros

Does Proposition 209 sound familiar? It should.

Proposition 209 has seriously hampered the enrollment of black students at universities across California. Watch out, because there are plenty of people in power here in Massachusetts who would love to exterminate affirmative action too. Why do we need affirmative action? Our people have been suffering from an enormous plague, called racism. Although affirmative action is not the cure, it does serve as an aspirin. By aspirin, I mean that affirmative action can temporarily alleviate the pain.

I find it rather sad that in this society we have to use racism to combat racism.

I would like to address, specifically, the issue of affirmative action as it pertains to college admissions. Many universities have a quota to fill. They admit a certain number of students of color, based primarily on their race. A lot of whites and upper–middle class blacks (you or probably one of them) view this system as a racist system, one that puts whites at a disadvantage because they are not "of color." I agree with these folks 100 percent! It is a form of racism that racism has bred. What I want to ask you is, do you have any other solutions? I have one.

I believe that the root of the admission's problem lies in the field of economics. Economics is manipulated by the American government and used as an implicit form of racism. A prime example of this is the enormous lack of funding for inner–city schools across the nation. These schools (comprised of mostly students of color) are so grossly under funded that books that are 10–15 years old are frequently used in class today. The funds to hire new faculty members are unavailable. Realize that these funds are available, but are only allocated to certain schools and neighborhoods.

This past summer I went to Roxbury, so I decided to visit my old elementary school. I saw all of my former teachers and the building brought back a lot of memories. Two things seriously bothered me though. First, the computers that the kids were using, are the same computers that I used (Apple IIe). Out of the 15 computers in the lab, only two were modern computers. The library still had most of the books I grew up reading. This wouldn't be such a bad thing if they had ordered some new copies of these books.

For students who attended school out in the suburbs, Apple IIe's have long been replaced by brand new Macs. Their libraries boast many of the new children's books and resources. They offer more athletic teams, music groups, debate clubs, computer clubs, tutoring services, field trips, national and international exchanges, smaller classrooms, school newspapers, etc. The funds are somehow not being efficiently allocated.

Take this example for instance. Meet Bill, a young white student from Super–Suburban High School and Craig, a young black student from Inner–City Ghetto High School. Which one do you think will have the higher GPA? Which one do you think will score higher on the totally fair SAT, and which one do you think will produce a better, more efficient essay? If you know anything about the opportunities and resources offered in suburban schools versus those offered in inner–city schools, you probably answered, "Bill, Bill and Bill, respectively." Therefore, it seems that Bill would have a greater chance of gaining entrance into an institute of higher learning. If you then take Bill and Craig and reverse the scenario, Craig would come out on top. It has nothing to do with genetics, it's all about opportunity.

Affirmative action tries to serve as a type of equalizer and at the same time, make up for 12 years of injustice. By making black students rely on affirmative action, the government tries to make black students believe that they are not as smart as the white race, can never be as smart as the white race and must therefore use their race as a crutch to get by.

I recognize the fact that I would not be here today if it was not for affirmative action. I would probably be a member of the work force and also be taking classes at night. So should I be grateful for affirmative action? Should I be grateful that the government gave me this chance? Hell no! I'm pissed off. Why is that our people don't have access to the same quality of education as students of affluent backgrounds do. Don't we all pay taxes? Aren't we all members of this society? Then what is the problem? Is it just me or does the system seem biased? Let me know because if I'm the crazy one, then I'll seek help immediately.

If you get rid of affirmative action with out providing equal funding for all public schools, the plague is going to spread and run more rampant. UMass, for example, wouldn't accept most black students, especially those from poorly funded schools. This means that more and more blacks would have to enter the work force as low skilled laborers, and be forced to accept low wages. As more and more blacks are denied the opportunity to attend college, the number of blacks holding low wage positions increases, making the wound bigger and bigger. The plague continues to spread.

Again, affirmative action is not the cure, but for now it has to serve as the aspirin that reduces the symptoms of this disease called racism.

What's the cure (if you haven't figured it out by now)? Equal allocation of funds to all public schools. This is the only solution. If this solution is implemented, the positive effects will just keep on emerging. More and more students of color will unlock their full potential and excel in all phases of life. As more and more students are given a chance to realize their full potential, the fewer students there are to run the streets. Therefore, our neighborhoods become safer. With safer, more pleasant neighborhoods, more people (especially older folks) come outdoors. With more people coming outdoors, the more the neighborhood comes together socially and spiritually to form communities. With better communities, children grow up with not only one or two parents, but with ten, twenty or fifty parents. And with more "parents," the children learn more lessons and have a wide array of role models to emulate, thus reducing the heavy dependency on entertainers and athletes to serve as perfect role models. If you keep repeating this cycle generation after generation, there is no way that we can't rise to the top. With more and more blacks holding key positions in society, the more blacks can control industries. More control brings about less dependency on white America. More control also eliminates the need for programs such as affirmative action.

As A. Philip Randolph said, "A community is democratic only when the humblest and weakest person can enjoy the highest civil, economic, and social rights that the biggest and most powerful possess."

Right now, it's not happening and I don't think that this system can ever become truly democratic. For this reason, we must force some changes so we will have the opportunity to become some of the "biggest and most powerful."

Edgar Barros is a Collegian columnist.

Beats, Lyrics and Conscious Knowledge

Jeff Belizare

"At the age of 19, I curved the scene
A lot of M.C.'s that could not come clean
Fronted on dealing hard times of rhymes
You see them on the streets with no signs of hell
Then they get on stage and tell some old corn–ball war story
'Rockin the bell'
You fakin the funk"
— Main Source from 'Fakin the funk' 1992

"Keep it real" they scream.

Well, what is real? Is realness something that is personal? Is real being true to self and others about one's self and one's identity? Or is it a portrayal of what the masses define as real?

In hip–hop many artists and entertainers are often quoted as saying, "As long as I'm real to myself, that's all that matters." Then why is it that they scream "keep it real" when their image on wax is anything but real? Image on wax is that keeping it real? Are you yourself on wax or are you trying to be someone else for the sake of money? Often times, it's all about the image that sells. Then what about the reality that these so called "real" people live in?

Do you really think that Nas is a member of the Escobar family? Do Nas, Foxy Brown and AZ amongst others sit and count money with the Arabs? Do they really transport keys of whatever from the Colombians? Is it really the reality of the Mafia that these brothers and sisters are living? Such are the far fetched images of some of our beloved artists and as Trugoy said, "Colombians ain't never ran with your crew, you acting all shisty, the only Italians you know were Iceys!"

Seetheraman

One should note the distinction of metaphor and its prose in poetry as compared to someone who fronts on their's. Metaphorically speaking, Common Sense was in love with H.E.R. Havoc was in love with EJ, the shorty that helped him drink his pain away. Q–Tip schooled us on the vices of befriending Tommy Hilfiger, Donna Karan and Polo. Jeru was the superhero "Black Prophet" who fought Mr. Ignorance with his lyrical Kung–Fu. Unfortunately, often times we have a way of confusing the two — Image vs. reality.

Let's think for a minute about these images perpetuated by the artists and record labels. These images are tremendously influential in molding, shaping and defining the meaning of a black man. Most of these images are of the street corner thugs, the aggressive, violent black men who run the numerous mafia and the pimp archetypes who treat their women as commodities to be bought and used. The number of our men who make up these vial images far outweigh the images of our teachers, our poets, our fathers, our intellectuals and our husbands who educate, build and respect. One could then pose the question as to what objective these artists have in mind when they represent their own in such a destructive manner?

Reality check. Today, unfortunately, rappers' and other artists' images on wax are largely attributed to the numerous marketing executives of record companies. They are portrayed in certain lights and images as a result of the extensive research that the marketing department claims to do. Research directly from the consumer (you), they say indicates that these are the images that are in demand and that sell. As a result, these images are then packaged for incoming artists who agree to the terms of contract. The marketing executives, who are predominantly white, sometimes even determine the content of an album and mass appeal, thus pulling the plug on the control of the artist. Image vs. reality.

Similar to the media's portrayal of black men, the record companies project these images without forethought of its consequences. Many artists are high budget advertisements for self–destruction, and although their music is a self– reflection where they question their lifestyles, the messages perpetuated are all but lost to the mainstream media and assorted onlookers.

"Keep it real," they say. To whom and to what are they keepin' it real? To me? To you? Definitely not to us or hip– hop, something that they claim to love. So the question still remains. What is real? As one of our intellects of hip–hop, Posdanus said it.

"Instead of trying to keep it real, you should be trying to keep it right." Say word!

Suki Seetharaman is the Rap Music Director for The Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP).

We want you to write for us.

Contact us at 545-1851, ask for Humphrey brown III, Black Affairs Editor

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Long live the Million Man March

Brothers and sisters show solidarity at the Million Man March candle light vigil.

ARTS & LIVING

New look, same Letters to Cleo

COURTESY MIKE LASS

Letters to Cleo showed off their new look in Boston last week — but proved that things can stay the same.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Correspondent

LETTERS TO CLEO
Paradise Rock Club
Oct. 16

BOSTON — "We're definitely more of a live band than a studio band," said Kay Hanley, lead vocalist of the pop/rock band, Letters to Cleo. "We can't capture in the studio what we do live. Our albums are a work in progress."

Hanley's intern to Cleo made this statement evident last Thursday night at the Paradise Rock Club in Boston, kicking off their U.S. tour to promote their latest release, Go!

"It feels good [to be on tour again]," Hanley said in a brief interview before the show. "Now that we've been out of the loop for a while," she said, referring to a low point in the band's career. The Cleos took about six months off after their previous tour due to the disappointing sales of Go!'s predecessor, Wholesale Meats and Fish, as well the combined stress of a year and a half on the road.

Addressing the sold–out crowd as "six hundred of our closest friends," Hanley and company started off the show with two cuts from Go! — the dark, morbid "Find You Dead" and the adrenaline–filled "Veda Very Shining." Playing the entire new record, including the hit single, "Anchor," and the insanely breezy "Co–Pilot," Letters to Cleo made it a point to devote attention to their two previous albums.

Letters to Cleo may sound, to some, like a cheesy pop band on silver disc, but the Cleos have an amazing stage presence. Onstage banter is an integral part of a Cleo show, as well as interactions between the band and their fans. Hanley is one of the few performers who are not afraid to country–flavored, "Step Back," from the Aurora Gory Alice album. Lead guitarist Michael Eisenstien took a fair amount of attention away from Hanley by playing a blistering guitar solo to the song, "Jennifer," and using a beer bottle as a glass slide.

The Cleos ended the show with their international hit — which almost doomed them to "one–hit wonder" status — "Here and Now." They returned to play two encores and finally closed with the soon–to–be–married (in mid–January) Eisenstien and Hanley performing the acoustic ballad, "Alouette & Me."

New drummer, Tom Polce, replacing Stacy Jones, who left the band to join Veruca Salt, provided the band with something which had been previously missing — an extra voice. Polce harmonized beautifully with Hanley, as he pounded at his drum–kit looking something like Animal's big brother. Polce's drumming perfectly complemented Scott Riebling's bass, which provided much of the glue that held Go! together.

Hanley said that she and the rest of the band are on the best of terms with Jones, who was in attendance Thursday night.

"We're still good friends. He wanted to play a song tonight," Hanley said, and then she added jokingly, "I told him 'no way.'"

Although a lot has changed in the band, Hanley insists that any drastic changes are purely cosmetic. Any change in the band's sound was brought about by evolution.

"It wasn't intentional," Hanley said of shedding her "bad–ass in pigtails image."

"Two years go by, you cut your hair... out with the old and in with the new."

The change in musical style could possibly be attributed to the departure of producer Mike Denneen, but Hanley will be the first to say that the changes are subtle.

"It's not that different," she said. "It's still Cleo."

Ballots for daytime Emmys are in

Well, the results from last column's pre–Emmy poll are in. Before I divulge the results, I would like to thank everyone who voted, whether it be via e–mail or through the ballots I passed out at the Blue Wall (probably annoying the hell out of those of you who just want to watch your soaps in peace, like moi).

Listen to me yap away. Okay, let's get to the heart of the matter:

Best Actor: Maurice Benard (Sonny, "General Hospital") by a landslide. Looks like the fans can't get enough of "GH"s resident gangsta. No surprise here, Maurice would've been my vote too. He's been nothing short of exceptional (although his character, Sonny, has been an entirely different story. Let's just say, I'm not very pleased with him at this point).

Best Actress: In what was an extremely tight race, Eileen Davidson (Kristin/Susan, "Days of Our Lives") just squeezed by Susan Lucci (Erica, "All My Children") for the win (by the slim margin of two votes). I think both actresses have done some incredible work, but I'd have to agree with the fans on this one as well. Eileen's been "Days" saving grace over the past few months (she even managed to make this recent jungle adventure slightly bearable, although I stress the word slightly). She's really made the most out of her dual roles and has been a shot of adrenaline to a show whose plots had become somewhat stale. Poor Lucci though. Will she ever take home that Emmy?

Best Vixen: Ahh, my favorite category. I expected quite a fight in this category since the roster included quite a few nasty witches. It didn't turn out to be much of a contest at all, however, as Sarah Brown (Carly, "GH") won by a landslide. She's been deliciously evil this year (definitely my choice) although I tend to think that she's just misunderstood. She really is the victim in this whole tragedy. Ha!

Best Newcomer: Surprisingly enough, Becky Hearst (Lizzie, "GH"). I threw her name in the mix not really expecting much of a response but, boy, was I wrong. I happen to think she's definitely got some potential (I see her as a young Carly). I'm still reeling from the news that she's dating co–star Ingo Rademacher (Jax). Looks like she's a force to be reckoned with both on and off the screen. Florenzo (Tea, "One Life To Live") also garnered quite a response. She was my vote (those of you who have seen her in action know why).

Hottest Male: In what was another strongly contested battle, Tyler Christopher (Nikolas, "GH") just barely pulled through for the win with Steve Burton (Jason, "GH") coming in a close second. No surprise here since my girlfriends have been screaming for him to take his shirt off for months now. It's a tough call though. As my friend Susan has said, they're both "altogether yummy."

Hottest Female: No contest here, Vanessa Marcil (Brenda, "GH"). I couldn't agree with you guys more, she's definitely a goddess beyond words. I can't believe she's engaged to Tyler Christopher (what a hot couple!). Can you imagine the children these two will have? Gene pools don't get much better than this.

Greatest Couple That Never Was: This one was actually a tie between Mike and Carrie ("Days") and A.J. and Carly ("GH"). I'd love to see both couples come to pass. I simply don't see any chemistry between Austin and Carrie. They bore me. In my opinion (apparently yours as well) Mike and Carrie are a much hotter duo. Ditto regarding A.J. and Carly. I love the idea of these two tortured souls finding comfort in one another, although the chances might be pretty slim at this point. They have a slight hurdle to pass, the fact that Carly drugged A.J.

Drama Queen: The votes for this one were pretty varied and widespread. Lynn Herring (Lucy, "Port Charles") came out victorious though. Robin Strasser (Dorian, "OLTL") and Jacklyn Zeeman (Bobbie, "GH"), who is infamous for her penance stare (the one where she has that bewildered, "I'm on crack" look) were close behind.

Hottest Couple: Take a guess as to who won this category? Chances are, you're right, Sonny and Brenda ("GH"). This wasn't even a contest which didn't surprise me considering the fact that even non–"GH" fans have heard of the sizzling couple. They're legendary (and with good reason) even though they are no more. Sob. It's okay. I'll eventually get over it. Liza and Adam ("AMC") got an honorable mention too.

Best Storyline: Carly's deception ("GH") took home the title this year with Marlena and Kristin locked in the cellar ("Days") placing second. Whether you love her or hate her, Carly's got you talking. I was surprised that Erica stealing the baby didn't receive more attention, especially considering the fact that it had garnered so much publicity and had been hotly contested by fans.

Most Annoying: This one was close too, with Dimitri ("AMC") pulling ahead of both Lucky ("GH") and Laura ("Days") by a slim margin. What can I say. I think they're all annoying as hell.

Best Show: And the award goes to... "General Hospital," with "Days of Our Lives" a not–so–distant second and "All My Children" ranking third. Oddly enough, the "Young and the Restless" (a show that has resided at the top of the Nielsen ratings for years now) didn't even receive one vote. Just another example of how the Nielsen's aren't necessarily a reflection of what people are watching.

I'd like to thank everyone once again for their responses. It's good to get some insight as to what the rest of the fans are thinking (so I know I'm not completely delusional when I want, let's say, Mike and Carrie to get together). Next week: more news and juicy gossip, including news on Jason Brooks' return on "Days." Until next time...

Jacob Fanning is a UMass student.

Southern Journey Series is historical mix

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

VARIOUS ARTISTS
The Southern Journey Series, Volumes 4–8
Rounder Records

Editor's note: The first part of this column, covering the first three volumes of the Southern Journey Series, ran last Monday.

Brethren, We Meet Again, our fourth volume in a study on Southern White Spirituals, and sinks us fully into the practice of the lining hymn, where a congregation leader will spin off a line to a particular hymn and the whole congregation will sing it back extended and to each individual's own range. The Sacred Harp practice presents a whole congregation singing a hymn, but with a certain fraction singing the actual solfege (that is the "do, re, mi" syllabic tone–memory system) of the hymn. There are also a cappella solos and actual sermons from Appalachian meeting houses on this collection.

"Po' Lazarus," "Willie Brennan" and "Cole Younger," may not ring any bells with our Northeastern urban–centered culture as Al Capone and Joey Gallo do, however these names are those of southern Outlaws and Desperadoes, which is the theme of Volume 5, Bad Man Ballads. These tales of robbers, murderers and men and women who either killed or were killed by their lovers are sung by Parchman Farm convicts, the J.E. Manier bluegrass band, the blues side of Hobart Smith and Virginian Spencer Moore.

Sheep, Sheep, Don' Cha Know The Road: Southern Music, Sacred and Sinful is the title of Volume 6, and is concerned with staying on the course of God's path, like the title track, sung and clapped by Bessie Jones and her Georgia Sea Island singers. The 17th century British ballad about a mother abandoning her infant, "House Carpenter," is sung in the wide range of Almeda Riddle's Ozark vocal style. Vera Hall tells the story of the birth of Christ in song and narrative speech in "No Room At The Inn," and "sinful" dance music is played in blues style by Miles and Bob Pratcher.

Volume 7 takes the listener into the Ozark Frontier for Ballads and Old–Timey Music from Arkansas. Made up mostly of Riddle's and Ollie Gilbert's singing of old–time English ballads, as well as lots of Neil Morris tales played on guitar and with his stately voice. There is also some characteristic solo banjo music, native to the rugged Ozark Mountains.

The last volume to be released so far, is Volume 8, Velvet Voices featuring Eastern Shore Choirs, Quartets and Colonial Era Music. The Georgia Sea Island singers play a large part on this disc with their original sound, as well as the Virginia–based Silver Leaf and Bright Light Quartets and the more rocking (electric guitars) Peerless Four. Some interesting features are the fishing boat chanteys by the Bright Light Quartet and the opening track, the elder Charles Bennett accompanying his upbeat spiritual "Run To Jesus For Refuge, Run Right Along" with his drumming on an overturned washtub.

So, as always, leave it up to Rounder Records for capturing this country's musical heritage (after all, the blues and jazz originated out of the music on this album, and all other music came out of those styles). The Southern Journey series is not just music, it is a historical document.

KAI CHI $2.00
BUFFET, MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL open during 1/2 time

GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

General Membership Meeting

Where: Herter Rm. 210
When: October 21, 1997
Time: 7:30pm - 9:00pm

Activities for the semester will be discussed

The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers to cover books, music, arts and more. If you're interested, come and talk to Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor or call 545–1491.

Going Home?
Cheap tickets. Great advice. Nice people.
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main Street
Amherst
(413) 256-1261

Be a Resident Assistant!
Help Shape Your Piece of the World

Applications for Spring 1998 Resident Assistant Positions Now Being Accepted.

Applicants Must Attend an Information Session to Receive an Application:

October 14	7:00pm	McNamara Main Lounge
	7:00pm	Kennedy 19th Floor Lounge
October 15	7:00pm	Gorman 2nd Floor Lounge
	7:00pm	Cance TV Lounge
October 16	12:00pm	Campus Center #805–809
October 20	7:00pm	Hamlin Hotspot (Basement)
October 21	12:00pm	Campus Center #911–915
October 22	7:00pm	Field Classroom

For more information, call the Center for Diversity and Development at 545–0472.

UMass field hockey pounds Explorers, 6-1

By Aaron M. Saykin
Collegian Staff

Having played four games in a span of seven days, the Massachusetts field hockey team could not have entered its upcoming week off on a higher note, after pounding Atlantic 10 foe La Salle, 6–1, Saturday at Richard F. Garber Field for UMass' fourth consecutive victory.

After allowing an early first–half goal to the Explorers (6– 9), the Minutewomen (9–7) rallied for six unanswered scores, as junior midfielder Kate Putnam, who had been scoreless in 1997, exploded for a career–high two goals and two assists before the end of the first period.

"I was just trying to get the ball toward the net, and it just ended up going in," said Putnam of her first tally of the season. "There's been a whole new level of confidence on the team, and because of that, it's making a huge difference."

Although a key ingredient in UMass' lop–sided victory against La Salle, confidence was not the only factor responsible for Putnam's explosion.

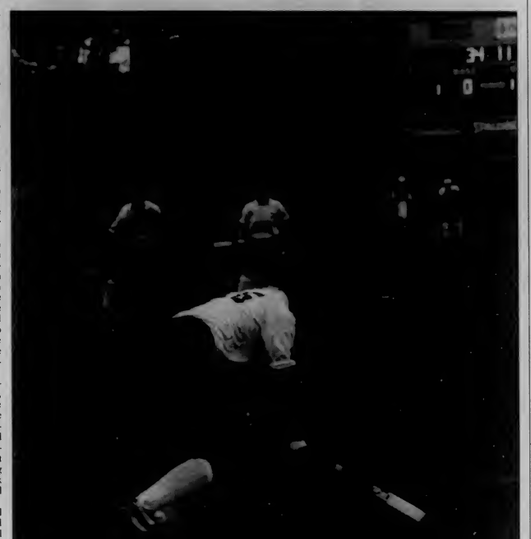
"Kate is usually in a position where she is a distributor, not a goal scorer, but she was in a different position today," UMass coach Patty Shea said of Putnam, whom she moved to the middle of the field against the Explorers. "We had her in the center of the field today, not along the sidelines, so she had more opportunities. She cares about whether or not the team wins, and that's very important to us."

Putnam sparked the UMass scoring surge in the opening frame, putting the Minutewomen on the board just two minutes after the lone La Salle goal. Freshmen midfielder Kristen Schmidt responded three minutes later, as she redirected Lucy Koch's penalty corner shot into the back of the goal, beating Explorer netminder Lindsay Block for what would be the eventual game–winning goal.

"We've been working on it all week," Schmidt said of her timed one–touch goal. "I ran in, and placed myself in the (set) spot. It was a great play."

With the conference victory, the Minutewomen move to 3– 0 in the Atlantic 10, ensuring themselves a place in its tournament.

"With this game and this win, we've solidified a berth in our conference tournament," Shea said after her team's impressive showing. "We needed to concentrate on that."



Also adding tallies for UMass were junior forward Erica Johnston, who currently leads all A–10 scorers, and sophomore forward Christine Millbauer, whose goal and assist allowed the Minutewomen to pull away in the opening period.

"I was in the right place at the right time," Millbauer said of her fifth 1997 goal in only eight shot attempts. "My teammates made the play. I just finished it."

Despite a previous struggle in the conversion of offensive penalty corners, coach Shea's squad connected on an impressive three–of–six first–half attempts.

"Fifty percent is a great success rate," Shea said in a satisfied tone. "We're starting to execute and feel more comfortable in our set–up."

The Minutewomen will have to play two of their last three regular–season conference games on the road.

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Lucy Koch had a first half assist as the Massachusetts field hockey team trounced La Salle 6– 1 over the weekend.

Minuteman team spirit sparks comeback effort

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

BUFFALO, N.Y. — No matter what anyone may say about the Massachusetts football team (2–5, 1–5 in the Atlantic 10), they can never accuse the Minutemen of giving up.

You can question their players, their talent and their coaching, but never can you say that they don't give it 100 percent for the entire 60 minutes of a football game.

"That's never been a problem for this team," coach Mike Hodges said in remarks to the effort his team gave.

And for the second time this season, it was the Minutemen's heart, desire and determination which carried them to victory, Saturday, over the University at Buffalo (2– 6), 26–20.

Their effort is what gave them the strength to score 27 points in the second half against a No. 3 Villanova team. It's what won them their sixth consecutive Homecoming victory in a row — beating Rhode Island, this year, 18–14. And it's what brought them home from Buffalo, this weekend, with a 2–5 record instead of a 1–6 record.

Simply stated, the Minutemen are a team — the very definition of the word. Sporting matching UMass jumpsuits at all times, this team symbolizes togetherness and that not one man, but an entire team is responsible for the final score. They win together, they lose together, from the coaches on down.

Up until the third quarter, it looked as if they were going home as a losing team.

Buffalo dominated the first half of the ballgame, spreading out UMass' defensive secondary with three, sometimes four or five players running out for a pass. It was apparent that the Bulls coaching staff had watched tapes of the Maine and Villanova games and seen what a dominant passing attack can do to this Minutemen defense. Quarterback Chad Salisbury did everything he could do to break the Minutemen, but their spirit would not be broken.

Even after being down 13–6 and losing two fumbles — including one fumble dropped by Marcel Shipp inches away from a touchdown — UMass refused to buckle. As a team, it drove back into the game scoring 13 unanswered points in the third quarter.

Up 19–13 in the last period of the game, junior cornerback Tehran Hunter came out on to the field, replacing an injured Ben Scott, to take his spot in the defensive secondary. With Buffalo five yards away from a touchdown after an impressive 81–yard drive, Salisbury threw up his 38th passing attempt of the game. Senior free safety Bryan Mooney tipped the pass at the goal line sending the ball spinning into the endzone. Hunter was just standing there waiting for it. He caught the ball, looked down the field and he said, "I just saw grass."

The field was his oyster.

Hunter took off for a 100–yard touchdown run. It is the longest of his career and the longest touchdown for UMass since 1977, when Steve Leymay ran in for a touchdown and 1953, when Don Johnson also racked up the long score.

That was what made Saturday's game special. Everybody made plays — including Anthony Catterton. Since the senior from Orlando, Fla., took back the quarterback job three weeks ago, he has been instrumental in the success of the Minutemen offense. In the last two weeks he has averaged a .560 completion percentage, with a 57 percent performance against the Bulls — a career–high for Catterton and season– high for UMass quarterbacks. He passed for 128 yards, but more importantly threw no interceptions. His decisions on who to throw to have been as good as the passes themselves. Not once during the game did Catterton force the ball into heavy coverage.

With Catterton in the ballgame the Minutemen become a more versatile running team. Catterton is quicker on his feet than is Jeff Smith. So the option, which was effective last season, has been reinstated. However, just like the pass, it has been scattered throughout the game. UMass has refused to commit to anything that may bias their offense. That's what Buffalo did and it helped them to lose. The Bulls committed to the pass, so much in fact that they forgot about their running game, which was non–existent.

Buffalo passed for 459 yards — the most ever against UMass — but because of turnovers could not defeat the Minutemen.

UMass controlled the second half for the second week in a row. Led by Shipp, who ran for over 50 yards in the second half, the Minutemen were once again able to control the line of scrimmage.

The running game has improved tremendously since the loss to New Hampshire. UMass has averaged 266 yards rushing in the last two weeks. That can be primarily attributed to the decision of rotating the running backs. While Holston was fullback for the majority of the game, Shipp, Jim Pizano and Matt Jordan platooned the tailback position.

Overall, the Minutemen proved that teams win football games. Not the defense, not the offense, not the coaches, but the entire team.

Flying back from Buffalo, next week's game against Delaware was on the minds of many. The Blue Hens will obviously be a formidable opponent, with only a loss to Villanova, but as long as the Minutemen play as a team and give Delaware all they have for the entire game, then that's the best they can do. And no one could ever criticize that.

UM shuts out La Salle, loses to Owls on road

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Philly cheese steaks.

In Philadelphia, you gotta love the cheese steaks. The Massachusetts volleyball team was lovin' those slabs of beef this weekend when they took on Temple and La Salle on the road.

To put things into Philadelphia terms, for those who might not be Sunday afternoon volleyball freaks, we'll call Temple the Stanley Cup runner–up Flyers, and La Salle could be labelled as the cellar–dwelling Phillies.

UMass (10–10, 5–5 in the Atlantic 10) continued its season of mediocrity, shutting out La Salle 3–0 on Saturday night while becoming yet another victim of the Owl attack, losing a tough 3–0 match Friday.

Saturday was all coach Bonnie Kenny could hope for. All season, Kenny has talked about how the Minutewomen offense has been inconsistent. Against La Salle, UMass controlled the net all night, hitting an impressive .363 as a team, on their way to a 15–0, 15–4, 15–13 decision over the basement–holding Explorers.

UMass' attacking was impeccable. In the first game, the Minutewomen did not commit a single hitting error en route to blanking La Salle 15–0. All told, Massachusetts had only nine errors for the entire match.

Sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers had a field day, collecting 16 kills and 14 digs to lead the Minutewomen. Sophomore outside hitter Kari Hogancamp came up with her 12th double–double on the year, picking up 10 kills and 17 digs.

Freshman middle blocker Rebecca Hasson had a career night, registering the first double–double of her collegiate career. Hasson knocked down a career–high 10 kills and added 10 digs.

The win was the Minutewomen's first shutout victory since beating up on Northeastern in late August in the UMass/Reebok Invitational.

Friday wasn't such a gleeful scene as the Temple attack picked apart the UMass defense. The Owls one–two punch of Sharia Bryant and Tamu Cooper accumulated 35 kills, hitting an incredible .435 as a duo.

Each game was well–contested, but Temple got hot when they needed to and upended the Minutewomen.

Hogancamp, Meyers, and senior outside hitter Lesley Nolan each recorded double–digit kills and digs on the night. Freshman setter Jennifer Drennan continued to impress, picking up 41 assists in the losing effort.

■ Minutewomen
continued from page 10

offense.

The beginning of the second half was the turnaround point for the Minutewomen. At 48:09, senior tri–captain Erica Iverson rifled a free kick off the right side to Kara Green who chipped in the shot to tie the game, 1–1.

Inspired, UMass continued to step up its skills and overpower Xavier's waning effort. The winning goal came subsequently in the wake of the first and off the Minutewomen's transition–eating defense. UMass's Robin Smith controlled the ball at midfield and sent out a shot to the far right flank, where freshly substituted freshman Kate Webb beat the defender for a one–on–one goal at 48:09. This provided Webb with redemption after a missed scoring attempt on Friday.

"I didn't fell like I played that well [on Friday]. I felt a lot of pressure," Webb said. "[But Rudy] devised a new approach with new players in new positions that helped a lot."

Rudy attributed the key to the victory to the frequent substitution tactic.

"We tried to use intelligent subbing," Rudy said, "Kate has a different gear and we got a winning goal out of it."

Friday's 2–1 overtime victory over Dayton was highlighted by Emma Kurowski's two goals and the return of the injured Robin Smith, who is a presence on the field and a catalyst for the team, according to Rudy.

The Flyers' Stacy Martin knocked a rocket to the far corner at 23:49. But the Minutewomen regrouped and retaliated with the first of Kurowski's goals off a scramble with Dayton's keeper Amy Kemmer and UMass' Sophie Lecot.

"I got the ball out of a scramble, "Kurowski said, "Somehow I got it through the keeper and the defender."

Her second goal came in overtime when she blasted a shot pass Kemmer for the game winner.

It was the second overtime win for UMass this year.

■ madness
continued from page 10

loud, though short, "Save Our Beer" chant that at its height rivaled any other cheers on the night.

But although the purpose of Midnight Madness is to get fans hyped up for the season, it in fact only starts the season in one way— practice, which began promptly at 10 a.m. on Saturday. Flint said that the playing rotations have not been set yet, but should be about two weeks into practice.

This is a critical practice time for UMass. There's a logjam at small forward, where Babul and sophomore Chris Kirkland will battle Winston Smith for playing time, and the backcourt rotations have yet to be ironed out. An inexperienced but talented crop of young guards, led by sophomore Monty Mack, the 1996 Boston Shootout MVP who sat out last season as a Prop 16 casualty, will fight for playing time. Clarke is the only starter returning to a backcourt that lost Carmelo Travieso and Edgar Padilla.

The Minutemen have another grueling early season schedule ahead of them. They play Kansas, a team on everyone's Top 5, along with Boston College, Connecticut, Fresno State and possibly either North Carolina or UCLA in the Great Alaska Shootout, before they hit the A–10 slate. And even the A–10, long the doormat of Eastern conferences, has been ranked the country's fifth toughest by the Sporting News and is widely considered stronger than the Big East this season.

"With our schedule, we have to get serious quick, and do what we have to do to win ballgames," Clarke said.

■ football
continued from page 10

With, just over nine minutes remaining in the game, Buffalo was driving on UMass' 5–yard–line trailing, 19–13. A Salisbury pass was tipped by senior safety Bryan Mooney into the back of the endzone where Hunter was waiting. Hunter intercepted it and took it the length of the field.

"I just saw grass," Hunter said. "I caught it and took off."

Hunter's interception return was the longest at UMass since Steve Leymay equaled it in 1977. Hunter also racked up 38 yards on three punt returns Saturday.

Mooney's tipped ball assist wasn't his only big play of the final quarter.

On a third down attempt from the Minutemen's 34–yard– line, Mooney batted down a would–be first down pass from his knees at the 20–yard–line.

And in the waning moments of the ball game, Mooney timed a Salisbury pass intended for senior Jamie Gasparre. He picked it off and ended the Bulls' final rally.

"I'm a terrible coach when it comes to needing 30 points to win a football game," said Buffalo coach Craig Cirbus. "We had a lot of nervous nellies out there today. They were afraid to lose. We needed them to make something happen."

Hodges was ecstatic with his team's performance.

"Our effort is great," he said. "We will not give up. That's a given. We will never give up."

Write for Sports
See Luke Meredith at the Collegian in the basement of the Campus Center.

amc Theatres
Sunset Row Shopping Center
Silence is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG 13 or R rated film after 6pm
MT. FARMS 4 · 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Rocketman (PG)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Playing God (R)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:20
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10
I know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10

HAMPSHIRE 6 · 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
U-Turn (R)
Today at 8:30
In and Out (PG-13)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Most Wanted (R)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES
Central Transport International, Inc., one of the leading transportation/logistics firms in the nation, is seeking entry-level management trainees on your campus. If you enjoy working in a fast-paced and challenging environment where promotions and career advancement are in your own hands, see what we have to offer:
• On-the-job training
• Excellent compensation and benefits package, including 401(k)
• Performance-based promotion
Join a company with a proven track record of success in a growing industry. Contact your placement office for on campus recruiting dates and details.
Equal Opportunity Employer
CENTRAL TRANSPORT INTERNATIONAL INC.
An open road to opportunity

NBA
RETURNS TO SPRINGFIELD!
See Some Of Today's Newest NBA Players:
★Marcus Camby ★Kerry Kittles ★Tracy McGrady
★Damon Stoudamire ★Keith Van Horn
MONDAY • OCTOBER 27, 1997 • 7:30 PM
1997 NBA HALL OF FAME GAME
TORONTO RAPTORS VS NEW JERSEY NETS
Ticket Prices: $25 • $15 (Children under 12)
*Limited VIP Seating Available
SPONSORED BY
Springfield Civic Center Celebrating 25 Years
Springfield's Advocate
Rock102
For Tickets Call The Box Office:
(413) 787-6600 or 1(800) 639-8600
TicketMaster (413) 733-2500 or (617) 931-2000
Group Sales: Call (413) 787-6610, ext. 241
Marcus Camby

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst- Charming 1 bedroom Excellent location, on bus route, available 11/1. $475. 549-8248

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Cressida 84 4 door, fully loaded, automatic. Needs some work. $500. 549-8248.

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k. Fiberglass Shell Calif Truck. No rust. $4500. Call 582-9872

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std, power everything. Very fast. $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

1984 VW Maroon Rabbit Low mileage. 95% mint condition. $1400 or B/O. Call 584-2940

EMPLOYMENT

Abt Associates is looking for a few reliable people with good communications and computer skills who are available to work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Evening and weekend assignments are currently available. We offer flexible scheduling options, access to health and dental plans and paid training. The starting wage is $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Free transportation with PVTA Bus Line is provided. For more information or to arrange a personal interview call (413)587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Arby's Hampshire Mall Now hiring part-time flexible schedual good pay Apply in person.

$1,000's WEEKLY!! Stuff envelopes at home for $2.00 each plus bonuses. F/T, P/T. Make $800+ weekly, guaranteed! Free supplies. For details, send one stamp to: N-113, 12021 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 552, Los Angeles, CA 90025

Needed Immediately Firestone of Northampton needs part-time Sales/Customer Service Rep. 25-30 hours a week. Starting salary $7.50 per hour. Call 586-1584

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

EMPLOYMENT

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Rolling Stones Foxboro Oct 21, Tues. One floor seat/$75 (CHEAP!) Call 665-0241 Leave message.

2 Elton John Tickets For Sale. Call 256-6022

Toshiba 486 Laptop $500. (413)549-4753

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

FOR SALE

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Self Amplified Bazooka Base Tube 6 inches; great shape. Call 259-1984

Computers! Computers! Computers! The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4650

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings, Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

INSTRUCTION

Kung-Fu-Spirit of the Heart offers new student introduction: 3 lessons and a T-shirt- $19.95! Convenient Northampton location. 585-1661

LOST

Lost: Glasses in the first floor bathroom of Bartlett on 10/15. If found please call The Collegian @ 545-3500.

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6. Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

Earn $75-$100 Exercise Science Study Needs non-weight trained males Call Steve @ 253-4952 or 5-6072

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 room available on Main St. Very close to town. On bus route. 21+ please. Call 259-9282

ROOMMATE WANTED

One large bedroom available in Sugarloaf Estates. $333/month. Great place to live. Call 665-7701

SERVICES

Retired Faculty Member offers English Language Lessons and Editorial Expertise to International Students, all levels. Reasonable rates. Ms. Reed 253-3354

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Port Antonio Jamaica Seaside Cottages Real Jamaican Neighborhood $150/Week 367-9350

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH!

CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips and travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK
Cancun Spring Break
Jamaica Spring Break
Best Bahamas Cruise Spring Break
Florida Spring Break
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.ststravel.com/collegiatedaily.html

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS Bahamas, Cancun, & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD AND FREE DRINKS! Sign-up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for Details and free brochure. Call 1-(888)SPRINGBREAK Today!

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Earn $125 Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study. 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505.

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Come and see us today!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used on personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are still allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false information or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students 20¢ per word/day

All others 40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 20

Lecture — A work-in-progress presentation "The Last Hermits: Women's Education in Korea at the Turn of the Century" by Hyaewol Choi from the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at 4:15 p.m. in Seelye Hall, room 207, Smith College. Sponsored by the Project on Women and Social Change.

Lecture — Department of Biological Sciences presents the 1997 Christianna Smith Lecture featuring Donald Ingber, M.D., Ph.D. from Children's Hospital of Boston entitled "Cellular tensegrity, integrin signaling, and control of morphogenesis" at 7:15 p.m. in Hooker Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College.

Notice — The women's basketball team will be holding walk-on tryouts at 6:30 p.m. at the Mullins Center. Proof of insurance and of a physical exam are required to participate in tryouts. For further information, call the women's basketball office at 545-2726.

Talk/Signing — Author talk and signing to feature Peggy Claude-Pierre, author of The Secret Language of Eating Disorders. The Revolutionary New Approach to Understanding and Curing Anorexia and Bulimia at 7:30 p.m. in Mary Woolley Hall, the New York room, Mount Holyoke College. For more information, call The Odyssey Bookshop, 534-7307, or the College's Health Education program, 538-2466.

Talk — Works-in-progress talk entitled "African-American Females and Gender Dysphoria" given by Constance Johnson, a Five College Women's Studies Community Associate from Center for Human Development, at 4:30 p.m. at the Dickinson House Living Room at Mount Holyoke College.

TUESDAY, OCT. 21

Colloquium — Adesoun Ilumoka, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from the Empowerment and Action Research Center, Lagos, Nigeria, will give a colloquium entitled Making Tights Meaningful at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — The Index, UMass' yearbook, will hold its weekly general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. Contact Jill Aerdkian at 545-0848 for more information.

Meeting — The first mandatory organizational meeting for those interested in the new organization Best Buddies will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. The mission of Best Buddies is to enhance the lives of people with mental reardation by providing them with opportunities for socialization. All are welcome. For more information, contact Erin at 546-7137 or Jen at 549-6405.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 22

Career Forum — The Political Science Honors Society is holding a Career Forum at 4:30 p.m. in the sixth floor lounge of Thompson. It is free and open to the public. Students interested in what their political science or liberal arts degree can be used for after graduation are encouraged to attend. For more information, call Ramy at 253-8855 or Dan at 548-9780.

Discussion — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a panel discussion on "China, the U.S. and the Emerging World System." at 7:30 p.m. in Converse Hall at Amherst College.

Entertainment — The Not Ready for Bedsime Players will be performing at the New Africa House Library at 8 p.m. Free condoms are available.

Entertainment — Stories in the Sukkah, celebrate the harvest with story teller and Hillel Program Director, David Arfa from noon–12:45 p.m. at the Hillel House Sukkah.

Meeting — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in Earthfoods in the Student Union. All are welcome.

Meeting — The Queen Fan Club will hold its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members welcome. For more information, contact Rona at 546-5618 or email at rosak@student.umass.edu.

NOTICES

Auditions — Channel 19 News anchor and reporter auditions are being held on Tuesday, Oct. 21 from 5-7 p.m. and Wednesday, Oct. 22 from 6-8 p.m. Call UVC-TV 19, which is located in the Student Union, room 216 behind the Hatch, to schedule an appointment at 545-1336. Sample writings are preferred but not required. Positions open to all UMass undergraduate students.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation on Friday, October 24. The free one-hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545- 0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have his/her artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec. 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406e or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulk at 545-2726.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups happening now. Call 577-5316 for more information.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, N.H. on Friday, October 24–26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545- 2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech, voice, and auditions on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. RSVP by Oct. 24, call 545-0415.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 20, 1997

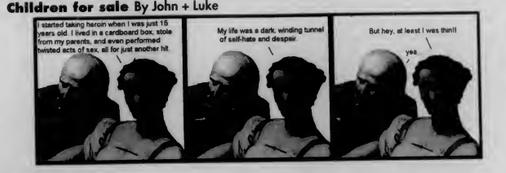
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Washbone Ⓢ	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓢ		World of National Geographic		Full Circle (In Stereo) Ⓢ		Back From the Brink		Connecticut Journal (R)
WFSB	3	News Ⓢ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV Ⓢ	Cosby Ⓢ	Raymond	Cybill Ⓢ	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) Ⓢ	News Ⓢ	Late Show Ⓢ
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra Ⓢ	Ent. Tonight	Cosby Ⓢ	Raymond	Cybill Ⓢ	George & Leo	Brooklyn South (In Stereo) Ⓢ	News Ⓢ	Late Show Ⓢ
WCVB	5	News Ⓢ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle Ⓢ	Timecop "Rocket Science" Ⓢ		NFL Football: Buffalo Bills at Indianapolis Colts. (In Stereo Live) Ⓢ
WLVI	56	Full House Ⓢ	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven (In Stereo) Ⓢ		Buffy the Vampire Slayer Ⓢ		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓢ	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up Ⓢ	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓢ		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married... With	Cheers Ⓢ	Judge Judy Ⓢ	Grace Under	In the House	Good News Ⓢ	Malcolm-Eddie	Hello (In Stereo)	News	LAPD	Vibe
WYIT	10	Married... With	NBC News	Extra Ⓢ	Hard Copy Ⓢ	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up Ⓢ	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓢ		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons Ⓢ	Seinfeld Ⓢ	Frasier Ⓢ	Melrose Place (In Stereo) Ⓢ		Ally McBeal (In Stereo) Ⓢ		News		Simpsons Ⓢ	Babylon 5 Ⓢ
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! Ⓢ	Sudden-Susan	Fired Up Ⓢ	Caroline	Naked Truth	Dateline (In Stereo) Ⓢ		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	14	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer Ⓢ		Full Circle Ⓢ		Stephen Hawking's Universe		Adventurers Ⓢ		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Oral Hepatitis: Danger		Timecop "Rocket Science" Ⓢ		NFL Football: Buffalo Bills at Indianapolis Colts. (In Stereo Live) Ⓢ
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld Ⓢ	Frasier Ⓢ	In the House	Good News Ⓢ	Malcolm-Eddie (Hits (In Stereo)		News		MA*S*H Ⓢ	Mad Abo. You Real TV Ⓢ
WTBS	15	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach Ⓢ	Coach Ⓢ	(6:57) "Buried Alive" (1990, Suspense) Tim Matheson.				★★ "Shattered" (1991, Suspense) Tom Berenger, Bob Hoskins.
A&E	17	Northern Exposure Ⓢ		Law & Order "Intolerance" Ⓢ		Biography "Jane Russell"		Poirot		Miss Marple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "American Dream"
CNN	18	WorldView Ⓢ		Moneyline Ⓢ	Crossfire Ⓢ	Prime News Ⓢ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live Ⓢ		World Today Ⓢ		Sports Blue.	Moneyline Ⓢ
COM	26	Lett Field	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	(6:57) "Caddyshack" (1980, Comedy) Chevy Chase, Bill Murray.				Comedy Hall	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Wings "Strange Planes" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery		Black Holes: The Abyss		Strictly Supernatural		Justice Files "Killer Kids" (R)
ESPN	21	Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL Prime Monday			Figure Skating: Professional Legends Championships				Cheerleading	Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Silent Message" (1995, Drama) Gabrielle Carteris.				Homicide: Life on the Street Ⓢ
MTV	43	MTV Live	Viewers	To Be Announced		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Countdown to the 1E Spot		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Oddville, MTV	Loveline (R)
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug Ⓢ	Rugrats Ⓢ	Hey Arnold! Ⓢ	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy Ⓢ	Odd Couple Ⓢ	Tesi Ⓢ	Newhart Ⓢ
SCIFI	66	Twilight Zone Ⓢ		Time Trax "A Close Encounter"		Seaquest 2032 "Splash" Ⓢ		★★★ "Dracula" (1979, Horror) Frank Langella, Laurence Olivier.					Time Trax Ⓢ
TLC	45	Hometime (R)	Homefilms (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Extreme Machines (R)		Diary of Jack the Ripper (R)		Survival in the Sky (R)		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	30	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live) Ⓢ				WCW Nitro (R) (In Stereo) Ⓢ
USA	59	Baywatch "Trading Places" Ⓢ		Nightstander: The Series Ⓢ		Walker, Texas Ranger Ⓢ		WWF Raw (In Stereo) Ⓢ				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo) Ⓢ
HBO	60	★★½ "Can't Buy Me Love" (1987) Patrick Dempsey. PG-13 Ⓢ				Where Have You Gone, Joe?		★★★ "Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) PG Ⓢ				Tejicab Confessions 4
MAX	67	(5:45) ★★★ "The Bridges of Madison County" (1995) PG-13 Ⓢ				★½ "Deceiver" (1996, Suspense) Sharon Stone. R Ⓢ				★★ "The Preacher" (1969, Sex) Connery. R Ⓢ		"Eyewitness"
SHOW	65	"Rasputin: Stories of Courage = Two Women" (1997, Drama)				Stargate SG-1 "Fire and Water"		★★½ "Devil in a Blue Dress" (1995, Mystery) Ⓢ		Extras: Deniall		Fast Track Ⓢ	Fast Track Ⓢ

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Children for sale By John + Luke

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — It is important for you to take care of your own today – not only for them, but for you, too. Your self esteem is sure to improve as a result.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — This is the day to put bygones behind you for good, and to look forward to a period of increased enlightenment and cooperation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can have what you want today without making any kind of abrupt demands on others. Simply go about your business plainly and openly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Why do you think you must be secretive today? The fact is that an honest and straightforward approach can win the day for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may have to slow down a little today in order to accommodate a private weakness that has sprung up recently. It isn't serious.

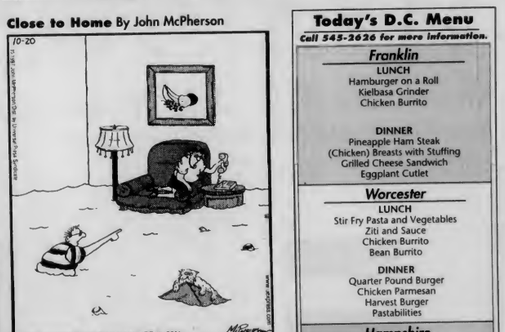
PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Look around today and judge yourself in light of what others are doing currently. You are bound to discover that you're doing very well indeed.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may find yourself looking back toward a time when things seemed more carefree, but after some analysis you'll know you're better off now.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You needn't beat yourself up today trying to accomplish something ahead of schedule. A more realistic, calmer pace can achieve the same result.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Some may say you are overdoing it at this time – and you may be – but the question really is: what's the harm in that right now?

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You won't please everyone today, so do your best to please those who mean the most to you, and who are depending on you for something essential.



LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — This is a good day for you to put yourself in the line of fire in order to experience what others can only begin to describe to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Are you sure that you have things entirely under control? You may be overlooking one small detail that can make all the difference.

Quote of the Day

"For a man, a woman is best fitted to be the real bearer of his soul image, because of the feminine quality of his soul."
–C. G. Jung

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
(Chicken) Breasts with Stuffing
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Eggplant Cutlet

Worcester
LUNCH
Stir Fry Pasta and Vegetables
Ziti and Sauce
Chicken Burrito
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Parmesan
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

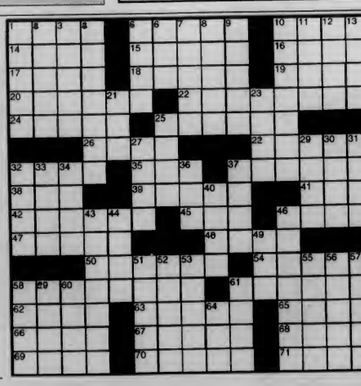
Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
Fnord

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breasts with
Rice Stuffing

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Bean Burrito
Chicken Burrito

DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Wings
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technitian — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra von Ziegesar
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krasy, Joe Savich



ACROSS
1 Shade of purple
5 Cornered
10 Sear
14 Oft-quoted auth.
15 Silly
16 Pilaf ingredient
17 Sedimentary material
18 Twangy
19 Workers' protection agcy.
20 Heavy showers
22 Surpassed
24 Unearthly
25 Church areas
26 Psyche parts
28 Accolades
32 Leaders of the flock
35 Electrical unit
37 Appearance
38 Eggs
39 Fuzzy fruit
41 One day — time
42 Cap parts
45 Mine output
46 Football's Aikman
47 Writing assignment
48 Girlfriend for Yves
50 Candle makings
54 Telegram
61 Biked
62 Seine tributary
63 Delete
65 Dangle
66 Tex. neighbor
67 Not flexible
68 Pennsylvania city
69 Rind
70 Part of an act
71 Split

DOWN
1 Out-of-date
2 Join forces
3 Hue
4 Vestibules
5 Pie pans
6 Genetic material
7 Artist's stand
8 Pass into law
9 Singer Reese
10 Appears
11 Steam's sound
12 Feel sore
13 — up on: learn about
21 Actress Tilly
23 Vexes
25 Former tennis great
27 "Sorry!"
29 Darling
30 Numerical prefix
32 Roam about
33 Rara —
34 Bulk
36 — Zedong
37 Throat-clearing sound
40 Gullet
43 Hot cereal
44 O'Neal of films
46 College employee
49 Freezing
51 Casts a
52 Type of poem
53 Missouri river
55 Loud blast of music
56 Soviet founder
57 Trimmed
58 Condo alternative
59 Journey by foot
60 Capri, e.g.
61 Yield

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

K	I	T	E	S	C	I	F	I		Z	I	N	G
I	L	E	S		H	A	V	O	C		O	D	O	R
D	I	A	K		O	S	A	G	E		D	O	N	A
D	E	M	I	J	O	H	N		B	A	I	L	E	D
		M	A	E		C	O	R	A
O	S	M	O	N	D		H	U	N	C	H	E	S
B	O	I	S	E		B	R	A	I	N		O	R	O
E	L	S		B	O	A	R	D		G	O	B
A	V	E		I	O	N	S		T	R	A	D	E
H	E	R	O	I	S	M		S	O	O	N	E	R
	I	D	E	S		A	M	A
C	O	G	N	A	C		A	N	D	E	S	T	O	R
E	R	I	K		T	E	N	O	R		E	G	A
E	A	V	E		E	L	O	P	E		E	L	L	S
S	L	E	D		D	I	N	E	D		D	E	E	P

10-20-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, October 20, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Madness gets UM fans fired up

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The last time the Massachusetts men's basketball team walked off the court together, it wasn't a joyous occasion.

The Minutemen had just lost to Louisville in the first round of the NCAA tournament, their earliest exit since 1991, and their NCAA record for most consecutive conference titles had just ended at five with a loss to George Washington in the Atlantic 10 tournament semi-finals.

But behind stirring set by the UMass dance team and the Funk Club, a Hoop Band in mid-season form and coach James "Bruiser" Flint's promise to bring the A-10 title back to Amherst, any lingering negativity from last season was buried Friday night at the Mullins Center.

In a cacophony of smoke and fireworks, Massachusetts broke in the 1997-98 basketball season with its annual Midnight Madness festivities.

"We're going to start and end the season with a bang," said Flint, addressing a crowd Mullins Center personnel estimated at 6,500. "This is the start of some pretty big things [for the Minutemen]. We're bringing home the A-10 title [this season]."

The night itself went relatively smooth, despite the fact that the Mullins Center scoreboard spelled Basketball Times 1997 Newcomer of the Year Lari Ketner's first name "Larry" during introductions. The team was greeted by loud cheers from the crowd during introductions, the loudest being reserved for veterans Ketner, junior guard Charlton Clarke and senior captain Tyrone Weeks.

The Minutemen entertained the crowd with a slam-dunk contest, a three-point contest between the coaches and the players and a light scrimmage.

For the second year in a row, 6-foot-5 sophomore forward Mike Babul won the slam dunk contest, wowing the crowd with a 360-degree jam and a slam dunk over sophomore guard Monty Mack, who sat in a chair in the middle of the paint. Freshman Ronnell Blizzard impressed the crowd in his first-ever Mullins Center appearance with a scissor-legged slam over a crouched Jonathan DePina, the 5-foot-9 freshman from Boston.

The three-point contest was won by the players. Clarke, Mack and junior reserve Ross Burns blew away the coaches 8-3. Each contestant got five chances, and the coaches squad— Flint and assistant coaches John Robic and Tony Barbee— only bagged 1-of-5 apiece. Clarke led the players with 4-of-5, and Burns chipped in with three.

The boisterous crowd, a welcome sight for many who worried that last year's decreased student attendance might carry over into this season, even got into the political arena. If only briefly. Responding to plans to make UMass a dry campus, the mostly student crowd started a very

Turn to MADNESS, page 7

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Mike Babul won his second straight Midnight Madness dunk contest with this slam over a seated Monty Mack. The ball bounced around the rim but eventually went in.

Massachusetts beats XU, but falls to UD Flyers 3-1

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Eric Rabinovitz definitely picked a nice time to notch his first ever collegiate goal. Nice for the Massachusetts mens' soccer team, that is.

The sophomore forward found the back of the Xavier net 1:06 into overtime yesterday afternoon to propel the Minutemen to a 3-2 overtime win over the Musketeers. The loss for the Musketeers was their first of the year in the Atlantic 10.

UMass	3
Xavier	2

UMass opened the scoring at the 5:38 mark of the contest, as senior forward Joenal Castma converted on a feed from James Redmond to give the visitors a 1-0 lead.

Dayton	3
UMass	1

Xavier combatted Castma's goal with a tally of its own just over ten minutes later, as Koen Kuiken netted an unassisted goal to even the game at 1-1.

The Minutemen (9-5-1, 5-4 in Atlantic 10 play) jumped back out on top just past the midway point in the half. Brad Kurowski took a long throw in from junior Paul Corcoran and beat Paul Wessseling for a 2-1 advantage.

The score would stay that way until late in the second half, when Chas Cooke scored for the Musketeers to even the game at 2-2.

The extra session was short, yet fruitful for the Minutemen, as Rabinovitz connected on the only shot of overtime for either squad to send UMass home a winner.

The contest was a nip and tuck battle all of the way. UMass held a 13-12 advantage in the shot department, while Xavier had five corner kicks for UMass. Nevertheless, UMass had the advantage where it counted: on the scoreboard.

Todd Fowler made seven saves for UMass in the winning effort.

Xavier slipped to 8-7-1 overall, 6-1 in the A-10 with the defeat.

The result in Friday afternoon's matchup against Dayton was not as welcome for the Minutemen. Despite the fact that Mike Butler scored a goal to move into third place on the UMass career goals chart, the Minutemen fell to Dayton by a 3-1 score.

Emmanuel Ayim scored at 15:47 of the first half to give the Flyers a 1-0 lead. But Butler was there to knot things back up just over eight minutes later when he pounced on a loose ball and fired it past Dayton keeper Tim McCarthy.

Dayton took control of the game in the second half, as goals by Godfrey Tenoff and Ayim sealed the deal for the Flyers. Tenoff scored at 69:49 to give Dayton a 2-1 lead, while Ayim added his second with 21 seconds left to put the game out of reach.

Fowler had nine saves between the pipes for UMass in the defeat.

UMass dominated the corner kicks, booting six while bageling Dayton. The Flyers, however, eeked out a 14-13 shot advantage in the game.

Dayton improved to 6-6-1 overall, 3-3 in A-10 play with the victory.

Minuteman Notes: A season of hot and cold streaks continued this week for the Minutemen. After winning four divisional games in a row, UMass has now dropped three of four in the A-10 to fall into the middle of the pack in the conference standings... Butler's goal against Dayton was his team leading 10th and 34th of his career. The goal also moved him past Clarence Simpson and Andy Bing and into third place all time in goals. Randy Jacobs holds the career record with 40 goals... Butler leads UMass in scoring with 25 points (10 goals, 5 assists), while Seth Lilburn (3-8-14 points), Castma (5-2-12), and Jake Brodsky (3-6-12) are the only other Minutemen in double digits in scoring. Overall, 14 of the 26 Minutemen on the roster have scored... UMass has a 4-1-1 record in overtime games this season. At one point in early September the Minutemen played into the extra session in five consecutive games... Fowler sports a 7-5-1 mark in the net, and has a goals against average of 1.32. He also has two shutouts on the season... Coach Sam Koch sports a 77-43-13 mark in his six plus seasons at UMass. He has been named A-10 coach of the year twice. Koch was the head man at Stanford for six years prior to coaching the Minutemen... UMass has two crucial home games left, its final two Atlantic 10 games of the year. The Minutemen will face Fordham on Friday afternoon at 3 p.m., and La Salle on Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. Winning both games will be essential as the Minutemen are looking for a berth in the A-10 tournament.

Minutewomen keep rolling; beat Flyers and Musketeers

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

It was the story of the tortoise and the hare.

Sort of.

The Massachusetts women's soccer team started both first halves of its Atlantic 10 games this weekend in chaotic fashion, complete with injuries, frequent substitutions, collisions and the high emotions that come with the fact that the Minutewomen were playing their last games at Totman Field in 1997, and the last ever for four seniors.

UMass	2
Xavier	1

UMass	2
Dayton	1

During the beginning twenty minutes of yesterday's first half against the Musketeers, UMass simply could not control the ball, causing mad scrambles in front of the net and a host of missed opportunities on its usual run-and-gun style of offense.

And even though in the end they swept on the weekend, the key to both games for the Minutewomen was patience, much like it was for the tortoise.

"We took a longer warm up today because our skills are not good in the beginning," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "Maybe it's also the size of the field, there's not a lot of room."

Xavier took advantage of the Minutewomen's struggles when Amanda Gruber converted for a goal at 10:16 off a centered shot in front of the goal. But redemption for UMass wouldn't come until the second half.

Rudy attempted to contain the Musketeers abuse of the flanks by substituting frequently his wings, particularly the right wing, and side midfielders. Freshman Molly McGrew started off at left wing and was followed by freshman Alicia King who frustrated Xavier's

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7

JOANA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Kate Webb and the UMass women's soccer team swept this weekend, leaving them with a 13-2 overall record.

Minutemen squeak by Buffalo Bulls, 26–20

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Massachusetts football team assumed a new identity as survivors Saturday when its showdown with the University at Buffalo Bulls turned into a comedy of errors.

The teams combined for 10 fumbles and two interceptions. But when the dust had settled, UMass was the beneficiary of a gritty, hard fought 26-20 win over the Bulls before 6,052 spectators at UB Stadium in Buffalo.

"We really limited our mistakes in the second half," Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges said. "That was the key to the game."

Freshman tailback Marcel Shipp got the ball on a crucial third and short call from the Bulls' 10-yard line midway through the third quarter with his team trailing, 13-6. Shipp ran off the right tackle and was hit at the line of scrimmage, then bounced outside and spun and drove his way over Buffalo defenders, carrying them to the pile-up in the corner of the endzone for the score.

The effort rejuvenated the Minutemen, who responded with a near-flawless final quarter and a half.

UMass took advantage of an Andy Maclay punt minutes later that came down and ricocheted off a Buffalo return blocker and into the arms of junior Joe Abasciano.

From the Buffalo 38 yard-line, UMass put together a six-play drive, culminating in a two-yard burst up the middle by junior Jim Pizano. Pizano was met at the goaline, and a second-effort surge got him into the endzone. The touchdown put Massachusetts up for good, 19-13.

"When you win, it's always fun," quarterback Anthony Catterton said. "We made some mistakes, but we didn't get careless."

Since Catterton has taken over the offense, in place of Jeff Smith two weeks ago against New Hampshire, the Minutemen are playing a different brand of football. An option-type quarterback, Catterton has shown that the offense can exploit weaknesses in the defense that will not only result in big gains on the ground, but in the air as well.

Catterton was 11-for-19 for 128 yards, with no interceptions against Buffalo. And the Massachusetts rushing attack put up 235 yards. Sophomore fullback Jamie Holston and Shipp led the way with 69 and 68 yards, respectively. Both found the endzone once.

Catterton also showed an ability to elude the rush and a willingness to put his head down and run. The senior scampered for 33 yards on the afternoon.

The story of the game was the Massachusetts defense. Even though Bulls quarterback Chad Salisbury pasted the secondary for 459 yards and three touchdowns — more than 100 yards to three different receivers — UMass never let up and stopped Buffalo when it had to late in the game. The Bulls rushing attack was ineffective against UMass' stingy front seven.

"It's very difficult to win football games if you can't run the ball well," Hodges said.

Tehran Hunter, a junior transfer from Nassau Community College, saw his first extended action for UMass at cornerback. Hunter replaced sophomore Ben Scott, who was beaten twice for touchdowns before suffering a game-ending hand injury.

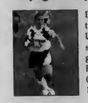
Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Behind 69 yards from freshman tailback Marcel Shipp, the Massachusetts football team came back in the second half and defeated Buffalo 26–20 on the road.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVII Issue 34 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, October 21, 1997

Close to sin

The devil strikes in The Devil's Advocate, starring Keanu Reeves and Al Pacino (see Arts & Living, page 6).

UMass seniors say goodbye

Danielle Dion and the seniors on the UMass women's soccer team said goodbye to Totman Field this weekend. (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Burmese forced labor, prisoners rounded up

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burma's umiliitary government is using forced labor to build tourist facilities at a national park, a student group in exile said yesterday.

Burma's government, meanwhile, accused U.S. diplomats of interfering in the country's internal affairs and warned it may consider downgrading diplomatic ties to the United States and other Western nations, Burma's state-run press reported.

A villager who escaped from Burma said he was among 150 villagers rounded up each week by the Burmese military to work without food or pay at a marine national park on Lampi Island, off Burma's southern coast.

About 400 Burmese prisoners also are used as forced labor in the project, the villager told the All Burma Students Democratic Front in Thailand.

A 1996 report by the U.S. Embassy in Rangoon estimated that forced labor accounts for about 3 percent of Burma's gross domestic product.

NATION

Freedom of the press questioned on internet

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Is there freedom of the press in cyberspace? A newspaper may soon find out as it responds to a unique subpoena demanding access to e-mail from readers of its Web site.

The request from a defense attorney in a murder trial is audacious and creative but has little chance of success, press experts said.

"It's the first time I've heard of a lawyer who would have the temerity to bring such a groundless motion," said Douglas Mirell, a veteran First Amendment attorney in Los Angeles. "It's a cute idea. But it's bizarre and frivolous in my view."

James Farley, who filed the subpoena in Ventura County Superior Court, told a legal newspaper he wanted to look into the Ventura County Star's Web site to gauge whether publicity has tainted the pool of jurors for the upcoming trial of his client, Michael Dally. Dally's alleged lover, Diana Haun, already has been convicted of murdering his wife, Sherri, in a case with occult overtones.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 33	HIGH: 50 LOW: 32	HIGH: 33 LOW: 28

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Proposed alcohol ban protested by students

By Michelle Fongemie
Collegian Correspondent

A rally to protest proposals prohibiting 21-year-old students from the consumption of alcohol was held yesterday afternoon on the front steps of the University of Massachusetts Student Union.

The noon rally, organized by junior political science major Brian McManus, attracted approximately 200 students, many of them between classes.

Posters stating "Save Our Beer," and "Fight for Right to Party" were posted along the brick of the Student Union and a podium was set up in the middle of the steps for the speakers.

McManus said he did feel there is a drinking problem on campus, but "banning alcohol is definitely not the solution."

"We live out in the middle of a corn field and the University has not a made a commitment to give us something to do on weekends," he said.

"The University should be spending more money on clubs and RSO [Registered Student Organizations] and they should be sponsoring more events as an alternative," he said.

Several leaders of the Pro-Student Caucus spoke in opposition to the Oct. 14 vote by the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education to press a ban on alcohol at all 29 state colleges and universities in the Commonwealth.

The proposed ban would also affect the 21-year-old or older students, resulting in a "dry campus".

"We believe in liberty and freedom, and this is not something that is going to be good for students," rally speaker and Republican Club President Paul Ferro said.

Ferro urged students to "write to the legislator, write to the trustees, write to the chancellor, write to The Collegian," and voice their opposition to the ban.

Students for and against the ban were given the opportunity to voice their opinion on the open microphone.

Sophomore sociology major Kim Boscombe, 18, spoke at the podium and urged students "to be responsible and be responsible for what you have done."

Boscome said she felt the need to speak because "they [the students at the rally] are just sitting here and worried about not being able to drink. If they look at why it happens, it's because people are not being responsible when they drink."

Education major Christine Lello, 24, said after the rally "I am not for the ban, but I am not against it either."

"I believe there is a drinking problem but banning alcohol is not going to be the solution. What I propose, which would work more effectively, is to require incoming freshman to take a life skills class which would address the issues of alcohol and drugs, and being responsible about it," Lello said.

Freshman undeclared major Joel Davis, 18, who did not speak at the rally agrees with the ban said, "I feel that drinking has gotten out of control among the youth, and although I feel it's important to have personal rights, when people take drinking to an extent, it endangers other people and infringes on their rights."

Freshman pre-med major Katherine Corner, 17, is opposed to the ban. "I think the ban could have a totally opposite effect than they are hoping for, because half the fun of drinking is to defy the system...because it's illegal for most of us anyway...and to put the ban in is to make it that much more exciting to sneak beer in."

Freshman undeclared major Shannon Barry, 18, is afraid that if the ban goes into effect. "Drinking would be pushed off campus." Barry said, "and people will drive drunk and people will get killed."

Political Science graduate student Mike D'Amour, 27, said that he came to the rally because he opposes the alcohol ban, but was upset by what he saw.

D'Amour said, "What I saw here was a serious respect problem and a blatant promotional program by the Republican Club and both of those things didn't belong here."

"I think the attacks of one student onto another student were uncalled for," D'Amour said.

Sociology graduate student Kathy Walker, 31, agrees with D'Amour. "That's just not an example of adult behavior for people who are demanding the right to drink," said Walker.

Vice President of the Republican Club Michael Rossette concluded that he thought the rally was very successful. "We got hundreds of people to sign petitions," Rossette said, "and hundreds more showed up, and we brought a great deal of attention to the issue."

Rossette said that he feels confident that on this coming Wednesday, people are going to "turn out in force" and vote against the alcohol ban.

The rally was co-sponsored by the UMass Republican Club and the Pro-Student Caucus.

The rally was planned in compliance with the public assembly policies of the institution, and student leaders were in consultation with both the campus administration and police authorities.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Sophomore accounting major Stacy Cohen attempts to voice her opposition to yesterday's "Save Our Beer" rally in front of the Student Union.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Peter Khoury, a senior majoring in food science, protests the proposed alcohol ban on campus at yesterday's rally.

NCAA prompts new investigation

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

AMHERST— The NCAA is mounting its own investigation into whether Marcus Camby of the Toronto Raptors took under-the-table gifts during his sophomore college year, an NCAA staffer said Monday.

The decision by the collegiate sports governing body adds renewed vigor to the nearly 1 1/2-year-old series of inquiries into sports agents' gifts to Camby.

He has admitted accepting gifts as a junior at Massachusetts but denied doing so in his sophomore year. Massachusetts, which has already been stripped of its 1996 NCAA semifinal title for playing with Camby as a junior, could face more penalties if Camby violations are found in the previous year.

However, the NCAA's investigation quickly confronted an obstacle Monday as Camby, through a spokesman, refused to cooperate with the NCAA. "Right now, he's a professional athlete," said Rick Kaplan, a Raptors spokesman. "At what point do any of these investigations end?"

Camby, who was picked No. 2 in the 1996 NBA draft, averaged 15 points and six rebounds per game as a rookie for Toronto. But he has said that the agent scandal distracted him and hurt his play. Camby has paid back to Massachusetts the $151,000 in NCAA tournament money it was ordered to return for his junior-year violations.

"Marcus Camby needs to speak to us. He has the duty to speak to us," said Bill Saum, who oversees agent rules for the NCAA. "I would just like to think he would feel the need to do this to bring this to closure."

The NCAA lacks the legal authority to compel Camby to talk. In Amherst, a campus spokeswoman said Monday that the school's own inquiry into Camby's sophomore year turned up no additional violations. However, the spokeswoman, Kay Scanlan, acknowledged that both Camby and the sports agent making the allegations refused to speak to campus investigators.

"It's been very frustrating to try to put together a complete story," said Ms. Scanlan.

John Lounsbury, the agent making the accusations, confirmed Monday that he has agreed to speak to the NCAA, though he refused to cooperate with the campus inquiry. "UMass has their own motivations. The NCAA wants the truth," Lounsbury said.

He has said he showered Camby with $40,000 worth of gifts over both his junior and sophomore years.

Saum said the NCAA will interview "a couple" people in its investigation. But he refused to name them, other than Lounsbury. The NCAA's decision also broadens its involvement in the Camby affair. It reviewed the campus' investigation of junior-year gifts but did not carry out its own interviews. Saum gave no timetable for completing the NCAA's new inquiry.

Ms. Scanlan said the university's investigators had been able to interview former coach John Calipari, who now coaches the NBA's New Jersey Nets, and his former assistant Bill Bayno, who left to coach UNLV. Both contradicted Lounsbury's account, she said.

Bayno's center at UNLV, Keon Clark, was suspended earlier this season for a Florida trip provided by a sports agent.

The NCAA's agent rules are meant to protect the amateur status of players and put schools on an equal competitive footing.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Marcus Camby is the focus of a new NCAA investigation.

State prepares for critical case against tobacco co.'s

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — After watching Florida and Mississippi reap billions from their lawsuits against the tobacco industry, Massachusetts lawyers are preparing for a big test in their own case against cigarette makers.

Both sides will be in Middlesex Superior Court on Wednesday for a hearing on the industry's motion to dismiss the state's $1 billion claim. Massachusetts, like 40 other states, is seeking to recover Medicaid money it spent treating poor smoking victims. Lawyers for Attorney General Scott Harshbarger consider the hearing a key moment because other states have seen their cases gutted during similar hearings.

Washington state, for example, has seen its case against the industry reduced to a single antitrust count after a successful motion to dismiss.

To guard against a similar result, state attorneys spent 15 hours in moot court last week, testing their case.

They've also consulted with Harvard Law professor Lawrence Tribe, a constitutional scholar who is assisting in the fight against the industry. Finally, they've traveled as far away as England to obtain or review evidence in the case.

"We've come a long way in just a short time. My goal is to keep the pressure on Big Tobacco," Harshbarger said in a statement. One by one, states have filed lawsuits against cigarette makers. They argue that the companies have long hidden the danger of their products, prompting people to smoke. Now the states want to recoup the money they spent treating indigent smokers.

It looked like all the claims might be resolved in June, when attorneys general from across the country announced that they had negotiated a $368.5 billion settlement with the industry.

But President Clinton and members of Congress have voiced opposition to the deal, prompting further talks.

In the meantime, Mississippi reached an out-of-court settlement for $3.6 billion just before its lawsuit was to go to trial in July. In late August, just as its lawsuit was headed for court, Florida reached its own settlement for $11.3 billion.

Pennsylvania was supposed to go trial on Nov. 4, but a judge recently ruled that the statute of limitations had expired in that case. Minnesota's lawsuit is next, with arguments scheduled to begin in January.

Massachusetts was the fifth state to file a lawsuit. Its nine-count, 85-page action was filed on Dec. 19, 1995. Assuming its case proceeds, it should go to trial sometime next year.

In its motion, the industry has asked to dismiss all counts, including those involving fraud, restitution, civil protection and industry conspiracy.

The industry is expected to argue that the state can't bring an action seeking Medicaid reimbursements because the alleged wrongdoing was aimed at consumers, not the state.

An industry spokesman with Philip Morris in New York City did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

Harshbarger's office is expected to argue that the state does have legal standing in the case. Their response centers on 1994 and 1995 state laws expressly authorizing the attorney general to collect Medicaid expenses, including those from "manufacturers of cigarettes."

The laws were passed to guard against challenges to the state's standing.

Bartholomew I comes to U.S.

Orthodox leader cites Christian responsibility in holocaust

By David Briggs
Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew I acknowledged Christian responsibility in the Holocaust on Monday and asked his followers to never again be silent in the shadows of helpless suffering.

In a major address following a tour of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, the spiritual leader of 250 million Orthodox Christians said the "dreadful indifference" of people during the Nazi mass murders is a thorn in the side of human history. "The bitter truth for so many Christians of that terrible time was that they could not connect the message of their faith to their actions in the world," said Bartholomew on the second day of his month-long U.S. visit.

Bartholomew, who experiences conservative Muslim harassment in his home base of Istanbul, the latter-day Constantinople, also said he respects "the role of Israel as a guarantor of the Jewish people's existence."

Coming on the heels of major admissions by the French and German Roman Catholic bishops of Christian failures during the Holocaust, the Orthodox leader's statement indicates this is a time of reckoning for Christianity while there is still a living memory of the atrocities, said Rabbi James Rudin, interreligious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee.

"I think it was really an achievement," said Rudin, one of a group of Jewish leaders who toured the museum with the patriarch. "This will stand for 30, 50 years."

Later this week, Bartholomew, the "first among equals" of Orthodox patriarchs, will meet with President Clinton and congressional leaders.

On Monday, a somber patriarch, at times clutching his shepherd's staff with hands clasped in prayer, was mostly silent as he toured the Holocaust museum, stopping at times to gaze mournfully at the faces of some of the victims. He chanted a memorial prayer in the Hall of Remembrance.

In his talk, Bartholomew said Jews and Christians have a special responsibility toward preserving the memory of the Holocaust, and making sure that this "terrible evil" never again becomes possible.

That means being willing to sacrifice one's own life to preserve the lives of others, the black-robed patriarch said.

"We boldly proclaim to all ... that silence in the face of injustice, silence in the shadows of helpless suffering, silence in the darkness of Auschwitz's bitter night will never again be allowed," he said. "True Christian faith ought to be manifest toward every people of faith, any faith."

At the same time, Bartholomew held up the stories of Christians who resisted the Nazis, including Bishop Chrysostomos of Zakynthos. When the bishop was forced to list the names of Jews on the island, he put down only one name - his own.

"All who died in the Holocaust are martyrs, witnesses that point the way for us to God's love," the patriarch concluded. "May their memory be eternal."

Court refuses to renew La. abortion law

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Supreme Court, in a rare near-unanimous vote on an abortion question, refused yesterday to give judges more power over young girls' decisions to end pregnancies.

The court's 8-1 vote left in shreds a Louisiana parental-consent law found by lower courts to unduly interfere with some girls' abortion rights.

Only Justice Antonin Scalia, one of the court's most fervent opponents of any constitutional right to abortion, voted to review the state's appeal and consider reviving the law.

Louisiana Attorney General Richard Ieyoub had argued that the case "cuts to the core of this nation's ability to protect the welfare of children."

Janet Benshoof of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy applauded the court's action. "Louisiana's passion over making a political statement on abortion far exceeds its ability to draft a law that will withstand constitutional scrutiny," she said. "But this is not the end of any story; it's the end of one episode." The court's action was not a ruling and therefore set no national precedent. It continued, however, the court's five-year record of denying full review to any case dealing directly with abortion rights.

The court in 1992 barred states from banning most abortions, voting 5-4 to uphold the core of its 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade that said women have a constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

Since then, the justices only have granted full review to disputes involving protests outside abortion clinics.

Several disputes more directly involving abortion rights have resulted in unsigned decisions issued without full briefing or oral arguments, and others have been turned away after languishing on the court's docket for months.

"The real question is, when is the court going to come out of the closet on abortion and debate the issue in the open?" Benshoof said.

Most states have laws requiring unmarried girls under 18 to get the permission of one parent before having an abortion, and the nation's highest court has upheld such laws.

But those past rulings have required a judicial bypass — letting judges act without parental consent to permit abortions for girls deemed mature enough to decide on their own or when telling a parent would not be in a girl's best interests.

Before 1995, Louisiana's parental-consent law said judges "shall" authorize abortions without telling a parent in those cases in which a girl's maturity or best interests are argued and proved in her favor.

The 1995 law said judges "may" authorize abortions in such circumstances.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down the law, ruling in April that it unconstitutionally imposed an "undue burden" of young girls' abortion rights.

"Louisiana stands alone on this front," the appeals court said. "As far as we are aware, every state with a parental consent or notification statute has used the mandatory 'shall' language in their bypass schemes."

It added: "The plain language of (the state law) states that juvenile court judges within Louisiana have the discretion to deny an abortion to a minor even though the minor demonstrates that she is mature ... or that the abortion would be in her best interest." Such a result, the 5th Circuit court said, "flies in the face" of past Supreme Court rulings.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Ready for Broadway

Nate Altimari, a senior music major, practices cane work for his upcoming role in the UMass Theater Department's production of "Assassins."

SAPORITO'S PIZZA
112 Federal St.
Rt 9, Belchertown
MA 01007
Telephone: 323.6844

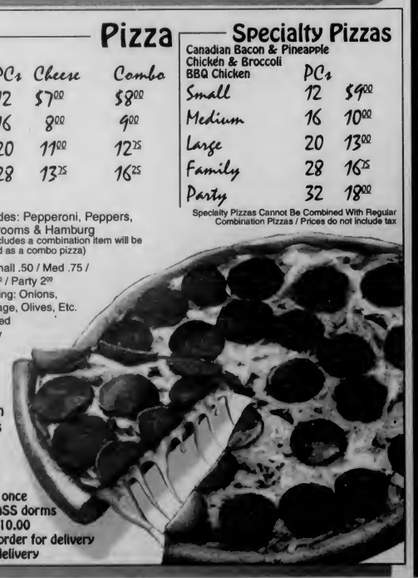
WE DELIVER TO UMASS DORMS!!!

Pizza

	PCs	Cheese	Combo
Small	12	$7.00	$8.00
Medium	16	8.00	9.00
Large	20	11.00	12.25
Family	28	13.25	16.25

Specialty Pizzas
Canadian Bacon & Pineapple
Chicken & Broccoli
BBQ Chicken

	PCs
Small	12	$9.00
Medium	16	10.00
Large	20	13.00
Family	28	16.25
Party	32	18.00



Specialty Pizzas Cannot Be Combined With Regular Combination Pizzas / Prices do not include tax

Combo Includes: Pepperoni, Peppers, Mushrooms & Hamburg
(Any Pizza that includes a combination item will be priced as a combo pizza)

Extra Cheese: Small .50 / Med .75 / Lg. 1.00 / Family 1.00 / Party 2.00
Extra Pizza Topping: Onions, Anchovies, Sausage, Olives, Etc.
.50 on Small & Med
100 on Lg, Family & Party

Store Hours:
Tues-Sat:
11am-10pm
SUN: 2am-9pm
Delivery hours
Tues-Sat:
4pm-9pm
Sun:2pm-8pm

We now deliver once an hour to UMASS dorms
(Dorms Only)$10.00
Minimum food order for delivery
Add $1.75 for delivery

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before

Halloween

We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 27.

University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
We accept VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER and the UCARD
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm 545-3570

Majority of state House pro–death

By Martin Finucane
Associated Press

BOSTON — Despite strong emotions over several recent crimes in Massachusetts, House Speaker Thomas Finneran said yesterday that he believes a majority of House members are against the death penalty. Finneran said the horrors of recent crimes, such as the killing of 10-year-old Jeffrey Curley of Cambridge, have given him pause. "I think these types of incidents cause everybody to pause and reflect further," he said. "There's not a person in the Commonwealth who doesn't see what the Curleys or these other families have gone through and not feel a sense of grief for them."

But he said he doesn't see any change in the margin of about 10 votes that the House has rejected the death penalty by in the past.

Finneran, D-Boston, is an opponent of the death penalty who has, in the past, voiced concerns that innocent people could be mistakenly executed. But he has said little publicly since the furor erupted over the Curley case.

The Senate has passed various pieces of legislation reinstating the death penalty in Massachusetts in the past three years. But the bills haven't made it through the House. So Finneran is a pivotal figure.

In the most recent House vote in 1995, members voted against the death penalty, 83-73.

Finneran's comments came the day before the Senate was to take up the death penalty in what was expected to be a fiery debate. Acting Gov. Paul Cellucci said he would continue to press for the death penalty and he believed the House was out of step with the public in opposing it.

"I believe the people of Massachusetts support the death penalty because they are outraged by this violence that we read about all too often in our state," Cellucci said.

State Sen. James Jajuga, D-Methuen, a death penalty proponent, said he believed the Senate would pass some form of death penalty bill.

"However, our strategy and our whole problem here is trying to get this bill advanced through the Massachusetts House," he said. Jajuga said he and other death penalty proponents, including Cellucci, were lobbying House members.

So far, he said, he's found several House members who have voted against the death penalty in the past who are now wavering. They told him that if the bill applied the death penalty only to criminals who kill children and police officers "they could probably support it."

"There's several of them and I've been lobbying them and I don't want to mention them at this point," he said. "I really feel very confident that if we keep the focus of this very narrow that it stands a good chance of passage this year," he said. Finneran said there are "strong, compelling arguments on both side of the debate."

But he also said that many people might not understand that the state already offers a tough punishment — life imprisonment without parole — in first-degree murder convictions.

"That's it. The door shuts forever," he said.

Finneran said a narrower version of the death penalty might find some support in the House, but he expected it to be broadened to a point where it would again be unpalatable to the majority. He also expressed qualms at creating a "hierarchy or life," by giving special protections, for example, for police officers — and not to teachers or doctors.

"I understand the protective embrace we want to have for law enforcement officers ...but it is a part of that job and everyone who goes into that job knows there is a danger to it."

"We're all human beings and my view of life is that it is precious and should be cherished," he said.

House Minority Leader David Peters, R-Charlton, said the House vote on the death penalty was "by everyone's estimate, an extremely close vote."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Steamy weather

English major Jessica Capano walks through the steam vents near Coolidge residence hall on her way to class.

Kenyan pres. vows action against activists

By Karin Davies
Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Kenya's president warned yesterday of swift action against "anyone who dares to interfere" with an election he hopes will extend his 19-year rule.

His troops drove the message home by using tear gas and clubs to break up the latest anti-government protest.

President Daniel arap Moi's opponents keep pushing election reforms, supported by the United States and other foreign governments, and he keeps pushing back, earning more criticism at home and abroad.

Reformers seeking the repeal of laws dating from British colonial rule, which they say give Moi an edge in elections, have mounted protests since May. Police have routinely responded to the protests with violence.

Still, the months of strife have convinced Moi to work with some opposition members to draft reforms to smooth the playing field before elections, which must be held by the end of the year.

The 74-year-old leader, who is seeking a fifth term, has insisted on retaining great powers, including naming the commission that oversees the balloting.

Meanwhile, dissatisfied reformers continue their battle cry around the country, "No reforms, no elections."

That demand was evident Monday in Nyeri, 60 miles north of the Kenyan capital, where hundreds of demonstrators turned out on Kenyatta Day, a holiday named after the East African country's first president, the late Jomo Kenyatta.

A convoy of protesters heading toward ceremonies downtown was met by police with clubs and tear gas. Eight protesters were arrested and many were injured, officials said.

Reformers boycotted festivities in Nairobi, where Moi told a crowd of 5,000 in a downtown park that the government "will not hesitate to take stern action against anyone who dares to interfere with the electoral process."

He condemned "these few self-centered Kenyans" who have threatened violence to prevent the elections.

Any attempt to deny Kenyans the right to vote "is not only a gross violation of their constitutional right, but also a lack of appreciation for the great sacrifice that Kenyans paid for freedom," he said.

Peter Wachira, a university student, was angered by Moi's threats.

"We must eliminate the colonial laws that made us fight colonialists," Wachira said.

"We've just removed the white oppressors and replaced them with African oppressors."

Sounding like a campaigner, Moi announced 10 percent raises for government workers and vowed to fight corruption, touching on a complaint that recently caused the International Monetary Fund to cancel a $220 million loan.

Complaints persist from other quarters as well. A U.S. diplomat has questioned the government's refusal to register the opposition Safina party, one of whose founders is renown paleontologist Richard Leakey.

Author accuses German gov't of hatred

By Paul Geitner
Associated Press

BERLIN, Germany — German officials on Monday angrily rejected charges by author Guenter Grass, who claimed that Germany's asylum policy reflects "latent hatred of foreigners" and encourages neo-Nazi violence.

Grass, author of "The Tin Drum" and one of Germany's most outspoken writers, called the German government's asylum policy "democratically covered barbarism." He made his remarks Sunday while presenting German Book Trade Peace Prize to Yasar Kemal, a Turkish novelist who writes about the problems faced by Turkey's Kurdish minority.

"To accuse the German people of hating foreigners is a bit much and really an insult," Interior Ministry official Eduard Lintner said on German radio Monday.

Germany has accepted the most refugees and asylum-seekers of any country in Europe, he said, and "is generally acknowledged (to have) the most liberal and generous asylum laws."

Grass was especially critical of Interior Minister Manfred Kanther, who has repeatedly stated that "Germany is not a country of immigrants." He accused Kanther of giving moral support to neo-Nazis and their slogan of "Foreigners out!"

Germany tightened its generous asylum law in 1993 after a wave of neo-Nazi attacks on foreigners, and the number of asylum-seekers has declined since then. The largest single group is from Turkey, where separatist Kurds have been fighting since 1984 for autonomy. Human rights groups charge that many Kurds sent back to Turkey are tortured by the Turkish government or otherwise endangered. The Interior Ministry said 23,814 people from Turkey had applied for asylum in Germany in the past year, of which 12.8 percent were accepted.

Lintner defended Germany's policy, saying that Turkey's problems with its Kurdish minority can't be solved by having "the minorities come to us." He also said the torture charges have not been proven.

U.S. fires laser at satellite; success finally comes

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Just after dusk in the New Mexican desert, a high-powered Army laser trained its invisible beam on a U.S. satellite as it emerged from over the horizon to the north. With a burst of flame and smoke, the hulking device generated a beam that shot up through the atmosphere at the small satellite 260 miles above the earth. The test, conducted Friday at White Sands Missile Range, N.M., and announced yesterday at the Pentagon, went off successfully, pointing to a possible new direction in warfare. Weeks after an initial failure, the Pentagon announced, the Army successfully fired its "Miracl" laser, an acronym for the 1980s-vintage Mid-Infrared Advanced Chemical Laser, at an aging Air Force satellite.

Neither the satellite nor its target point — an infrared camera — was damaged or disabled in the two test firings, one lasting less than one second, the other less than 10 seconds. But the Pentagon views the test as concrete proof of a long-held concern: that its own satellites, as well as intelligence, civilian or commercial satellites, are vulnerable to laser weapons.

Air Force Lt. Col. Bob Potter, a Pentagon spokesman, said the laser hit the target camera, which recorded data now being evaluated at White Sands. Had the laser been turned up to full power or trained on its target longer, it could have destroyed the satellite. But the point of the test was to show that lower-intensity lasers may be able to disable the information-gathering equipment, such as infrared sensors, mounted on U.S. military satellites.

As many as 30 nations may already be able to use low-power lasers to blind the sensors on satellites used by the U.S. military to monitor potentially hostile countries.

The test marks the first time the United States has fired a high-powered laser at a satellite in orbit. The Russian government, which was informed of the test, had previously expressed concerns about the testing as a potential threat to Russian satellites. Built by TRW, the laser is an offshoot of the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative. It has been fired into space many times, but never at a satellite, Potter said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Close encounters...

Kelcey Morange, a sophomore psychology major, notices that something is "unusual" outside of the campus center yesterday afternoon.

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games &
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30
Sat 12:00-7:30
Closed Tuesday

LOWEST FARES
★ GUARANTEED ★
FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
SAN JUAN
Christmas Break Special
Non-Stop Air American $450
Act Fast
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC
THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson)
AMHERST

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1997
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Tuesdays or Fridays Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Wednesdays 4:30 - 6 pm, at the Campus Center. Room number posted by elevator. Confidentiality Assured. Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders, yourself or someone you know. Call 577-5168.

Dont Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!

Marshall STEINBECK
Collision Repair & Auto Body
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our specialty
•Users of Sikkens paint products
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair
53 S. Prospect St.
Amherst Center
256-8157
Shop Reg. #RS1212

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Of perspective, poetry and chocolate cake

I dare not say that there are a lot of famous poets from Acton, Massachusetts. There is at least one, though, and he happens to be a pretty decent guy.

Fancying myself something of a poet, about a year ago, I felt as if some confidence building was in order. My plan was quite simple, really. I would call up my famous poet friend, invite myself over for coffee, let him become deeply engrossed in my scribblings and sing the due praises. At which point, having been duly assured of my status as a poet, drop the whole matter and become myself again. I didn't think it was asking too much.

The first stages of the plan were set into motion smoothly; the phone had worked, and even my tactless offer to display my work was accepted. I drove the few miles to the famous poet's house and walked in (as is standard practice in a famous poet's household). How sophisticated I was! "Yes, hello! It is nice to see you!" et cetera. I didn't spill the coffee; I seemed to be sitting pretty. After looking over what I thought was some of my best work, I saw the famous poet's face grow long. I should have been prepared for this— after all, he was a famous humorist poet and I was not. How could he possibly relate to the depth of my content?

Yes, it is true that to me punctuation is more important than verbosity; I will admit that the punctuation to word ratio of 3:1 may be startling; should that stop the famous poet from liking what I'd written?

After some deliberation, the outward signs of the famous poet's exasperation subsided. He'd stumbled over some of my less esoteric stuff. In fact, for the record, here is the poem which, I think, turned things around:

Confection Confession

If you and I could become a piece of chocolate cake we'd still have our differences. After all, you'd want to be the icing.

The famous poet liked the poem but felt it could use a bit of sprucing up. We worked together on it and ended up with this:

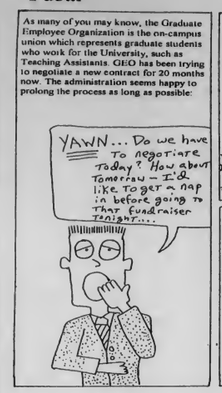
Confectionery Confessions
You and I share our chocolate cake, though, you're at the icing more than I.

I didn't like the new poem at all. The famous poet called to his famous poet's wife (who, by the way, seems a decent hand at capturing the love at famous poets having at one time been courted by the likes of Kenneth Patchen) to settle things. He read both poems aloud to her, and she immediately declared that the first poem was more to her liking. The famous poet took it well.

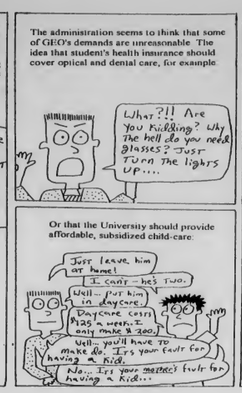
Instead of delving back into my poetry, however, he began extolling the virtues of the classical poets. The rest of the visit seems to fade from my memory.

I've been looking for some meaning in these events. It's not significant that the famous poet's wife preferred the original poem to the revised version. It is significant, though, that I left the famous poet's house feeling more like a lawyer than a poet. The problem is this: poets cannot talk about poetry (not that I consider myself a poet any longer). Each attempts to get his hands as dirty as possible, leaving only a few crumbs of poetry left on the tray. The poetry is devoured as quickly as chocolate cake at a birthday party. What exactly is left? We know it's not the icing.

Needless to say, I've gone straight off chocolate and am now partial to vanilla.



Alexander Phillips is a UMass student.



Alexander Phillips

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003, or by email to: letters@uitvms.oit.umass.edu. Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Fubar

Joe Gabriel

joeab@geo.umass.edu 10-20-97

Media execs misunderstand Americans

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

For years, members of the extreme right have been trying to project their homophobia on the American people. They have proclaimed that most Americans are categorically opposed to homosexuality — that they shrink in horror at the mere suggestion of same-sex intimacy.

Many media executives have apparently made a similar assessment. At ABC recently, network executives slapped an extra warning on an episode of "Ellen" that featured a jokey kiss between a straight woman and a lesbian.

"Due to adult content, parental discretion is advised," said the warning, which appeared in addition to the show's TV-14 rating.

The warning outraged Ellen DeGeneres, the show's openly gay star. DeGeneres and her TV persona, Ellen Morgan, came out last season in a much-publicized episode, and she felt that ABC's warning undermined that ground-breaking effort.

"What I am trying to say is, 'Who I am is OK.' It's a bit hard to feel OK, let alone portray OK, when the network is warning folks that you might be a danger to their kids," she said.

If the network put a parental advisory on every ABC show that featured a kiss or any other form of sexual innuendo, that would be one thing. But the top brass at ABC don't think we need to be cautioned against "The Drew Carey Show" or "Spin City." In fact, the only other show that gets the TV-14 rating is "NYPD Blue," which has both nudity and graphic violence.

It's strange that ABC should be so skiddish about "Ellen." After all, by bringing Ellen Morgan out of the closet last season, they had already asked the American people if they could handle an openly gay lead character. And the American people overwhelmingly said yes. In fact, Ellen's coming out was one of the best things that has happened to the network. The episode was a hit with both the critics and the public, and it helped propel the show, which previously had unremarkable ratings, into one of TV's most popular nighttime comedies.

Americans were similarly underestimated shortly after the release of "In and Out," a movie about a small-town teacher who is outed by a former student. The press made much ado about the fact that the film features a long same-sex kiss between actors Kevin Kline and Tom Selleck. "At the press junket it was ludicrous," Kline told USA Today. "Ninety percent of the interviewers were going 'Tell us about the kiss.' 'Did you have to get a note from your wife?' 'How many takes did it take to get it right.' It was so inane."

For its part, USA Today predicted that despite the movie's gentle tone, "it still might be too much for middle America."

It wasn't. At this writing "In and Out" is the highest-grossing movie currently in theaters and analysts predict that it will be the most successful movie of the fall. And the numbers aren't being skewed by the crowds in New York and Los Angeles.

At the Mall of America in Minneapolis recently, a New York Times reporter found that "In and Out" was the most popular movie at the mall's 14-screen theater.

"Coming out is a big yawn," one movie-goer told the reporter. "What made this film interesting wasn't that two men were making out on screen but that it was actually a pretty funny movie."

When the same reporter went to a small town in Indiana, he found a similar reaction. Claire C. Wishard, coordinator of the Indianapolis-based Heartland Film Festival, which honors uplifting family-values films, admitted that she was at first taken aback by the kiss, but that overall she thought the movie was "cute."

Hopefully, the success of shows like "Ellen" and movies like "In and Out" will convince media executives that, when it comes to comedies at least, the quality of the jokes is a lot more important than the sexual orientation of the characters.

Indeed, if the pen is mightier than the sword, then the laugh might be mightiest of all. Although Ellen DeGeneres wasn't able to prevent the network from airing the extra warning, she did succeed in preventing the network from cutting a suggestive scene from a future episode. In it, Ellen and her new girlfriend head toward the bedroom, implying that they will be having sex.

Once again, network executives will brace themselves for an outcry. And once again, the public will just laugh.

Sara Eckel is a syndicated columnist. Send comments to the author in care of this newspaper or send her e-mail at saraeunt@aol.com.

Letters to the Editor

Perception vs. reality on alcohol policy

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Tamar Carroll's article "Board of Higher Education votes to ban alcohol from state schools," published in Collegian on Wed., Oct. 15. I would like to cite and clarify some points concerning the perception of the policy, versus the actual policy that was voted on by the Board of Higher Education (BHE) on Tues., Oct. 14.

The perception of the "alcohol policy" that the BHE voted on, is that all campuses in the state will be dry. This perception is incorrect. The BHE did not vote to institute any new policy at all, in fact the BHE has little power in setting policies per campus; this power is legally given to the Board of Trustees that govern each state and community college, and the Board that governs the five campuses of the University.

The BHE did send a call to campuses to take specific steps to curb underage drinking. These steps include evaluating current alcohol policies, in addition to developing alcohol education programs for preventive education and for the treatment of alcohol abuse.

The misconception of this motion stems partially from the media distorting the language used, and from the staunch opinions expressed on this topic by public figures in the state. At the meeting of the Board on Tuesday, both Chancellor of Higher Education Stan Koplick and Chairman of the BHE Jim Carlin expressed that they support a dry campus policy. It is important to note, however, that their opinions reflect only what they individually feel, and not all Board members feel this way. At the same meeting, I expressed my opinion that I do not support this policy. I have reiterated this feeling in a letter, which will go to all college Presidents and Trustees in the state.

What we actually voted for unanimously was a motion to reevaluate current alcohol practices and to educate students more about alcohol abuse. It is doubtful that a dry campus policy will result from this evaluation. I feel that it would be an unenforceable and dangerous policy to institute, and I think most would agree with that point.

I ask students to disregard any media's headlines, which state that the BHE has "banned alcohol." It is a distortion of the truth and legally impossible. And if you have any further questions on this topic, feel free to call me at the Student Government Association (545-0342).

Elly Court
Student Member, Board of Higher Education
Field

Eckel misses point of Promise Keepers

To the Editor:

I found Sara Eckel's comments on Promise Keepers (PK) in the Oct. 16 Collegian to be a mixed bag of welcome accolades laced with typical liberal media distribe.

Ms. Eckel does well to point out that we males have indeed lost our priorities in the pursuit of the extrinsic trappings of materialism, careers and status (all well in their proper places) at the neglect of intrinsic values — a self- denying and exemplary presence in the lives of our loved ones.

However, she echoes the proverbial establishment inferences of "concern" that since the movers and shakers of PK don't have the blessings of Brokaw, Jennings, Rather and Ireland, Inc. and Tony Evans isn't "their" type of African-American, then consequently "their" women's organization, the National Organization for Women (which has only 1/3 the membership of the Concerned Women for America) must view this movement with skepticism.

Yes, Ms. Eckel, I'm endeavoring to be a better husband and father, and yes, I do unapologetically believe in the patriarchy. There must by necessity be an ultimate chain of command, or we would have anarchy. But leadership must be by example to be effective.

Jesus demonstrated this in John 13 when He washed the Apostles feet saying, "You call me Lord, and rightly so, that is what I am. But I am among you as one who serves."

And the Apostle Paul, in Ephesians 5:21, admonishes us to "submit to one another out of reverence for Christ."

What angers many establishment critics of PK is that at its essence it isn't another petition by a special interest group to the federal government for increased regulation of our personal lives for a humanistic solution to our societal ills.

The sins and injustices of humanity are not indigenous to any one people or race. Consequently, true change will never come by edict or decree, but from a changed heart.

Many penitent males from Catholic, Protestant and Orthodox, black, white, Asiatic and Native American backgrounds beside myself are earnestly praying for a third Great Awakening in America. We shutter to think of what belies us, our families and friends, if it doesn't occur. Like Ancient Rome, we have left our republic and are now an arrogant empire.

To paraphrase a well-known commercial of several years hence about a great Kosher hot dog, PK is both an appeal and affirmation of personal accountability to a much Higher Authority.

Chuck DiBaise
Ware

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangalirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

What of one million dollars?

Not even a moment's breath after students addressed the Faculty Senate to repudiate the elimination of a School of Education program called Curriculum and Learning — a program which houses half of the Native American student population, cut under the guise of restructuring and fiscal needs — the new provost announced in the Oct. 9th Faculty Senate meeting that one million dollars coming from the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education would be used to help pay for the renovation and expansion of the honors program office space in Goodell.

No Money Mantra and More Money Mantra

When defenders of the decision to get rid of Curriculum and Learning talked about why it was necessary, an image of a stark UMass gets created and the mantra "sad as it may be, these are just hard times" is sounded. When negotiators from the takeover of last spring tried to increase the amount of need-based financial aid that the University makes available for low income students, these same officials tightened up their purse strings, and said, "sad as it may be, these are just hard times." The same reason is used to explain historic and persistent under-staffing of advisors for ALANA (Asian, Latino, African, and Native American) academic programs violating federal guidelines that were set up to ensure equal educational opportunities. "Sad as it may be, these are just hard times," they mentioned again.

Viraphanh Douangmany

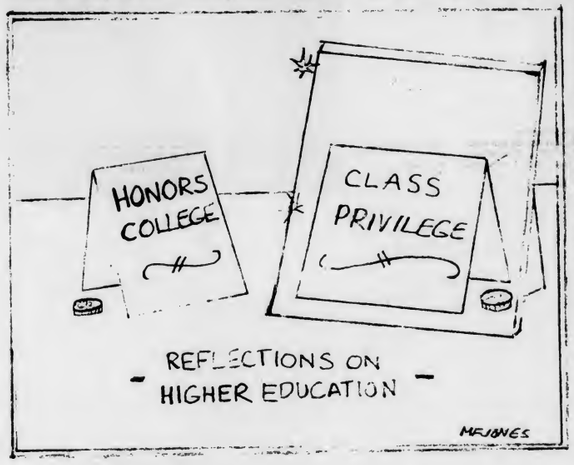
It is not because they do not value curriculum and learning, they insist, or rather they do not think that poor people need more help in financing their education, or that students of color do not need advisors and academic support programs to combat low retention rates; it is merely an issue of dollars. There is just not enough money to go around they say.

However, these same defenders of cut–scrimp–and–save policies that hurt students of color, poor students and people who may not have a school to go to, switch gears from being melancholy Sally Struthers to enthusiastic Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders when it comes down to issues and programs serving the privileged few (at least Sally Struthers advocates).

They rave about the honors program at our school being top notch. They say it is worth spending $17 million of taxpayer's money and tuition to expand this program into a separate college. According to the figures in the honors college proposal, spread over the 1,600 students that comprise the honors program, $17 mil. would mean spending over $10,000 on each honors student. This does not even take into account an additional $40,000 in scholarship money for 15 honors college students (in the proposal) and the unpublished numbers of valedictorians and salutatorians that presently receive full scholarships every year. Needless to say, honors students are doing very well.

Beyond the cheers, flips and somersaults, the University has taken measurable steps to creating and constructing an honors college. And they are doing it practically overnight. Their plan to construct an honors college compound is replete with state of the art facilities, including dormitories, dining halls, and recreational space. The site is slated for Orchard Hill. Part of the plan is rerouting an actual road (with an estimated cost of $5 mil.) so that traffic would not spoil the peace and sanctity that will be created, much like the campuses of ivy league schools. Even though the average student will not be able to take classes with honors college students (classroom size is limited to 20–25) and will not be able to frequent honors college facilities (computer labs), and services (advising), honors college students will have full liberties to the entire UMass campus. In fact, part of the DuBois Library will be sectioned off for honors college study space only.



"When negotiators from the takeover of last spring tried to increase the amount of need–based financial aid that the University makes available for low income students, these same officials tightened up their purse strings and said, "sad as it may be, these are just hard times."

The Miracle Donor

The move by the Board of Higher Education to facilitate the honors college endeavor through the donation of $1 mil. targeted for the Honors Program is very interesting. Could it be that this is a fleeting attempt to secure a foothold for the feasibility of planting an honors college on our campus? Could it be that public sentiment against the initiative is mounting as more and more people realize that fewer and fewer students will actually benefit from the honors college? Because the honors college is projected to double the number of honors students at UMass without increasing the total number of students that attend the University, are people having second thoughts about limiting access to public higher education for the average student? Is the assurance that community colleges will always be open to the average student no consolation at all? Are people asking who scores at least 1300 on their SAT's (admissions criteria) to enjoy the benefits of the honors college? Is it because increased number of students do not want to lose anymore than they have to subsidize the education of others deemed more "talented?" That opposition to the honors college presents a clear and imminent threat. Could it be that Board of Higher Education member, Aaron Spencer who has stealthily pushed for the concept of an honors college up until this time, no longer feels confident that he can pummel the college down the throats of the public without them realizing the most obvious? Not only is Mr. Spencer the President and CEO of Pizzera Uno, rumors that he is aspiring for political office is also surfacing. Mr. Spencer who chairs the subcommittee on the honors college that voted in favor of UMass to be the site of an honors college over the summer, is speculated to be less interested in raising the image of the University that lines his pockets with money. Critics of Mr. Spencer suspect that he may be looking towards the University to expand his pizza franchise. Remember, this is the self declared millionaire, who knows nothing about education but everything about business.

END NOTE: Vote NO on the honors college referendum question. Polls are out Wed., Oct. 22, 1997 in the Student Union. Send the Student Government Association your message of opposition!

Viraphanh Douangmany is a UMass student.

Wrap yourself in the warm blanket of unity

Time after time, we sit and discuss what it means to be black and white. America (the melting pot) is black and white. Its issues are black and white. Its justice is black and white. Its schools are black and white and its philosophies are black and white.

Anytime you talk about issues of race, they are always confined to black and white. This is not a problem if you're black, African–American, whatever. This is not a problem if you're white, Caucasian, who cares.

Humphrey brown III

Being confined to groups of black and white doesn't become a problem for anyone until you start to wander the globe a little and find out that you have people (yes, there are other countries in the world) who don't fit into the white or black category. Then, you have a whole other ball of wax, all of which is being melted by the flames of oppression.

There you have the key word— oppression.

Whether you're Asian, African, Native American, Latino or Black, the flames of oppression have scorched you at some point in your life. This is a common thread between all of our cultures. Unfortunately, many of those who fall under the common umbrella of oppression choose not to align themselves with their fellow man.

These are the folks who you'll frequently hear utter the lines, "That's their problem. That's not my fight."

You can find these people watching UPN, when they know there's an emergency ALANA meeting going on.

These are the ones that take pride in their own culture (as should we all), but don't consider the issues of other cultures important enough to offer their help or support. Sure, they'll say how messed up it is that heads are being slaughtered in the Sudan, or how awful it is that Middle Eastern countries are engaged in warfare, but won't do much more than read the headlines. This is presuming that these people even read international news and know what the hell is going on outside of their own neighborhoods. In America and all over, various cultures choose to separate their struggles with those of other peoples.

Oppression blows like a cold wind, yet the blanket that is ALANA is tattered with holes.

Many of us have become so consumed with the labels, black and white, this and that (whateva). We will take ourselves out of the fight for freedom and refuse to make allies that will help our common causes.

This makes very little sense in the global scheme of things. We have to get past this label business.

Maybe a lot of you don't know this, I'm praying most of you do, but the world is not black and white. Oppression is something that all cultures have to deal with at one point or another. To confine the struggle to just black and white, is to seriously hinder the advancement of all people of color in America and abroad.

We should not be consumed with black v. white, but oppressed v. oppressor.

I'll repeat it.

We should not be consumed with black v. white, but oppressed v. oppressor.

This ideology covers the entire spectrum of peoples around the world and hear in America. Blacks are oppressed. Asians are oppressed. Natives are oppressed. How many other's can you name? All of us who are oppressed should make allies with one another, not confine ourselves to our own groups. No one can do it alone. Too much has happened to too many people. ALANA is bleeding. If it's a matter of dying alone or healing together, just call me all world.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian Columnist.

True Life and Two Lies of SecFacSen

By Geneva Young

SecFacSen lived for twenty–five years.
In those years he shed one tear.
SecFacSen did not even notice,
The days grew longer
And SecFacSen
Became fearless.

This is a story of
The true life and two lies
Of SecFacSen,
Warrior king.

He made friends of enemies.
SecFacSen was
The legend
That transcended time,
He trampled over frogs
And crossed over lines.
SecFacSen was hailed
Warrior king;

SecFacSen thought
He knew everything.
Long before water,
Long before fire,
SecFacSen started
Burning and boiling.

Living in his kingdom,
He was humble, he knew
There were bigger kings
With bigger budgets,
But he liked what he did,
And he knew
What he wanted.

SecFacSen had a secret dream
A secret desire,
SecFacSen dreamed
Of being a lord
He dreamed to lead
Enlightened hoardes
But he closed that door
And the hoardes couldn't see
What this dreamer
Could not dream.

And the longer SecFacSen waited,
The dream was no longer,
And he no longer desired.

SecFacSen trudged along.
SecFacSen did not notice
What was wrong.
He couldn't understand,
Why all these kids
Would fuss and fight.
They wanted him to be
The things he had said
They wanted an open door
More than just some bread
Day by day,
Year after year
Nothing was done
The door disappeared
He couldn't see that
Days grew long.

The hope and frustration
With administration.
The kids cried louder,
And he asked:

Don't you have milk,
Don't you have bread?
Don't you know what I had instead?

The first instruction became
The first lie:
Go home, go to sleep.

There was no home,
There would be no sleep.

The second instruction became
The second lie:
Your leaders are killing me,
So stop the cries.

The leaders were themselves;
They could not stop if they tried.

Upset and turmoiled,
SecFacSen declared war.
Upset and turmoiled,
He jumped into his car.
He called on his cell phone
For wife to console him.

No one picked up.
Then a dead tone.

Upset and turmoiled,
He lost his way home
Along the highway.
It was supposed to be
The most efficient route.

The highway was
The modern route.
The modern route
Made him mad.
The modern route
Took a lot of lives.
Many people he lost
On the highway,
Remembering made him sad.
He shed one tear.
He cried.

For those forgotton
He cried,
For deeds undone
He lied,
Losing his past on the way,
Feeling his dream go astray,
For this he shed
One tear.

When he cried,
SecFacSen was cured,
His screams were
In unison with the children.
Their screams transcended the heavens,
Sublime.

Listening to his heart,
He drove the way home,
Following sounds of hiccup
Spasms after
A long hard cry.

The children did stop
Their crying after all,
He said to himself.

But when he met them again
He found no children.
He saw full grown adults,
With lots of learning to bear.

Credits were due,
And they were given.
Apologies were made
And for one reason:

A birth of a generation
Must always claim the present
To make way for a past.

Geneva Young is a UMass student.

Asiatic understanding: letters from the mall

Lillian Chan

"Can you Chinese people walk any faster?!"

At that, my friend Kieu and I started walking even more slowly. We weren't about to let these five white girls intimidate us with their asinine remarks.

The five girls stood off to one side. While Kieu and I stood off to the other. Under our breaths, we both started muttering, "white trash...white trash...white trash," over and over again for they weren't being too kind with what they were saying to us. We wanted to get back at them and make them feel just as bad. To achieve this goal, we decided to sink to their level and call them something offensive as well — "white trash."

"To achieve this goal, we decided to sink to their level and call them something offensive as well — 'white trash.'"

We didn't say it too loud because we didn't want to get our booties whacked. There were five of them and just two of us. We didn't think that getting our faces clawed or having our hair pulled out would be a very good idea. But then, they started giving us these mean, nasty stares. That was the last straw. Kieu looked around and said in a manner–of–fact tone, "It's better to be Asian than white trash!" The five white girls scurried away.

It was supposed to be a nice shopping day at Holyoke Mall. And it was — until they showed their ugly faces to us with their fried, frizzy hair, tight blue jeans, and team jackets.

Here I was, thinking I had rid myself of these racist confrontations. I thought wrong. Was I naive? Yes, but when it's been years since I've been addressed in such a way, I can't really be blamed for thinking racism was just a memory.

Here and there, people have said even stupider things to me. For example, I was in a bagel shop when this man came up to me and said something in Japanese. He looked so proud of himself — the idiot. "I'm Chinese," I said.

I have no clue why people feel the need to share what Asian language they never knew with me. I don't do that to other people. I would never go up to a white person and assume that they were Irish and start saying, "I want me lucky charms," in an Irish accent. I wouldn't go up to a black person and start throwing out Swahili words to him either. So, why do some people feel the need to come up to me and start saying stuff like, "konichiwa," which means hello in Japanese?

When I was about ten–years–old, I was picking out candy at the corner store when this old guy started ranting about how he hated the Japanese because of "the war." I assume he was talking to me about World War II since it looked as if he lived during that time. I just ignored him and went along my merry way.

I don't know why some people think that all Asians are the same. Do Asians really look the same? With my eyes I can see very distinct differences between the many different Asian ethnic groups. I guess people who think all Asians look alike must be blind. I think it would be wise for them to invest in some type of eye surgery. It would be quite beneficial.

I'm not here to say that everyone should be politically correct. I'm just here to say that some people need to use common sense. People need to keep in mind that they should treat others the way that they would like to be treated. It's so simple yet, for some reason, it's a hard concept for some to follow.

It really irks me whenever an idiot comes up to me and makes an assumption as to what I am. It's okay to ask, but don't assume. Some people need to think before they speak. It's not that hard. For all those ignorant people out there —try it, you might like it.

Lillian Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Devil's Advocate a hokey pleaser

Pacino, Reeves star in thriller directed by Taylor Hackford

COURTESY BRIAN HAMILL

Keanu Reeves stars in Warner Brother's supernatural thriller, The Devil's Advocate.

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

DEVIL'S ADVOCATE
Directed by Taylor Hackford
with Keanu Reeves, Al Pacino, Charlize Theron
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

Devil's Advocate is about as hokey as any big budget horror film could ever be, yet it is somehow quite charming. The story is separated into two very distinct halves, which when combined allude to an unsettling metaphor about power and corruption. What director Taylor Hackford (An Officer and a Gentleman, Against All Odds) does is stretch this metaphor all the way down, well, to hell, to speak figuratively. Like so many previous films with the similar premise that lawyers are really no better than demons, Hackford just cuts to the chase; his lawyer really is the anti- Christ.

What is so charming about this film, besides Al Pacino's performance which always seems to blur the line between haunting and playfully ridiculous, is that Hackford doesn't really try to surprise us with this discovery. His lawyer, played by Pacino, is the devil, symbolizing every connotation of the term, and so what? He rants and raves about how fun it is to be so bad in the land of God and tells his young protege, Keanu Reeves, "the twentieth century has been my time." Devil's Advocate is about how much the twentieth century has been his time, with corruption plaguing every fabric of society's structure. Pacino is the founder of a ruthless law firm, and ironicly enough, the concepts of both law and evil seem to always go hand in hand. This film just reminds us once again reminds us of this.

Devil's Advocate begins in a typical John Grishan style, with a young hot shot lawyer from Florida named Kevin Lomax (Keanu Reeves) who has the remarkable ability to never lose a case. When word of his talent reaches all the way to the Mecca of absolute evil, otherwise referred to as New York City, Lomax and his wife Mary Ann (Charlize Theron) are brought up to the big city to be wined and dined in true New York fashion by an interested firm. Lomax accepts this job and is taken under the wing of John Milton (Al Pacino) the firm's head honcho. The men discuss all the important issues that men most always discuss, like power and women, and Lomax quickly finds himself as the big man at Milton's firm.

Of course Mary Ann starts resenting her husband never being around and Lomax starts resenting his wife not understanding how important the case he's currently working on is to his career. The marriage problems erupt and so on and so on, it all sounds quite familiar we all know. Yet, right when you start feeling that uneasy sensation of boredom, the plot thickens. People start turning into demons and poor Mary Ann quickly begins to fall pray of insanity, or so her husband believes. However, none of this really is that shocking — it's not supposed to be. What's unsettling is how much it could make sense, despite how zany it seems. Lawyers are scum, this is not a familiar concept of Hollywood screen-writing, but I assure you; you've never seen a courtroom thriller with special effects like this before.

Hackford does not have an easy time making the transition from law drama to supernatural suspense very easily, and the entire middle of the film appears awkward. Devil's Advocate is saved by its unnerving ending, despite the two final minutes which were most likely butchered by studio execs. So much happens in the final 20 minutes that it's difficult to digest, yet there's really no need. the plot gets silly as Hackford reaches further down to Hell hoping to bring all his characters down there with him. It's merely amusing enough to watch Pacino ramble on, "I have so many names," he says when Lomax asks if he is Satan. Pacino has the spunk of a little boy realizing how fun it can be to have unlimited power. yet he speaks in poetic nonsense losing track of his words in order to fall in love with his own voice.

Equally satisfying is Keanu Reeves, who has finally expanded his limited character representations. Although the most type-casted actor in Hollywood still has traces of Ted, his alter ego it would seem, his role as Lomax is the most complicated performance he has ever tackled. Despite his usual dryness. Reeves' Lomax is unpredictable, obsessed with power and ego, yet has a soft spot for his loving wife that he must learn how to reconcile. Even the Devil tells Lomax that his favorite sin is vanity, a lesson which Lomax hopes to evade, unknowing that it is this vanity that creates the trap to be set, delivering Lomax into the hands of the Devil. The final charming aspect to Devil's Advocate is whether Milton has really set this trap or if Lomax is striving for the attention of the Devil.

As intriguing as a metaphor this may be, the Devil's Advocate can't help but be fantastic ly entertaining. Pacino especially is mesmerizing, the perfect man for the part with his sinister eyes combined with that seductive smile. Hackford also employs a cinematic portrayal of sin, by including gratuitous nudity, fancy cars, and elaborate parties. Hackford has combined The Firm with Rosemary's Baby as well as including the visual effects of Jacob's Ladder creating a new kind of thriller that is as fun to laugh at as it is to cringe. A premise so over the top that the point of the matter can not help but be made so clear. The fact that the Devil is in the guise of the a lawyer is not supposed to be the main point, it's about how quickly you can fall from the grace of God to the clutches of the Devil if the temptation is appealing enough.

What might be interesting for Hackford to contemplate next for a movie idea is having God play a lawyer and see how long he can last at the job. B–

Elton John misses The Big Picture

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

THE BIG PICTURE
Elton John
Rocket Records

Elton John has had a tough year, most of us would agree. With the deaths of good friend Gianni Versace this summer and Princess Diana in late August, John has every right to sound melancholy and depressed.

With his newest, The Big Picture (dedicated to Versace's memory), John goes beyond melancholy and settles into a depressing monotony.

Overall, the tone of the album is philosophical, compared to Made In England's more introspective sound. Adding more of a ballad style than England, John emerges with a completely new sound.

While change is usually for the better, John's aching melodies and slow beats tend to grate on the ear after a couple of listens.

On Made In England, John was able to mix things around — from the pop "Please" to the orchestral arrangements on "Belfast." Sadly, that variety is lacking on The Big Picture.

Despite changing his sound, John did retain some of his classic flavor by retaining his longtime partner and lyricist, Barry Taupin.

Taupin's lyrics here are less than poignant and dramatic but his ideas — and the words he uses to express those ideas — are fresh.

The album opens with the ballad "Long Way From Happiness." As one of the best tracks on the disc, John's melancholy voice settles wonderfully over a slow beat and soothing melody.

John's first mistake on this album comes with the second track, "Live Like Horses." The song sounds too much like the previous one and simply lacks the oomph to carry through iffy lyrics like "Someday/ We'll live like horses/ Free rein/ From your old iron fences."

John continues his morbid bent through "The End Will Come" and switches to a philosophical, gospel sound on "If The River Can Bend."

The album does get better midway through, starting with "Love's Got A Lot To Answer For." While John reverts to the ballad style that fell flat on "Live Like Horses," it actually works on this song. This song also holds tinges of what made Made In England a strong album — powerful, personal lyrics, touched with just the right amount of feeling.

The lyrics project an intense imagery in this song: "Freedom's like the stars in the sky/ Alone and cold and burning/ Each one keep it's distance/ If only we were stars you and I."

But the best track on the CD is "Something About The Way You Look Tonight."

While John is not necessarily known for his romanticism, this song is not only lyrically beautiful, but musically beautiful as well. For the first time on this album, the words and the music actually fit together — each part complementing the other. "Something About The Way You Look Tonight" gives the album variety — a sound we haven't heard already, and won't hear again on this particular album.

Wistfulness mixed in with insecurity characterizes the title track. Ideally, "The Big Picture" ought to be the strongest song on the album — but following "Something About The Way You Look Tonight," this track can't quite cut it. However, there is a more up-beat tone on this song — something that is missing from other tracks on this album.

The album closes strongly with "Wicked Dreams," a song more in flavor with classic Elton John. With a stronger beat punching up the song, John sings "Don't disturb me if you dare/ Join me if you have the nerve/ I'll show you where the best of me has been."

It was probably an ideal choice to finish an 11-track disc with that song. Most Elton John fans will be wondering exactly where the best of John has gone?

Overall the album is not one of John's better efforts. Comparatively speaking, though, even a half-hearted effort from Elton John is better than many singers' best. C.

COURTESY MARIO TESTINO

Elton John's new CD doesn't quite fit The Big Picture.

Men's tennis team back on track after defeating Connecticut 4–3

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team is clearly back on track after nudging rival UConn on Saturday. The team, which has a history of overcoming adversity, again came from behind to earn the victory.

UMASS	4
UCONN	3

As they have in their past four matches, UMass dropped the doubles point. After changing the doubles lineup again, UMass coach Judy Dixon can now only wait for results.

"I am happy with the new combination at the No. 3 spot, but they have to get comfortable, before I can expect them to win," Dixon said.

Dixon inserted Jason Lin to play alongside Parsa Samii.

Once again the Minutemen turned it up for singles play. They notched wins in four out of six contests, to earn a 4–3 match victory over the Huskies.

The Minutemen were especially strong in spots 1–3, as they have been all season.

They were paced by a stellar outing by Todd Cheney in the No.1 slot. He disposed of Rich Saxe 6–2,6–3. While Cheney has played better this year, he seemed to have Saxe's number.

"I knew my opponent's game pretty well, and I took advantage of that," Cheney said.

Once again, Cheney refused to sit out despite that nagging ankle.

"Todd would have to have a broken leg not to play," Dixon said. "And even then, he might go out there."

The play was just as efficient at the next two positions. Pat Slyman and Rob Manchester both made quick work of their foes.

Manchester, who breezed by Luke Grimshaw 6–4, 6–0 is clearly on a roll. He has been extremely tough to beat all season.

"I came out a little tentative today," Manchester said. But I quickly regained my confidence, and became much more aggressive."

Parsa Samii, newly placed at No.5 singles made a great impression on Coach Dixon. Samii knocked off Shaun Calvin with ease 6–2,6–4.

"I needed this win as a confidence booster," Samii said. Hopefully. I can really turn things around now."

Dixon even toyed with the idea of removing Samii from singles, but now his spot remains more solid.

"It was a great win for Parsa," Dixon said. "I'm really impressed that he stepped right into the five spot and handled a tough opponent like that."

The casualties of the afternoon were No. 4 Alex Aller losing in three sets, and Kevin Curley in straights.

Aller played a terrific match on the losing end. He took the first set over Adam Sadowski 6–4, but fell victim 4–6 and 2–6 thereafter.

"It wasn't a case of Alex not playing well," Dixon said.

His opponent simply played really good tennis towards the end."

For the second straight match, the Minutemen encountered and overcame poor sportsmanship from their opponents.

In the Boston University match as well as this one, many players took to taunting on the court.

"I have addressed our players on the subject of taunting," Dixon said. "I don't care what the other teams are doing, I will not allow our guys to partake in it."

"I tend to feed off of the insults," Manchester said. "It gets me going. that's the type of player I am.

Minutemen Notes: UMass (5–1) travels to Rhode Island on Friday to complete a rain interrupted match.

The St. John's home match was canceled last Wednesday. The new date for the match is yet to be determined.

After much juggling, Dixon will stick with the same lineup for the duration of the fall season. "It took a while, but I finally figured out the right positioning for everyone," Dixon said.

YVONNE YAN/ COLLEGIAN

The men's tennis team got back on track Friday by downing Connecticut 4–3.

The Jake awaits Indians' return

By John Affleck
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians are back where they want to be — in Jacobs Field, where the noise can rattle the decibel meter and high red socks are much in fashion.

Florida Marlins, brace yourselves.

Those teal-shirted folks and beach balls at Pro Player Stadium are cute, but these folks are rabid.

"You better get your earplugs because this place is really going to rock and shake," Indians fan Barbara McGraw said Monday as she waited to get autographs before practice.

The Jake will be primed tonight for Game 3, when the World Series resumes after a split of the opening two games in Miami.

The fans will stand from the first pitch. They'll beat a big bass drum. They'll wear those hiked up socks in imitation of their heroes. They'll yell themselves hoarse by the third inning. Anything to inspire the Indians in hopes of ending 49 years of frustration and bringing a World Series championship to this city. "I think it'll be the same as the other playoff games — only worse," said Carol Elkins, another autograph seeker.

While Jacobs Field is always packed — the 43,368-seat stadium sold out for all of Cleveland's regular-season games — the postseason has brought a new level of frenzy.

Since the final two games of the divisional series against the New York Yankees — when Cleveland came back to win after being four outs from elimination — the sonic power of the Indians fans has given a sense of inevitability to the outcome of each game. Indians players say it's been hard to lose with that kind of backing. They're expecting to get another boost, with the next three games played in Cleveland.

"Just all the energy coming from all those people is awesome," David Justice said. "They're watching every pitch, every play, and they make you want to play better."

Matt Williams agreed.

"The fact that I stand out there at third base every night and go home with a splitting headache is a tribute to our fans," he said. "They've been tremendous. They're raucous, yet they're knowledgeable."

John Adams, the Cleveland fan who sits in left field pounding a bass drum during rallies, said the racket has its roots in a town waiting for its first World Series title since 1948.

"There's a long-suffering crowd here," said Adams, who has been banging the drum at Cleveland games for 24 years. "People here have gone through the down times, so they savor and appreciate the good times. It isn't just a crowd that stands around and screams — any idiot can do that. Cleveland fans know the game." The question now is whether Indians fans top themselves. Can they actually get rowdier, notsier, more infatuated with their team?

Sure, saidCleveland fan Joe Novosielski.

"This is Jacobs Field," he said.

■ soccer

continued from page 10

"Liz has sort of held our program together the last four years, and she's played in a variety of roles that has helped solidify our side," Rudy said. "Sometimes, I'm sure it was not as satisfactory as she would have liked.

"But, she's never complained, and she's done nothing but be totally cooperative. She's the quintessential team player."

UM women take sixth

By Jim Eltringham
Collegian Staff

When asked to describe her team's performance in the recent New England Championships, Massachusetts women's cross-country coach Julie LaFreniere said, "It wasn't bad, but it wasn't what we expected."

Indeed, the end result was respectable, even if it did not reflect the team's best effort. The UMass squad finished sixth out of fifty schools with a 182 point effort. Providence (45 points) took first place honors, with Boston College (66) and Dartmouth (73) completing a nationally ranked top three. New Hampshire (144) and Harvard (172) finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

Each of the top two UMass finishers had excellent performances. Rebecca Donaghue filled a familar role as the first Minutewoman to cross the finish line, placing 16th overall with a time of 17:50. Christy Martin finished close behind at 17:54, good enough for 18th.

Donaghue's effort was especially encouraging, as her very presence at this meet was in doubt due to chronic heel problems which have bothered her for months.

"Rebecca has had some problems over the last two weeks," LaFreniere said. "We were lucky she was able to run with us on Saturday."

They were lucky, because after Donaghue and Martin, there was a noticable dropoff. Katie Greenia ran the course in 18:30, a distant 48th. Melissa Henderson finished 49th, just one second behind Greenia. Tracy Meagher rounded out UMass's top five with a time of 18:45 for a 63rd place finish.

"Katie Greenia did not have a good race," LaFreniere said. "In the past, she's run that course in 18:09."

Tracy Meagher's finish was also somewhat disappointing. "Tracy's been running closer to Katie, and she wasn't even close in this [race]," LaFreniere said.

"I think they're disappointed in themselves," LaFreniere said. "It's not that they didn't try... they ran as hard as they could. but it just wasn't there."

One bright spot was Melissa Henderson, who usually holds UMass' fifth or sixth spot, who managed to jump up to No. 4.

'Cinci cited in NCAA rule violations

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Starters Charles Williams and Ruben Patterson are among three Cincinnati basketball players declared ineligible yesterday by the university, which cited NCAA rules violations. Cincinnati uncovered the violations during a 10-month in-house probe of the program.

The university sent its final report to the NCAA, and asked that Williams, Patterson and reserve John Carson be cleared to play. The most serious violations involved Williams, a senior point guard. Athletic director Robert Goin thinks the eligibility of at least some of the three players could be restored before the season begins. They'll be allowed to practice with the team once they make financial restitution for favcrs improperly received.

The university also fired a basketball manager accused of helping Williams improperly and kept assistant coach John Loyer on paid suspension while the NCAA looks into the violations.

"It's a stink. It has a smell to it that's not good," Goin said of the infractions.

Coach Bob Huggins was not implicated and was not disciplined by the university. He declined to comment today, except to say he supports Goin.

The university acknowledged in its report to the NCAA that "the absence of appropriate administrative control over and within the men's basketball program created an atmosphere where violations of the type reported could and did occur."

Goin, recently appointed athletic director, said he is taking tighter control of the basketball program and will monitor it more closely.

The university took no further actions because it wants to wait to see how severe the NCAA judges the infractions, Goin said. "We know the NCAA is going to come in and take a look," Goin said.

Patterson, a forward, averaged 13.7 points and 5.6 rebounds last season, and was being counted on to fill the void created by the loss of Danny Fortson, who left after his junior year to enter the NBA draft.

Williams, a point guard, averaged 5 points and 2.2 rebounds. It was the investigation of Williams that led to the wider probe. The university's self-investigation began in January in response to an NCAA request for information about Williams' academic credits while he was a junior college student.

Williams was held out of competition from that point, missing the Bearcats' conference and NCAA tournament games.

STUDENT TRAVEL

STA Travel offers student discounts on domestic travel, too.

800-777-0112
www.sta-travel.com

STA Travel... the world's largest student travel organization.

STA TRAVEL We've been there.

TRAVEL SMART! FROM BOSTON

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON
$154	$287
PARIS
$209	$390
ROME
$266	$497
MADRID
$218	$407

Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

CD–ROM reveals the truth about UFOs

By Jeff Hnatio
Collegian Correspondent

UFO's: JUST THE FACTS
Sky Creative Media Group

UFO's: Just the Facts is a new multimedia CD-ROM (Sky Creative Media Group) which presents facts, photos, video clips, audio tapes and reference material on the subject of UFO's.

UFO's and UFO sites such as Area 51 and Roswell, N.M., have fascinated the public. According to a press release, a June 1997 CNN/Time poll showed that 80 percent of Americans believe that some UFO reports are true. Much of the current information on UFO's consists of unconfirmed reports and unsubstantiated research. This CD, however, presents documented facts and arguments while allowing the user to draw his or her own conclusions.

UFO's: Just the Facts contains a wealth of material on UFO's. From the main screen, one can explore a number of topics. The government documents section contains a number of "Top Secret" documents on the Roswell incident and UFO encounters. The history and validity of each document is examined by the editors. Other topics include a section on current research, a UFO photo gallery, film and video footage and UFO lore. There is also a special section on Roswell and Area 51.

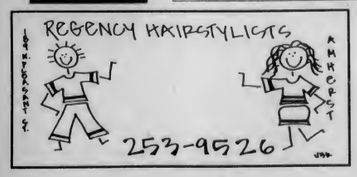
This CD is basically an encyclopedia of UFO phenomena. A broad range of topics are included. There are also large bibliography and documentation sections for more in-depth investigation.

UFO's: Just the Facts makes full use of its multimedia capabilities. There are over 300 photographs; it is difficult to find a screen without at least one photo or graphic. A number of short films of UFO's are included, two of which were filmed from a space shuttle. In addition, audio clips of eyewitness interviews are included in another section. There is also a website for users with even more photographs, film, and information.

Overall, this is an excellent CD. It is easy to install and very easy to navigate. A broad range of strange and fascinating topics are covered. The quality of the graphics and multimedia are excellent. The only drawback other than the price (suggested retail $49.95), is that, since it is a reference CD, most of the coverage goes into only moderate depth. A–

The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers to cover books, music, arts and more. If you're interested, come and talk to Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor or call 545–1491.

If you don't read ARTS & LIVING, you're missing the bus...



OOPS!

• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Good Thyme Deli
Conveniently Located Between Antonio's and Bucci's.
Buy one Soup or Sandwich Get one FREE!
w/this coupon
(Higher Price Prevails)
Amherst Store only. exp 11/10
Open 11-7:30 Monday-Friday 253-2774

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies
(413) 256-6425

• CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS •
DESIGNER CLOTHING
for WOMEN, MEN & CHILDREN
BED and BATH LINENS, HANDBAGS, JEWELRY, STATIONERY and GIFTS
50% to 80% OFF Original Department Store PRICES
THE STOCK ROOM
Mon-Sat 10:00-6:00
Closed Sunday
CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS
DKNY • LAUNDRY • RALPH LAUREN • JONES NY • GIAN BERNINI • AND MORE!

GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

General Membership Meeting
Where: Herter Rm. 210
When: October 21, 1997
Time: 7:30pm - 9:00pm
Activities for the semester will be discussed

amc There is a Difference!
$3.50 (Per-Less Show Daily)
• Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - Any initial screen 8:30 or any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Rocketman (PG) Today at 5:40 (5:50) and 8:20
Playing God (R) Today at 5:50 (5:50) and 8:20
L.A. Confidential (R) Today at 5:20 (5:50) and 8:10
I know What You Did Last Summer (R) Today at 5:30 (5:50) and 8:10

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7850
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R) Today at 5:40 (5:50) and 8:40
The Peacemaker (R) Today at 5:30 (5:50) and 8:30
U-Turn (R) Today at 8:30
In and Out (PG-13) Today at 5:50 (5:50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R) Today at 5:20 (5:50) and 8:30
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13) Today at 5:20 (5:50) and 8:20
Most Wanted (R) Today at 5:50 (5:50)

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
urges YOU Play Hard
Amherst 256-6446

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

SUBMIT YOUR POETRY! This winter's poetry reading @ Wheeler Art Gallery Call Abby @ 6-6066 or Jude 6-2954 for info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Pre-Vet/Animal Science Club Meeting Important topics and future events to be discussed. Wednesday, October 22. 7pm., Paige 202.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst- Charming 1 bedroom Excellent location, on bus route, available 11/1. $475. 549-8248

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Nissan Sentra 4 speed, 2 door, 35-40 miles per gallon. 172,000 miles. $950. 585-5041 after 6pm.

Toyota Cressida 84 4 door, fully loaded, automatic. Needs some work. $500. 549-8248.

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k. Fiberglass Shell Calif Truck. No rust. $4500. Call 582-9872.

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std, power everything. Very fast. $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 VW Maroon Rabbit Low mileage. 95% mint condition. $1400 or B/O. Call 584-2940

EMPLOYMENT

VIRGIN RECORDS COLLEGE REP POSITION Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at 310-288-2433. Soph or Jr with car preferred. Previous music industry experience a plus!

Arby's Hampshire Mall Now Hiring Part-time, flexible schedule, good pay. Apply in person

$1,000's WEEKLY!! Stuff envelopes at home for $2.00 each plus bonuses. F/T, P/T. Make $800+ weekly, guaranteed! Free supplies. For details, send one stamp to: N-113, 12021 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 552, Los Angeles, CA 90025

Needed Immediately Firestone of Northampton needs part-time Sales/Customer Service Rep. 25-30 hours a week. Starting salary $7.50 per hour. Call 586-1584

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

EMPLOYMENT

Rao's Coffee is hiring P/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

For Sale: One Elton John Tix Great seat. Call Enette @ (413)256-1734

For Sale- Canon BJ-EX Printer $160 or Best Offer. 665-7145

Macintosh Quadra 605 8/250 Includes monitor, keyboard, mouse, software, and printer. $575. Call Alyssa (413)545-4668 (days) (978)544-2837 (eves)

FOR SALE

2 Elton John Tickets For Sale. Call 256-6022

Toshiba 486 Laptop $500. (413)549-4753

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599.

Computers! Computers! Computers! The very best prices around! IBM Thinkpads Compac as well as printers, scanners, and supplies. Call File Management Solutions and ask for Jason 549-4850

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOR SALE

'Watch batteries, aar piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St, Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

FOUND

Found: Microecon Text on third floor Morrill I on Wed., Oct. 8th. Call 256-1734 to describe and claim.

INSTRUCTION

Kung-Fu-Spirit of the Heart offers new student introduction: 3 lessons and a T-shirt- $19.95! Convenient Northampton location. 585-1661

LOST

Lost Last Thursday: Lost T.A. File Folder for Pol Sci 162. Left in Tobin 204 last Thursday. Please return to Thompson Third Floor or call Steve Smith (413)238-5863

Lost: Glasses in the first floor bathroom of Bartlett on 10/15. If found please call The Collegian @ 545-3500.

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6. Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

FREE T-SHIRT + $1000 Credit Card fundraisers for fraternities, sororities & groups. Any campus organization can raise up to $1000 by earning a whopping $5.00/VISA application. Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65. Qualified callers receive FREE T-SHIRT.

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!! Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Earn $125 Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

WANTED

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Come and see us today!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad on file at the time the ad is placed. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

For Information

TUESDAY, OCT. 21

Colloquium — Adetoun Ilumoka, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from the Empowerment and Action Research Centre, Lagos, Nigeria, will give a colloquium entitled Making Tights Meaningful at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — The Index, UMass yearbook, will hold its weekly general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. Contact Jill Aordklan at 545-0848 for more information.

Meeting — The first mandatory organizational meeting for those interested in the new organization Best Buddies will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. The mission of Best Buddies is to enhance the lives of people with mental retardation by providing them with opportunities for socialization. All are welcome. For more information, contact Erin at 546-7137 or Ien at 549-6405.

Meeting — Amnesty International is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 904. For more information, call the office at 545-1925.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 22

Career Forum — The Political Science Honors Society is holding a Career Forum at 4:30 p.m. in the sixth floor lounge of Thompson. It is free and open to the public. Students interested in what their political science or liberal arts degree can be used for after graduation are encouraged to attend. For more information, Call Ramy at 253-8855 or Dan at 548-9780.

Discussion — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a panel discussion on "China, The U.S. and the Emerging World System." at 7:30 p.m. In Converse Hall at Amherst College.

Entertainment — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players will be performing at the New Africa House Library at 8 p.m. Free condoms are available.

Entertainment — Stories in the Sukkah, celebrate the harvest with story teller and Hillel Program Director, David Arfa from noon-12:45 p.m. at the Hillel House Sukkah.

Meeting — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. in Earthfoods in the Student Union. All are welcome.

Meeting — The Queen Fan Club will hold its first meeting of the semester at 5 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members welcome. For more information, contact Rosa at 546-5618 or email at rosakl@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 903. All are welcome, bring your own or someone else's poetry or just come and listen. Call Tim at 546-0819 or Chanel at 546-6301 for more information.

THURSDAY, OCT. 23

Book reading — Author James Carroll will read from his National Book Award winning memoir, An American Requiem at 4 p.m. at Food for Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — Intramural foul shooting and/or 3 point shot players meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249. Mandatory for all entered. Can enter at meeting.

Party — Simchat Torah party at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House. Celebrate the completion of the Torah cycle with food, fun and friends. Sponsored by Hillel.

Workshop — MISSION IMPROVable is offering an improv comedy workshop at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. All levels welcome.

NOTICES

Auditions — Channel 19 News anchor and reporter auditions are being held on Tues., Oct. 21 from 5–7 p.m. and Wed., Oct. 22 from 6–8 p.m. Call UVC-TV 19 to schedule an appointment at 545–1336, which is located in the Student Union, room 216 behind the Hatch. Sample writings are preferred but not required. Positions open to all UMass undergraduate students.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation of Fri., Oct. 24. The free one–hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545–0950 or check out www.umass.edu/flangctr

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec., 7 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406c or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Fri., Oct. 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wed., Oct. 1, at http://www- ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups is happening now. Call 577–5316 for more information.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, NH on Fri., Oct. 24–26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545–2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech, voice, auditions on Sat., Oct. 25 at 11 a.m. In the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. RSVP by Oct. 24 call 545–0415.

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by:

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 International
14 UMass Academic TV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN SI
25 Headline News
26 UCTV
27 TBS
28 BET
28 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

545-3500

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 21, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova "Bomb Squad" (In Stereo)		Stephen Hawking's Universe		Frontline "Behind the Mask: The IRA and the Sinn Fein" (R)
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV (R)	JAG "The King of the Peas" (R)		Michael Hayes "Heroes" (R)		Dellaventura "Clean Slate" (R)	News (R)		Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Extra (R)	Ent. Tonight	JAG "The King of the Peas" (R)		Michael Hayes "Heroes" (R)		Dellaventura "Clean Slate" (R)	News (R)		Late Show (R)
WGVB	5	(5) News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Soul Man (R)	Over the Top	Home Imp.	Hiller-Diller	Love, Lust and Marriage	News (R)		Nightline (R)
WLVI	6	Full House (R)	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "RoboCop" (1987, Science Fiction) Peter Weller				News	Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	World Series Game 3 – Atlanta Braves of Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News	LAPD		Tonight Show
WTXX		(8) Cheers (R)	Cheers (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Grace Under	Clueless (R)	Moesha (R) (R)	Clueless (R)	Moesha (R) (R)	News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT		(30) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	World Series Game 3 – Atlanta Braves of Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News		Simpsons (R)	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	(11) Home Imp.	Simpsons (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	★★½ "Addams Family Values" (1993, Comedy) Anjelica Huston...				News		Simpsons (R)	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	World Series Game 3 – Atlanta Braves of Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(6) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova "Bomb Squad" (In Stereo)		Frontline "Behind the Mask: The IRA and the Sinn Fein" (R)					Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28 News (R)	ABC News	Women-Health	Frasier (R)	Soul Man (R)	Over the Top	Hooca Imp.	Hiller-Diller	Love, Lust and Marriage		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Viper "Hidden Agenda" (R)		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Edmonton Oilers. (Live)
WTBS	42	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach (R)	Coach (R)	★★ "White Fang" (1991, Adventure) Klaus Maria Brandauer.				★★★ "The Sword in the Stone" (1963) Voices of Ricky Sorenson.
A&E	40	Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order (R)		Biography: Reis Haryworth		Jane Eyre (R) (R)					Biography
CNN	43	(21) WorldView (R)		Moneyline (R)	Crossfire (R)	Prime News (R)	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live (R)		World Today (R)		Sports Illus.	Moneyline (R)
COM	44	(26) Comic Cabana	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Bill Maher-Funny		Young Comedians (R)		Viva Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52	Wings (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Good, Bad		New Detectives (R)		Strictly Supernatural		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	45	Up Close	Sportscenter		World Dog Show	Gymnastics International Team Championships. (R)						B3 - Bikes, Blades & Boards	Sportscenter
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Darkness Before Dawn" (1993, Drama) Meredith Baxter.				Homicide: Life on the Street (R)
MTV	53	MTV Live	Viewers	Mattrock (R) (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Beavis-Butt.	Apt. 3F (R)	Oddville, MTV	Loveline (R)
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years (Bewitched		I Love Lucy (R)	Odd Couple (R)	Taxi (R)	Newhart (R)
SCIFI	59	Twilight Zone (R)		Gatlaca	Amaz. Stories	Seaquest 2032 "Equilibrium" (R)		★½ "The Brides of Dracula" (1960, Horror) Peter Cushing.				Gatlaca	Amaz. Stories
TLC	72	28 Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma II: Life in the ER		Marilyn: What Happened? (R)		Survival in the Sky (R)		Trauma II: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		"Hope" (1997, Drama) Christine Lahti. (In Stereo) (R)				★★½ "Dracula" (1968, Drama) Bela Miller, Barbara Hershey. (In Stereo) (R)			Silk Stalkings
USA	47	Baywatch "Days and Dolls" (R)		Highlander: The Series (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★ "Director" (1968, Drama) Bette Miller, Barbara Hershey. (In Stereo) (R)					Silk Stalkings
HBO	60	"Happily Ever		★★½ "Sabrina" (1995, Comedy) Harrison Ford, Julia Ormond. (In Stereo) PG (R)				"The Maker" (1997, Suspense) Matthew Modine. (In Stereo) R (R)				Oz "A Game of Checkers" (R) (R)
MAX	61	(5:00)		★★ "Sioo" (1996) Mario Van Peebles. PG-13 (R)		★★★ "Chasy" (1963, Drama) Cliff Robertson, Claire Bloom. PG				★★★½ "The Hunt for Red October" (1990) Sean Connery. PG (R)
SHOW	65	(5:25) ★★★ "Mod Flanders" (1996) Robin Wright.		★½ "Jury Duty" (1995) Pauly Shore. PG-13 (R)				★★½ "Kingpin" (1996, Comedy) Woody Harrelson. PG-13 (R)				Fast Track (R)	Women

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

8 Years In Braces By Eric Petersen

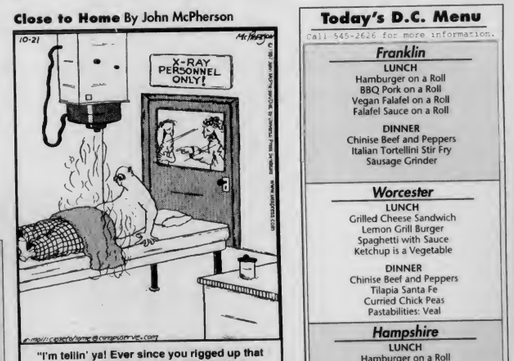
Non Sequitor By Wiley

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I'm tellin' ya! Ever since you rigged up that smoke machine under the table, I just can't wait to get to work every day!"

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Does it seem to you that time is moving faster than usual today? You may be overtaken by those who are maintaining a faster pace.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You mustn't let yourself get so busy today that you forget to do the few things that a loved one has asked of you. Make lists, if you must!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You have more choices than you think at this time. Concentrate on doing what feels right, and you'll discover that you can't go wrong.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Make an early start today and you won't have to build to such a pace that you can't keep up with yourself. Maintain steady progress all day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You are getting in the swing of things, or so the experts say. You may not feel fully confident just yet — but you will, in time.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You are getting your second wind at this time, and you should be able to go the distance. You will need some R–and–R in the next few days.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You are going to have to work hard to keep things straight today. There will be many details to organize as you progress. Get help!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Your fun may be another person's distraction today, so you're going to have to compromise before a crisis develops.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Meet with those who play important roles in your affairs, and you'll realize that not everyone is on the same page. This can be remedied.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You will receive an important piece of information today. Whether or not you recognize it for what it is depends on your ability to make connections.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — The answers are available to you, but if you feel you're not getting closer to them you may want to re–assess your methods. Change can do you good.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — The meaningless may actually become quite important to you before the day is out, carrying with it a valuable meaning.

Quote of the Day

"War is the only lover of men; Her arms are always open."

–Sun Tsu

ACROSS
1 Pluckier
6 Hits: slang
10 Physicist's particle
13 Spew
14 Woodwind
15 Songwriters Rodgers and —
16 Concise
17 Vista
18 Egyptian symbol of life
19 H.H. Munro's pen name
20 Rainwater receptacle
22 Wooded
24 The Gobi, e.g.
28 Tom Mix movies
31 Hebrew scroll
32 Aptitudes
34 Long time
36 Sulk
37 Kind of humor
38 Solar storm
41 Noise
42 Imported car
44 "Anne of Green Gables" foe
45 Yawned
47 Bee bite
49 Puzzle
51 Listened
53 Wave
56 Indy racer
Fittipaldi
59 Rant and —
61 Cul. as grass
64 Favor
65 Existed
66 Single quantity
67 Floor-covering piece
68 — out: stretching
69 Follow persistently
70 Toboggan
71 Medicinal plant

DOWN
1 Acquires
2 Territories
3 Like troubled waters?
4 Greek letter
5 Map abbr.
6 Of cows
7 Kimono sashes
8 Writer of verse
9 Basted
10 007 creator Fleming
11 Monk's planet
12 To the — degree
15 Horse-drawn cab
20 Condiment
21 Soak (flax)
23 Tubs
25 Wash away
26 Fast
27 "And — some?"
29 Varnish ingredient
30 Drench
32 Kind of force
33 Singer Gorme
35 Head, slangily
37 Pinch of salt
39 Formerly named
40 Pack firmly
43 Start a paragraph
46 Spice-rack item
48 Jewel
50 Pressed
52 Sums owed
54 Actress Linda —
55 Odds and —
57 Stir up
58 Part of a foot
60 Nervous
61 Type of bath
62 Singer Yoko
63 Disguise item
65 Permit

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

P	U	C	E		T	R	E	E	D		C	H	A	R
A	N	O	N		U	N	A	N	E		R	U	G	E
S	T	I	R		N	A	S	A	L		O	S	H	A
S	T	O	R	M	S		E	C	L	I	P	S	E	D
E	E	R	I	E		A	L	T	A	R	S
		E	G	O	S		K	U	D	O	S
R	A	M	S		O	H	M		A	I	S	E	D
O	V	A		P	E	A	C	H		A	T	T	A
V	I	S	O	R	S		O	R	E		T	R	O	Y
E	S	S	A	Y			A	M	I	E
		T	A	L	L	O	W		C	A	B	L	E
C	H	I	M	N	E	Y	S		C	Y	C	L	O	N
O	I	S	E		E	R	A	S	E		H	A	N	G
O	K	L	A		R	I	G	I	D		E	R	I	E
P	E	E	L		S	C	E	N	E		R	E	N	D

10-21-97 © 1997 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
BBQ Pork on a Roll
Vegan Falafel on a Roll
Falafel Sauce on a Roll

DINNER
Chinise Beef and Peppers
Italian Tortellini Stir Fry
Sausage Grinder

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Lemon Grill Burger
Spaghetti with Sauce
Ketchup is a Vegetable

DINNER
Chinise Beef and Peppers
Tilapia Santa Fe
Curried Chick Peas
Pastabilities: Veal

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
BBQ Pork Rib Sandwich
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich

DINNER
Chinise Beef and Peppers
Chicken Stew

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chef's Grilled Cheese
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Ziti/ Tomato Sauce
Pad Thai

DINNER
Chinise Beef and Peppers
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Curried Chick Peas
Pastabilities: Stuffed Shells

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technition — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra von Ziegesar
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Kraay, Joe Savitch

SPORTS

Hanson strikes out, series lacks x-factor

God Bless America!

For the second year in a row, the singing of the national anthem before the first game of the World Series was an abomination.

Somebody who is soon-to-be-demoted in the Florida Marlins organization, using the discretion of a teenage girl, lined up pop sensation Hanson to grace the masses at Pro Player Stadium Saturday night.

Wasn't it past their bed-time?

Regardless, the Partridge Family of the '90s (sans mommy on the tambourine, or whatever) "Mmm-bopped" their way to stardom and out onto the diamond to officially commence a still much-hallowed and beloved American institution.

The three little girls... I mean boys, were booed off the field — after they were done, of course, because the fans at least have respect for the national

Fred Hurlbrink Jr.
on
Major League Baseball

anthem. They were taunted more fiercely than Wally the Green Monster was after his brief Fenway appearance. And rightly so, nobody wants to hear a trio of pre-pubescent "rock stars" belting out high-pitched harmonies before the most storied sporting event in the history of America.

Where's the love?

Anyway, Gloria Estefan was a vast improvement for Game Two, if only aesthetically. But, her Latin heritage brought to the forefront an interesting question.

How much does the Star-Spangled Banner really affect the players at the beginning of games?

As the NBC cameras panned around in the dugouts and on the field to capture the emotion and concentration in players' faces, a pattern arose. A great deal of this year's World Series participants aren't American-born ball players.

Livan Hernandez, the 21-year-old fire-baller who was the Marlins' MVP in the League Championship Series, is a Cuban defector. Moises Alou, a Dominican-born outfielder, belted a three-run homer in Game One. Sandy Alomar is also of Latin heritage and has been a key factor in the Indians' fortunes during the playoffs.

This is not a racial or ethnic problem. It's just curious that these players, in principal, are supposed to be affected — emotionally spurred — in some way by listening to the words Francis Scott Key penned some 185 years ago.

These players — displaying diversity in heritage and talents — are what make baseball a great game, but you have to wonder if a bunch of long blonde-haired teenagers squeaking out Key's epic poem means anything to the non-American players.

It wasn't all that stirring for many Americans.

• It's peculiar to not see the Braves in the series, or David Cone pitching for the pennant contender he was recently traded to. Nonetheless, this Fall Classic has all the fixins' to go down as just that — a bona fide classic.

The Marlins and the Indians both scrapped their way through the playoffs, and found themselves in the series. Neither team has yet to be at a loss for pitching, great defense or timely hits.

What both teams are lacking, however, is an X-factor.

That one guy, that one presence who can make a good team a great one just by putting on the uniform. There will be no Greg Maddux on the mound or Ken Griffey at the plate — neither combatant in this tussle possesses any advantage of the sort.

What do they have?

Both teams have superior up-the-middle defense anchored by Alomar and Florida's prodigy Charles Johnson. At shortstop Edgar Renteria is outdone by only a few in the league, one of those is Omar Vizquel. In center field Marquis Grissom and Devon White chase flies with the best of them.

Not one of these guys is a superstar, a guy who is capable of taking over a series.

Both teams have immeasurable veteran leadership with names like Dutch Daulton, Matt Williams, Dave Justice and Bobby Bonilla littering the rosters.

But none of these guys has proven he can carry a team through the playoffs at this stage in his respective career.

Each team has quality pitching down the board — quality in equal parts experience, talent and grit. Orel Hershiser and Charles Nagy, Kevin Brown and the young Hernandez.

Each of these hurlers has yet to unquestionably dominate in consecutive appearances even.

So, how did these teams get here?

Easy. The fact that all those names have had an impact on the playoffs and yet so many names have been left out.

Tony Fernandez?
Greg Counsell?
Chad Ogea?

Let there be no mistake about it. These are two great teams — great teams without great players. Kinda makes you wonder why Albert Belle gets paid so much when Brian Giles is the left fielder making a difference in the series.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Women's soccer seniors look to leave UMass on top

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

A young, yet sort of wise, man once said that there's no better end than a good end in the end.

And if you're left with your wits intact after spinning through that mad web of rhetoric, then you get the gist of the last two home matches of the season for the No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team.

The four Minutewoman seniors (13-2, 9-0 in Atlantic 10) bid goodbye this past weekend with two straight 2-1 wins over Dayton and Xavier, helping UMass to a 59-17-3 record over their careers. But, on the other hand, UMass had to fight through two straight tactically anemic first halves to pull those victories out.

In the end for the seniors, though, it was all good.

This season has been like that for senior defender Amy Burrill, goalkeeper Danielle Dion, defender Erica Iverson and defender/midfielder/forward Liz Rutherford, and in the end, all of them will be considered winners. However, the road toward a hopeful 1997 NCAA Tournament resolution has been paved with a series of on the field battles.

For two-thirds of the tri-captainship, those battles have not been so bad for Dion and Iverson, and the UMass defense has dealt with the graduation of All-American Erin Lynch admirably. But, due to injuries to junior Robin Smith and Burrill, Iverson has filled spots from the right flank to central defense to midfield this season, and Dion actually gave up three goals in one match this season.

What's that again? Yep, three goals in one match on Oct. 4th against St. Joseph's of all teams — that's got to hurt. Substitution-itis had its bloody grip on coach Jim Rudy that day, and he's probably still apologizing to his senior keeper.

For Iverson, Senior Day was bittersweet. The last true home match for her was last season at the history-rich Richard F. Garber Field, and this weekend seemed to be a metaphor of her career — tough, but in the end, kind.

"The last two home matches were kind of what UMass is all about, and its kind of a summary of my whole career here," Iverson said, with a deep sigh. "Having to fight games out, and coming through and giving it all until the end.

"I really thought I would be more emotional, but all the emotion went out with Garber. This is almost an away field for me. This was just the last game in front of friends."

For Burrill and Rutherford, the battles they've faced have been quite more difficult. Burrill had to watch both games this weekend from the bench, recovering from a knee injury suffered two weeks ago at Temple. Her recovery has been miraculous, with the "season-ending" injury resulting in Burrill being seen jogging around during warmups, and smacking her customary bullet-like shots into the net.

The Newton native has kind of been the outsider looking in not just this weekend, but for the last three weeks of this season. The team has welcomed the two-time Div. II All-American transfer from Barry University with open arms, but her problems are not with the team, but her knee.

"I only have so many games left, and I want to help the team as much as I can," Burrill said. "There have been a set of unfortunate circumstances that have held me back all season long, and I'm wondering when it's going to be right.

"When will it finally click, and when is it going to work for me? I'm a senior, but today was more for Danielle, Liz and Erica, and they definitely deserve it."

The only thing Rudy wants more than a NCAA berth is the return of Burrill to his lineup. Her timely scoring has netted two game-winners for the Minutewomen this season, and her presence on the left side is missed.

"Amy was a nice surprise for us," Rudy said. "Having someone with that level of experience and repertoire of abilities to come to our program out of the blue...we'd definitely be a lot less without her. When we get her back, and we will, we'll be lot more of a team."

Rutherford has never had a major injury, but also has never had a starting spot in the UMass lineup. After three years of role playing (being the proverbial monkey-wrench for the Minutewomen), the tri-captain has been given that starting spot this season, and she has not disappointed.

"It's fantastic being a senior, and having this be your last two home games...I couldn't imagine it ending any better," Rutherford said. "Wherever the coach tells me to play, I'll play. I love the team, and UMass."

If Rudy is the straw stirring the drink, then Rutherford has been the piece holding the puzzle together.

Turn to SOCCER page 7

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Senior Liz Rutherford has helped the Massachusetts women's soccer team to a 13-2 record this season.

Minuteman water polo puts chink in California armor

By Jim Eltringham
Collegian Staff

The Californian dominance of the sport was at least put in question by the No. 14 Massachusetts men's water polo team this past weekend.

The Minutemen won a pair of matches on their five-game trip, but more importantly did not allow any team to completely dominate them, playing in only one lopsided match all weekend.

The west-coast swing began Friday night in Berkeley, where the Minutemen fell to No. 3 California, 12-7. On Sat., No. 2 USC beat the Minutemen soundly 13-4, but UMass defeated No. 10 Long Beach State, 10-9. No. 12 UC-Davis fell to the Minutemen on Sun., 13-10, but UC-Santa Barbara snuck past UMass, 10-7.

Cal had its hand full with a hungry UMass squad. The first quarter ended with a 2-1 advantage favor of UMass, but all hopes of an upset were shattered in the second period, when the Golden Bears fired five goals into the net. Despite a three-goal fourth quarter rally, the barrage proved to be too much. Offensive stars for UMass included junior Brian Stahl, who netted four goals. Richard Huntley was solid in goal with nine saves.

Saturday morning brought the beginning of the prestigious, 16-team NorCal Tournament. Stahl's hat trick was almost all the offense the Minutemen could muster against USC, and despite Huntley's nine saves, UMass' defense was overmatched by the Trojans' firepower.

The competition was not much easier that evening, when the team clashed with Long Beach State. This time, however, UMass won in an overtime thriller. Huntley notched another nine saves, while five different Minutemen beat the Long Beach goalkeeper. Gabriel Marrero led the offensive charge with three goals.

Sunday was far from a day of rest for the Minutemen, as they faced yet another pair of match-ups with nationally ranked teams. The morning brought on UC-Davis. UMass opened with a bang, scoring five times in the first frame. The Aggies responded with four goals in each of the next two periods, but the Minutemen held on for the upset. Once again, Stahl was the offensive leader, this time with five goals. Troupis added three and Huntley posted another spectacular effort with 11 saves.

UMass wrapped up it's NorCal Tournament appearance Sunday night, losing a close decision to Santa Barbara. The Minutemen posted a 2-2 record in the tournament and a 2-3 mark for the weekend, leaving season won-loss count at 19-7.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

The UMass water polo team went 2-3 on the weekend, as they beat Long Beach St. 10-9 and UC-Davis 13-10.

UM cross country takes 15th in N.E. Championships

By Scott Hamill
Collegian Correspondent

With one meet left in the season, Massachusetts cross- country coach Ken O'Brien sees his team as much improved from a month ago.

This past weekend his squad travelled to Franklin Park in Boston for the New England Championships. Their performance was not much above or below O'Brien's current expectations, which are higher now that UMass has avenged some earlier defeats. While placing 15th out of 36 teams, the Minutemen out-ran Atlantic 10 foes Rhode Island, Vermont and Maine, all of which had defeated UMass earlier this year. With only the A-10 Championship meet remaining, the Minutemen's stock has risen since the beginning of the season.

For the first time this year, sophomore Peter Gleason paced the UMass squad, placing 43rd overall. Ryan Carrara, 57th; Kevin Somers, 64th; Brian Chabot, 130th; and Brendan Sullivan, 149th; rounded out the top five for the Minutemen. Gleason covered the 10-K course in 25:04. O'Brien is pleased with the performances of Gleason and Somers, describing their races as the highlights of their seasons.

Carrara, meanwhile, had a tough day, not finishing as the top UMass runner for the first time this season, although that doesn't alarm Coach O'Brien.

"Ryan finishing second isn't significant. He's been a great runner for four years, he deserves to have an off day," O'Brien said.

As for the timing of that off day, O'Brien is equally unalarmed, knowing that his star will bounce right back for the A-10 Championships in two weeks.

With those A-10 Championships looming two weeks away, O'Brien is still searching for a strong performance from his fourth and fifth runners. Carrara has been strong all season, and Gleason and Somers have stepped up recently, but in cross-country, the fourth and fifth guys are just as important as the top three.

"It would have been a real good day if we had two runners finish around 75th," said O'Brien

Even though that concerns him, O'Brien remains optimistic about the season.

"If we continue to improve in the next two weeks at the rate we've improved in the last two weeks, I like our chances," O'Brien said.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 35 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, October 22, 1997

Live Stones is pure "Satisfaction"

After over 30 years, the Rolling Stones, proved the other night that it's still rock and roll. Check out our review of their Foxboro show (see Arts & Living, page 6).

You have to love it

Senior co-captain Tim Lovell leads the Massachusetts hockey team into Friday's season opener against Lowell (see Sports, page 8).

WORLD

Mexican President vows to get tough

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — Mexico's president promised yesterday to get tough on attacks against the media, vowing before the largest press group in the Americas to try harder to solve journalist slayings.

"Today, I reaffirm my government's unswerving conviction to defend the press and the people's right to free information," President Ernesto Zedillo told the annual meeting of the Inter-American Press Association.

His address before some 500 IAPA editors and publishers came in the wake of an increase in killings, beatings and other abuses of journalists in Mexico. Three of the 10 journalists slain in the Americas during the past six months were killed in Mexico. Zedillo alluded to deficiencies in Mexico's criminal justice system and past missteps in investigating journalist killings, but emphasized that he had turned over important cases to the government's National Human Rights Commission.

More than 170 journalists have been killed across Latin America in the past decade, and most of their cases remain unsolved. Zedillo vowed to punish those responsible for such crimes in his country "with the full rigor of the law."

NATION

Ansell recalls millions of defective condoms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ansell Personal Products recalled batches of three brands of its condoms yesterday after discovering that some may break.

Some 57 million condoms from the Lifestyles, Prime and Contempo brands were subject to the recall, the Food and Drug Administration said.

"That doesn't mean there are 57 million bad condoms," emphasized FDA spokeswoman Sharon Snider.

But when New Jersey-based Ansell discovered that some condoms could deteriorate before their expiration dates, it couldn't predict exactly which batches were at risk. So to be safe, it recalled every variety in question, Snider said.

The FDA urged consumers to check their condoms to ensure they had not already bought the recalled brands.

The agency also urged consumers to check the expiration dates on all condoms, because using any expired brand poses the risk that the user may not be adequately protected against pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases.

Recalled were:

•LifeStyles Ultra Sensitive with Spermicide, expiration date October 1997.

•Lifestyles Assorted Colors with Spermicide, expiration dates October 1997 through June 1998.

•Lifestyles Spermicidally Lubricated, expiration dates October 1997 through October 1998.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 32	HIGH:39 LOW: 32	HIGH: 46 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

SGA hopes for larger voter turn–out today

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) will try for a a second time today to hold elections for the 1997-1998 academic year at the University of Massachusetts.

Not only did the SGA post more flyers and posters around campus for this election, they also helped the candidates themselves curb the expenses of running for office, in an effort to boost voter turnout.

"The SGA directed SCERA (Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy) to put together a campaign to inform students. The [referendum] questions will really get people out to vote," said Jason Vecchio, student coordinator for SCERA.

Candidates are running for a total of 75 senatorial seats on campus. Each seat represents 250 students on campus as well as off campus. In residence halls which house over 250 students, there will be a senator who specifically represents that building, while all other buildings will be represented by "at large" senators.

Voters may vote for one candidate running to represent their building if one exists, and one "at large" candidate.

Also on the ballot will be five referendum questions written by student trustee Brian Tirrell and SGA president Lia Wong.

"I feel students need to be discussing and thinking about these issues," Tirrell said.

A mass e-mail also went out to all undergraduates by the SGA under the account of Allen Brainerd, director of finance and business services. The e-mail urged students to vote and briefly outlined the referendum questions.

The results of the five referendum questions will determine how the SGA will stand on these volatile issues throughout the semester. Regardless of the individual opinions of SGA members, Wong is promising to stand behind the student vote.

"As representatives of the student body, we will stand by their vote whatever it may be," Wong said.

The questions are:

1. Do you want video cameras in the lobbies of residence halls?

2. Do you support students being able to have legal council (lawyers) to defend them in university judicial hearings that may result in eviction, suspension or expulsion?

3. Should the Student Government Association support an Honors College at the University of Massachusetts?

4. Should the Student Government Association challenge the University's Picketing Code Guidelines?

5. Should the entire University campus be alcohol free?

Wong's questions from the first election mainly concerned issues of wording within the SGA constitution, and she has since changed them to address current issues on campus.

Wong had no comment about the changes.

Tar man

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

As part of the roof renovation at Stockbridge, Fran LaForest from Monson, Mass. brings a barrel of tar up to workers yesterday morning.

Results of study shows support for integrating women into the military

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 80 percent of the women in the military and half the enlisted men favor ending a policy that keeps women from serving in ground combat units, according to a study released by the Pentagon yesterday.

The study, conducted over a three-month period in the past year by the Rand Corp., found that a majority of both sexes favor integrated basic training.

Only the Marine Corps segregates men and women in basic training.

The issues of same-sex training and women in the military have come under increased scrutiny in Congress in recent months, particularly after the Army's numerous sexual harassment cases and courts-martial.

From 1992 to 1994, Congress and civilian military leaders took a number of steps to open a broad range of positions in the military to women, including flying in combat aircraft.

A total of 259,199 such positions were opened up in that time, but Pentagon officials said yesterday they could not say exactly how many of those jobs had been taken by women.

The new study, which was paid for by the Pentagon, was conducted by Rand's National Defense Research Institute after Congress ordered the Pentagon to review the extent and effect of the integration of women into the military.

In a summary of the study provided by the Pentagon and Rand, researchers Margaret C. Harrell and Laura L. Miller reported that bringing women into units that previously had been closed to them apparently had little effect on those units' ability to do their job.

Turn to MILITARY, page3

Monthly trade deficit grows to record high

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's monthly trade deficit ballooned to $10.4 billion as imports of toys and Christmas decorations pushed the trade gap with China to an all-time high just before the U.S.-China summit.

The widening deficit in August reported yesterday was the worst showing in seven months and came at an inopportune time for President Clinton, who is trying to sell a reluctant Congress on the virtues of free trade while also preparing for the state visit next week of Chinese President Jiang Zemin.

The administration hopes the summit will showcase closer ties between the two countries.

The U.S. appetite for imports from all countries hit a new record in August. On the export side, sales of commercial jetliners, normally a bright spot in the trade picture, fell by $888 million from July.

While emphasizing progress with China on a number of issues, Commerce Secretary William Daley said China's continued refusal to open its huge market to more American goods remained a "major concern" and would be a key topic during the summit.

"Our exports [to China] just aren't growing at the rate they should," Daley told reporters at a briefing on the trade figures. "That will not continue without there being a political reaction. And we've tried to stress this repeatedly."

Trade won't be the only sour note in next week's summit. Other points of potential conflict include human rights abuses in China, continued U.S. support for Taiwan and the continuing congressional investigations into Asian campaign donors.

Daley, who was in Beijing two weeks ago preparing the trade portion of the summit, said the administration would continue to press the Chinese to consider American firms for a range of projects from telecommunications to energy.

But trade experts said that even if American companies manage to land a few contracts next week, it will do little to narrow the huge gap between what China sells here and

Turn to DEFICIT, page 3

U.S. favors ban on travel to Iraq

Sanction is response to Iraq's refusal of U.N. weapon inspection

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The only Arab member of the Security Council joined France and Russia yesterday in opposing new sanctions against Iraq, while Secretary of State Madeleine Albright lobbied in favor of the punitive measures.

The United States and Britain want to impose a limited foreign travel ban on Iraq for refusing to cooperate with U.N. inspectors, who are trying to find out if Baghdad has ended efforts to build long-range missiles as well as chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

But Egypt announced yesterday it opposes the travel ban. And France and Russia, who have negotiated lucrative oil deals with Iraq that take effect when the sanctions are lifted, have little interest in adding measures to those already in place.

Russia's foreign ministry spokesman, Gennady Tarasov, said Moscow believes that Iraq's behavior does not deserve new punitive measures. He said that "the international community must meet Baghdad halfway," meaning refrain from new sanctions.

U.S. diplomats circulated a revised draft on a travel ban against Iraqi military and intelligence officers that would go into effect April 12 unless U.N. inspectors certify "that Iraq is in complete compliance" with U.N. demands.

The Associated Press obtained a copy of the proposal, which the council was to discuss late yesterday.

The diplomatic battle was the latest in a six-year campaign to force Baghdad to comply with terms ending the 1991 Gulf War. The council ordered Iraq to destroy all weapons of mass destruction and disclose all information on those programs.

When those conditions are met, the council will lift a crippling oil embargo and other economic sanctions imposed after President Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait.

The United Nations expected to complete the inspections within a year. But arms inspectors say the program has continued because of Iraqi efforts to hinder them. Those complaints were repeated in the most recent U.N. weapons report, submitted this month by the chief arms inspector, Richard Butler of Australia.

Yesterday, Egyptian deputy Foreign Minister Seyed Kassem el-Misry said Cairo wants Iraq to comply with U.N. orders "but it also keen to see the sufferings of the Iraqi people come to an end."

Arab countries have long complained that the Security Council is quick to clamp sanctions on Muslim countries such Iraq and Libya, but has stood by while Israel has ignored some council resolutions for more than 20 years.

France and Russia are permanent council members — along with the United States, Britain and China — and can veto any resolution. Egypt is not a permanent member, and has no veto. But it is considered influential among the other Third World members. By making the sanctions next April automatic, the United States hopes to avoid the problem which developed after the last major crisis with Iraq in June, when the United States and Britain first attempted to impose a travel ban. But the Russians threatened to veto it.

But President Clinton convinced Russian President Boris Yeltsin at the time to consider new sanctions if the Iraqis refused to comply by October.

KEN MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN

Things that make you go hmmm...

Chris Higgins (right), the technical director of the Tempest and John Brady (left), a senior theater major construct a ladder in the Curtain Theater yesterday for the upcoming production.

Campus Police Log

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 17
Individuals sitting on a car refused to move for the owner.
Objects were being thrown from windows in Field Residence Hall.
Individuals were smoking and drinking in the halls in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Oct. 19
A vehicle in parking lot 43 on Eastman Lane was broken into. A radar detector was stolen.

Disturbance
Oct. 18
Scott C. Fleury, 18, 43 Woodmont St., of West Springfield and Adam S. Rochman, 15 Contempra Circle, Tappan, NY, were arrested on Hicks Way for indecent exposure.
Oct. 19
Joseph David Phenix, 18, 370 Sharps Lot Rd., Swansea, and Robert P. Oberlander, 17, 49 Franklin St., Peabody were arrested in Kennedy Hall for disturbing the peace.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Oct. 17
Ryan N. Lynch, 19, 8 Wayside Ave., of Byfield was arrested on Eastman Lane for domestic assault and battery.

Larceny
Oct. 14
A bicycle was reported stolen from a bike rack at Patterson Residence Hall.
Oct. 15
An individual reported luggage stolen from his room in Knowlton Residence Hall.
A bicycle was reported stolen from Washington Residence Hall.
A bicycle was reported stolen from Goessman Annex.
A bicycle was reported stolen from Kennedy Residence Hall.
Oct. 17
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
A bicycle chained to a wooden fence on Kennedy Road was reported stolen.
An individual reported fraudulent use of his credit cards.
A backpack containing software was reported stolen from Boyden Gym.
Oct. 18
An individual reported his passport stolen from Lewis Residence Hall.
Oct. 19
Parking signs were stolen from parking lot 43 on Eastman Lane.
Oct. 20
A delivery person reported theft of a pizza from Cashin Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Oct. 14
Raul F. Silva, 36, 346 Walnut Ave., of Roxbury, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and making an improper turn.

Vandalism
Oct. 14
A State vehicle was damaged on Tillson Farm Road.
Homophobic graffiti was written on a poster in Patterson Residence Hall.
Ivan P. Brightly, 22, 124 Ingleside Ave., Worcester, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for malicious destruction of property of more than $250.
Oct. 17
A swastika was written on an elevator wall in McNamara Residence Hall.
Housing services was notified of a sink ripped from wall in the bathroom of Kennedy Residence Hall.
Oct. 18
A vehicle parked on Infirmary Way had its tires slashed.
Pictures of a naked woman were drawn on the walls in Brooks Residence Hall.
Homophobic graffiti was written on a door in Patterson Residence Hall.

Check out the collegian online at: www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

AXIS

NEW!

It's the 5-college Web site designed and written by students ... for students!

AXIS gives you easy access to news and features from all 5 campuses ... on one fun site. Click on:

- X campus news
- X career center
- X entertainment
- X club scene
- X dining guide
- X movie reviews
- X contests & more!

www.gazettenet.com/axis

GazetteNET is the Web site of the Daily Hampshire Gazette

CHEAP TICKETS INC.®
America's Travel Store...Since 1986

RESERVATIONS: Open 7 Days a Week Mon. - Fri. to Midnight Sat - Sun. to 10:00 PM

Scheduled Major Carriers NO CHARTERS!

DOMESTIC		DOMESTIC
Albuquerque, NM	$329 rt	San Francisco, CA	$329 rt
Atlanta, GA	$149 rt	San Jose, CA	$329 rt
Baltimore, MD	$143 rt	Sarasota, FL	$159 rt
Colorado Springs, CO	$329 rt	Seattle, WA	$329 rt
Daytona Beach, FL	$159 rt	Tampa, FL	$159 rt
Ft. Lauderdale, FL	$149 rt	Washington Dulles, DC	$143 rt
Ft. Myers, FL	$159 rt	Washington Natl, DC	$143 rt
Jacksonville, FL	$159 rt	West Palm Beach, FL	$149 rt
Los Angeles, CA	$329 rt	HAWAII
Miami, FL	$159 rt	Honolulu, HI	$615 rt
Newark, NJ	$117 rt	Kona, HI	$705 rt
Norfolk, VA	$143 rt	Lihue, HI	$705 rt
Ontario, CA	$329 rt	Lanai City, HI	$705 rt
Orange County, CA	$329 rt	Maui, HI	$705 rt
Orlando, FL	$159 rt
Phoenix, AZ	$329 rt
Salt Lake City, UT	$329 rt
San Diego, CA	$329 rt

CALL OR VISIT OUR NEW INTERACTIVE WEBSITE AT WWW.CHEAPTICKETS.COM FOR SPRING BREAK FARES!

RESERVATIONS: 1-800-247-7587
All fares are subject to applicable fees and departure taxes. Fares does not include taxes.
Introducing our NEW INTERACTIVE website at:http://www.cheaptickets.com

THE PRISONER.

HER CELL.

G A T T A C A

AT THEATRES OCTOBER 24

Briefs

Awards
Stephen Nissenbaum, a University of Massachusetts history professor, received a special Fulbright fellowship to live and teach at Humbolt University in Berlin, Germany during the upcoming academic year.
The fellowship, known as the Distinguished Chair in American Studies, is one of few named Fulbrights singled out for academics of unique distinction. Out of the approximately 4,000 Fulbright fellowships awarded, only 21 were in the distinguished chair program.
The fellowship recognizes Nissenbaum's accomplishments in areas such as the cultural meaning of Christmas and the Salem witch trials.

Books
Picking Federal Judges: Lower Court Selection From Roosevelt through Reagan (Yale University Press), by UMass political science professor Sheldon Goldman, is an in-depth, behind the scenes look at how nine U.S. presidents shaped the federal judiciary.
Within the book, Goldman gives special attention to the struggle to diversify the bench by gender and by race in the period between 1932 and 1988.

A specialist in French social and intellectual history, UMass history professor Charles Rearick has written a new book titled, The French in Love and War: Popular Culture in the Era of World Wars (Yale University Press).
Rearick focuses on the years 1914–1945, examining entertainment and the French appetite for pop music and movies.

Administration
UMass President William M. Bulger visited the Chicopee Comprehensive High School to meet with students, faculty and staff yesterday as part of a series of high school visits around the state.
During the visits, Bulger describes the academic programs available at the University's five campuses — Amherst, Boston, Dartmouth, Lowell and Worcester — and encourages the students to choose UMass for the future in higher education.
— compiled by Jonathan Liberty

Got a tip?

Call the Collegian News Desk and speak with Jonathan Liberty, News Editor. The number is 545-1762.

■ deficit

continued from page 1

what U.S. firms can sell in China.
For August, Chinese shipments to the United States hit a record $5.9 billion, led by a $253 million surge in shipments of toys and Christmas decorations as American stores completed stocking plans for the upcoming holiday season. Half the toys sold in America come from China.
U.S. exports to China slumped to $898 million as sales of commercial airplanes, America's biggest export to China, suffered a decline. Analysts, however, discounted the one-month drop, noting that airline exports for the year have posted a sizable increase. For the first eight months of 1997, the total trade deficit is running at an annual rate of $114.5 billion, even worse than the eight-year high of $111 billion in 1996.
The White House sought to play down the higher overall deficit, arguing that it comes at a time when the U.S. economy is outperforming its major trading partners.
"The strength of the U.S. economy makes it possible for the U.S. consumer to buy more from abroad," said presidential spokesman Mike McCurry.
Clinton met with congressional leaders yesterday in his continued efforts to lobby for the "fast track" authority he needs to negotiate new free trade agreements. McCurry said the administration remained convinced that the path to future prosperity lies in reducing foreign trade barriers.
But critics contend that Clinton's trade policies have failed to keep the deficit from rising every year he has been in office, at a cost of thousands of American jobs lost to low-wage competitors. Financial markets, meanwhile, saw the higher-than-expected August trade deficit as a reassuring signal that U.S. economic growth would be slower in the second half of the year, lessening the urgency of the Federal Reserve to boost interest rates. The Dow Jones industrial average soared 139 points to close at 8,060.44.
"We had been growing above the Fed's speed limit," said Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago. "We are not worried about weaker growth these days, but excessively strong growth."

■ military

continued from page 1

"A major finding of this study is that gender integration is perceived to have a relatively small effect on readiness, cohesion and morale in the units we studied," the report stated, adding, "Both men and women contended that women perform about as well as men."
Of the 934 service members surveyed, just two people listed gender as a factor that influences a unit's ability to do its job. Instead, service members listed training and the climate created by unit leaders as the key factors.
That is not to say that the integration of women has no effect. For example, the effect of pregnancy on a unit "is greater when the unit has many women or when it is understaffed," the report said.
According to a summary released by Rand, the researchers also found:
•Only one-third of male officers agree that the policy that bars women from ground combat should be lifted. Women who favor the policy change differ on whether it should be voluntary.
•Although most servicemen and women "declare that sexual harassment does not occur in their units, there is confusion and anxiety about what constitutes sexual harassment and how the charges are handled."
•Perceived double standards concerning women's physical standards and treatment generate hostility, notably on the part of junior enlisted men."
•Dating relationships within units "can be sources of tension."
Pentagon officials released a summary of the study after a report on it appeared in The Washington Post, which said the study found that while thousands of combat-related military jobs have been opened to women, women fill a very low number of them. Of the 47,544 specialized jobs that opened up over 1993 and 1994 — jobs that require women to volunteer, get special training and then qualify for — women hold only 815 of them, the report stated, in some cases, commanders may require infantry experience for certain jobs that are open to women, but women are prohibited by law from joining infantry units. Some commanders may decide to limit the number of women in certain units or assign women to administrative jobs, even if they are trained for other areas. Or, commanders are loathe to have a female aide or driver "because of concern about rumors or potential charges of sexual harassment," the report said.
There are about 195,000 women in the armed forces, about 14 percent of the total. The researchers visited 14 Army, Navy and Marine Corps units for the study. The Air Force was not included. Rand is a private, not-for-profit organization that is involved in public policy research and analysis.

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Getting in gear
Freshman environmental science major, Aaron O'Callaghan, works on a bicycle at the Bike Co-op yesterday afternoon.

Find it! Buy it! Sell it! Say it!

Try Collegian classifieds... because they work.

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!

922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

jiffy lube UNV1999 Signature Service

$19.99 COMPLETE OIL CHANGE SERVICE

AT 347 RUSSELL ST. & HAMPSHIRE PLAZA, HADLEY
JIFFY LUBE STORES WITH THIS COUPON

Most Vehicles • Not good with any other offer • Expires 12/31/97

amc There is a Difference!
$2.50 (Tue-Thu) Show Daily • Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons • Savings to Golden, No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153 MT. FARMS MALL

Rocketman (PG)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Playing God (R)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:20
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10
I know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL

Kiss the Girls (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
U-Turn (R)
Today at 8:30
In and Out (PG-13)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Most Wanted (R)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

Special Benefit Package
Developed especially for UMass Employees!

UMass

Preferred Checking
A No Fee Checking Account For All University of Massachusetts Employees.

- $10. minimum opening balance
- No per check charge, unlimited check writing
- No monthly service charges
- Free first order of checks (fifty of our selected checks)
- Free ATM card
- Free ATM transactions at GSB ATMs (25¢ per POS/75¢ per ATM withdrawal elsewhere)
- Automatic overdraft protection (our Greenline Account, to qualified applicants)
- Free MasterMoney debit card (with Greenline, to qualified applicants)
- Free MasterMoney transactions anywhere
- No annual fee Visa/MasterCard (to qualified applicants)

$10.00 CASH* BONUS
Sign up for Direct Deposit by 10/31/97

CALL US FOR 1-STOP SERVICE...We handle all required paperwork, no need to visit the UMass Human Resources Office!

In addition to the UMass Preferred Checking Account, we have many others which may better fit your needs including:

Green Action Account
This is a combined checking and savings account. It includes all of the above features, plus it pays high tiered money market interest and has no ATM or POS charges anywhere, provided the minimum opening balance of $1,000. is maintained.

N.O.W. Account
This interest bearing checking account has a minimum $200. opening balance. It includes all of the above features, plus it pays interest and has no ATM or POS charges anywhere, provided a minimum balance of $500. is maintained.

GREENFIELD SAVINGS BANK
SINCE 1869
61 North Main St., South Deerfield 665-4011
Corner of Federal & Main St., Greenfield 774-3191
195 Avenue A, Turners Falls 863-4316
Corner of Main & Bridge St., Shelburne Falls 625-9827
info@greenfieldsavings.com
www.greenfieldsavings.com
Member FDIC/DIF

*GSB will deposit $10.00 in your GSB checking account with the first UMass Payroll direct deposit, offer expires 10/31/97

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before

Halloween

We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 27.

University Store's TEXTBOOK ANNEX

We accept VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER and the UCARD
Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm 545-3570

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Student body must speak up

Voter apathy in the United States isn't anything new. Every time there is an election, newspapers and television newscasters gripe about how low the voter turnout was.

There are a million excuses people use to avoid voting. There were people who were busy, people who didn't know and people who didn't care.

Unfortunately, there are many people on campus who could have pleaded ignorance about the proceedings. I don't put the blame completely on the shoulders of the students. Our Student Government Association (SGA) president, Lia Wong, should have helped out with public awareness of the elections in order to educate and motivate people.

Alexis Pushkar

But what exactly are the consequences of not voting? Well, they may not be that bad. What does our senate really accomplish each year? I mean everybody knows that government is always useless, right?

What if nobody paid any attention to government? Our student government could pass some wacky bills such as: "Everyone Must Drink Green Tea — Yes, the kind with Stuff Floating in it," or "Every Residence Hall Must Fly the Flag of the United Arab Emirates," or "Every Tree on Campus Must Be Cut Down and Used to Build an Honors College."

People lose their credibility if they have the right to complain and don't. Senate elections are a chance to express an opinion, and hopefully the candidate will live up to the voters' expectations.

Our senate is our voice at this university, unless we picket or riot. The latter methods are not espoused by the administration as the best way to get things accomplished, therefore, the senate is one important way for students to communicate with the administration.

For example, Dickinson Residence Hall in Orchard Hill has Ethernet this semester because it was brought to the attention of the administration that no dorm in Orchard Hill was scheduled to have it.

The senate has handled issues relating to student privacy rights in terms of search and seizure policies, and has banned smoking from all common living areas in dorms. These issues impact the daily life of students for the better or worse, depending, of course, on perspective.

Another major thing the senate handles are the RSO budgets which affect a sizable number of students on campus. It is important that we have some sort of impartial student voice governing how much money goes to each student group. RSO's are student groups, and their funding allocations should be handled by fellow students, as opposed to the administration.

The senate is a way for students to change things that they don't like on campus. If students want a light on the so-called "rape trail" between Orchard Hill and Sylvan, they can talk to their senators, and the administration will look at the decision of the senate. The senate is a voice of the student body.

I think that the voice of the collective student body is important because students need to have a say in their university. This is a place for us, by us, and about us. One reason that the collective voice is important is that it moderates the influence of the extremists on campus, both liberal and conservative. It is important that this university reflect the views of the majority of its students and not the views of extremists or small factions within the university. Elected senators will hopefully represent their constituents well.

But senators can only represent students if they get elected. It seems strange to me that students on a campus known for being politically active would not vote in campus elections.

The senate is a useful tool in facilitating communication with the administration and with students across campus and off campus. If we have been sucked in by the beliefs of adults who don't vote because it doesn't matter anyway, then we are foolish. Government may have its imperfections, but we as students should not take that to mean it doesn't matter. If we do not exercise our rights, we should not complain if someday they are gone and we need them.

Alexis Pushkar is a UMass student.

Save our ice cream

I had an awful thought the other day as I stood in the Bluewall, savoring one of the greatest delicacies known to man. I found myself thinking about the "Save Our Beer" campaign on the steps of the Student Union and how the Young Republicans were putting aside politics for a moment to address this vital issue of the alcohol ban.

And then I had the thought.

What if the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education didn't stop with beer? Suppose they started to attack other beverage and food-type items? Suppose the Board called for a ban on ice cream? Those who know me well understand my passion for ice cream and they get out of my way whenever ice cream happens to be within a three mile radius of where I'm standing.

Seema Gangatirkar

So this chilling nightmare unfolded right before my eyes, as I stood clutching my dish of coffee ice cream (topped off with a liberal heaping of rainbow sprinkles) in the middle of the Bluewall. Panic gripped every muscle in my body as I stood there, quaking at the might of the Board of Higher Education.

I envisioned a situation similar to that currently unfolding on our campus. I could see students suitably outraged, protesting the ban, skipping classes, eating ice cream (gasp!) in public!

There was a frightful vision of the Young Republicans Club, the University Democrats and the Student Government Association — in earth-shattering agreement — denouncing the actions of the Board of Higher Education and sponsoring rally after rally.

Headquarters for the protests would naturally have to be housed in the Bluewall, since the effect of no ice cream would be most greatly felt there. Also, there would be plenty of caffeine on hand to soothe the nerves of the harried and ice cream deprived.

Every other day, students would march up and down the Campus Concourse (preferably in front of the Red Cross, who might discriminate against ice cream eaters), chanting "I Scream for Ice Cream" and other equally thoughtful and creative protests.

Eventually, the Board of Higher Education would catch on. While there are advantages to banning ice cream on this campus, like increasing the sales of frozen yogurt, or preventing those little ice cream disasters from happening. For the most part, banning ice cream would be the most awful thing to happen to this campus since the invention of chicken pucks.

The ban on ice cream would be extremely unfair — to quote some eloquent speakers who have said the same about the alcohol ban. Especially, since the worst thing which can happen to an individual addicted to the rich, frothy cool dessert would be a sugar high.

So, in effect, the behavior of a few individuals who went out of control after consuming one too many cones would remove the privilege of relishing such a treat in the comfort of your residence hall room or even enjoy the pleasure of a chocolate chip cone on a warm afternoon as you walk to class.

And those of us who have been consuming ice cream responsibly, would have to go elsewhere. And chances are, there will be an increased incidence of driving while under the influence of ice cream. Police protection would have to be stepped up and thousands of students will suffer from regular visits from the Ice Cream Police.

We'd adjust eventually; some of us might even find solace in frozen yogurt.

But an ice cream free campus... ah, the heart aches to think of such misery imposed upon the University of Massachusetts.

But thankfully, the thought passed, and I walked out of the Bluewall into a throng of protesters chanting "Save Our Beer."

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

An alcohol induced apathy

Hmm, something funny going on here. Monday, students staged a protest of sorts in front of the Student Union, complete with a PA system and no small amount of crowd-pleasing panache. Those ubiquitous "Save Our Beer" flyers are the latest addition to our debris-strewn campus. And during Friday's Midnight Madness, large portions of the crowd in the Mullins Center eschewed the usual UMass cheer for a rousing chorus of, "Save Our Beer," perhaps finally answering, in the process, which the average American loves more, sports or alcohol. Can't recall a student population this outraged since the Vietnam War.

Boomer Pinches

As amusingly tongue-in-cheek as all this student activism is (at least I hope it's tongue-in-cheek, 'cause I swear I saw it all on a "Simpsons" episode once), it's a pity all this civil righteousness can't be harnessed for, say, world hunger or nuclear disarmament.

Hasn't anyone else noticed how eagerly the administration seems to embrace the dry campus controversy, deflecting for the time being the heat they take for ripping us all off? But then, all of these problems fall into perspective after a few beers anyway, and the right to alcohol-induced apathy is, after all, what our mommies and daddies pay taxes for.

Personally, I'll probably vote to keep alcohol on the campus. Yes, people often drink too much and do stupid things, and sometimes this leads to events that are nothing less than tragic, but I resent the fact that the powers-that-be don't respect our ability to make that choice ourselves. Anyone at this school is smart enough to know not to drink to excess; if they choose to do so anyway, the resultant actions are their own responsibility. It's not the job of the people at Whitmore or anyone else to live your life for you, nor should it be.

But I'm still kind of confused here, 'cause see, I don't know where, exactly, this preoccupation with intoxication comes from. Maybe there's some Freudian clause involving beer bottles that I haven't heard about, which states that, when confronted with anything remotely phallic, a man or woman will immediately stick it in their mouth and start slurping away, but it seems like a waste of time. Ask someone why they drink and he or she will almost always tell you it's either to have fun or to forget the problems he or she has in his or her life. There's a certain pride to be taken in drinking to the point of uncontrolled vomiting and/or unconsciousness, which we hear every day in hushed elevator tones or from that guy behind you in lecture who never shuts up.

When did we all start hating ourselves so much that we've come to prefer a chemically altered state of consciousness to our natural one? Alcohol, like most mind-altering substances, is merely a lubricant between the individual and his reality; it doesn't actually make anything better or worse. There's nothing a person does under the influence of alcohol that they couldn't do while sober if they wanted to. But a lot of people — being notoriously ill-equipped to act on their desires, and perhaps even more ill-equipped to take responsibility for those actions — seem bent instead on surrendering their self-control to a depressant, shoveling their money over to corporations who have turned gratuitous advertising into an art form (and it might be worth mentioning that it's these same corporations, and the hundreds others like them, and the lawmakers which they put into power, which are responsible for the political reality we live in, which is in turn responsible for much of the unhappiness you're trying to escape every time you drink a Bud Ice).

Getting drunk is ultimately an excuse, and perhaps a feeble attempt at an apology, for not dealing with reality, the good aspects of it as well as the bad. We are, and should be able to choose this option if we so desire, but, at the risk of sounding like a killjoy, the damage thus caused seems to far outweigh the virtues. Life's a short enough story as it is without keeping one finger on the delete key.

Boomer Pinches is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Alcohol ban may be unsafe

To the Editor:

Do we want safe students, or parents who sleep well at night due to the false sense of security which would accompany an alcohol ban?

An alcohol ban will not deter the majority of students from drinking. It will only deter them from being caught. That is, until they begin to realize that Housing Services can not kick everyone out of housing. At this point, the alcohol ban will become a joke and [Resident Assistants] will have an even harder time getting students to listen to them.

Let's face it, no matter what rules our all knowing administrators pass, students will still drink. I don't like that and I think it is a problem, however it will not go away by simply paying some dorky RA to yell, "Don't do it, or else." If you doubt me, take a look around. Rules are broken everyday. This will not be an exception, no matter what Housing [Services] threatens to do to the culprits.

This being the case, I think we should concentrate on making sure students who decide to drink are safe. I was an RA my sophomore year. I adopted a philosophy, much to the dismay of my "superiors" that I would assist my residents by providing support and information to those turning to alcohol as a solution to their problems. I had an excellent relationship with every one of my residents, and when I asked them to either do or refrain from doing something, they always agreed. There was a mutual respect and because I allowed them to drink, which they were going to do anyway, they allowed me to help them when they needed it. I knew ahead of time what they were going to do and could keep an eye on my residents. We trusted each other and they were safe.

My residents drank together in the dorms. They went out together, and most importantly, they came home together. They formed real friendships and always looked out for one another. Had I been on a witch hunt, writing up everyone who drank even a drop of alcohol while in the dorms, they would have drunk just as much, however, I would not have been able to look in on them and make sure they were [okay]. My residents listened to me and I helped them. I effectively assisted my residents. If this ban is passed, I assure you, more students will be rushed to the emergency room to have their stomachs pumped than ever before, simply because RAs will not be able to step in when necessary.

And worse yet, residents afraid of getting in trouble will not seek the assistance of the RA at the expense of their friend who may be at risk of alcohol poisoning. Students will get hurt and maybe even die if this ban is passed.

David Velesig
Amherst

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.
Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Editorial/Opinion Page is always looking for diverse opinions. If you are interested in writing a column, stop by the Collegian and talk to Dan Bodah or call 545-1361 for more information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Assistant
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Rolling Stones return to reclaim their throne as the kings of rock

By Paul Hayes &
Anthony Pascicia
Collegian Correspondents

THE ROLLING STONES
Foxboro Stadium
Oct. 21

FOXBORO — For the past 10 years, Keith Richards has played his guitar less and less while on stage. During the recent Steel Wheels and Voodoo Lounge tours, he would normally strum one note before going into an epileptic fit, while a horn section would play a fill.

But, during the first of two shows at Foxboro Stadium on Monday, he actually concentrated on playing his guitar parts, playing the opening riff to show opener "Satisfaction" as if he were in the midst of his Vietnam-era glory.

The tour might be in support of the Rolling Stones new album Bridges to Babylon, but the show had the effect of a bridge to the past. It was like the '70s all over again.

What proved to be most satisfying were Mick Jagger's strong vocals and energetic stage presence. He kept the crowd on their feet for the full two and a half hours with a strut-and-slide filled performance, and sang with an intensity and power which only subsided after the encore of "Brown Sugar" was done.

Highlights included a dead-on rendition of "Gimme Shelter" — a song the Stones haven't played in several years and which stirred the crowd and the band into a frenzy.

There was also the audience assisted "Miss You," where Mick got the whole crowd to "whoo-hoo-hoo-hoo" along with him, and classic "Start Me Up," which was proven to be written for arena rock venues.

The new $5 million sound system they are using on this tour really did do justice to the number "Sister Morphine," on which Ron Wood played slide guitar over Mick's acoustic rhythm.

The sound system rocked Foxboro, making songs such as "Honkey Tonk Woman," "Jumpin' Jack Flash" and "It's Only Rock and Roll" louder and clearer than they had been at the previous tour stops in Foxboro.

There was the requisite special effects extravaganza which has come to be associated with a Stones show. A large circular screen, like the one Pink Floyd has used, broadcast the show and other images to the audience, including the Stones' website, on which fans voted for which song they wanted the Stones to play. Every show, the Stones play the song which receives the most votes.

The fans chose the song "Star, Star," which was a shame considering that it edged out other classic Stones tunes such as "Under My Thumb" and "She's a Rainbow."

There were also a number of pyrotechnic displays, fire plume blasts and confetti showers, culminating in post- concert fireworks.

At one point during the show, a bridge emerged from the stage, extending to a smaller stage located in the middle of the arena, on which they played three older songs.

They began with a Chuck Berry song, "Little Queenie," followed by two older classics, "Crazy Woman" and "The Last Time."

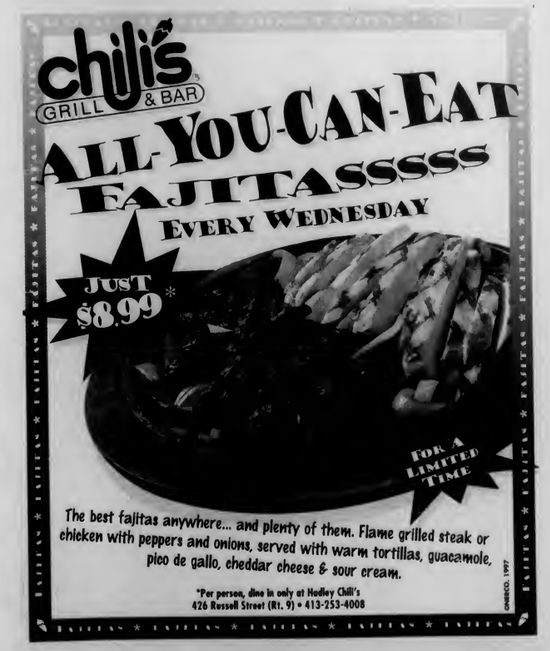
Jagger remained there while the rest of the band returned to the stage, and then he walked to the stage letting out the piercing screams while the band began playing "Sympathy for the Devil."

The show hit a lull when Richards sang two of his own songs, but after throwing in a number of his trademark kicks, he flashed a sly smile and made a gesture of appreciation afterwards. The crowd responded as loudly as it had all night.

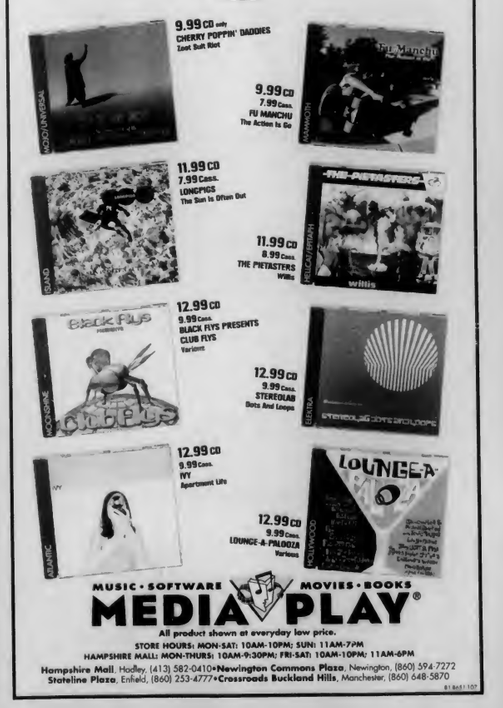
With a cigarette hanging out of his mouth all night, guitarist Wood stumbled around the stage, and delivered an excellent performance.

Drummer Charlie Watts, who received the loudest round of applause of any Stones' member during the band introductions halfway through the show, played as strong a show with as straight a face as ever.

Bass player Daryl Jones, the newest Stone, consistently laid down solid bass line after bass line, and showed himself to be more than just a competent fill-in on songs such as "Anybody Seen My Baby."



During that song, Jagger rapped the part which, on the album, was sampled from Biz Markie. It was then that the fans realized that it was not they who'd gone back in time to see the Stones in their prime. It was the Stones reclaiming their greatness.



KEN MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN
Guitar legend, Keith Richards, surprisingly still has the energy to stand up straight.

KEN MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN
The real Glimmer man himself, Philip Michael Jagger, led the Stones to another glorious victory Monday night at Foxboro stadium.

New Warzone release is a worthy finale from a hard core legend

Adam Dlugacz

Well, since there have been almost no shows going on recently and I've only heard a little bit of gossip, this column is mostly going to be album reviews. First, I'll hit you with the 411. Burn did play a reunion show at the Revelation showcase at the CMJ festival, but their tour with Better Then A Thousand was cut short because Shelter is on tour. Gorilla Biscuits played a six song reunion set with Sick of It All and The Bouncing Souls at the second Raybeez tribute show. That's the down low for now.

WARZONE — Fight For Justice (Victory Records): This is a painful record to listen to, not because it's bad, but because this may be Warzone's best album since Don't Forget The Struggle Don't Forget The Streets and we will never get to see these songs played live. While Raybeez may no longer be with us (R.I.P.), he has left us with the perfect album to remember him by. After a couple of mediocre releases, Warzone showed signs of life on their last album The Sound of Revolution, but still hadn't quite recaptured their old magic. The Tony Brumell produced Fight For Justice is vintage Warzone, complete with killer breakdowns that bring back images of massive pits and hooded kids flying through the air. They throw in an old song, "Rebels Till We Die," and pull it off in fome fashion. On the last couple of albums, Ray has let his politics dominate the lyrics, but this time he is singing about both the scene and unity on songs like "Locked Out" (reminiscent of "F—K Your Attitude) and "Brotherhood and Siste:hood."

Warzone was special because they believed that hardcore could make a change and they made you believe it too. Although Raybeez has passed on, his name will always be synonymous with hardcore and Fight For Justice is the perfect final tribute to him. A+

MAN WILL SURRENDER — S/T (Revolution): This band features Frosty of Chain of Strength fame on guitar and they released two fairly rocking EP's, one on EVR and one on Conversion, their future was bright. Then they signed to a subdivision of Warner Brothers called RevOlution and released this piss poor attempt at ripping off Statue, Blue Tip and Fugazi. I could trash this band just for signing to a label whose goal is to confuse hardcore kids, do they think we're that dumb? I could trash them because a three–year– old could do better then the artwork on the cover of this CD. I could trash them for wishing they had half the integrity Fugazi had when they don't. I could trash them for bragging about touring with the Deftones. But mostly I just wish bands like this would go away. F

DOWN BY LAW — Last Of The Sharpshooters (Epitaph Records): I love Down By Law, I love Dave Smalley's lyrics and voice, I love Dag Nasty, I do not by any stretch of the imagination love this album. Dave and the crew do their usual brand of emoish punk but this time around they sound tired or maybe bored. While the songs and lyrics are vintage Down By Law, there's no energy behind them and ripping off The Clash is not helping things. It just sounds like they don't care anymore. C

PROMISE RING — Nothing Feels Good (Jade Tree Records): The first time I listened to this CD I have to admit that I was a little bit disappointed. Then I saw them at the Space in Worcester and liked the new songs a lot more. I then went home and sat at my desk and started staring out the window and listening to the CD.., and I loved it. Promise Ring are back with a beautifully crafted album that makes you want to hug someone. Promise Ring have really shed the Sunny Day Real Estate comparisons and begun to forge their own image. This album is complete pop, owing more to the Beatles on tracks like "Is This Thing On?," "Raspberry Rush" and "Red and Blue Jeans." What makes the Promise Ring so special are the feelings they illicit, no band makes me so happy to be sad. B+

V/A — Give 'Em The Boot (Hellcat Records): This is the debut compilation from a brand new label run by Tim Armstrong of Rancid and backed by Brett Gurewitz, the owner of Epitaph Records. This compilation features a wide variety of bands going from straight up punk to traditional ska. Rancid offers a new song, "The Brothels," that owes a lot to the Ramones but still rocks. Union 13 are a band from Mexico who cover "Roots Radical" complete with Spanish lyrics. The Dropkick Murphy's, The Business, and Swingin Utters all play oi influenced street punk and have three of the strongest songs on this compilation. As for the ska part: Hepcat, Slackers and the Stubborn Allstars stand out. The problem with this CD is that a lot of the songs on here blend together, especially the ska songs. Another thing is that a lot of these songs have already been released, which is always disappointing on a compilation. Although this is an uneven debut for the fledgling label, at $4.99 it's not a bad pick up. C

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

SKI Snowboard & Trips $229
College Ski Weeks '98'
Mont Sutton, Canada
5 DAY LIFT TICKET
5 NIGHTS LODGING
5 NIGHTS PARTIES
SS SLOPE'S, Walk to Lifts from the condos
25 Block Promenade, Bunny Slope every Day
1-800-848-95-45

Electrolysis
Disposable Sterile Needles
Student Discount
Free Parking
On Bus Line from Campus
John V. Ryan, R.E.
664 Main Street
253-9534

LOWEST FARES
★ GUARANTEED ★
FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
SAN JUAN
Christmas Break Special
Non-Stop Air American $450
Act Fast
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC
THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson)
AMHERST

Thursdays 9pm to Midnight
GLOW BOWL
Juke Box
Glow Show
Thursday Special College Rates
Friday Disco Bowl
Saturday Retro Bowl
Glow Bowling Shoe & Ball
10pm to 2am
Live DJ
Laser Lite Show
The X-treme in Glow Bowling
Entire Center Will GLOW
Northampton Bowl
584-4830

LET'S PLAY VIDEO

Student Government Elections
Wednesday October 22

Hours:
11:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m. &
4:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Locations (by residence):

- Orchard Hill and Central - Franklin D.C.
- Southwest - Berkshire & Hampshire D.C.
- Sylvan and Northeast - Worcester D.C.
- Commuters - Campus Center Concourse (Handicap Accessible) & Newman Center

In Some Countries Voting Isn't Taken For Granted. . .

✓Alcohol Policy??

✓Legal Representation In Judicial Hearings??

✓Video Surveillance in Residents Halls??

✓Picketing Code Guidelines??

✓SGA Senate Race??

✓Honors College??

UMass hockey heads into season

Media Day gives Mallen and Minutemen time to speak out

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Simply put, a team does not earn the respect until they earn it.

Such is the case for the Massachusetts hockey team this season, and when the preseason Hockey East polls were released on Oct. 7, the Minutemen were picked to finish eighth out of the nine teams in the conference. No. 3 nationally ranked Boston University, No. 4 New Hampshire and No. 6 Maine hold the top three spots in the preseason Hockey East poll, with Northeastern anchoring the bottom.

Yesterday at the Mullins Center practice rink, UMass coach Joe Mallen and his players addressed that prognostication to the near bottom of the bottom half of arguably the best conference in the country. After a season where the Minutemen set new highs in wins (12), and conference wins (7), the powers that be casted a prophecy that might turn out to be a misnomer.

The Minutemen welcome 1995–96 preseason and regular season All–HE selection Tim Lovell to their lineup — as a co–captain with senior defenseman Brad Norton — waiting a year after his transfer from the University of Maine to join the team for a full season.

Mallen feels that the conference has made a mistake in their preseason predictions, seeing nothing but good things from his team this season.

"I think that the '97–'98 edition of UMass hockey is going to be something really special," Mallen said. "This is a team comprised of a large group of seniors, and a large group of freshman, and a few guys in the middle who have made some significant improvement over the last few years.

"With the league poll, I think its a situation where the league has not factored in one Tim Lovell in the whole mix. If you put him in our recruiting class, it puts a completely different outlook on the newcomers we have on this team."

After two games and out to end the season last year to New Hampshire in the postseason HE Tournament, Lovell feels that the team needs to do it the hard way — they need to earn their respect.

"People are going to pick us last because as a program we haven't done anything yet," Lovell said. "It was expected, but it's also a shot at your team. It's good to be picked low, because you don't have those high expectations, but it's also a blow to the team, because the team will be better than that. People don't know until you start playing."

The experience of the senior class is what senior goaltender Brian Regan feels is the key to the team's success this season. This class will mark the first time since the program's reinstatement in 1995 that UMass will have a four–year class who have played in Hockey East.

"The biggest thing [Norton and Lovell] bring to the table is that both of them have four years of Hockey East experience," Regan said. "Our team never really has had that before, and along with Timmy and Brad, all of us seniors have that experience, and we know what it takes to win games in this conference."

After a 7–0 exhibition win over Dalhousie last Sunday at the Mullins Center, the season opener will happen at Tully Forum in North Billerica against Lowell this Friday night.

"Our showing on Sunday was a good one, but it doesn't amount to a hill of beans," Mallen said. "We all know that Hockey East is probably the toughest league in the U.S., and as we go into UMass–Lowell, BU and BC in the next couple of games, this should be a real good test for us... especially with two of the three on the road."

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN
UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen looks up to the future, fielding questions at Media Day in the Mullins Center practice rink yesterday.

■ Catterton

continued from page 12

— especially when back–up Jeff Smith was questionable with a calf injury, and ended up not making the trip.

"That's something will talk to him [Catterton] about in practice," head coach Mike Hodges said about his senior quarterback's over zealousness in the open field.

With Catterton in the game, the UMass football team seems to be more dynamic — when he plays well, the team wants to play well with him. Fitting his abbreviated surname "Cat," Catterton has been an elusive player in the Minutemen offense, using his mobility to help sustain drives, and make something out of nothing.

The Minutemen are using all of their tools and building a solid offense in the process. The gradually maturing offensive line is also showing signs of greatness and has helped give Catterton the time he needs in the pocket.

In the last two games, UMass has run for 532 yards and six touchdowns. Also, every offensive category has improved and against Villanova and Buffalo, the Minutemen averaged 397 total yards and 26.5 points per game — and that can be directly attributed to the new look Catterton has given opposing defenses.

"I was putting a lot of pressure on myself and I wasn't performing," Catterton explained. "Now I just want to have fun with the game, and play hard with all I can. But to keep it in my mind that it is still a game and have fun with it."

After the win in Buffalo, it was apparent that Catterton had made it back to his old form.

"I had a great time," Catterton said after the Buffalo game. "It's always fun when you win."

■ Gleason

continued from page 12

"In the first two races I was tired, so I wondered why I had done so much work."

Gleason continued his training, and again, other young collegiate athletes might have quit when their rigorous off– season workouts didn't appear to be paying off.

Peter Gleason stayed focused.

"It's easy to go out and run on Sundays and Saturdays at 8 a.m. In the morning when you're running well," Gleason said. "You're not guaranteed to do well if you work hard, but you're nothing if you don't. You won't stand a chance."

O'Brien agreed.

"No one's watching Peter Gleason at seven in the morning when he puts his sneakers on and goes to run 10 miles," O'Brien said. "He does it because he's dedicated."

The sophomore's times kept him in the second position for UMass throughout the year. As the team geared up for the New England Championships on Oct. 17, Carrara was expected to pace the team — as he had done all season. Gleason's work ethic primed him to challenge his senior teammate, even though few people outside the team knew it.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Peter Gleason

By running a career best time of 25:04, Gleason cruised to 43rd place overall, and most of all, first among Minutemen runners. His surprise performance led the team to a 15th place out of 36 in the meet, defeating teams such as Maine, Rhode Island, and Vermont; all three of which had beaten UMass earlier in the year.

"I expected to run well, and I hoped to run around 25 minutes," Gleason said. "But as an athlete, you're never really satisfied, and I hope to do even better at the A–10's next week."

At the Atlantic–10 Championships on Nov. 1 in Fairfax, Va., Gleason will be counted on to run a similar time so that the Minutemen can place in the top three — as they did in 1996.

UMass hopes Gleason's hard work continues to pay off.

■ Johnston

continued from page xx

only one side of the field. Instead, Johnston has picked up time at both wings and the midfield, as well as at center forward.

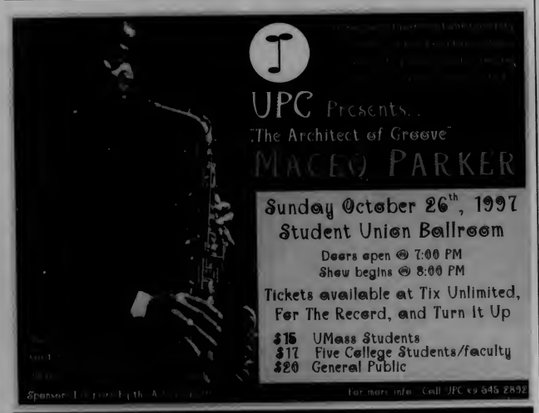
"I like moving around," Johnston said. "If I stay to one side I get flat. Moving around also helps give me more experience."

For Shea, placing Johnston at different spots on the field has helped open up spaces for other players.

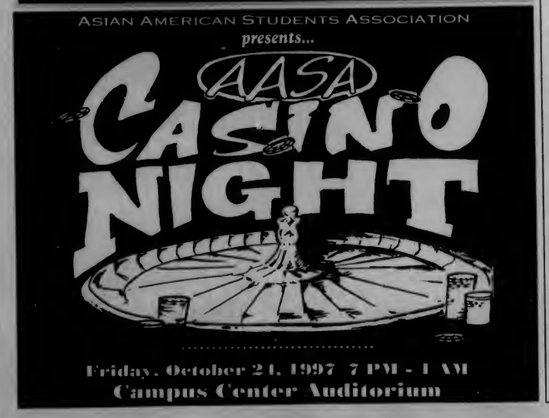
"Erica knows that she can't always go to the ball," Shea said. "She can start in the center, make a hard cut outside and then receive the ball. Or she can send it back to another player.'

"Field hockey is a game of constant movement. You need to be able to play any position, and Erica has helped the team by moving to the different places where she is needed."

It is that versatility that has made Johnston such an important part of the Minutewoman offensive unit. She adds to that depth with her abilities on penalty corners.

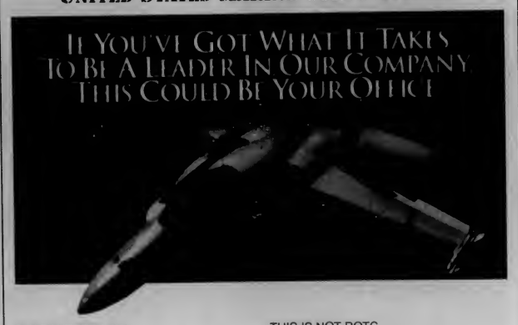


"She is a double threat on corners," Shea said. "She has the capability to so a lot of things. She can take a straight shot, she can lift the ball, or she can pass it off."



But Johnston knows that she is not alone on the corners, or on the field.

"Things are starting to click for us, on the corners and just in the games," she said. "Everyone's confidence is up and the freshmen have more experience."



The class of first–year players also has a strong group of leaders — with Johnston chief among them — to look to. It's no surprise to Shea, or Johnston's teammates, that she has done just that.

"She let's them know what's up on the field," Shea said. "She's a leader and she talks out there, but she would rather show it with her play. Erica just loves to play. She has a passion to play, a passion you need if you're going to be out there. She's got it."

WANTED: LEADERS/ PILOTS
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS OFFICER

GUARANTEED LAW
The Marine Corps has a dedicated group of attorneys who are also Marine Officers. This field is open to students who are seniors in college or currently enrolled in law school. Marine Corps Judge Advocates (attorneys) quickly handle their own cases and have a great deal of trial time.

GUARANTEED AVIATION
Marine Corps aviators fly everything from jets to helicopters. Qualified applicants, male and female, are guaranteed aviation training before enrolling. Once commissioned, you will receive flight training at Pensacola, Florida, with the world's most modern and sophisticated aircraft.

NO OBLIGATION
This is an officer training program. If, after the summer training, you decide the Marine Corps is not for you, cancel your enrollment and you will not be obligated to serve. This program allows you the flexibility to change your career path.

WE TEACH LEADERSHIP
Officer candidates learn how to lead peers and subordinate with confidence. As an Officer of Marines, you will have more responsibility at the start of your career than most people have at the peak of theirs.

THIS IS NOT ROTC
All training is conducted during the summer. No classes or uniforms are required at school. For freshmen and sophomores, the training consists of two six–week sessions at Officer Candidate School in Quantico, Virginia. For juniors and seniors it is one 10–week session. Candidates earn about $1,800 for a six–week course and $3,000 for the 10–week course.

PAY AND SENIORITY
Time spent in the PLC program during your college years (tenure) accumulates as time in service for pay purposes and will earn you a higher salary upon being commissioned. Starting salaries can range from $28,000 to $34,000, depending upon when you join.

For more information meet with Capt. Peters & Sgt. Riquier at the Campus Center on Thursday, October 23rd
10:30 AM - 2:30 PM
or call at: 1-800-255-USMC

End of the road?

First UConn, and next Colgate

By Justin Rudd
Collegian Staff

Despite the valiant efforts of the Massachusetts women's tennis team, they come into their final week of the fall season with a 5–5 mark on the year. This past week, the Minutewomen took on Amherst College and Connecticut.

This past Thursday, UMass went to battle with Amherst College on the Upper Boyden Courts. The Minutewomen endured a very frustrating blow when they were edged out by the Lady Jeffs, 4–3.

UMass	7
UConn	0

When it came to singles play, UMass found wins from just two of their women. At the No. 3 position, freshman stand– out Robyn Lebovitz racked up yet another win. Lebovitz, in premier form, annihilated Amherst's Sam Toerge, 6–1, 6–0.

Coming out of Marietta, Ga., Lebovitz has made a lasting impact on this UMass squad holding both her singles and doubles records at a very respectable 6–3.

The Minutewomen's second singles victory came from senior co–captain Caroline Steele. The Paducah, Ky. native added a flavor of excitement, bringing her match to a third and final set. At the No. 5 spot, Steele defeated the Lady Jeff's Patty Jo, 6–3, 7–6, 6–1.

Despite the defeat, UMass dominated the courts in doubles action by sweeping Amherst. The team of Gerasimova/Caron defeated Amherst's Diamond/Steinberg in an interesting 8–8 (7–4) match up. The Minutewomen's other teams of Lebovitz/Steele and Braunstein/Gorodetskaya both found their victories at a score of 9–7.

This unfortunate loss brought the Minutewomen to a 4–5 mark on the season, and gave some harsh initiative for the UMass–UConn match this past Saturday.

The Minutewomen were not going to allow themselves to lose their fourth match in a row. The Upper Boyden Courts are surely a sight that the Huskies will not be looking forward to seeing anytime soon. In true rivalry form, the Minutewomen swept UConn, 7–0.

In singles action, all of the Minutewomen came out of their slumps — simply bulldozing over any opponent on the path to victory.

Doubles play was no different, UMass' teams of Caron/Steele, Braunstein/Lebovitz, and Gorodetskaya/Gillian Kane all defeated their opponents by a respective 8–0, 8–4, 8–1 scores.

Bringing their record to 5–5, this win evens out the Minutewomen's mark on the season. This weekend, UMass concludes the fall tennis season when they host Colgate on Saturday at 1 p.m. If they get their way when they take on Colgate, the Minutewomen would close out the fall on a positive note bringing their season mark to 6–5.

Coming off of their breakout 7–0 sweep over UConn, the Minutewomen should be feeling pretty confident when they face the Raiders. Colgate comes to UMass with an 8–1 record and a Patriot League Championships Title. The No. 1 seeded Raiders captured their third straight title when they recently defeated Bucknell and Army.

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN
Senior co–captain Lana Gorodetskaya will help lead UMass into Saturday's rescheduled match against Colgate.

LAUREN KUSKY/COLLEGIAN
You have to dig down deep...
Freshman Courtney Bowen and the Minutewomen faced Connecticut last night in the Cage. Check Thursday's Collegian for the game wrap–up.

Malone does not deliver the Air Mail

Justin Rudd
on
The NBA

To address my so–called "esteemed" NBA colleague, here is my view going into the NBA season.

With the NBA pre–season underway, and the regular season right around the corner, it's time to discuss how all the major trades, moves and sales were finalized and their affect on this upcoming season.

With big–name free–agents on the market and big–name trades being contemplated, a lot was at stake — and on the floor for discussion — for the '97–'98 basketball season.

As usual, after capturing their fifth, but what feels like their gazillionth title, questions about the Bulls arose.

Will the Bulls keep their Dynamic Dynasty alive or will Dennis Rodman take his cross–dressing freak show on the road? Will Batman (Michael Jordan) be impoverished of his audacious ally (Scottie Pippen)? Or, will Jerry Reinsdorf once again be told what to do with his team and his money by the Lord of Lay–ups, King of the Courts, Mr. NBA himself the $33 million/year man — his Airness?

I think so.

Do you remember when the Bulls defeated the (we finally made it and with "our can I please be the NBA MVP?") Utah Jazz for their fifth NBA title.

Shortly after that oh–so–inspiring win, I believe recalling a Mr. Reinsdorf saying that he had enough of Dennis's antics and that the Bulls organization did not want him back next year. Wasn't there also a possible Garnett/Pippen trade in the mix?

Why bother even questioning? Is it not obvious even to the oblivious that after leading the Bulls to all five of their championships and arguably being the best player of all time, that whatever his Airness wants his Airness gets?

Jordan told Reinsdorf that he wanted Scottie, Dennis, Phil and all to return including himself for a meager one year contract worth a measly $36 million.

Boom, the Lord has spoken, so be it!

Coming into the 1997–98 season the Bulls have all returning, including Bill Wennington and — boo–hoo — Jordan was forced to suffer with only $33 million of his requested $36 million.

Who ever said that money has any thing to do with sports?

When it comes to this upcoming season (as usual), I think that Da' Bulls don't have too much to worry about. As long as they don't get too cocky coming off of that "big" win in the McDonald's championships.

• On to the Utah Jazz, and Karl Malone... MVP. Come on get real! For gosh sakes the man went on national TV and virtually begged Michael to "let him win it this year."

Not to mention at the same time he asked the voters to please vote for him. I'm sorry, maybe it's just me, but I thought the NBA MVP award was an award you're chosen for. An award for the creme de la creme. Not an award earned through whining, bitching and complaining.

But hey, maybe I'm wrong.

• Go Celtics! For all you Celtic fans out there, I have nothing to say to you or about the Boston organization at this moment. Except, let us see what Mr. Big Money — Rick Pitino — can do with his second try at the NBA. To all of you Boston fans, "Please do not get your hopes up."

I will say I told you so. But hey, maybe I'm wrong.

• Shawn Kemp — watch out for those Cleveland Cavaliers.

• How about them Nets! Or should I say New Jersey Mavericks. Armed with their new logo, second–season big money coach John Calipari, and first round draft pick Keith Van Horn, the Nets are ready to become a contender.

Contender for the Jersey High School Championships that is. When the Mavs and Nets decided to swap rosters, it gave Calipari something to play with, but what about the rest of the NBA? What in the world does Calipari think he can do? There is no hope for the Nets! No matter what the Nets do they sink, and there is NO messiah for them.

Oh well, all except for His Airness, of course.

Until next time, thanks for reading and if you have any comments please feel free to keep them to yourself.

Justin Rudd is a Collegian staff member.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

time, and Carey looking to get his form back in net — Oates is the only player doing anything for the Caps right now.

Rick Tocchet now spends his time practicing his short game (not goal scoring in any shape or fashion; but the game of golf) with Jeremy Roenick in Phoenix, and goalie Bill Ranford has played so well that Olaf Kolzig is getting some time between the pipes.

Yet, Washington is playing on all cylinders under new coach Ron Wilson, and have a 7–1 record to lead the Atlantic Division.

Under former coach Jim Schoenfeld's defensively anal retentive system, the team played like fat pigs who had too many donuts (nah, shades of the '91 series versus the New Jersey Devils and referee Don Koharski), missing last year's playoffs.

Now, Phoenix appears to be playing like fat pigs who have had too many donuts under Schoenfeld's tutelage.

So, I missed picking Washington to make the playoffs this year. We'll see what happens in the long run...

Remember, I might be a columnist, but I'm not an expert.

How's that for puncturing that balloon–sized ego?

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $154 $287
PARIS $209 $390
ROME $266 $497
MADRID $218 $407
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave. NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

KAI CHI
10¢ WINGS
WEDNESDAY NIGHTS
8:30 - CLOSE

A Healthy Investment in Your Future

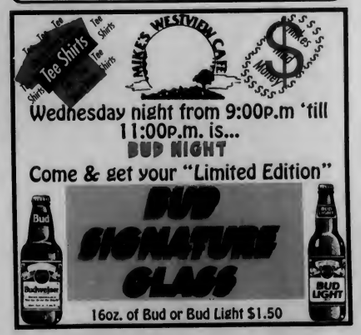
Health Care. Those two words have been the source of much discussion recently. Probably because we as a nation know the importance of investing in a healthy future.

So do millions of patients who choose chiropractic as their preferred source of health care. The chiropractic beliefs in fitness, nutrition, prevention, and natural maintenance make good sense.

Wellness, you see, is the normal state of being.

New York State government agrees. They have recently passed the Insurance Equality bill that mandates insurance coverage for chiropractic care.

For over 75 years, New York Chiropractic College has upheld a tradition of excellence in chiropractic higher education. Our combined traditions, old and new, have built the base from which the chiropractic doctors of the future are created.



Choose New York Chiropractic College. A healthy investment for today and tomorrow.

Visit with the NYCC representative at the Graduate and Professional School Fair on October 29, 10:00AM-3PM, University Career Center.

NEW YORK CHIROPRACTIC COLLEGE

2360 Route 89 Seneca Falls, NY 13148-0800
Phone: 315/568-3040 or 800/234-NYCC (6922)
Fax: 315/568-3087
E-mail: enrolnow@nycc.edu

U-SAVE
AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

SUBMIT YOUR POETRY! This winter's poetry reading @ Wheeler Art Gallery. Call Abby @ 6-6066 or Jude 6-2954 for info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Pre-Vet/Animal Science Club Meeting Important topics and future events to be discussed. Wednesday, October 22. 7pm., Paige 202.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst- Charming 1 bedroom Excellent location, on bus route, available 11/1. $475. 549-8248

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Nissen Sentra 4 speed, 2 door, 35-40 miles per gallon 172,000 miles. $950. 585-5041 after 6pm.

Toyota Cressida 84 4 door, fully loaded, automatic. Needs some work. $500. 549-8248.

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k. Fiberglass Shell Calif Truck. No rust. $4500. Call 582-9872.

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std, power everything. Very fast. $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

Find your next car HERE in the CLASSIFIEDS !

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office has several part-time positions available. Department hours 10am-2pm Monday through Friday and 4pm-9pm Monday through Friday.

- On busline
- Flexible schedule
- Positive atmosphere
- No experience required
- $6.00 hour to start
- Daily, weekly and monthly bonuses

Call 584-0215
10am to 4pm for interview

VIRGIN RECORDS COLLEGE REP POSITION Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at 310-288-2433. Soph or Jr with car preferred. Previous music industry experience a plus!

Arby's Hampshire Mall Now Hiring Part-time, flexible schedule, good pay. Apply in person.

$1,000's WEEKLY!! Stuff envelopes at home for $2.00 each plus bonuses. F/T, P/T. Make $800+ weekly, guaranteed! Free supplies. For details, send one stamp to: N-113, 12021 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 552, Los Angeles, CA 90025

Posterer Wented $6/hr. 259-1227

Reo's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

EMPLOYMENT

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentels 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

For Sale: One Elton John Tix Great seat. Call Enette @ (413)256-1734

For Sale- Canon BJ-EX Printer $160 or Best Offer. 665-7145

Macintosh Quadra 605 8/250 Includes monitor, keyboard, mouse, software, and printer. $575. Call Alyssa (413)545-4668 (days) (978)544-2837 (eves)

2 Elton John Tickets For Sale. Call 256-6022

Toshiba 486 Laptop $500. (413)549-4753

FOR SALE

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

15 million+ sendable email addresses Contact the world with the stroke of a key! $99 per CD. Contact Pete @ Conrad Enterprises (413)539-3599

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

Large cosmetic bag with many personal belongings found at Puffton Parking Lot on 10/19/97. Call Shauna 256-3094

Found: Calculator in Thompson 106 about a month ago. Also, Walkman in Machmer Lobby with Dead Tape from Red Rocks. Call Jeff and leave #. 586-7931

Found: Microcon Text on third floor Morrill I on Wed., Oct. 8th. Call 256-1734 to describe and claim.

INSTRUCTION

Kung-Fu-Spirit of the Heart offers new student introduction: 3 lessons and a T-shirt- $19.95! Convenient Northampton location. 585-1661

LOST

Lost Lost Thursday: Lost T.A. File Folder for Pol Sci 162. Left in Tobia 204 last Thursday. Please return to Thompson Third Floor or call Steve Smith (413)238-5863

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6. Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundreiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Call Nick at 1-800-592-2121 ext 147. Free CD to qualified callers.

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

Available Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call Dave @ 256-3442. Don't Miss Out!!

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking For Roommate ASAP $360/month. Call (413)532-9075

SERVICES

Acupuncture and Herbal Care Special prices. 549-6542. Licensed Acupuncturist (MA #278). National Board Certified.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 1/2 Bedroom Apt Puffton. $575, heat included. Available from 11/1. Call 549-1868

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!

CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!! Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

TRAVEL

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplash-tours.com

WANTED

Earn $125 Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study. 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

WANTED

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center basement.

HALF PRICE SPECIALS

Place an add on a:
MONDAY- and receive half price on Birthdays

TUESDAYS-and receive half price on Personals

students: 10¢ / word
non-students: 20¢ / word

Charge your Classified by phone @ 545-3500.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this meant dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELEANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 22

Career Forum — The Political Science Honors Society is holding a Career Forum at 4:30 p.m. in the sixth floor lounge of Thompson. It is free and open to the public. Students interested in what their political science or liberal arts degree can be used for after graduation are encouraged to attend. For more information, call Ramy at 253-8855 or Dan at 548-9780.

Discussion — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a panel discussion on "China, the U.S. and the Emerging World System" at 7:30 p.m. in Converse Hall at Amherst College.

Entertainment — The Not Ready for Bedtime Players will be performing at the New Africa House Library at 8 p.m. Free condoms are available.

Entertainment — Stories in the Sukkah, celebrate the harvest with storyteller and Hillel Program Director, David Arfa from 12–12:45 p.m. at the Hillel House Sukkah.

Meeting — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding a meeting at 7 p.m. at Earthfoods in the Student Union. All are welcome.

Meeting — The Queen Fan Club will hold its first meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union. New members welcome. For more information, contact Rosa at 546–5618 or email at rosak@student.umass.edu.

Meeting — SHAB, the Student Health Advisory Board will hold its bimonthly meeting at 5 p.m. in University Health Services, room 304. All are welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 903. All are welcome, bring your own or someone else's poetry or just come and listen. Call Tim at 546–0819 or Chanel at 546–6301 for more information.

THURSDAY, OCT. 23

Book reading — Author James Carroll will read from his National Book Award winning memoir, An American Requiem, at 4 p.m. at Food for Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — Intramural foul shooting and/or 3 point shot players meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249. Mandatory for all entered. Can enter at meeting.

Party — Simchat Torah party at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House. Celebrate the completion of the Torah cycle with food, fun and friends. Sponsored by Hillel.

Workshop — Mission Improvable is offering an improv comedy workshop at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. All levels welcome.

FRIDAY, OCT. 24

Blood Drive — Help save someone's life by donating blood 10:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. Call 800–462–2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Service — Shabbot services with Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All families are invited to come to this creative service led by Professor Julius Lester.

NOTICES

Auditions — Channel 19 News anchor and reporter auditions are being held on Tuesday, Oct. 21 from 5–7 p.m. and Wednesday, Oct. 22 from 6–8 p.m. Call UVC–TV 19 to schedule an appointment at 545–1336, which is located in the Student Union, room 216 behind the Hatch. Sample writings are preferred but not required. Positions open to all UMass undergraduate students.

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation of Friday, Oct. 24. The free one–hour sessions begin at 3 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545–0950 or check out www.umass.edu/lang;tr.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec. 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406E or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1 at http://www–ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

Support Group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program offers free bereavement support groups to students of the Five College area. All services are confidential. Enrollment for fall groups is happening now. Call 577–5316 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 22, 1997

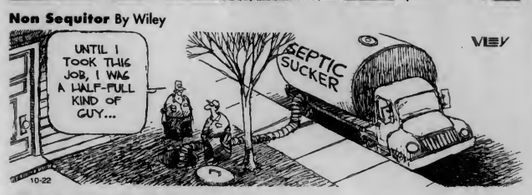
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Hershey's Kiss: Sweet Memories		Divided Highways: The Interstates			Law-Changed America		People-Here
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Reel TV	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Dharma-Greg	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Weyana Bros.	Steve Harvey	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.					News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married...With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Grace Under	Sentinal "Cypher" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.					News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "Fight or Flight"		News	Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 4 – Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.					News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Law-Changed America		Divided Highways: The Interstates			Foto-Novelas	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Dharma-Greg	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sentinal "Cypher" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	M*A*S*H	Seinfeld	Reel TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	 "The Neverending Story" (1984, Fantasy) Noah Hathaway.					 "Drop Dead Fred" (1991, Comedy) Phoebe Cates, Rik Mayall.
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order		Biography: Sophia Loren		American Justice		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "White Rabbit"
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	28	A-List (R)	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	 ½ "Haunted Honeymoon" (1986, Comedy) Gene Wilder.				South Park (R)	Tick	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	60	Wings "Sea Wings" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Meerkat		Discover Magazine "Mutations"		Strictly Supernatural		Justice Files "Behind Bars" (R)
ESPN	49	Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling	Model One Classic. (Live)		Golf: Wonderful World of Golf			Billiards		Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		 "A Son's Promise" (1990, Drama) Rick Schroder.			Real World	Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	67	MTV Live	Viewers	Real World	Road Rules	Beevis-Butt.	Beevis-Butt.	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Real World	Austin Stories	Ewen-Camm	Loveline (R)
NICK	68	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	70	Gerface	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "The Gravity of It All"		Sequest 2032 "Resurrection"		 ½ "Captain Kronos: Vampire Hunter" (1972) Horst Janson.				Time Trax "The Gravity of It All"
TLC	62	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Wondr Weathr	See Tek It	Sen Sheppard — Story		Crash Test		Wondr Weathr	See Tek It (R)
TNT	63	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clerk-Superman		"In the Heat of the Night: A Matter of Justice" (1994, Drama)					* "In the Heat of the Night" (1967, Mystery) Sidney Poitier.
USA	65	Baywatch		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger "Rodeo"		 "Divided by Hate" (1992, Drama) Tom Skerritt. (In Stereo)			Silk Stalkings "Dead Asleep"
HBO	51	 ½ "Bikini Zero" (1995, Comedy) Kristie Alley. "PG"				 ½ "Something to Talk About" (1995) "R"		 "The First Wives Club" (1996, Comedy) Goldie Hawn. "PG"				Tales Crypt
MAX	52	 ½ "Gung Ho" (1986, Comedy) Michael Keaton. "PG-13"				 ½ "Sudden Impact" (1983, Drama) Clint Eastwood. "R"					 ½ "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989) "PG-13"
SHOW	53	 "Dominick and Eugene" (1988, Drama) Tom Hulce. "PG-13"				 "Unforgettable" (1996, Suspense) Ray Liotta. (In Stereo) "R"					Dead Man's Gun	Feel Track	"Jack & Sarah"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Loser Crew By Alan De Monde

Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are sure to be easily distracted today, but what you finally decide to focus on will very likely prove profitable in time to come.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You are going to want to stay in touch with those who are expecting results from you today. You don't want them wondering what you're doing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You will want to take time out today for a personal issue that isn't going away. Tend to it now, and you can resolve it for good.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Put your best foot forward today. You can't afford to be misjudged; you want everyone to know, at this time, what your business really is.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can't afford to be secretive today. Let others know what you are doing and thinking, and be sure to speak openly and honestly.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Just when you thought you were ready to move on, you realize that there is one last–minute piece of business that remains to be addressed.

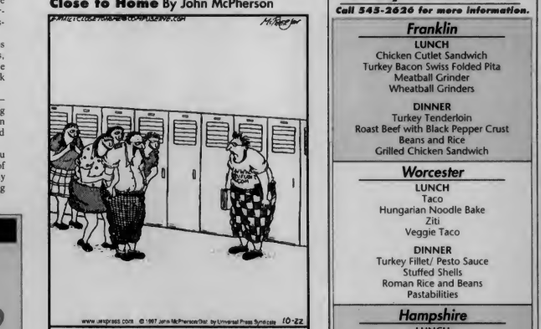
TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You don't want to be thought of as inconsequential today, so you must adopt a more aggressive stance that assures that you'll be noticed.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You are going to have to stick to your schedule very carefully at this time. You can't have things backing up on you. Get work done!

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — How you address your elders, and others who are in charge, will make all the difference today. You certainly want to give the right impression.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — This is a good day for making phone calls, writing letters and giving others the information they require to work more efficiently with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You don't want to leave anything undone today. Focus on getting even the most minute details completed before moving on to anything else.



LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can prove to others that your use of time is efficient and effective today by following your instincts and doing what you think is right.

Quote of the Day

"Conscience is the inner voice that warns us somebody may be looking."

–H.L. Mencken

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Turkey Bacon Swiss Folded Pita
Meatball Grinder
Wheatball Grinders

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roast Beef with Black Pepper Crust
Beans and Rice
Grilled Chicken Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Taco
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Ziti
Veggie Taco

DINNER
Turkey Fillet/ Pesto Sauce
Stuffed Shells
Roman Rice and Beans
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Taco
Grilled Sneeze

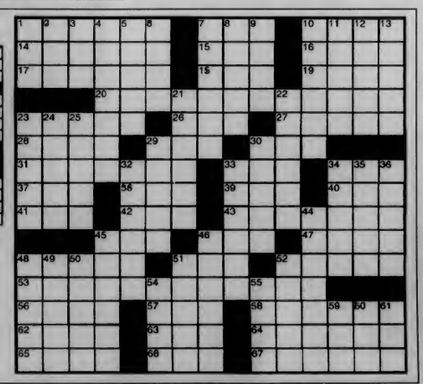
DINNER
Roast Beef with Black Pepper Crust
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet

Berkshire
LUNCH
Taco
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Veggie Taco

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roast Top Round of Beef
Rotini w/ Garden Veggies
Pastabilities

Daily Staff

Night Editor — Seema Gangotrikar
Photo Technician — Thang Vo
Copy Editor — Lorraine Kennedy
Production supervisor — Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff — Mark McGrath, Samantha Mahan



ACROSS
1 Like some landings
7 Fool
10 Swit costar
14 Son of Zeus
15 Bar brew
16 Lingerie item
17 Confine
18 Female deer
19 It's a long story!
20 Jerry Seinfeld, e.g.
23 "— Eyes"
26 Ancient
27 Angry
28 Pueblo Indian
29 Justice Fortas
30 Sculpture or painting
31 Guacamole ingredient
33 Spasm
34 Sound of the tame
37 Actor Ritter
38 Turf
39 Ostrich's kin
40 Jog
41 Devious
42 Taste
43 Something for a rainy day
45 Kicker's stand
46 — as a March hare
47 Movie unit
48 — Allan Poe
51 Rooter
52 San Diego baseball player
53 Popular condiment
56 Cardinal, e.g.
57 Volcanic dust
58 — Bowl
62 Eternally
63 Zuider —
64 Skillful
65 Contradict
66 Type of curve
67 Job-hunter's need

DOWN
1 Brief fashion
2 Unclose, poetically
3 Decompose
4 Well-known
5 Exclusive group
6 Spanish lady
7 Cowboy's seat
8 Audibly
9 Chirp
10 Classify
11 Pack animal
12 Finger or toe
13 Swiftly
21 Not a soul
22 Big Top
23 "— all she wrote"
24 Hut
25 Glue ingredient
29 Venerate
30 Intended
32 Behind, in a boat
33 Occupant
34 Raise (horses)
35 Boring tool
36 Viewpoint
44 Merchants
45 Sleazy
46 Fixes potatoes
48 Dwindled
49 Ambition
50 Bridge expert
51 Blends
52 Leonine group
54 Labyrinth
55 At a distance
59 French coin of yore
60 Comedian Conway
61 Consumed

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	A	M	E	R		B	O	P	S		T	I	O	N
E	R	U	P	T		O	B	O	E		H	A	R	T
T	E	R	S	E		V	I	E	W		A	N	K	H
S	A	K	I		C	I	S	T	E	R	N
S	Y	L	V	A	N		D	E	S	E	R	T
		O	A	T	E	S		T	O	R	A	H
B	E	N	T	S		E	O	N		M	O	P	E
D	R	Y		S	U	N	S	P	O	T		D	I	N
A	U	D	I	T		P	E	T		G	A	P	E	D
S	T	I	N	G		E	N	I	G	M	A
H	E	E	D	E	D		R	I	P	P	L	E
		D	E	M	O	N		R	A	I	S	E
M	O	W	N		B	O	O	N		L	I	V	E	D
U	N	I	T		T	I	L	E		E	K	I	N	G
D	O	G		S	L	E	D		T	A	I	N	S	Y

10-22-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

AP is useless; NU is No. 1; PSU is No. 2

The Top 25 college football rankings are a lot like wearing underwear.

After a while, they get annoying.

Well, it's mid–October, and as usual, the polls are out of whack. The No. 1 team in America is not the best or the most deserving, and with the schedule they have the rest of the way, they might end up as the No. 1 team in America (and still do not deserve it).

Which just means it's time for something I break out every year (well, this year and last year at least.)

The 2nd Annual "Luke's Mid–Season Anti–AP Poll Rant"...

You guys know how I feel about the Big Ten this year. It's the best conference in America. Right now, Penn St is the best team in the best conference. They are undefeated.

Luke Meredith on College Football

They should be No. 1.

That's the problem with the AP Top 25. By this time of year, there are usually four or five undefeated teams. How do you rank them against each other? (fairly, at least.)

You can't. So you go to other alternatives, like strength of schedule. Like conference strength. Like margin of victory.

It shouldn't be like that. But the system as it stands now doesn't allow the Top 10 to prove it on the field.

So you get a team like Nebraska. The Huskers play in a weak conference, and don't have to play their best football to win every week. As a consequence, they win one big game (Washington) and all of a sudden they're near the top again, because of past reputation and that all important AP voter's cliché, "Well, I think they're good."

Quite a system.

And where does that leave a team like Penn St.? A very good team who has to get up to play every week, or they'll lose (see Minnesota). Football is a grueling sport, and the physical and emotional strain from a tough schedule wears on you, no matter who you are.

And that shouldn't mean you lose your spot in the rankings. If anything, you should be rewarded for a tough schedule. But right now, the polls say "Hey, win one big game on national TV, beat up on the cupcakes and wait for everyone else to lose."

Nebraska's been doing that for years.

They need to decide this thing on the field. They need at least a Final Four, so all question as to who is the best can be answered. Because hey, maybe Nebraska is the best team. But right now, we'll never know.

Uncle Bill's Line of the Week...

Didn't talk to Uncle Bill this week. Sorry.

Booty Schwag of the Week Award...

Let's discuss the storied history of Ole Miss football the last 30 years...

Umm, let's see. Peyton Manning's dad Archie played there. Okay, that's good.

Umm, Peyton almost went there. Yep, yep.

Uhh, that's about it.

The Rebels have rivaled the NBA's Buffalo BravesSan Diego ClippersLos Angeles Clippers in terms of on field success — minus Pooh Richardson.

But Saturday, not only did they beat LSU in Baton Rouge, (something Stunning Steve Spurrier and the Gators couldn't do), they humiliated them 56–21.

In sports, games like this are called "let–downs." On Saturday, LSU committed a "breakdown." And with a performance like that, you know the Booty Schwag ain't too far behind.

Must be tough to live in Booty Rouge this week.

The "Luke doesn't know anything" Inside Tip Pick of the Week...(2–4)

Last week, I picked Miami. Miami didn't cover — again. I have friends that tell me every week, "Luke, we have to discuss that pick."

And they're usually right. So, I felt a name change was necessary.

Right now, at 2–4, I still have a shot at a small bowl. If I can recover and post six wins, I bet I could still earn a slot in either the Independence Bowl or the Copper Bowl.

And the comeback starts now. Michigan St. is a 2 1/2 point underdog at home against Michigan. The Wolverines have been, but they haven't broken.

Yet. They will up in East Lansing this week.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Catterton solidifying Minuteman offense

The senior quarterback has returned to start up the UMass scoring attack

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

The key to playing any sport is to enjoy the experience.

It's important to play hard and give it your all, but most importantly, you want to have fun — especially in college, because for most athletes they are playing in their final years.

Last year, having fun was a major problem for Anthony Catterton — the Massachusetts football team's senior quarterback.

Not only had his performance fallen down a notch, but the enjoyment level had dropped even further. Losing his starting job to then–freshman Jeff Smith, Catterton had forgotten how to take pleasure from the game he once had loved.

"I wasn't performing. I had hurt my shoulder, and I let it get to my head," Catterton said. "I wasn't having fun playing football."

Over the summer, Catterton worked with the Orlando Predators, an arena football team in Florida. He didn't play with the Predators, but he did get to watch a team having fun doing something they loved to play. The experience there helped re–enforce his feelings towards football, bringing back the love he once had for it.

"I just wanted to go in with that approach, just have fun and good things will happen," Catterton said.

Good things have happened to the senior quarterback, who got the call against New Hampshire on Oct. 4. The coaches were not getting what they wanted out of Smith, and felt that Catterton could be the offensive boost the team needed.

Bob Colbert, the Minutemen's offensive coordinator, who also works as the quarterbacks coach, had been moved into the spot of offensive coordinator partly to help improve the passing game with Smith. Strangely enough, it has been Catterton, who is considered a stronger running quarterback, that has put up the better passing numbers.

"We just didn't feel we were getting enough out of Jeff," Colbert said. "We felt that Anthony might be able to give this team the spark it needs."

Since Oct. 4, Catterton has been the inspiration behind UMass' offensive attack. Coming in during the second half of the New Hampshire game, he showed everybody, including himself, that he was finished playing football on the sidelines. During that half, Catterton was able to get reacquainted with the UMass offense, which he hadn't been a part of since Nov. 2, 1996 against Maine.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior QB Anthony Catterton has used his mobility to fuel the recent resurgence of the UMass offense.

"It was nice to be able to go back out there and play some football," Catterton said.

Catterton convinced everybody that he was the right man for the job the next game against No. 3 Villanova, who assumed the starting role just two days before kickoff.

Against Villanova, Catterton helped rack up 27 points in the second half — the most points the Wildcats had allowed all season. During that game, he completed 55 percent of his passes, which had been the best performance by any UMass quarterback all season. Smith's highest completion percentage was 46 against Richmond, when he completed 18 of 39 — both marks are career–highs.

"I think, being a senior, some of the other guys look up to me," Catterton said. "I can control them and make sure that they are confident, because I remember what it was like."

Catterton's completion mark in Villanova was erased last weekend against Buffalo.

Against the Bulls, Catterton completed 11 of 19 passes for 134 yards for a completion percentage of 59. He has also gone seven straight quarters, and 34 passing attempts, without throwing an interception.

That fact shows how Catterton has learned not to force the ball up the middle of the field, and on the other hand, also knowing when to throw the ball away.

Many of the interceptions coming from UMass quarterbacks this season have happened trying to get the ball to junior tight end Kerry Taylor and Co. up the middle in heavy defensive coverage.

While mixing in the pass, Catterton was able to get the option going in the running game, as well as gaining 44 yards rushing on his own. His boldness in the open field against Buffalo did put concern on the faces of his coaches

Turn to CATTERETON, page 8

B's are A's; Have another donut, you...

Going with my promise that I would only use one cheesy music reference per column this NHL season, this entire space is devoted to Cheap Trick, and their classic song "I Want You To Want Me."

And hey, if you're lucky, I might pull a Rick Neilsen on you and toss you about a hundred or so of my guitar picks.

• From the "I'd Love You to Love Me" department...

You thought I was being classic Homer–esque — not the dude from the Greek classics, people, but the long–haired Wookie–esque dude originally from central Mass, who bleeds Black and Gold — when I picked the Bruins to make the playoffs this season?

With a 6–3 start, the B's are sitting atop the Northeast Division, and playing good, sound, fundamental hockey.

Jorma Kansanen on The NHL

Yeah, and look how close I'm coming to be your hero (okay, buddy, cool the ego stroking.)

All narcissistic tendencies aside, new head coach Pat Burns has his team playing "good" hockey.

"Good," as in:

Quality penalty killing and two–way play by players like ex–Red Wing–er Tim "Tochime" Taylor (um, who?);

Timely goal scoring by Jason Allison and "Dancin'" Anson Carter (you know, those two young scrubs we got last season from Washington for that guy... you know that guy... oh yeah, Adam Oates);

And goaltending when it matters from NHL Co–Players of the Week Jim Carey and "Lord" Byron Dafoe (both posted a combined three shutouts on the team's 5–2 Western road trip going into last night's game versus Edmonton).

The long run will tell the tale with this team, but Burns has his team steadily developing into a style reminiscent of last year's Buffalo Sabres.

Former Sabres coach Ted Nolan, who unfortunately is enjoying some Molson Golsen's (the best there is from Canada, eh?) instead of coaching against teams who play at Le Centre Molson, had his no–superstar, minus–one goalie Dominik Hasek) team playing solid hockey until...

Husek got injured on both athletic and personal bases.

The star goalie missed most of the playoffs with a bad hamstring, while he just missed slugging out Jim Kelly from The Buffalo News (not the has–been NFL QB, but the has–not reporter).

And some of the youngsters for the B's — gee, Iorma, are you talking about last year's No. 1 can't miss pick Joe Thornton? — have not even got up to speed yet. Against traditional Homer–esque judgment (yeah, right), I went with the Bruins, and up to this point, I am right.

Damn, I'm tired of being right (hey, buddy, you're stroking your ego again).

• From the "I Beg You to Beg Me" department...

Detroit Red Wing superstar Sergei Fedorov, who is still holding out for a new contract, was reportedly seen enjoying a raspberry slushie at Dairy Mart last night with 16–year old Russian tennis phenom Anna Kournikova.

Both were seen sipping out of a three–paw cup with two straws while holding hands outside Fedorov's brand new 1997 Porsche, listening to that oh–so romantic ballad "2 Become 1" by The Spice Girls. Fedorov appeared to be totally infatuated with the under–aged superstar, begging for something more than friendship as he gazed helplessly into her amazing eyes.

Sources say that Anaheim Mighty Ducks superstar Paul Kariya, who also is holding out for a new contract, was reportedly seen driving up to the curb in his brand new 1997 BMW, ironically cranking out "Doin' It" by LL Cool J with Jen Capriati in the passenger seat.

Hey... just kidding.

But really, both of them make more money than 95 percent of the world's population to play the best game in the world.

So, I say, "Shut up and get on the ice."

• From the "Didn't I, didn't I, didn't I see you crying?" department...

Admit it.

All of us Boston sports fans had tears in our eyes when Adam Oates was sent off to the Washington Capitals last winter.

Aah, come on, admit it.

We're all modern men here.

While the trade on Boston's side seems to be panning out — with Allison and Carter getting quality ice

Turn to NHL, page 9

Gleason paces UMass cross country

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Correspondent

If you are not a close follower of Massachusetts men's cross country, the name Peter Gleason will probably not ring a bell. If you are, you are aware of the rewards of selfless hard work and dedication, though, the story of Peter Gleason is worth reading, regardless.

Gleason, a sophomore from Northboro, came to a crossroads midway through the last years' indoor track season — as a freshman.

"I think last year after a good cross country season, we sat Peter down for the indoor track season," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "He came out and struggled a little with track.

"He seemed to be down, so we sat down and talked, and he wasn't happy with the way things were going. He didn't have the smoothest outdoor season."

In Gleason's first cross country season, there were five seniors to lead the team. His running was less essential to the team's performance, and there was little pressure on him to place in the meets. After sitting out during the winter indoor track season, Gleason returned this season.

The off–time took its toll, and his times fell. Some collegiate athletes in their freshman year would get frustrated at such a point in time and give up, but Gleason viewed this as a personal challenge.

"He told me he wanted to gear up his workout over the summer," O'Brien said. "We focused on the things he did well and enjoyed. He went out and had a great, great summer workout, and also fine tuned his eating, sleeping and studying habits. He turned his commitment back on."

"Pete looked at himself as an individual and said, 'What can I do to make myself a better runner so I can help the team.' He knew the team was depending on him more."

For Gleason, his coach could not have put it much better.

"I knew that there was a lot of good guys who graduated, so I knew we had a young team this year," Gleason said. "I tried to do my thing and step up. I knew that if I worked hard over the summer, I could seriously help this year."

When the 1997 cross country season began, few people knew what to think about the young UMass team, and Gleason was still unsure of his role.

"We've had the leadership up front with (seniors) Ryan (Carrara) and Brian (Chabot)," Gleason said. "But all of us sophomores and freshman didn't know where we stood."

As it came time for competition, Gleason continued his hard work and established himself as the second runner on the team behind Carrara. During the first meets of the season, he consistently powered his way to second place finishes among Massachusetts runners; including sixth place overall at the first competition in Franklin Park against Iona and Northeastern. Still, though, Gleason was not satisfied.

"I put in the extra miles in the off season, but there were still some downtimes," Gleason said.

Turn to GLEASON, page 8

Johnston leads UMass into Garber Field dedication

The junior forward has helped the success of a young field and young team

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

On Sept. 14, the Massachusetts field hockey team faced one of its toughest early season tests with a road game against James Madison.

With the Minutewomen trailing by one in the second half, junior forward Erica Johnston took it upon herself to shoulder the scoring burden. At the 57:38 mark, Johnston converted a Kate Putnam pass to tie the game, though UMass eventually fell in overtime.

On Sept. 28, the Minutewomen were trailing Temple, 1–0, in an important Atlantic 10 conference game. With 1:35 left to play, Johnston tied things up with a goal scored on a penalty corner, and UMass went on to claim its second league victory.

On Columbus Day weekend, a Johnston goal sparked the Minutewomen's 2–1 win over then–No. 9 Ball State. The next day, she pocketed a tally in her team's upset victory over then–No. 10 Syracuse.

But, it is not just these games, because Johnston's scoring summary reads almost as complete as the Minutewomen's schedule. In fact, except for UMass' game against Wake Forest, and the three games the team as a whole was held scoreless, Johnston has run the gamut, scoring at least once in every game.

As a result, she leads her team, as well as the A–10, in scoring — in both goals and points scored categories. Additionally, she has racked up four A–10 Player of the Week and two UMass Athlete of the Week awards going into Saturday's match against Connecticut, as Richard F. Garber Field will be officially dedicated.

"Erica brings a lot to the table," UMass coach Patty Shea said. "She's very good in front of the ball, she moves around the field well. She's stepped up her play."

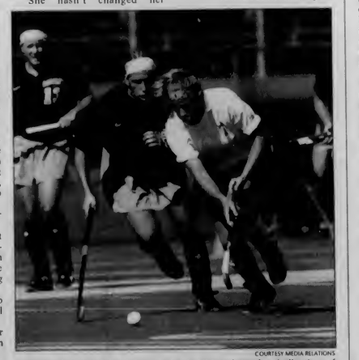
Changes to the Minutewoman roster practically forced Johnston's hand in that respect. Last year's leading scorer, Saskia Fuchs, returned to her native Netherlands, and All–American midfielder Kyle Rothenberger graduated.

"Erica has another year of experience under her belt," Shea said. "She had a strong summer and she's a year older. She needed to gain that confidence in order to see that, yes, she was going to be the one to step up."

And the task became personal for Johnston.

"We have a lot of freshmen in, but they don't have very much experience, especially in the early part in the season," Johnston said. "So we didn't have quite as balanced scoring attack.

"Their experience has picked up over the last few games, but I still feel like I have to score."



Filling the void left by her former teammates' departures hasn't been difficult for Johnston.

With four regular season games still remaining on UMass' schedule, she has already surpassed her totals from last year for goals (13 last year, 16 this year) and points (29, 34), even though she has had to deal with the added pressure of tighter defense from the opposition.

"She hasn't changed her approach," Shea said. "She has continued to play her style of hockey."

Though under Shea's tutelage, Johnston has seen her game develop more. No longer is she playing to

Turn to JOHNSTON, page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior forward Erica Johnston leads UMass into the dedication of Richard F. Garber Field on Saturday.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 36 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Thursday, October 23, 1997

Looking for something to do?

Sick of those weekend blues? The Collegian has the cure for you (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Battle of the U's

Despite a valiant effort by sophomore Jill Meyers and the women's volleyball team, they fell 3–1 against UConn (see Sports, page 14.)

WORLD

Ugandan soldiers rescue 85 children

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The government rescued 85 child captives from rebels in northwestern Uganda, but in a separate clash the guerrillas attacked and burned a convoy of five vehicles, killing two people, newspapers reported yesterday.

The attack by the Lord's Resistance Army occurred Monday near Pakwach, a town on the Albert Nile River 200 miles from Uganda's capital of Kampala, The Monitor newspaper reported. Earlier this month, rebels attacked a convoy southeast of Pakwach, killing 12 people.

Army commander Maj. Gen. Mugisha Muntu said there had been no previous attacks on the road where the ambush occurred Monday. "We believe the rebels are carrying out ambushes to draw attention to themselves," the state–owned New Vision newspaper quoted the general as saying.

The children were rescued from the rebels in northern Gulu district last week as about 250 rebels fled into southern Sudan, New Vision said. The rebels kidnap both boys and girls to use as porters and cooks. Most of the girls are raped.

NATION

Two Air Force planes collide at Edwards

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Air Force T–38 jet trainer crashed yesterday after an in–flight collision with an F–16 fighter jet at Edwards Air Force Base in California, the service announced.

The status of the T–38 Talon crew "is unknown at this time," said an Air Force statement released at the Pentagon. The F–16 Fighting Falcon landed, the statement said.

The T–38 is a two–seat training jet, the F–16 a single–seat jet. The collision occurred just weeks after Secretary of Defense William Cohen ordered all the services to perform safety "stand–downs" and review their training procedures after a rash of air crashes.

The statement did not specify where the T–38 crashed at Edwards, in southern California's Mojave Desert.

"They did see a chute" from the trainer, said Maj. Felecia Tavares, an Air Force spokeswoman at the Pentagon. Military personnel were rushing to the scene at the huge flight–test center about 20 miles east of Rosamond, Calif.

The F–16 crew landed in the dry bed of Rogers Lake at the base, the statement said. No details were available on the condition of the F–16 pilot.

In September, the military suspended training flights for air crews for 24 hours to focus on safety issues arising from a recent string of accidents.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 46 LOW: 32	HIGH: 48 LOW: 35	HIGH: 59 LOW: 55

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Let's try this again

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Elly Court, a junior biology major, collects ballots at the second SGA election in Worcester Dining Hall yesterday afternoon.

MassPIRG launches campaign against state pesticide use

By Ken Tatro
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts chapter of MassPIRG (Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group), along with the other 27 MassPIRG chapters across the state, are currently campaigning to reduce the amount of pesticides used on state property.

The campaign is intended to help pass the Pesticide Disclosure Act through the state legislature.

"This is an issue which affects everyone," said Melanie Undem, campus organizer of the MassPIRG chapter at UMass.

According to Undem, the Pesticide Disclosure Act contains three parts, all of which are to assist the public in their knowledge about pesticides and to reduce the amount of pesticides currently being used.

The Pesticide Disclosure Act requires there be at least a 48–hour advance notice to those most likely to be exposed to pesticides on lawns, for landscaping and at schools. It would also create a publicly accessible database which would include information regarding quantity, location and toxicity of chemical pesticides.

Finally, the act would require the state to develop and implement least–toxic pest management policies for all state buildings.

Integrated Pest Management (IPM) is an alternative to using chemical pesticides, said Undem. IPM is a pest control system which emphasizes prevention and common sense first and the use of toxic pesticider last.

"IPM teaches people to think proactively instead of reactively," Undem said. Giving an example of IPM, Undem said that if there are ants in a building instead of spraying the ants every month with insecticides one should find the ant nest and dispose of it.

The Pesticide Disclosure Act is a "step in the right direction to tell the public how toxins and pesticides are effecting our health," Undem said.

The bill, which MassPIRG hopes to get passed by the end of the fall semester, is currently being debated in the state House Ways and Means Committee and, if it passes, will then go to vote on the floor of the state senate.

"We encourage everyone to become involved," Undem said. "The more people become involved, the more opportunity there is to pass it."

UMass alum to give lecture on future of Latin America

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

On Monday, Oct. 21, the University of Massachusetts will host UMass alumnus Jeffrey Davidow, assistant secretary of state for Inter–American Affairs. The event is the first Leonard J. Horowitz Memorial Lecture on Latin America and it is entitled, "Preparing the Americas for the 21st Century."

According to Howard Wiarda, the Leonard Horowitz professor of political science at UMass, Davidow is the most important official in the U.S. Government on Latin America. Davidow is returning to the U.S. after accompanying President William B. Clinton on his trip to South America.

Davidow was sworn in by Secretary of State Warren Christopher on August 7, 1996. He has served in American Embassies in Guatamala and Chile and was Deputy Chief of Mission of the U.S. Embassy in Caracas from 1986 to 1988. He returned to Venezuela as Ambassador in Sept. 1993, and became Acting Assistant Secretary for Inter–American Affairs in May 1996.

Davidow was Ambassador to Zambia from 1988 to 1990 and the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary in the African Bureau from 1990 to 1993.

He participated in peace negotiations in southern Africa and is the author of a number of articles and a book on the process of negotiations.

Davidow graduated from the UMass in 1967 with a Bachelor's Degree from the history department.

He will be speaking at 3 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center. There is no charge and the lecture is open to the public.

"We are very proud of our alums and Jeffrey has done very well. It is great to have him hear to speak on his experiences in the State Department," Wiarda said.

Students sought for community service

By Eric Petersen
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts students and citizens from all over Hampshire County will mobilize to do their part for "Make A Difference Day" in Northampton and Amherst on Saturday, Oct. 25.

The UMass Community Service Program, sponsoring UMass' involvement in the event, expects 160 volunteers to take part in a number of "Make A Difference Day" service projects such as cleaning up parks and hiking trails and painting buildings of community agencies.

Joining UMass students will be volunteers from The Daily Hampshire Gazette and the Hampshire Community United Way, who are co–sponsoring the event.

"We're hoping the Make A Difference Day events will really catch on and become an annual event," said Flavia Stanley, a representative of the UMass Community Service Program. This is the Service Program's fourth year sponsoring and organizing various days of service to encourage students to become involved in the community, but it's the first year of involvement with Make A Difference Day activities.

This year's activities include a visit to the Jean Elder House, a residence for the elderly where participants will clean the court yard and paint benches.

Also on the schedule are trips to the South Hadley Girls Scouts camp to clean hiking trails and Fort River Playscape in Northampton to sand one of the play scapes. If they receive enough participation, they may also send a group to paint at the Northampton High School.

"We're looking for student groups, like frats and sororities, RSOs (Registered Student Organizations), and residence halls to participate as well as the general student population," Stanley said, but she hopes that UMass' Parent's Weekend activities may draw participants away.

"A lot of the groups we can usually count on help from are involved with other activities for Parent's Weekend," Stanley said.

Activities for "Make A Difference Day" will begin Oct. 25 at Haigis Mall, where transportation will be provided to the activities at 8 a.m. and back at 2 p.m.

Any persons or groups interested in helping to make "Make A Difference Day" a success are invited. Volunteers are asked to contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545–3368 to register.

The UMass Community Service Program sponsors other days of service through out the year. Their "FILL–A–BUS Drive" is held before and after Thanksgiving on Nov. 24 and 25 and again from Dec. 1–5. UMass students can help fill PVTA buses by contributing clothing, toys and non– perishable food items which will then be donated to charitable organizations in Amherst. "Imo Amherst" is another Day of Service in which student volunteers perform service projects specifically in Amherst.

The Service Program will also be hosting a Community Service Conference in March to promote participation in community service projects by student organizations.

"We're really trying to link the efforts of the smaller service groups and RSOs on campus," Stanley said. "A lot of them run their own service projects, but we want to make sure they're aware of the bigger picture and give them a chance to get involved on a larger scale."

UMass women head to Philadelphia for Saturday's Million Woman March

By Voy Fernandes
Collegian Correspondent

As the Million Woman March grows near, the anticipation of many University of Massachusetts participants increases.

The Million Woman March will be taking place Saturday in Philadelphia, Pa., featuring some of the most prominent women in 20th century.

The ceremony will begin at 9 a.m. in the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. It is expected to be filled with nationally– recognized celebrities like Coretta Scott King, Afeni Shakur, Rosa Parks, Maxine Waters and well as other famed individuals.

Approximately 200 UMass women of color will be attending the March. Sponsored by the Everywoman's Center's Woman of Color program, three buses are scheduled to leave Haigis Mall for Philadelphia on Friday night at 11:30 p.m.

Women attending the March will meet at 9 p.m. at the Malcom X Center, where a group of men will send the women off.

Reservations are no longer available for seats on the buses, which will be packed with women of all creeds, colors and sexual orientations.

Their mission, according to Lisa Scott, Director of the Women of Color program, is "to feel a sense of connection after the March."

An organizational meeting for the March held last Wednesday revealed some reasons why women of color are going to the March.

"Everytime I made the effort to talk to someone [male or female] on this campus, they would look at me as if I were weird," sophomore Dahlia Lindsay said. This is a situation they hope to rectify on campus after the March.

Another concern of the Everywoman's Center is that women of color should try not to expect instantaneous results, but rather gradual and continual change after the March.

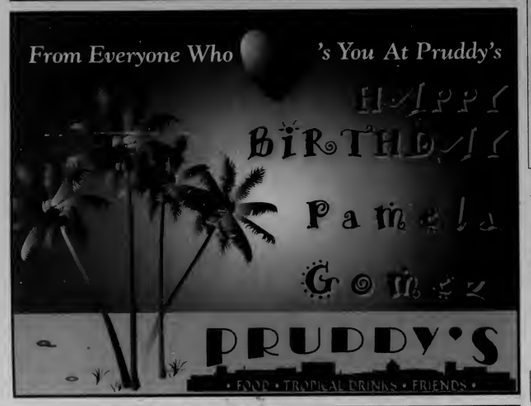
During a women's studies department workshop last week, professor Jennifer Ire asked about 100 women in attendance to ask themselves, "Why are they going on this March?" and "What are they expecting from the March?"

Responses such as "a last attempt at sisterhood on campus," and "to break some barriers" in "non–existent" relationships women of color have on this campus, were offered by the women in the audience.

Many women at the meeting expressed feelings of hope and change after the March. The women of color at UMass feel they are taking the first step at beginning the process of opening communication doors.

The UMass students who will be attending the March are excited about being part of history and change.

"I'm hoping to make lifetime friends on the bus to Philadelphia and at the March," junior Daniela Trammell said.



JONATHAN SANDBERG / COLLEGIAN

Bike balance
Brian Bucala of Whately does tricks on his bike yesterday at the Haigis Mall.

The Collegian is on-line at WWW.umass.edu/rso/colegian

PRUDDY'S
9:00 pm to 1:00 am
• FOOD • TROPICAL DRINKS • FRIENDS •
thursday DJ JU & DJ Dave friday DJ Magic Mike
saturday DJ Ses
BUFFET 5-8 p.m. Thursday-Saturday $7.50
Best Prices & Atmosphere in the Valley
Come and enjoy DJ dancing all weekend long!
253.2899 571 Main St, Amherst

LAUREN ROSATI / COLLEGIAN

Storytelling in the Sukkah
Storyteller and Hillel Program Director David Arfa stands in the Hillel House Sukkah, before telling stories to students yesterday.

Fire destroys car in CC garage

Shortly after 8 a.m. yesterday morning, a Volkswagen Jetta caught on fire in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center garage. The North Fire Station of the Amherst Fire department responded to the call at 8:20 a.m.

According to Captain Lindsay Stromgren, the fire was put out in five minutes.

"The car was completely destroyed," Stromgren said. "The sprinklers didn't activate in the garage because the fire wasn't hot enough."

The car is owned by Matthew Emond, junior turf management major.

"I went to class and they [UMass security] told me my car was on fire," Emond said.

"In the police department we have access to student's schedules so that in case of emergencies we can notify them," Public Safety Officer Niel Lunney said.

"I am definitely going to miss that car," Emond said.

— Joseph Fountain

COME TO WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLEGIAN

Correction

The photographs of the Rolling Stones concert in yesterday's Arts & Living section were taken by staff photographer Kenneth W.P. Scott. The Collegian regrets the error.

¿ERES DE LOS MEJORES?
¡UNETE AL MEJOR!

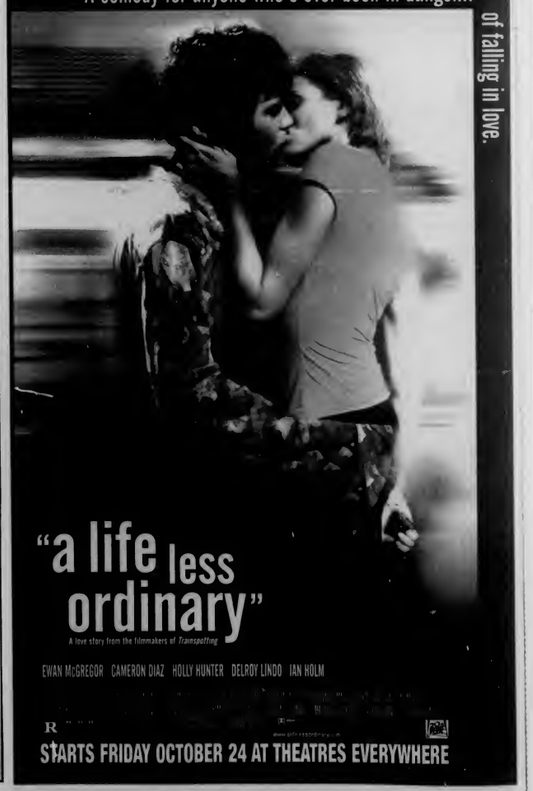
Procter&Gamble LATINOAMERICA

Te invita a:
"Un Mundo do Oportunidades"

29 de octubre de 1997
6:00 - 8:00 p.m.
The Fairmont Copley Plaza
138 St. James Avenue, Boston
GRAND BALLROOM

Ejecutivos de Procter & Gamble Latinoamérica hablarán de tus oportunidades para ocupar posiciones permanentes o realizar prácticas de verano en nuestras subsidiarias de Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Guatemala, México, Perú, Puerto Rico y Venezuela. Ofrecemos la posibilidad de una carrera en las áreas de Mercadeo, Finanzas, Ingeniería, Sistemas, Ventas y Recursos Humanos entre otros. Procter & Gamble líder mundial en el mercado de productos de consumo, está a la búsqueda de estudiantes con características de dinamismo y liderazgo.

Qué debes hacer:



Lleva tu resumé (SIN FALTA) antes del 24 de octubre a:

UMASS
Ms. Ruth Carey
Mather Career Center
5-6252 Mather Building

Unete tú también al grupo líder de:
Procter&Gamble
División Latinoamericana

Patrono con igualdad de oportunidades en el empleo M/H/F/V

A comedy for anyone who's ever been in danger... of falling in love.

"a life less ordinary"
A love story from the filmmakers of Trainspotting
EWAN McGREGOR CAMERON DIAZ HOLLY HUNTER DELROY LINDO IAN HOLM
R
STARTS FRIDAY OCTOBER 24 AT THEATRES EVERYWHERE

China opposes U.S. interference

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A week before Jiang Zemin meets President Clinton at the White House, the Chinese warned the U.S. government yesterday against meddling in domestic dealings from Tiananmen to Tibet.

"We oppose any interference in China's internal affairs," Embassy spokesman Yu Shuning told reporters at a news conference. Yu also cautioned the government to provide a safe environment for Jiang's weeklong visit beginning Sunday in Honolulu. His itinerary includes several speeches, including one at Harvard University where protests are expected. Human rights groups have promised to follow Jiang, whom Yu insisted is looking forward to "extensive contacts with all American people."

"We are guests of the American government, so we hope the U.S. government will do a good job so their so-called dissidents will not realize their aim of disrupting this state visit and disrupting U.S-Sino relations," Yu said. "Everything should go smoothly." State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Jiang would get adequate protection, but he noted that people have a right in the United States to openly protest.

"America is a democracy, and we are not seeking to infringe in any way on the rights of Americans to have their voice be heard in whatever way is permitted by a local jurisdiction," Rubin said. "And the fact that the Chinese president is here doesn't change that principle upon which this nation was based."

In one area of contention, Yu said China objects to Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's plan to appoint a U.S. coordinator to Tibet, possibly by Nov. 1. The coordinator would encourage the Chinese to hold autonomy talks with Tibet's exiled leader, the Dalai Lama, who fled his mountain region in 1959 after the communist government crushed a rebellion by his Buddhist followers. "I think it's a problem for us," the embassy spokesman said in an unusually candid exchange about Chinese views on irritants in the U.S.-China relationship. "That kind of appointment constitutes a sort of interference into our internal affairs, so we are opposed to that."

On Tiananmen Square, Yu defended the Chinese military crackdown on democracy demonstrators in 1989. He said Jiang didn't plan to talk about it with Clinton during their Oval Office meeting yesterday, although the U.S. administration brings up human rights at most every meeting. This will be the first U.S.-China summit since the bloody episode, which Jiang once described as "much ado about nothing," angering the West. Hundreds of people may have been killed and thousands jailed.

"I'm afraid that particular issue will not be discussed before the two presidents," Yu said when asked about Tiananmen. "Facts have shown the Chinese government was forced to take radical measures to maintain order and society stability so that our economic development would not be interrupted.

"And the facts have shown that since then China has opened even wider to the outside world, and our economic development has realized a high rate of growth. So those measures have been successful."

Indeed, the Chinese economy has grown by an average of almost 10 percent a year for several years. At the same time, the U.S. trade deficit with China was widening, reaching $39.5 billion in 1996 and an expected $44 billion this year.

Yu promoted a Chinese trade mission currently in New York, which hopes to negotiate up to $4 billion in U.S. deals ahead of the summit.

Pentagon to abusers: drop your weapons

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Many men and women in the military are being told they must turn in their weapons to comply with a law prohibiting gun ownership by people convicted of domestic abuse. The Pentagon issued an interim policy yesterday in line with a federal law passed more than a year ago.

Since carrying a weapon is essential to many jobs in the military, requiring such a step might mean that those service members affected will have to take on desk jobs.

To find out, all of the military's 1.4 million men and women are being required to fill out a form asking whether they had been convicted of such an offense. If they are not truthful, they could be prosecuted and thrown out of the service, officials said.

Frank Rush, the principal deputy assistant secretary for force management policy, said the Pentagon expects the number of people affected "would be low," perhaps in the hundreds. Most who enter the military are "young, unmarried and unlikely to bring such a conviction with them," he said. However, a senior officer speaking privately said the number could be as high as the thousands. One of the authors of the measure, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, (D-N.J.), criticized the Pentagon for being slow to act and for taking so long to find out how many people in the military might be abusers.

"It's understandably a complicated task for them, but they don't have the data that I frankly thought they would have by now," Lautenberg said.

The senator predicted it would be close to two years since the law was passed before any meaningful data from the military has been gathered.

"Meanwhile, women and children could be killed," he said. Lautenberg said the military at least could have done sampling surveys in the past year.

No-confidence vote in Yelstin dropped

By Maura Reynolds
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia's contentious parliament sealed a truce with the president yesterday, formally withdrawing a no-confidence motion in his government and pledging to cooperate on making new policies.

"For the first time, we laid a foundation for overcoming a very acute crisis," said Communist Party leader Gennady Zyuganov, who heads the largest faction in parliament's lower house, the State Duma.

The new collaboration stands in marked contrast to the weeks of sparring that preceded it, when Communists and their hard-line allies repeatedly accused President Boris Yeltsin of ruining the country by slashing military funding and subsidies to state industry.

Under the detente reached Tuesday, the Yeltsin administration and parliament will form joint commissions to find compromises on divisive issues, including land ownership, housing reform and energy prices.

"The Duma and the government now have a chance to make our joint work more effective," Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin told parliament. "All this testifies to a new reality and it means that the country is entering a new epoch."

However, Zyuganov warned if the new cooperation is unsuccessful, his party reserves the right to propose another no-confidence motion.

"We believe only in concrete deeds," he said.

The Communists spearheaded the drive to hold the vote of no-confidence, which originally was planned for last week. If two such motions are passed within three months, the president must dismiss his government or call new parliamentary elections. Eager to avoid such a showdown, Yeltsin offered concessions. The Duma responded by first delaying and eventually canceling the vote. Arriving in Moldova yesterday for a summit of former Soviet republics, Yeltsin insisted that he didn't simply give in to the opposition.

"It's not right to say we made concessions. I'd put it differently: We reached mutual understanding," the president told reporters, according to the Interfax news agency.

The congenial resolution suggested that both sides wanted to break the cycle of confrontation and deadlock, but the truce has not resolved any of the substantive issues.

One is the draft 1998 budget, which the Communists and other hardliners are criticizing as too austere. They want to increase government funding for the military, agriculture, pensions and other social programs.

Yeltsin wants to keep spending tight to reduce the federal deficit and spur economic growth.

The compromise also put off the adoption of Russia's new tax code, which the government says is a cornerstone of further economic reforms. Yeltsin ordered the government to withdraw the current version of tax reform and consult with parliament on a new version.

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This Weekend come try
Walker's New Menu!
Friday & Saturday: Prime Rib $8.95!
All Week $1 Miller Genuine Drafts
$1 Vodka Shots
41 Boltwood Walk, Downtown Amherst • Behind Antonios
MC/VISA & Amex • OCMP Accepted • 253-4040

amc There is a Difference!
$2.50 (Ten-Lite) Show Daily
• Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Rocketman (PG) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Playing God (R) Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:20
L.A. Confidential (R) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:10
I know What You Did Last Summer (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
The Peacemaker (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
U-Turn (R) Today at 8:30
In and Out (PG-13) Today at 5:50 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:20
Most Wanted (R) Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

Your Competitive Edge

The Elliott School offers career-oriented graduate programs in:
- International Affairs
- Science, Technology and Public Policy
- International Trade and Investment Policy

and 14 other specialized programs in our regionalprofessional fields

For more information, meet with an Elliott School representative at the James Madison University Graduate Fair in Phillips Hall Ballroom on October 9, from 11:00am - 3:00pm
or contact:
Elliott School of International Affairs
The George Washington University
2013 G Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20052
(202) 994-7050
e-mail: esiograd@gwis2.circ.gwu.edu
Website: http://www.gwu.edu/~elliott/

The George Washington University
THE ELLIOTT SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Mama Mia

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

• CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS •
DESIGNER CLOTHING
for WOMEN, MEN & CHILDREN
BED and BATH LINENS,
HANDBAGS, JEWELRY,
STATIONERY and GIFTS
50% to 80% OFF Original Department Store PRICES
THE STOCK ROOM
DKNY • LAUNDRY • RALPH LAUREN • JONES NY • GIAN BERNINI • AND MORE!
CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Memory lane

Luke Meredith

I used to go to UMass–Lowell. Please don't make fun of me. I was 18, and it was either that or Fitchburg State. (I wasn't exactly valedictorian. I once had a class with her, though.)

P.J. swayed the vote. His advice, earnest as it was, I can't remember. But it was along the lines of "Hey, at least it's not Fitchburg."

That part of life seems like it was so long ago.

But I got in touch with Walshie last week and after always not being able to visit. I finally am Friday night.

But nobody's there anymore. You see, at Lowell, you do one of two things. One, you get serious about your studies and you transfer to a real school. (Like me). Or two, you drop out and get a job landscaping. (Like the rest of my friends at home.)

I've since moved on to greener pastures and all the fame being a Collegian columnist provides. (I'm thinking of asking either Gwyneth Paltrow or Whoopie Goldberg to the Oscars.) But I wound up loving my days at the place we used to call "UML" (Ummel to all us ex–Riverhawks.)

And even though it's been 3 years, all I ever remember from UML that wacky school year in 1994, when Kurt Cobain was alive, Ice beer wasn't invented and Luke Meredith had hockey hair.

Those were the days.

I can picture it now. For one night, I, Luke Meredith, will do nothing but reminisce about the days when I went to a little school down the street from Methuen.

And I'll annoy the hell out of my friends.

I'm anticipating my night to go something like this.

Me: "Hey Walshie. Remember the time we went to 3–T's and got those subs with Brian Shea after we went to see Malice. We had that great discussion about... something."

People Luke is boring with his old stories: "Uh, yeah. But they closed down 3–T's a few years ago."

Me: "Really. Well, remember that time me and Norty ruined that kid's futon because we started throwing cake at each other and it got everywhere and he yelled at me and said he couldn't trust us anymore."

People Luke is boring with his old stories: "Norty just got a job in sales."

Me: "Someone gave Norty a job?"

"Yeah."

Me: "The same Norty that tried to outrun security at Fenway Park after they took away his fake I.D.?"

"Yup."

Me: "Oh. Well, how about that time I drank all that vodka and Kool–Aid with Brian Shea (an alcoholic, as you can tell) and puked on the floor at Jimmy's? I never drank vodka again."

"Sounds like fun, Luke."

Me: "Okay, this was a classic. Remember when we had that Christmas party and we all did whippets with the can of air freshener. What a rush."

"Didn't you puke the next day?"

Me: "Yeah, I did."

"Oh."

And there you have it. I'll probably end up drunk in the middle of Lowell, like I have a million times. But this time it will be different. The faces will have changed, the place will have changed, and my friends will have changed.

But then, so have I.

And it's a weird thing, memories. In a time when it seems as though "who you are" has in many ways yet to be determined, remembering who you were and what you used to be like takes on a special meaning. It's strange to realize that there is a place out there that changed your life, and you can't even seem to comprehend what it was like to be there.

I know someday I'll probably feel that way about UMass. Everything reduced to a couple of stupid stories that people who weren't there will find slightly annoying. But I guess that's how life goes. (Might even explain why high school reunions still exist.)

In the meantime, though, it will be nice to have one night to remember what it used to be like, and revel in the easy calm of old friends who know what you used to be like.

And like you anyways.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

The very big Brad

Dahlia DeSimone

I have a friend — let's call him Bradley Bequiet. I call him a friend because he exists, and we have spoken to each other before. Bradley is sometimes loud. When Bradley screams, he can be heard by at least a thousand students here at UMass. I only catch him speaking in the hour that he screams.

Because many people can hear Bradley when he screams (it is hard not to, his voice echoes through campus) it is not surprising that they actually listen to what he is saying. Bradley speaks, his voice can be heard and people listen to what he has to say.

I often get offended with what Bradley has to say. He is always talking about sex (which is not offensive), but whenever he includes women, he speaks not only as if he is ignorant and pathetically minded, but also in a way that can subordinate or assault women verbally. Bradley sexually exploits women. I call him a "slimy above–the–rim" type of guy: He says what he has to say, gets away with the little slurs in between sentences (that really show the world what he is made out of), and then covers up his offensive remarks by telling a story of how he cares, or how innocent his intentions are.

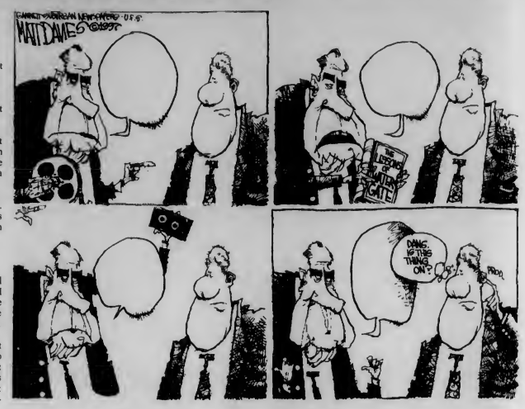
I screamed back at him once. I told him that since he has the special power to scream and be heard by so many people, he should say something more joyous, beneficial or more entertaining. I told him that when he speaks of women in the way that he does, it is offensive and intolerable. I told him that he could be using his voice to benefit and applaud others, but rather he chooses to scream: "Show me your pierced nipples" or asks "How do you give oral sex?" He says, "I'll tell the world what your nipples look like, they can hear me!"

But is that what the world wants to hear? Do people want to hear about how lacking of education he is? And do they want to hear that through the air? Can't Bradley get over the fact that women have beautiful bodies, and focus more on women who have beautiful minds; that their minds should be more focused on than their bodies and how they can be used?

But no. Bradley says he has the freedom of speech and the power (and talent) to scream. I told him he was offensive and hurt my feelings, but there was nothing else for him to do than in other words say: "Sorry. It's too bad you feel that way, but I am going to continue to be foolish, continue to sexually exploit women because I feel like it."

But sorry is not good enough for me. I said to him: "Why don't you feel like changing the world for the better? Why keep pointing and pushing and prodding the same place that women have been abused for all of their lives?" I said, "Why can't you do something that betters the world?"

His kind friend answered for him: "We know we can change the world, we just choose not to." (Good answer I thought, in my most sarcastic mind.)



Bradley will continue talking about women, degrading them and being sexually explicit because he gets joy from it. I get joy from sexual conversation and action too, but I do not agree with how he treats women with his words or what he has to say in general about women when he screams. It is not only what Bradley says, but how he says it. I am sure if he asked a black man questions like: "Let me see your freaky afro — and how fast do you run, anyway?" a lot of people would get upset.

People tend to notice or recognize forms of racial degradation before the degradation of sex. There is nothing wrong with that, racism should be shot down, but so should women's sexual exploitation.

Bradley is offensive and there is nothing I like about the way he speaks. He could be better, I thought. Everyone could be a better person, as his friend said, "We just choose not to."

Bradley if you are gonna scream, then be sure to know that my heart is screaming back at you. You are offensive, a fool and a jerk. Stop getting to know yourself out loud because it hurts more than it is annoying, and that's a lot.

Dahlia DeSimone is a UMass student.

Playing devil's advocate

Why do we (by we, I mean Christians) feel the need to put down everyone else's faith to make ours look better? Maybe it's because we question their own faith, since sometimes what our religious leaders tell us contradicts logic, reason and common sense.

Chris Sulhamn

I was brought up as a Christian, my whole family is Christian, and I feel that my family is good, tolerant and very understanding people.

But, what baffles me is how they could wind up like this after going to the same church all their lives. I have, of course, gone to this church several times throughout my life. Most of the experiences I've had there consisted of the preachers or Sunday school teachers making us feel good by telling us how bad everyone else is. Now isn't the point of Christianity to follow the teachings of Jesus? I thought Jesus told us to "love thy neighbor" or something along those lines.

I understand that there is a noble purpose behind this. The preachers want to spread the good word and help us achieve what they believe is the only path to salvation. What I don't agree with is all of the mud-slinging that goes on in the Sanctuary.

Here's a great example of what I mean. Last Easter, my mother made me go to church. When I got there, the pastor started off the service with the "roll call in hell." "Great, this ought to be interesting," I thought.

The pastor got up and began with, "Buddha." Someone in the congregation responded with, "Here." Next the pastor said, "Confucius." Again, someone in the congregation responded with, "Here." Next came, "Muhammad." Another person said, "Here."

Next, I heard "Jesus." It was silent for awhile, then someone up front said, "He is not here." A chorus of Hallelujahs and Amens followed.

"Hey, this is great," I think. "It's splendid and all that Jesus isn't in hell, but was it really necessary to say that all of these other people are to show that he isn't? I mean, couldn't a simple 'He is risen. He is risen, indeed!' demonstrate that just as well?"

Why did that pastor feel the need to say all of the other billions of people in the world who follow one of those religions are going to hell? It seemed to me that they were behaving like bullies in elementary school; they were making themselves feel better by putting down everyone else.

Now, I am in no way saying that these are wicked people or that the Christian religion is bad. I just think that along the line in history, Christianity was used for personal gain countless times and it has seriously damaged the noble purpose of the founders of the religion. In other words, the goals of some of the leaders were selfish ones, and like a tree, if the root is poisoned, it will effect every cell in the tree in some way.

I firmly believe that Jesus was a good man, and he had some really good things to say that help people out to this day. Whether or not he was the son of God, I don't know. But I feel that his teachings could be used as guidelines for someone's life. I don't know much about Confucius, Muhammad or Buddha, but I'm sure they had a lot of good things to say, too.

Why do we (by we, I mean Christians) feel the need to put down everyone else's faith to make ours look better? Maybe it's because we question their own faith, since sometimes what our religious leaders tell us contradicts logic, reason and common sense. Seeing other faiths slandered helps us boost our confidence in our own. I think it's awful that some people go out and hurt others in the name of Jesus because I'm sure that's not what he wanted.

I also think that the whole "roll call in hell" thing at my local church was self–righteous hypocrisy and it disgusted me. It bothers me because I feel that Jesus' teachings were meant to help people learn to live and work together despite their differences, not set them against each other.

It's commonplace to read in the newspaper about the newest "enemy" to Christians. These consist of just about everything, like role playing gamers and card gamers, television, homosexuals, animated mice, democrats, etc. I'm convinced that a lot of these "Christian" groups are actually just some guy who wants attention and power so he uses a name that many people know and trust to back up (and hide) his diabolical purpose; and the name he uses is Jesus Christ.

Chris Sulham is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Supporting the alcohol ban

To the Editor:

In the past few days, I have heard a lot of discussion of the proposed alcohol ban on campus. Not surprisingly, almost everyone I have spoken to is opposed to it. I have heard many say that while there is an alcohol problem on campus, banning alcohol altogether is not the solution.

However, I have not heard one person propose an alternative. I believe that the reason that students are opposed to this is not because they think it will be ineffective, but because they want to be able to get drunk, and the administration is opposed because they fear a decrease in enrollment if students are not allowed to drink.

I think that the proposed ban is not such a bad thing. The University would be a much nicer place without thousands of drunk students spreading the stench of alcohol and vomit through the campus each weekend. While the ban might not be the solution, it would not hurt anything.

I am not going to kid myself, and say that the ban would be effective. How could it be enforced? The regulations in effect now are much less stringent, and the University finds itself unable to enforce them. The fact of the matter is that the regulations now in effect are sufficient if only they would be enforced.

Enforcement presents a difficult problem. In my view, the only way to effectively enforce any type of alcohol regulation is to authorize random searches of students bags and rooms. This is obviously unacceptable. Therefore effective enforcement is impossible.

I propose that penalties for violation of alcohol regulations be increased. While I think that finding those in violation would be difficult, at least students would know that on the chance that they were caught, they would then be facing serious consequences.

Justin Rogers
Grayson

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Collegian editorials are your chance to be heard. Write a letter to the editor and drop it off at 113 Campus Center. We and the rest of the campus are interested in what you have to say so come on and tell us.

Doonesbury BY GARY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

after dark

Mission: Improvable hits the mark.

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Staff

There's something funny going on Saturday nights in the Campus Center. "It's cool to make people laugh," said Kevin D'Ambrosio, a junior communications major and the newest member of the improvisational comedy group, Mission: Improvable. The 11–member Mission: Improvable troupe performs every Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center room 163. The performances are free to the public.

According to Aaron Krebs, also a junior communications major and the director of operations for Mission: Improvable, the group's Saturday night performances are "overwhelmingly popular" and often no seats are available for those arriving at 8 p.m. Krebs said that the estimated attendance for the weekly performances is

Turn to IMPROV, page 9

A night at the theater

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

If you are looking to broaden your horizons, the Five College area is overflowing with concerts and shows to immerse yourself in. The fall theater season kicks off this week-end with a little something for everybody.

The film Gaslight is showing Oct. 24–26, at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. in the Amherst College Campus Center. A classic psychological thriller, black and white film, it is a story of a deceitful husband (Charles Boyer) who tries to drive his wife (Ingrid Bergman) insane. Directed by George Cukor in 1944, it won an Academy Award. Admission is $2.

Lapin, Lapin, written by the acclaimed screenwriter and director of Three Men and a Cradle (later re-made into Three Men and a Baby) Coline Serreau has created a wild romp in outer space and apartment hell! Director Ellen Kaplan has

Turn to SHOWS, page 10

Friday night at the Bluewall

By Seema Gangatirkar

Beat that cold winter boredom with some video suggestions that could warm up your life

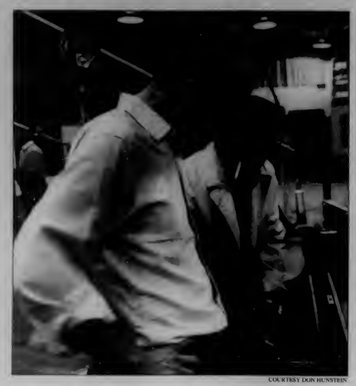
We've all familiar with this unfortunate situation: it's cold outside, you're feelin' extremely unmotivated and there's really nothing on the television. What to do? There's a solution which may just ease the dilemma that has plagued us for at various point in our lives. What I'm referring to is watching videos with friends or a loved one could be that winter depression.

We all love movies and an added plus is that you should see well how the studios have to please them. With a video you can pick qualities time in countless amounts. After all, there are no "we've watched on first date" or "married couple" with [illegible] even a group of [illegible]. With that you're in the mood for a night horror, a wondrous [illegible] or an exciting spectacle [illegible] there's a movie out there for you.

The following is a list of movie suggestions for precisely the aforementioned reasons. Some of these which you think that's the cliché nothing to do [illegible] movie and have a wonderful evening for a change.

First of all there is nothing more hopelessly romantic on a cold New England night than cuddling up in bed close to the one you love, while you watch a good classic horror flick. Besides all the brilliant low budget slasher films (there are just too many to name, but Halloween is always a good place to start) I'd rather concentrate on the big three: The Exorcist, The Omen and Rosemary's Baby. These are the ones which really represent the true heart and soul of the [illegible] natural thriller genre. You don't [illegible] some really good [illegible] at the same time. Starting with The Exorcist, which is [illegible] in The Omen [illegible] movie [illegible] strange drinks [illegible] next door neighbor, all [illegible] Rosemary's Baby. The most terrifying of all is when both of you start to [illegible] each other so loudly you can't decide who's going to wake [illegible] possessed by Satan during The Exorcist. Nothing can fit so well [illegible] vulnerable young lovers fall deeper into love than [illegible] Devil movie.

When you and your friend feel like taking [illegible] you can [illegible] social life, there's no substitution than a [illegible] time viewing a movie that's [illegible] friendship. Key [illegible] Stand By Me and Thelma & Louise. Pee-wee's Big Adventure [illegible] explore and kick [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] Although each of these can be [illegible] as quite [illegible] they would make such few [illegible] buddy movies is not the protagonists' ultimate goal. The search for this object of desire is [illegible] character revelation and an excellent way for true friends to sit, watch and reflect on who we all are and where we fit into each others lives.



In large group situations it is often difficult to choose a film that everyone can agree on. There is a solution. The Godzilla movies will continuously please, without fail. What can be more exciting than [illegible] special effects and devastating monsters wreaking havoc over the quite innocent metropolis of Tokyo? You and all your friends will have the [illegible] why the hell the little people [illegible] for their lives as they [illegible] to escape the fiery wrath that is haunting them, or that is visible and misunderstood [illegible] genius who's more attractive than Godzilla.

So [illegible] all you ladies out there,

FILM page 9

Clint Eastwood releases live CD based on his movie soundtracks

Grover Washington, Miles Davis, Kenny Barron & Barry Harris featured on jazz albums

COURTESY DON HUNSTEIN

Gil Evans (left) and Miles Davis (right) teamed up on Quiet Night.

Jazz/Blues Weekly

BY JOSHUA BOYD

Sure, he's been "Dirty Harry," and he's killed mercilessly in The Unforgiven, but let's not forget that Clint Eastwood has a passionate love for jazz. On the new Malpaso/Warner Brothers release Eastwood After Hours: A Night Of Jazz Live At Carnegie Hall, we find Eastwood bringing together some of the great names from the past as well as the present of jazz.

Eastwood After Hours collects music on two discs that have had something to do with Eastwood's movies. The first track, properly enough, is "Misty," comfortably done on dueling pianos by veterans Kenny Barron and Barry Harris. For those of you not big on film history, Eastwood's directoral debut in 1971 was titled Play Misty For Me. "Misty" shows up again on the first disc in a minimal big- band setting. "Straight, No Chaser" is not only one of Thelonious Monk's classic tunes (done here in a fair performance by Joshua Redman and James Carter on saxophones), but also the title to Eastwood's documentary on Monk's life and music.

The cast, which also includes Roy Hargrove, Clint's bassist son Kyle, Christian McBride and Charlie Parker's old boss, Jay McShann run through other tunes from Eastwood's films Bird, White Hunter, Black Heart and The Bridges Of Madison County in arrangements made easy for non–jazz lovers to follow.

So what if Christmas is still two months away? I've got a great Christmas album that would make a nice gift for jazz buffs who aren't completely against a little bit of synthesizer with their music: Grover Washington, Jr.'s Breath Of Heaven. Washington, who has long held a reputation as one of the more funk/R&B–related jazzmen, has finally lived out his longtime desire to issue an album for the holidays. Lo and behold, it is a success.

Despite the fact that Breath Of Heaven borders on contemporary, or "smooth," jazz at times ("I Wonder As I Wander" and "The Love In His Infant Eyes" are tracks that are completely sacrificed to the Kenny G Gods), the fact that you can feel the liveness of most of these tracks (thanks to longtime jazz producer Rudy Van Gelder) leaves it just out of reach of those pesky elevator-music doldrums.

"The Christmas Waltz" is actually done acoustically, and "Christmas Time Is Here" has real nice melodic variability, which "smooth jazz" lacks. The masterpiece of the disc, is the title track, with a strong, heartfelt vocal by Lisa Fischer, and it is very powerful as an emotional look into the mind of a poor, pregnant Mary nearing the first Christmas. It was actually written partly by Amy Grant. Washington plays endearing soprano sax on that song.

Time for a big connection: Rudy Van Gelder also had the job of producing the latest effort by Ron Carter, long regarded as one of the greatest jazz bassists ever. The Bass And I (Blue Note) is an easy–going result of a one–day session done in Van Gelder Studios in New Jersey. With pianist Stephen Scott, drummer Lewis Nash and percussionist Stephen Kroon, he crafts some be–bop–based songs that are basic solo palettes and invite the superb crafts of especially Scott and Carter. This is not the greatest album Carter's ever done, but it does show the spontaneity of imagination that this musician, who's been on over 1000 jazz albums since the early '60s, is fully capable of.

One of these albums with Carter was Miles Davis' Quiet Nights, recorded between 1962 and 1963 with help from the always glorious Gil Evans Orchestra. This album, recently re–issued by Legacy as well as other Davis/Evans albums like Sketches Of Spain and Miles Ahead. Unlike these other two albums, Quiet Nights is seeing its first time on CD in the U.S. It was never held in too high regard by Columbia, despite Miles' defence of the album (read Miles: The Autobiography written with Alex Haley), but history rules and we now have these relaxed yet sincere tunes with ornamental colorings by Gil Evans' musicians on horns and woodwinds. The highlights here include "Once Upon A Summertime," Miles' and Gil's previously unreleased composition "The Time Of The Barracudas" and Antonio Carlos Jobim's "Corcovado." Long Live Miles!

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist

Bowker Auditorium hosts L.A. guitar quartet tonight

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Tonight the Los Angeles Guitar Quartet will bring to Bowker Auditorium their innovative brand of classical guitar. Recognized as one of the premier chamber groups emerging from the west coast, they will be performing as part of the Fine Arts Center Series.

The Los Angeles Guitar Quartet (LAGQ) draws from multiple musical traditions: baroque, Afro–Mexican Dances, and rock–and–roll. The LAGQ's eclectic influences combined with their dislike of traditional classical formalities, such as the tuxedo, make for a unique concert going experience.

"We try to be ourselves as much as possible," said group member Andrew York.

"The tux is a uniform which implies not only a separation from the audience but that you're colorless — just a vehicle for the music," York said.

York is a guitarist/composer whose music has been recorded by musicians such as John Williams and Christopher Parkening. Three of his songs appear on the group's latest release Labyrinth, on Delos records.

The group's other members are: Scott Tennant, William Kanegiser, and John Dearman. Tennant, who is originally from Detroit, was the winner of the Tokyo International Competition in 1989. He is also the author of a book about the intricacies of technical guitar called Pumping Nylon.

Kanegiser has established himself as a soloist and recording artist. He is a faculty member at the University of Southern California. Dearman, who is from Minneapolis, is versatile in a variety of styles including bluegrass, samba, classical and flamenco.

The performance tonight will include the groups transcriptions from El Amor Brujo (Love the Musician) by Manuel de Falla (1876–1946.) LAGQ will perform two sections entitled Latin quarter and World Tour. These pieces are inspired by the musical vibrations of Latin America and Africa. The performance will conclude with a Suit from Carmen by George Bizet (1838–1875.)

COURTESY AARON CONCERT DAVISON

The Los Angeles Guitar Quartet consisting of Bill Kanengiser, John Dearman, Scott Tennant and Andrew York will play at Bowker tonight.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Beginning Nov. 1

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$162	$295
PARIS	$218	$399
ROME	$274	$473
MADRID	$226	$415

Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
645 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

Write for Collegian Arts or do something else.

SPRING BREAK
Cancun From $399
Jamaica From $399
Bahamas From $425
Florida From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.endlesssummertours.com

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and, System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant Street (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00–7:30
Sat 12:00–7:30
Closed Tuesday

Thursdays 9pm to Midnight
GLOW BOWL
Juke Box
Glow Show
Thursday Special College Rates
Friday Disco Bowl!
Saturdays Retro Bowl
Glow Bowling Ball Sale
10pm to 1am
Live DJ
Laser Light Show
The X-treme in Glow Bowling
Entire Center Will GLOW
Northampton Bowl
584-4830

OLDSMOBILE
Minuteman
VOLKSWAGEN
Patricia Dolan
SALES REPRESENTATIVE
TEL. 617-275-8000
FAX 617-271-1325
39 NORTH ROAD
BEDFORD, MASS 01730

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS 253-9526
189 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002

ERASER
SCHOOL SUPPLIES
A terrific selection of magazines, binders, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, printer cartridges, T-shirts, art supplies, calendars, candy, toys, stationary & the best card shop in the Valley!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant St • 253-2540
OPEN: Weekdays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sundays 5 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Firestone
BRIDGESTONE
Northampton
327 King Street
586-1584
Store Hours
Monday to Friday
7:30 to 6:00
Saturday
7:30 to 5:00
Firestone 45,000 MILE Limited Warranty
4 Tires For $99.99
Domestic FR360 RADIAL
13" 4 for $131.99
14" 4 for 151.99
15" 4 for 171.99
AUTOPASS
NO PAYMENT FOR 90 DAYS
*No Interest No Annual Fee
Shuttle Service Available, Call For Details
OIL CHANGE & FILTER
Frequent, vital engine maintenance includes refill of up to 5qts. Kendall 10w-30 oil.
AUTOPASS
SALE PRICE $19.99
$9.88 with Coupon
BRAKE SERVICE
FOR SURE STOPS, WE INSTALL BRAKE PADS / SHOES, RESURFACE DRUMS / ROTORS AND ADJUST BRAKES ION SERVICED AXLE)
$79.99 ORGANIC PADS
$89.99 SEMI-METALLIC
FALL TUNE-UP PACKAGE
•OIL CHANGE & FILTER
•SPARK PLUG REPLACEMENT
•4-TIRE ROTATION & WHEEL BALANCE
•COMPLETE VEHICLE INSPECTION
$59.99 4-CYL
ADDITIONAL $10.6CYL / $20.8CYL
Most Honda Civic and Accord 4 cylinder engines. Trade-ins may require additional parts and labor charges. Additional parts extra if needed.
Most Honda Civic and Accord 4 cylinder engines. Additional parts extra if needed.

OUR PRICES ARE SO LOW, THEY'RE SCARY!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

ICEHOUSE & RED DOG CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS	$11.99 + DEP.
LITE & LITE ICE CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS	$14.49 + DEP.
BLUE MOON PUMPKIN ALE AND ALL FLAVORS & OTTER CREEK 6 PK. BOT.	$4.99 + DEP.
CORONA EXTRA 12 PK. BOTTLE	$8.49 + DEP.
GENESEE ALL FLAVORS CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CAN	SALE $9.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $6.49 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICH., MICH LT, MICH AMBER BOCH, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG.	$32.99 + DEP. $39.99 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH
Santa Rita 120 CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $4.99
ALMADEN 5 LT BAG-IN-A-BOX RHINE, CHABLIS, BLUSH, GOLDEN, WHITE GRENACHE $7.49
CANYON ROAD MERLOT 750 ML $6.99
E & J GALLO WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LT. $4.99
LINDEMAN'S BIN 65 CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
KAHLUA COMBOS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. $4.49

SKYY VODKA 1.75 LT. $18.49
BURNETT'S GIN 1.75 LT. $10.49
EARLY TIMES BOURBON 1.75 LT. $13.49
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 1.75 LT. $17.49
Ballantine's SCOTCH 1.75 LT. $20.99
OLD MR. BOSTON FLAVORED BRANDY 1.75 LT. $12.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/23/97 THRU WEDS. 10/29/97
WE'RE RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Women's Issues

Thursday, October 23, 1997

Day of action has its fifth year

By Laura Barcella
Collegian Staff

Today is the fifth annual National Young Women's Day of Action, a grassroots campaign organized by and for young women. It is a way for young women all across the country to speak out and take action on the issues affecting their lives.

The campaign is sponsored by the Civil Liberties and Public Policy Program at Hampshire College, which promotes the leadership and agendas of young women using strategies of grassroots design while affecting a national scope.

Today, young women at over 300 colleges, universities, high schools and community groups will focus national attention on women's reproductive rights. Across the country, events will occur to spotlight access to abortion for all women, but particularly for low–income and young women.

Ellen Donoghue, the UMass representative organizer for today's Day of Action events in Amherst, hopes to see a sense of cohesiveness among the women at all five colleges as a result of today's activities. She believes that the Day of Action is crucial because "it's important to know that these issues are out there and that women are suffering every day."

Donoghue also extends her gratitude to "all the people at UMass who have helped... but a lot of people are hiding their faces from these issues, and I invite them to get involved. You can't ignore [these issues]."

Activists will speak out about issues that affect reproductive and sexual freedom in their communities, including welfare and immigration reform, ethnic and racial justice, lesbian/gay/bisexual/transgender rights, health and child care, education, violence, and jobs. One of the goals bf the Day of Action is to connect all of these issues and create a network of empowered young women.

In 1996, over 250 campuses and communities participated in the Day of Action. There were speak–outs, rallies, voter registrations, panel discussions, video screenings, guerilla theater, and mural and collage–making.

The Day of Action commemorates the death of Rosie Jimenez, the first young woman known to die from an illegal abortion after Congress passed the Hyde Amendment denying federal Medicaid funding for abortions.

Jimenez died on October 3, 1977, in a hospital in Texas where she was brought following an illegal, back–alley abortion. An unsterilized foley catheter (a long rubber tube) had been used by the abortionist. Within 24 hours, she had contracted an infection similar to tetanus which led to her death.

The Hyde Amendment is still in effect today. After the elimination of federal funding for abortion, most states adopted similar restrictions. Today only 12 states fund abortions. This threatens the lives of many women, particularly low–income women, young women, and women of color. The number of women seeking illegal and self– induced abortions has increased, resulting in many unnecessary deaths.

Today's local events will begin at 4 p.m. at Amherst Common. There will be a march, rally, candlelight vigil, speakers, feminist music, tabling, and direct action planning. The march will be led by a group of fire eaters in the tradition of the Lesbian Avengers, who eat fire as a symbol of internalizing power and strength.

Warning signs of domestic violence

Susan Nickerson

The number one reason for women visiting emergency rooms in America is because of beatings by their intimate partners. That's more beatings than auto accidents, muggings or sexual assaults.

Domestic violence transcends all lines — despite education, race, class or gender, it can happen to any of us, in any type of relationship.

Many people wonder why women stay in abusive relationships. The unfortunate truth is that sometimes women do not realize they are being abused until it is too late. This is because often physical abuse is the only type of abuse we are taught to recognize. Yet there are sexual, emotional, verbal and psychological types of abuse, many of which can lead to physical abuse.

How can we spot the warning signs of a potentially abusive relationship? Jodi Smith, Program Director at the YWCA in Springfield, and Rachel Thorburn, Assistant Director at the Everywomen's Center, have advice on how to recognize and avoid the patterns of future unhealthy relationships.

The following behaviors are precursors to physical abuse. The more signs abusers display, the more likely the abuse will become physical. Though in these examples the abuser will be referred to as "he" and the victim as "she," please remember that abuse can happen to either partner in any type of intimate relationship.

Power and control are the foundations of abuse. Although we tend to dismiss an abuser as mentally ill, he is usually not. Abusers often know exactly what they are doing. They may court their victims when at their lowest points. An abuser may appear very sweet and loving, proclaiming undying love and devotion. He will pressure his partner to commit to the relationship in such a way that later the woman may feel guilty if she wants to slow down involvement or break away completely.

Jealousy is another telltale warning sign. At the beginning of a relationship, abusers often claim that their jealousy is a sign of love. However, jealousy has nothing to do with love; it is a sign of possessiveness and a lack of trust. An abusive person will question his partner about who she talks to and spends time with. He might also accuse his partner of flirting, and be jealous of time spent with friends, family or children.

Another sign to be wary of is controlling behavior. An abusive person will often try to tell his partner what to wear, who she can/cannot spend time with and make his partner feel guilty if she doesn't spend all her time with the abuser. This form of control leads to isolation from family and friends. By the time the victim realizes she is stuck in an unhealthy relationship, she may find herself alienated and alone. When this alienation occurs, she may decide to stay in the relationship because she feels her partner is the only one who cares for her.

Manipulation — An abusive person often causes his victim to question herself. The abuser also undermines his partner's intelligence by playing mind games. He might say things like, "You're crazy, I never did that." Constant insults and mind games chip away at the victim's self–esteem.

Unrealistic expectations — An abuser will often expect his partner to meet all of his needs and to be the perfect girlfriend, mother, lover or friend. He may say things like, "If you love me, I'm all you need and you're all I need." He might try to make her feel guilty if she pursues interests of her own rather than being constantly there to fulfill his needs.

Hypersensitivity — An abusive person is easily insulted, claiming hurt feelings rather than accepting responsibility for his rage. He may have sudden mood swings, which makes the victim feel that she has to overaccomodate her partner to avoid confrontation.

Sexual abuse — Sexual abuse is so common, most people consider it normal. An abuser shows little concern for the victim's interest (or disinterest) in sex and may sulk or act angry to manipulate her into compliance. He may try to force sex when she is ill or tired, or try to have sex with her while she is sleeping.

Although most perpetrators are men and victims/survivors are women, gay and lesbian relationships can become violent as well. So what will stop the violence? We need tougher laws for batterers and increased awareness in schools. Restraining orders are merely pieces of paper and even if violated, perpetrators rarely face the 2.5 year jail term.

Judges may or may not be sympathetic towards the victim. He might see her as just another number. Even women judges can be harsh, thinking the victim brought it on herself or didn't fight back enough.

To increase awareness in schools, the YWCA teaches workshops in junior high schools. The workshops teach how to respect one another in relationships, as well as what is acceptable behavior in healthy relationships.

The media needs to tone down, if not completely rethink, the message that two is better than one. Amongst all the societal pressure, some women still feel like the oddball for not having a boyfriend or girlfriend. People involved in abusive relationships will rely too deeply upon one another if they do not learn to first resolve their personal issues.

Support groups for women and batterers can sometimes be a lifelong commitment. The Everywoman's Center offers support groups for women and a 24–hour crisis hotline (413– 545–0800). They are in need of more women of color and bilingual women volunteers. The Men's Resource Center in downtown Amherst has support groups for batterers and fathers. After all, this is not just a women's issue.

Susan Nickerson is a Collegian correspondent.

Why I will participate in the Day of Action

Megan Clarke

I got involved in the National Young Women's Day of Action for one reason. I am a young woman and I want to show my support for the women who have suffered acts of injustice and disrespect. I believe that women should have the same opportunities as men.

I went to the first Day of Action meeting with no previous knowledge of what the day means or how it was developed. I left the meeting full of new information, and with a scared feeling. I wasn't scared of the people at the meeting or what the day represents. I was scared because of the information I had learned. I had read statistics on domestic abuse, illegal abortions and alarming health statistics all linked to being a woman.

We, as women, are obviously different from men in both physical and emotional characteristics. The problems I am having are due to the fact that I am a woman. Physically, I am not as strong as most men. I am a target for rape and abuse because I might be unable to fight off an attacker.

Women may think differently than men. We are often considered to be more emotional than men generally are. I am being persecuted because I feel too much. That's why the public believes it would not be a good idea for a woman to be president — because she "couldn't handle it." People in powerful positions are afraid to let women in because they fear we won't be able to "handle it."

What I ask is for those "people of power" to give us a chance. We will surely surprise some people. When will America wake up to the fact that we are all human? Race, sex, social status and physical characteristics are truly not what matters in a person.

Today, National Young Women's Day of Action, I ask for respect. With respect there can be no prejudices. Men, do not regard women as sexual objects or your inferiors.

Women, do not regard men as "the enemy." They are our equals. To the world, open your ears and let our voices be heard.

Life would cease to exist without women. Respect us. Treat us as your equals.

Look to the women in the political world and ask them to protect the women of the future. Look for people who are not respecting women — do not look away. Do something. Say something.

Crimes against women can't go on any longer. Both men and women must be aware of the inequalities women still face. Both sexes must cooperate to eliminate the problem. Look beyond our physical characteristics and into our minds.

Megan Clarke is a UMass student.

CALL FOR WRITERS!

As the Women's Issues editor at The Collegian, I want to open up this space for your contributions — thoughts, questions, ideas, editorials, articles, reviews. I want this page to be entertaining and witty as well as informative, so I invite all types of submissions. Drop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement, or send 'em to: Laura Barcella, Women's Issues Editor, The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement.

Returning "heaven" to her rightful place

James Callahan III

Once again, the call is sounded. The call for the unification and upliftment of the Black Diaspora resounds across the land. In March 1995, over a million black men answered the call and reputed to the world that the black man would not cower nor submit to the oppression of his circumstance. On this day, high astride the pillars of atonement, reconciliation, and responsibility, black men laid the foundation of their own salvation as well as that of the world.

Many would question the longevity of the day. Deserters and detractors would profess the day as folly. Still others would have the world believe that the status quo remains unaffected by the Million Man March. However, those touched by the spirit of the day are still moved, as quietly with each passing moment the seeds of revolution are being sown. No longer shackled to white definition, we will allow time and "our story" to document the true magnitude of this unprecedented historical event.

Eyes once opened will never close. Now the call moves the black woman into the forefront of our quest. Crucial to every advancement of the Black Diaspora, the black woman prepares for her second march in just over two years. However, do not be fooled or let others convince you that either march is gender specific. We must all remain cognizant of the fact that the Million Man and Million Woman March cannot be separated. They are just two phases of a march that descends into the depths of the antiquity of time.

The past, present and future of the Black Diaspora is woven from hands of all her children. The black man and black woman are in fact one in the same — the black family. Just as only a woman can unveil to a girl the mysteries of womanhood, so it is that only a man can guide a boy into his manhood. These are two processes that yield one end, the black family. Each is as necessary to our people as nourishment and air are to the body.

To put our houses in order, men and women both must address their individual contributions to our present plight, and the path of its subsequent resolution. This is the justification of the two marches and the necessity of the two forums. However, brothers and sisters, wolves often come knocking in sheep's clothing. We must be extremely wary of those who raise sexism and diminish racism in either of the marches' agendas. One must ask, what is their intent? Those who would advocate for the separation of the black man and black woman certainly are doing so for the promotion of their own agendas and not ours. What is the cost of this deception? The price is the destruction of the Black Diaspora.

From the greatness that we once arose so shall we again return. Each individual life is but a brick in the road of our journey through the millennia. We cannot afford to ever lose sight that the life of every individual changes our course. One can move the whole in a positive direction or a detrimental one. This direction is found only given one's orientation. Where one goes is dependent on what is guiding them. As Minister Louis Farrakan recited, "He who determines the radius of your understanding, controls the circumference of your existence!"

In order for us to survive we must elevate the black woman back to original status. For far too long the black woman has been revered for her unequal resolve in withstanding the onslaught of oppression, while raising our children, heading our households, and nurturing our people. However, there is nothing regal about the black woman's position, nor is there anything noble about her suffrage. Her oppression has been, and continues to be, delivered by both the oppressors of our people and black males. Black males who fail to become black men serve as the enemy within, and maintain the mentality that will only foster our own genocide.

We must heed the whispers of our ancestors crying for us to return to the teaching of our original belief systems. We must reject the patriarchal madness of our oppressor and reinstate the black woman as queen and mother of the universe. That which was stolen from us included our understanding of man and woman. Truly, there is no man without woman. Our Afrikan ancestors explained the universe in terms of man and woman. The earth was represented by man or the god Gar, and the heavens by woman or the goddess Nu. They understood that just as the heavens (Nu) produced the sun, woman produces her son. The woman was held above all others as the bearer of all life, ascending to the status of the heavens.

Where others, drowning in masculine inferiority and paranoid hatred of women, would have us believe that woman was born of the rib of a man, our ancestors knew that one could not separate the concepts of man and woman. The original creation story included the deity pair, the god Asetu and the great goddess Auset (mother of the original immaculate conception).

We may say we love our black women. We may wear our ankhs not knowing that they represent her — mother to every child and life. Even if we recognize that this symbol gains its form from the woman's reproductive system, all this is meaningless if we continue to destroy the black woman.

The beginning of change starts with new vision. In this season of atonement, I beseech every brother to manifest on a higher ground and work earnestly to view our sisters for what they truly are — the breath and depth of the universe. For the sisters journeying to the Million Woman March, I hope they return with four things: a clear understanding of their true magnificence as women; the vision to manifest as the women they all shall be; the wisdom to hold black males accountable for our transgressions; and the strength to preserve in these times of strife.

Hotep—Peace.

James E. Callahan III is a UMass graduate student.

UM student acts in NoHo film

By Kelly Parent
Collegian Correspondent

The psychological thriller In Dreams, being filmed by director Neil Jordan (The Crying Game, Interview with the Vampire) in Northampton, is making stars of locals as they gain their five minutes of fame which could propel them into major parts in the future.

"You have to get a part in a major movie first and then you can become a Screen Actors Guild member. Next time another major movie comes into town, they have these Guild members' names and phone numbers to call when they need actors," said Amy Summers, a 29–year–old, non–traditional Women's Studies major at the University of Massachusetts who will soon become a Guild member.

"It's just a small part, really. The costume and make-up is fun, but it's by no means glamorous," Summers said about her role in the film.

Summers portrays a mental patient in the movie, and filming takes place at the Northampton State Hospital. Summers does not consider this locale to be one of the perks of the job.

"The hospital itself is eerie inside, and there is a lot of intense energy. They put grease in my hair and dirty clothes on me and braided my hair to make it look kind of wild. You probably won't even recognize me," Summers said with a laugh.

As for celebrities starring in the film, Summers has met a few.

"I have a scene with Annette Bening, she is really nice. I met Aidan Quinn, he's really cute. Robert Downey Jr. should be coming next week to start shooting," she said.

Summers has been acting since childhood, when she appeared on "Romper Room." Luckily not forced into acting by stage parents, she decided to do it on her own, and it is something she seems to be succeeding in.

Summers has been involved in many acting projects over the years, including one called "Barebones Theater," in which theater was used to educate people about forms of oppression such as racism and anti–Semitism.

Summers' goal in acting is "to help bring a medium to people that helps them access their feelings, [and which] hones authentic performance."

As well as acting, she teaches workshops on women's empowerment, stress management, meditation and conscious communication.

"My focus is on self–awareness, and theater is excellent to help process emotions and to help encourage others to reflect on their own emotions, hopefully bringing more clarity of insight about their lives," Summers said.

Prof. gives lecture on women & sex

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Correspondent

Joyce A. Berkman, professor of history at the University of Massachusetts, spoke about female sexuality in Victorian America in a lecture at the Jones Library In Amherst on Tuesday night.

Emily Bleeds: Female Sexuality in Victorian America was the title of the lecture, in reference to Emily Dickinson, famed poet and resident of Victorian Amherst.

Berkman concentrated the lecture on views of female puberty and menstruation, hence the title Emily Bleeds.

"She had a female, sexed body. She bleeds when she menstruates," said Berkman about the poet.

In a famous essay called "Sex and Education," Edward H. Clark stated that women could not manage both school and their reproductive organs at the same time, and this conflict would lead to illness. According to Berkman, this was the popular view of the time, and may be the reason that Dickinson left Mt. Holyoke College in 1848 after several bouts of the flu.

"Male anxiety contaminated research of the very best and not so good scientists," Berkman said. She also said that in colonial America, female nature was defined by the Bible, clergy, midwives and families.

In Victorian America, said Berkman, this role was overtaken by scientists, who set out to prove that men were superior to women.

"She reigns in the heart; she has a head too small for intellect and just big enough for love," said Berkman of women, quoting a male gynecologist from 1847.

According to Berkman, scientists conducted skull and face studies on women, deducing that women had "smaller and lighter brains." She also said that scientists believed that men's blood was more vigorous, "denser, redder."

According to Berkman, embryologists of the time believed that female embryos stopped developing earlier than male embryos. One scientist described a woman as "an arrested male."

Berkman stated that scientists believed that women would stagnate at puberty, and afterwards did not develop as quickly as males.

She stated that scientists who studied cell structure said that sperm were "catabolic," active and aggressive, compared to the inactive egg.

Berkman asserted that even Darwin tried to prove man's superiority. According to Berkman, Darwin said that men attain higher eminence in whatever they take up.

"There are no women of genius, women of genius are men," Berkman said, quoting a prominent historian of the Victorian era.

She said that many men of the time believed that menstruation was dangerous evidence of uterine disease, or else a safety valve for women's erotic appetite. According to Berkman, some scientists even believed that the menstrual bleeding of white women was superior to that of African–American women.

Berkman said that many girls were terrified of their first periods, and they could be quite traumatic for sexually ignorant or innocent children. She also stated that the bulky skirts of the time were meant to conceal menstruation.

Poetry Reading

Gail Thomas, a resident of Shutesbury for 15 years, will be reading from her new book of poems, Finding the Bear. The reading will take place at Food for Thought Books, 106 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst on November 15, 1997. A reception and book signing will follow.

CHRISTOPHER CESNIK / COLLEGIAN

Fiona Apple gave a lackluster performance at John M. Greene Hall in Northampton Tuesday night.

Hooverphonic upstages Apple

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

FIONA APPLE / HOOVERPHONIC
John M. Greene Hall
Oct. 21

NORTHAMPTON — It was a night of polar opposites, to put it mildly.

On Tuesday evening at Smith College's John M. Greene Hall, MTV's 1997 Newcomer of the Year Fiona Apple tried just a little too hard to sell her angry young woman gimmick in a performance overwrought with a "woe is me" comportment that is increasingly becoming blasé. Disappointingly, this purging of adolescent fears also left little to the imagination.

Like a naive poker player, Apple unwisely played out her hand early, which left her holding nothing but her head in her hands by night's end. The end result was evident in the mystified expressions on the faces of the audience — mostly middle-aged women who sat in polite silence throughout much of 19-year-old's painfully ordinary 85-minute show.

Apple has been hogging the musical spotlight lately, having recently had her pouty mug splashed across the cover of both Spin and Alternative Press, as well as garnering a plum slot on this past summer's Lilith Fair. Her debut album Tidal has recently been certified gold (with sales of over 500,000 units) thanks to the success of two singles and the accompanying video clips in which she preens around in next to nothing.

As one of the many female artists riding Alanis Morrisette's coattails on the road to pseudo-stardom, Apple is undoubtedly the beneficiary of being the right "face" in the right place at the right time, whether talented or not.

Apple has borne the brunt of a good deal of criticism for her live shows, with many raising complaints about her lack of charisma and stage presence. Still, Apple has taken marked strides towards improving this and she stepped out from behind the keys of her piano more often than on previous tours — an approach that gave the performance a much-needed visual focus.

Battling a cold and with a sore throat (as well as a horrendous sound system), Apple at least appeared to be having a good time, accepting flowers and engaging in charming audience banter.

It was interesting then to see the sullen, dour look that Apple exhibited during each song through her oh-so pained facial contortions. This overly theatrical approach only served to prove the lie she lives. Folks, the cat is out of the bag — it's all an act, and a poorly contrived one at that.

Clearly though, this winsome irony is not lost on her. As she introduced a Jimmy Cliff cover, she said "because this song isn't mine, it'll be fun to sing." At least she has a sense of humor.

On a few numbers though, Apple shined brighter than the gloss on a freshly waxed red delicious. "Shadowboxer" was a rare moment of musical restraint, wisely keeping her vocal tantrums to a minimum while showcasing her anonymous backing band's melodic strengths. "Criminal" conjured up an ominous soundscape through some interesting interplay between Apple's piano and an eery organ.

Belgium's Hooverphonic provided the perfect antithetic to Apple's over-the-top vituperations with a smart set of songs culled from their debut release, the excellent A New Stereophonic Sound Spectacular.

According to bassist and co-founder Alex Callier (who resembles a hilarious combination of Buddy Holly's charming geekiness and Elvis Presley's charisma) Hooverphonic are "a blend of Massive Attack and American Music Club," which serves as the creative impetus for some invigorating and thoroughly original material.

They created a winning recipe of aural intoxication Tuesday night, delicately weaving Geike Arnaert's lush vocals with melancholic layered beats and archetypical sonic textures. Songs such as "Revolver" and the brilliant first single "2Wicky" (a track Callier says was inspired by Portishead) took on a life all their own in the live environment.

For a band on their first-ever American tour, Hooverphonic showed considerable promise. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for Apple, who showed little to disprove the notion that she is anything more than a one trick pony.

The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers to cover books, music, arts and more. If you're interested, come and talk to Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor or call 545-1491.

ASIAN AMERICAN STUDENTS ASSOCIATION
presents...
AASA CASINO NIGHT
Friday, October 24, 1997 7 PM - 1 AM
Campus Center Auditorium

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jagermeister $14.99/750 ml
Llords $7.99/1.75 lt
Kahlua $8.99/750 ml
Boones 5 for $9.99/750 ml

MICRO BREWS
Brooklyn Brewery $4.99/six (LP A., Brown Ale, Pale Ale, Lager)
Wachusett Brewing Co. $9.99 (12-pack bottles) (LP A., Nut Brown, Pale Ale, Octoberfest)
Mill City $4.99/six (LP A., Porter, Pale Ale, Raspberry Wheat)
Magic Hat $5.99/six (IPA, Blind Faith, Ale, Jinx)

BEER SPECIALS
Bud Dry $10.99 (30-pack cans)
Icehouse+Red Dog $6.99 (12-Pack Bottles)
Bass Ale $11.99 (12-pack bottles)
Busch+Busch Light $9.99 (case bottles)
Sam Adams Ale+Lager $80.00 (12 Keg Special)

Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST / 320 COLLEGE ST (413)253-5364 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

Campus Activities presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
Leighann Lord
COMEDIAN
BLUEWALL CAFE
8:00PM
Friday, October 24, 1997
Movie: "CONTACT" to follow performance @ 9:30PM
"CONTACT" Featuring: Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey, and James Woods will also be shown on SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26 at 8 & 10PM in the Campus Center Auditorium.
Visit our web site:
Http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/set.htm
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a Grant from the UMASS Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs

Do You Know a Professor
or Teaching Assistant / Associate who is an Outstanding Teacher and Deserves RECOGNITION?
If so, then submit a signed nomination telling us why you think he or she should receive a Distinguished Teaching Award!
Deadline: Friday, October 31, 1997
Alumni and Current Undergraduate or Graduate Students may Submit Nominations
Nomination forms can be picked up at the Provost's Office, 362 Whitmore
Send your nomination to:
Distinguished Teaching Award Committee
Office of the Provost, 362 Whitmore
545-2328 (fax)
Questions?
Contact Nancy Kahn at 545-2554 or nmkahn@provost.umass.edu

Liefeld claims dubious trial victory

Jeff Carter

Hey gang, welcome to another Four Color Commentary, your weekly fix of news, reviews, and opinion of the world of graphic literature. I've been receiving some great e-mails on the column, so obviously you guys like what you're reading. I'll do my best to work all of your suggestions into future columns, and please continue to write me at Scribe19746@aol.com.

Quick, what does F-I-G-H-T-I-N-G A-M-E-R-I-C-A-N spell? Well, if you're Rob Liefeld, it spells I-A-W-S-U-I- T. You see, shortly after being fired from Marvel last Spring after turning in six terribly written and poorly drawn "Heroes Reborn" Captain America comics, Liefeld retaliated by soliciting a comic book called Agent America for his new comic book company, Awesome Entertainment. It was clear right away from the two-page promotional art that there was going to be legal trouble for Liefeld and lots of it. Agent America was a carbon copy of Marvel's Captain America. The hero wore red-white-and-blue, carried a star-spangled shield, had a bouncy young sidekick, an arch-enemy with a skull for a face, and bore dozens of other similarities to the classic Joe Simon/Jack Kirby creation (and Liefeld's cancelled interpretations of him). It seems Rob was intent on finishing the stories he started on Captain America, whether he had the character or not. Weeks later, Liefeld retracted this solicitation and ditched Agent America after acquiring the rights to the Fighting American, another freedom- fighting hero created by Jack Kirby in the 1940's (This, I'm convinced, has caused the late Kirby to spin right out of his coffin). When Liefeld changed the Fighting American's costume and gave him a round shield, a bouncy young female sidekick, etc... (sound familiar?), Marvel immediately went into action and filed a law-suit against Awesome Entertainment to halt publication of what a Marvel Press release called "Awesome's particular rendition of Fighting American, which seems to have drawn far more inspiration from Captain America than from its purported source." After a battle in court, a U.S. district court judge ruled on Aug. 20, that if Awesome Entertainment swore an affidavit to make changes in its rendition of Fighting American, the court would not stop publication of the series. The court ruled that Liefeld must make changes to the gloves and boots, and they also passed a stipulation preventing the character from throwing his circular shield. Not surprisingly, both sides claimed victories, with Liefeld gloating, "I couldn't be happier. We appreciate the courts ruling. We keep the shield, the eagle on the head, the red-white-and-blue. We're thrilled we emerged victorious." In my opinion, the only thing Rob won here was the right to make a complete ass out of himself on this embarrassment. Liefeld is the comic industry's most overrated non-talent, turning every comic he gets his hands on into a collection of horribly drawn splash pages filled with grotesquely mispropotioned heroes gritting their teeth and towering over scantily clad females with mammoth breasts, three-inch waists, and legs stretching onto the next page. Just how bad is Rob Liefeld? Well, he managed to get himself fired from the company he founded with Jim Lee and Todd MacFarlane, Image Comics. Ponder that for a minute.

Image Comics.

Now what does that tell you about his talent? (Okay, perhaps I'm being unfair here. Not every Image comic is a study in style-over-substance. After all, they do publish Astro City and Strangers in Paradise). I'm just happy to see that after an early rise to mega-stardom in comics (remember X-Force and that Levi's commercial?), people are starting to realize what an atrocious comics creator Rob Liefeld really is.

It's only a matter of time now before his Awesome company folds under like a carnival tent, and he's forced to come crawling back to Marvel for freelance work. That's not so "awesome," is it Rob?

Only room for one review this week:

Unlimited Access #1 (DC and Marvel, $2.99) Writer: Kari Kesel. Artist: Pat Olliffe

Somebody please stop this. Marvel and DC are spinning out of control with these constant and pointless crossovers. It used to be that Marvel and DC heroes running into each other was an impossibility, and aside from a few specials in the late 70's early 80's, crossovers between the two rival publishers were unheard of. The Marvel Vs. DC miniseries in 1995 changed all that however, and now characters from both worlds can't seem to brush their teeth without bumping into one another. It's all thanks to Access, Marvel and DC's walking tax loophole, a character owned by both companies who serves as the "cosmic hall monitor." Access is responsibility of making sure that the characters remain in their proper universes. Obviously, for the sake of crossover story revenue, he isn't very good at it.

In Unlimited Access, he gets lost in time trying to keep characters like Spider-Man, Wonder Woman, The Hulk, and Green Lantern in their proper places and time periods. He fails, of course, and many meaningless battle scenes ensue. There's a nice surprise ending in this first issue however, that gives me hope this miniseries will turn into something worth reading. C

Jeff Carter is a Umass student.

A local place for music to grow

By Bethany Jones
Collegian Correspondent

AMHERST — In downtown Amherst, pulsating sounds from a new store are causing heads to turn, with people wondering what is going on upstairs.

The Growroom, located in the Carriage Shops on North Pleasant Street, with its specialty music, funky decor and young ownership is unlike any record store in the area.

"My friends and I were tired of driving to Boston and New York to get records. We saw increasing popularity in electronic dance music in the Five College area and agreed there needed to be a techno/hip hop record store here," said Johnny Lobello, one of the owners. Lobello is from Queens, NY.

Lobello and his friends, Andrew Bousquet and Brian Parsons, started working hard and taking out loans last December to open the store. Lobello alone worked three jobs and many hours.

"We searched for other partners but no one was willing to put their money where their mouth was and invest. However, we did realize we desperately needed an accountant. We persuaded on of our most intelligent friends, Sarah Drost to join the ownership," Lobello said. Drost is a junior small business management major at the University of Massachusetts.

The store has been open since Aug. 25 and they admit that opening and maintaining the store has been stressful, especially since they have no prior experience in business management.

"We didn't open this store to be cool. This is real and a never-ending commitment that a lot of people don't understand," Lobello said.

The four owners hope to get more people interested in electronic music and educate people to the fact that there are well over 50 genres of electronic music. The store's name reflects their desire to see this music scene grow.

"This music can bring all cultures together. It is rhythms and feelings. We want to break down the stereotypes and help owners see that you don't have to wear baggy jeans to listen to techno," Lobello said. The owners want to make clear that they are doing this for the music aspect of the culture only and are disturbed by the stereotypes that go along with the music.

"The drug abuse and the attitudes of the close-minded people dressing like open-minded people is causing negative reactions to the music. Some people go over board with it," Lobello said.

The store spreads into three rooms and in addition to records, sells clothing and accessories in one room and skateboards and snowboards in another. Steve Floyd, a resident of the area for 12 years, rents out the room to sell boards.

"When they asked me if I wanted to sublet the space, it was just too good of a deal to pass up. I was excited about us being pioneers for a shop with music and boards," Floyd said.

Floyd has been snowboarding and skateboarding for 12 years and has been interested in the music industry for seven years. He says that often the same crowd which likes electronic music, also likes snowboarding and skateboarding.

Floyd hopes that the store will bring more attention to Amherst's lack of funding for a place to skateboard.

"Amherst is hurting when it comes to skating because there is no park. The only place to go is UMass," Floyd said.

Customers agree that this type of store is long overdue.

"Since I heard of its existence, I have come here everyday. It is different from other record stores because it has specialty music," said Steve Porter, a customer from Amherst.

"I like the walls," said Lucy Eckert of Belchertown, referring to the spray-painted "graf art." One painting near the door depicts a DJ with brown dread locks, one hand spinning a record and the other on a the mixer, sitting on top of a city full of blues and grays. He is dressed in contemporary clothes and is feeling the music through his earphones.

"I feel comfortable and I look forward to coming here," Eckert said. "It's not like other stores in the area where you feel like people are breathing down your neck."

The owners would like to see more people responding this way and visiting the store.

"Business is more mediocre, but getting better. We need better advertising and business from people outside of Amherst. In addition, we are still figuring out how to be organized and run the store," Lobello said. He urged people who don't know about the scene check out the store because the owners are eager to educate people.

So the next time you are going down to Amherst to grab a slice of pizza or have some coffee, why not take a visit to the Growroom? The music may just grow on you too.

■ improv

continued from page 5

about 200.

Mission: Improvable also has regulars "who come religiously," Krebs said. "[The regulars] are ecstatic about the show."

Most popular things have a gimmick and Mission: Improvable has a trademark one of its own — audience participation.

The group's show involves several different skits over the course of the evening. Each skit or game is different from the one preceding it.

"No game plays on the same idea," Krebs said.

An example of a skit would be "Party Quirks" — a game in which there are three guests at a party and the audience assigns some sort of quirk to the guests, then the host has to guess what the quirks are through clues. Other skits like "Hoedown," "The World's Worst Board Game" and "Murder" also grow out of audience feedback.

Because of the audience's input, D'Ambrosio said, "It's never the same show; you see something different [every week]. You can rehearse until you're blue in the face, but the performance is what counts."

The audience's reaction in shows of this type is extremely vital and can determine how the show will progress through the evening.

"The biggest challenge is the audience," Krebs said. "[They] can make or break the show."

D'Ambrosio agrees, describing the perfect audience as "the audience which is willing to see anything and everything and assume nothing."

Mission: Improvable was formed in 1989 and until last spring, the group primarily did spot shows. Last spring, Krebs began the Saturday night performances and the shows have started to catch on in a big way.

"Last semester it was just catching on," Krebs said. "But now it's really in what makes it great."

Mission: Improvable will hold a improvisational workshop tonight in Campus Center room 163 from 8-10 p.m. The workshop is free and available to all levels.

■ Friday

continued from page 5

minutes. Around 9:30 p.m., there is a screening of a movie.

While the movies screened have already enjoyed a theatrical release, Tolson works hard on getting the latest movies. For example, upcoming movies include Men In Black and Air Force One.

Lately, Tolson has added a raffle to the weekly events. There are smaller raffles every week and at the end of the semester SEF plans to raffle off a Sony stereo.

"It's a way to break the ice with the audience," Tolson said of the raffles.

SEF is spreading itself out over the weekend; in case you missed the movie Friday night, you probably can catch it again Sunday evening.

"Our intention is to expand the entire program to another night," Tolson said. The Sunday evening showings are usually held in either the Student Union Ballroom or the Campus Center Auditorium.

In addition to expanding the evening programs, Tolson hopes to eventually move into residential areas.

Has SEF been the success Tolson hoped for?

"I think it's been a really outstanding success," Tolson said. "And it has the potential to be an even greater success."

Tomorrow night's program features comedienne Leighann Lord and the Jodie Foster film, Contact.

You too can write for Arts, you just need to say "please"

CLUB KAI
MONDAY NIGHT
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
$2.00 HALF TIME BUFFET- 50" TV
WEDNESDAY NIGHT
Ladies Night
no cover for the ladies
DJ Cool Regg
THURSDAY NIGHT
Return of the original:
Thick Thursday
Presented by R.e.g.g. productions
FRIDAY NIGHT
Hip Hop & Heineken
with special guest D.J.s
SATURDAY NIGHT
COLLEGE PARTY
with DJ PHIL
October 29
Jungle Night
By Raina & Flava Productions for info call (800) 994-5029
October 31
R.e.g.g. & T Productions Present
FREAKY FRIDAY HALLOWEEN BASH
$150.00 cash prizes for best costumes
Ticket in advance call for info
DRINK SPECIALS & BEER SPECIALS
DRESS TO IMPRESS • POSITIVE I.D. • 21+
AT PARK HALL • AMHERST • 253-2274

You Just Realized The Amorous E-Mail You Sent Your Boyfriend Went To CAMPUS-ALL.
www.americanair.com/college
When You Gotta Get Out Of Town.
It was a little mushy. It was a little graphic. And it was seen by everyone in your school with an e-mail address. Luckily, American Airlines online offers lots of affordable ways for a student to catch a flight. Log in and you can enter to win six free* tickets, get in on special student fares and much more. When it's time to get to school or time to get away, just click in. And check out
WIN SIX FREE TICKETS
Visit us on the web and find out how to win six free* round-trip tickets anywhere American flies in the continental U.S. See web page for rules and specifics
SPECIAL LOW AIR FARES
Sign up for College SAAver Fares™ and Net SAAver Fares™ announcing special savings to selected destinations via your e-mail
RECEIVE TRAVEL CERTIFICATES
Receive American Airlines/Citibank® Student Travel Savings Certificates when you're approved for a no-annual-fee Citibank credit card
COLLECT AADVANTAGE® MILES
Enroll in the AAdvantage travel awards program and also learn about many other ways to travel for less with American
AmericanAirlines® American Eagle®
*ABSOLUTELY NO PURCHASE OR BOOKING NECESSARY. Sweepstakes is open only to legal residents of the United States of America who are full-time students at a college or university located in the U.S.A., aged 18 or older as of the date of entry. 2. How to Enter: Sign up to receive American's College SAAver Fares e-mail on the American Airlines web site at http://www.americanair.com/college and you will be automatically entered in the College SAAver Fares Sweepstakes. You may also enter by writing your name, address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" card and mailing it to College SAAver Fares Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 165567, Irving, TX 75016-5567. Sweepstakes begins at 12:01 a.m., Eastern time on September 19, 1997, and all online entries must be received by 11:59 p.m., Eastern time on December 1, 1997. All mail-in entries must be postmarked by December 1, 1997 and received by December 8, 1997. A maximum of one entry per person will be accepted. Receipt of entry constitutes the right of American Airlines, Inc. to use [illegible] name, hometown and likeness for purposes of trade and publicity without additional compensation. 3. Prizes: (1) Grand Prize: Six (6) round-trip travel passes, having an approximate combined total cash value of $2,040.00, that are good on American Airlines and American Eagle flights in the continental United States, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean to which American Airlines flies. Travel passes are nontransferable but all taxes, a complete list of sweepstakes rules will be posted on American Airlines web site or for a copy of sweepstakes rules, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope by December 30, 1997, to College SAAver Fares Sweepstakes Rules, P.O. Box 165567, Irving, TX 75016-5567. Sweepstakes void in Puerto Rico, Bermuda, The Bahamas, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean to which American Airlines flies. Travel passes are transferable but all taxes, for Economy Class travel on American Airlines for one (1) person for one (1) year from the date of the postmark on the affidavit of eligibility and liability/publicity release executed by the winner. Travel may be to any location in the continental United States, Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean to which American Airlines flies. Travel passes are transferable but all taxes, airport fees and all other expenses associated with their use will be the sole responsibility of the winner. Travel arrangements are subject to availability. Blackout dates and other restrictions apply. Sweepstakes void where prohibited by law. 3. The name of the winner will be posted on the American Airlines web site. You may also obtain the winner's name by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope by December 30, 1997, to College SAAver Fares Winner, P.O. Box 165567, Irving, TX 75016-5567. American Airlines, American Eagle and AAdvantage are registered trademarks. College SAAver Fares is a service mark, and Net SAAver Fares is a trademark, of American Airlines, Inc. American Eagle is American's regional airline associate. American Airlines reserves the right to change AAdvantage program rules, regulations, travel awards and special offers at any time without notice, and to end the AAdvantage program with six months' notice. American Airlines is not responsible for products or services offered by other participating companies. Schedules subject to change without notice. ©1997 American Airlines, Inc. All rights reserved. Printed in the U.S.A.

Using salt to make juicy chicken

THE DORMROOM GOURMET
by
Louis Davis

Salt has been used in the preparation of food since the beginning of the human experience. Primarily, our bodies need salt (sodium chloride) to survive, so we crave it. Salt both aids in the transference of electrical signals through our musculature and helps to regulate the proper proportion of water in our cellular tissue.

Salt is now known mostly as a flavoring agent, but before the time of refrigeration, salting was used as a method of food preservation. Salt's hydroscopic (moisture drawing) properties help to slow down icrobial growth, thus prolonging the shelf life of food, keeping it safe to eat long after it was hunted or gatherered.

This week's recipe uses salt in a way that may seem strange to most people today. It is called Salt Baked Chicken and it employs a cooking method that has been used for centuries in many cultures around the world, and for good reason. It makes for the juiciest and most flavorful chicken I have ever hand. And since the salt is removed before eating, it doesn't taste "salty."

For the dormroom version of this recipe, I have provided a way for you to make this very simple dish in a toaster oven. I have also included a recipe for a great sauce that takes only minutes to make and (like always) uses a few readily available ingredients in new and unusual ways.

And as always, whenever and wherever you're cooking, think safety (and flavor) first. Have a fire extinguisher close by and be sure to provide for proper ventillation. Rock and boil!

Salt Baked Chicken with Roasted Potatoes and a Cranberry–Balsamic Glaze

Ingredients for chicken:

- 1 whole, small chicken, cut-up
- 2 small baking potatoes, washed and cut into six pieces each
- 1 onion, peeled, quartered and separated
- 8 cloves garlic, peeled
- 1 lemon, cut Into eighths
- 1 Tbs. olive oil
- 1 tsp. dried thyme
- black pepper to taste
- Kosher salt, as needed (about half a cup)

Ingredients for sauce:

- 1/2 cup balsamic vinegar
- 1 tsp. black pepper (freshly ground, if possible)
- 1/2 can cranberry sauce
- 3/4 cup canned chicken broth or bullion
- 2 tsp. lemon juice (about 1/4 lemon)

For chicken:

1) Set toaster oven to bake setting and preheat to 400 degrees.

2) In a bowl, mix together potatoes, onions, lemons, garlic, thyme, oil and pepper. Transfer to a toaster–oven sized roasting pan.

3) Place salt in bowl and dredge the skin side of the chicken pieces, making sure to thoroughly coat.

4) Place salt crusted chicken skin–side up in the pan on top of the bed of vegetables, lemons and spices. Place the pan in the oven.

5) After 15 minutes, turn the heat down to 350 degrees and continue baking for another 30 minutes.

6) When baking is complete, remove pan from oven. Carefully lift each piece of chicken out of pan and with a clean kitchen towel, brush off the salt crust and transfer to a serving plate. Next remove the potatoes and the garlic and place around the chicken.

For the sauce:

1) Put the vinegar and the pepper in a sauté pan and place on a burner over high heat. Bring to a rolling boil and let the liquid reduce by two–thirds until it forms a syrup (about three to four minutes).

2) Add the cranberry sauce and the chicken broth and bring to a boil, stirring constantly until smooth and slightly thickened (about two to three minutes).

3) Just before service, add the lemon juice and mix thoroughly. Pour over chicken and enjoy.

Louis Davis is a UMass student. You can email him with any culinary questions or with any comments about this column at LouieXO@aol.com.

■ film

continued from page 5

why not throw in an Elvis flick and dance the night away with the undisputed hunk of rock–and–roll? Elvis is best for those late night pajama parties where you can giggle and coo at the kings trademark sneer. Jump up on your beds and practice that air guitar with such memorable films including Jailhouse Rock and Blue Hawaii. For a real treat, see if your local video store has the 1972 comeback special in Las Vegas. There won't be a dry eye in your dorm room when Elvis chants "we can't go on with suspicious minds."

Finally, since it is rather cold outside, how about warming up to two little treats featuring some of today's hottest stars? In Fraternity Vacation, you can see a young Tim Robbins and pals hang by the pool and attempt to pick up girls. In this moving story of passion and lust, Robbins' fraternity bros compete against their rival frat in a competition to see who can woo the babe first. If this seems too juvenile for you, then try out this early work by screen legend Johnny Depp, called Private Resort. With the help of "Northern Exposure's" Rob Morrow, the two vacation in a tropical paradise all the while attempting to hang by the beach and pick up girls (sounds familiar I know). These films represent one of the most underrated 1980's movie genres; the hopeful comeback of B grade beach movies.

Well I hope everyone out there has an idea of how entertaining viewing movies at home can be. If you don't like my suggestions (although I wouldn't know why) then head down to the video store and pick out something special for you and your friends. There are so many titles and choices, but please don't get overwhelmed, there are 365 days in the year, meaning if you watch two videos a night you'll be all set.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

■ shows

continued from page 5

created a post–modern/mad–house Paris of the not too distant future, filled with grunge rockers, blank TVs, vampires, extra–terrestrials and ordinary urban terrorists. It is $5, for the general public; $3, for students and seniors. For information call 585–2787. Lapin, Lapin opens on Oct. 23 at Smith College and runs through Nov. 1.

On Sunday, Oct. 26, the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center will present Maria Benitez Teatro Flamenco. She will perform a powerfully diverse and demanding repertoire of music and dance with the rhythms of Flamenco at its core. Flamenco continues to hold a strange fascination for many people. The movements are seductive, powerful and explosive. Internationally acclaimed as a performer, choreographer and director, Benitez is recognized as one of the finest exponents in her field–Spanish dance and all that it embraces. She will be bringing Teatro Flamenco, her eight– member company of dancers and musicians to Bowker Auditorium on Sunday, Oct. 26 at 7 p.m. as part of the Fine Arts Center Series. Tickets for Maria Benitez Teatro Flamenco are $20 and $15. Tickets for ages 17 and under are $8, and $5 for Five College students. For more info call 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

Also on the front for this season, The Tempest is going to storm into UMass. Department of Theater Chair Richard Trousdell is in the director's seat for this exciting production of Shakespeare's classic tale of young loves, old wrongs, and brave new hopes. The Curtain Theater is transformed into Prospero's desert island, a swirling land alive with witchcraft and theater magic as Prospero and Miranda try to right the wrongs done them. The play features superb lighting from Professor Penny Remsen and an extraordinary set by Professor Miguel Romero, as well as an exceptionally strong cast composed of student and community actors. Well–known story teller/performer Tom McCabe shines in the role of Prospero.

Professor Trousdell's approach to The Tempest explores Prospero and Miranda's relationship, and allows him the chance to "create something out of nothing" in the confined setting of the Curtain theater, which he requested so as to "emphasize the acting over scenic spectacle" for which The Tempest is usually known.

"How do we take this simple theater and make a Tempest out of it?" was one of the exciting challenges Trousdell said he faced.

Prospero and his relationship to Miranda has also been especially interesting, Trousdell said.

"Prospero is usually played as this wise and all–knowing person. But in his relationship with his daughter, though he is a very loving father, in a way he blew it for her. She should have been a princess but instead she's living on a desert island with a ravaging monster.

"Throughout the play, Prospero is in the process of redeeming himself as a father. The father–daughter relationship is one that's not often explored in theater, though it seemed to interest Shakespeare a great deal. I was excited to see what happened if I approached the play from this perspective," Trousdell said.

The Tempest runs in the Curtain Theater, Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 30–Nov. 1 and also Nov. 4–Nov. 8, Rand theater, UMass, at 8 p.m. There will also be matinee performances at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 1 and Saturday, Nov. 8. Tickets cost $4 for students and seniors, $7 for the general public, and are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or by calling 1–800–999–UMAS.

This weekend is a perfect time to relax and soak up some culture, and the Five Colleges always provide a colorful array of artistic works.

Write For Arts! Write For Arts! Write For Arts!

Hungry?
$5.99 NO LIMIT OFFER EXPIRES 10/31/97
COLLEGE SPECIAL NO COUPON NECESSARY
Large One-Topping Pizza
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.
Call 586-7772
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley

Special notice for members of outdoor organizations:
Don't Miss EMS Club Day
Tuesday, October 28
20% off everything in stock!
Hampshire Mall Rt. 9
(413)584-3554
EMS

LOWEST FARES ★ GUARANTEED ★ FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
SPRING BREAK 1998 BOOK NOW AND SAVE!
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 MAIN ST. (Cor of Dickinson) AMHERST

Pearl Street NightClub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY THURSDAY • 9-2am
18+ THE GREAT ESCAPE
HIGH ENERGY
Dance Party
PROPER DRESS & ID REQUIRED
21+ EVERY FRIDAY • 9-2am
SELECTROCUTION
THE GAME OF HI-TECH ELIMINATION
TOP 40 DANCE HITS
FREE BEFORE 10PM
LIVE MUSIC
Thurs. Oct. 16 @ 7:00pm Ab's
THE PILFERS
THUMPER/BIG LICK/DREZEL
Fri. Oct. 17 @ 8:00pm 18+
LEFTOVER SALMON
Sat. Oct. 18 @ 8:30pm 18+
THE MACHINE
PINK FLOYD SHOW
Wed. Oct. 22 @ 7:00 pm Ab's
MACHINE HEAD TREE
ONE KING DOWN/SHOT/CATCH 13
Thurs. Oct. 23 @ 7:00pm Ab's
BIOHAZARD
25 TA LIFE/HATEBREED
Fri. Oct. 24 @ 8:00pm 18+
THE NIXONS
SEVENDUST/CELLOPHANE
Sat. Oct. 25 @ 7:30 pm Ab's
GOLDFINGER
SAVE FERRIS/KARA'S FLOWERS
Tues. Oct. 28 @ 7:30 pm Ab's
JIM ROSE CIRCUS SHOW
PROTEIN
Thurs. Oct. 30 @ 7:00pm Ab's
OVERKILL
TYRANT TROOPER/SHADOWS FALL
SHED/RESTRAINT
Fri. Oct. 31 @ 9:00pm 21+
14th ANNUAL HALLOWEEN MASQUERADE COSTUME PARTY
Prizes for best costumes and other categories.
$3000 in cash and prizes.
Concert $15, dinner for two, Downstairs in the Louisville groove with STASH
21+
UPCOMING
SAT. NOV. 1 BOOMFUL OF BLUES 21+
JUST ADDED!
WED NOV. 5 BEN FOLDS FIVE all ages
THURS. NOV. 6 BYDAT6000 all ages
FRI. NOV. 7 TICHY FISH 18+
SAT. NOV. 8 BART DORSON TRIBUTE 21+
FRI. NOV. 14 SLIPKNOT 16+
SAT. NOV. 15 MISFITS/SICK OF IT ALL all ages
TUES. NOV. 18 A Tribute to MUDDY WATERS 21+
THUR. NOV. 20 LINUS 18+
SAT. NOV. 22 SKAVOOVIE & the epoxies all ages
FRI. NOV. 28 STAIND 16+
SAT. NOV. 29 TEXAS FLOOD 21+
SUN. DEC. 7 TERMINIT all ages
SAT. DEC. 13 MAX CREEK 18+
Advance tickets available at the Northampton box office, 586-8686, 1-800-THE ICE, Ticketworks, Record Town, The Unlimited at U. Mass, Platypus Records in Westfield, Music Outlet in Enfield, & T-Side Records in Northampton 586-9566
For The Record in Amherst: Almost Music in Greenfield,
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/pearl-street
★★★★★413-584-7771★★★★★

Come check out the NEW T-Mex. If you haven't been lately, You haven't been.
T-MEX Totally Mexican

Aperitivos:		Burritos:		Tacos T-Mex Style: served with rice and beans
Mexican BBQ Pizza	$2.35	Carne Asada	$4.25	Carne	$3.75
Vegetarian Nachos	$2.75	Pollo	$4.00	Pollo	$3.75
Chips & Salsa	$1.00	Fajita Veggie	$3.25	Fajita Veggie	$3.50
		Chimi & Shrooms	$3.50	Tijuana	$3.50
Ensaladas:		Black Beans & Vegetables	$3.75	T-Mex Wrap	$2.25
Taco Salad w/ chicken or beef	$2.75 / $3.50			Rice and Beans	$2.50
				Fried Sombrero w/chocolate	$1.00

Card accepted
Hatch FOOD COURT
Located in the Student Union Basement
brought to you by Campus Center Food Services

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Busch & Busch Light" 30-pk $10.49
Celebrate "OKtoberfest"!
New Amsterdam OKtoberfest
Blue Moon "Pumpkin ale"
Pete's OKtoberfest
Catamount OKtoberfest
$4.99 6-pk. Your Choice!
"Fantastic Pricing!"
"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Devil Mountain Red Hook ALL FLAVORS! Shipyard Otter Creek
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.99 Wow!
Cider Jack $4.99 6-pk. all flavors
Rolling Rock $12.99 case 12 oz. bottles
Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75 liter
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Baseball awards Golden Gloves

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Florida catcher Charles Johnson, Cleveland shortstop Omar Vizquel and third baseman Matt Williams, whose defense helped their teams reach the World Series, each won Gold Glove honors yesterday.

The awards were released by Rawlings before the Marlins and Indians played tonight in Game 4 of the Series.

Anaheim outfielder Jim Edmonds and New York Mets shortstop Rey Ordonez, both of whom regularly show up on highlight films because of their acrobatic plays, were among five first-time winners. Baltimore first baseman Rafael Palmeiro, Minnesota second baseman Chuck Knoblauch and New York Yankees outfielder Bernie Williams also won for the first time.

Seattle outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. and Atlanta pitcher Greg Maddux won their eighth straight Gold Gloves. San Francisco outfielder Barry Bonds won his seventh overall and Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez won his sixth straight.

Johnson earned his third consecutive Gold Glove. Vizquel won his fifth overall and Matt Williams, who won three while playing for San Francisco, got another in his first year in the AL.

Baltimore pitcher Mike Mussina completed the AL list.

Other NL winners were San Francisco first baseman J.T. Snow, Houston second baseman Craig Biggio, San Diego third baseman Ken Caminiti, Los Angeles outfielder Raul Mondesi and Colorado outfielder Larry Walker.

Biggio won his fourth award, while Walker and Caminiti each won their third. Snow, who won two with the Angels, won his first in the NL. Mussina and Mondesi each are two-time winners.

Griffey's eight Gold Gloves ties him with Paul Blair and Dwight Evans for second-most ever among AL outfielders, trailing only Al Kaline's 10. Managers and coaches vote on the awards for fielding excellence in their leagues, and cannot pick players from their own teams. Johnson, who has not made an error in 171 straight regular-season games, threw out 45 percent of would-be baserunners this year. He has gone 5-for-8 in throwing out runners in the postseason, though he made two throwing errors in the NL championship series against Atlanta.

"I think Charlie Johnson is the best throwing catcher that I've seen," All-Star catcher Sandy Alomar of Cleveland said. "I'm impressed with him because he's a tall guy and he can get off the ground so quick and still make accurate throws."

Of the 18 Gold Glove winners this year, 12 played in the postseason.

Collegian Sports

■ NFL

continued from page 14

into a shooting contest between Bledsoe and Brett Favre.

I know the preseason doesn't amount to a hill of beans, but New England's first team held Green Bay's first team to no points back in August. Until the fourth quarter, the Pats were leading 6-0. Just wanted to add that in.

For the Pack: Let's face it, this team is on the verge of doing something nasty. They've played like manure, yet post a 5–2 record.

You figure it out.

As long as Favre has a solid game and the defensive line puts pressure on Bledsoe then they have a very good chance at making the Patriots 5–3.

Plus, look at who Green Bay has played — Chicago (twice), Philadelphia (lost), Miami, Minnesota, Detroit (lost), and Tampa Bay. Six teams with a combined 22–21 record. Take away Chicago and they're 22–14.

Not too shabby.

Right now it looks as if the Packers are just biding their time to when they're going to turn things up and make their way back to the Super Bowl.

Don't be surprised.

Looking at their schedule for the rest of the season, it is quite possible that they finish 14–2.

But let's not kid ourselves.

They still have New England, Carolina, Dallas, Detroit and Tampa Bay to beat. And you know every team plays their best football against the Super Bowl Champions.

It's just as possible that they could end up 9–7.

I'll go with the Patriots 30–24.

• Courageous Pick of the Week Part III (1–1)

First, I picked Chicago to beat Green Bay and came one point away from victory, but last Sunday the yellow brick road went through my dorm. Zippidee doo-da.

The Raiders defeated the Broncos 28–25, eliminating the last of the perfect teams. Listen, my basis behind picking Oakland was simple. One, it's one of the best rivalries in the NFL; two, it was in Oakland; and three, the Broncos were due for a loss. No team is unbeatable.

Anything else? It's not that hard to make stupid predictions.

This week is tough, though. Not because I'm afraid to pick somebody, but because there aren't that many outrageous picks to be made.

Don't even think about me taking New Orleans over San Francisco. I'm not that dumb. (Don't say it.)

How about Chicago (again) over Miami. The Bears still are looking for their first victory of the 1997 season and Pro Player Stadium in Miami is just as fine a place to get it in as any. Plus the Bears owe me one for blowing it against Green Bay. (Hey, my ego needs stroking.)

Chicago 20, Miami 17.

Next week: A column on every team you don't care about.

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

■ field

continued from page 14

and speak volumes about the Massachusetts squads over the years as a whole, because of the differences between the grass and turf games. On grass, the ball has the tendency to bounce more erratically than on AstroTurf. Also, the ball is slowed by the uneven ground.

"[Turf] changes the game. The game's a lot faster," Shea said. "Grass is an unpredictable surface."

The Minutewomen, however, are not rid of games on natural grass altogether. They have suffered a loss on grass to Yale already this season, and they face another game on a natural field when they travel to West Chester on Oct. 31.

"Because it is so unpredictable, you need to be even more mentally prepared," Shea said.

But the transition for the game against the Golden Rams should be easier than the one UMass faced earlier in the season.

"This team has played for a long time on grass, but it still took us a while to get back into the groove [of playing on that surface]," junior midfielder Kate Putnam said about the team's practices prior to the Yale game. "We just have to hit the ball and play with the basics, along with all the other stick skills we use on the turf."

UMass did have access to AstroTurf fields in recent years, but that meant travelling to Westfield State College — over 40 minutes away — for both practices and games.

"It's wonderful to have this facility at home, because before we were going to Westfield to practice and to play and that gets tiring," junior forward Erica Johnston said. "It was nice that we had a field to use, but it's so much better having one right here that we play on all the time.

"It's great. It's the best facility in the nation," Johnston said.

Junior midfielder Vicky Browne, who hails from Great Britain, where turf fields are used in even the early stages of development, agreed.

"This field is the best surface I've ever played on," she said after UMass' first game.

That reputation is enhanced by the built in sprinkler system at Garber. Wetting the field before play makes the ball roll more smoothly and even helps to cut down on some turf injuries.

"A lot of times, places won't wet the turf, so it's harsher to play on," Putnam said. "But this field is beautiful."

And for UMass and the Minutewomen the importance of the new surface is almost too great to explain.

"It's huge. Huge," Shea said. "I can't even explain in words what it does for the program."

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
21 Center St Northampton
ALL AGES ALL THE TIME
JUST ADDED!
wednesday, october 29, 10 pm
Meredith Brooks
alternarock's favorite 'Bitch,' $10 adv.
friday, october 24, 7 pm
Lucie Blue Tremblay
Quebecois singer-songwriter. $14.50 adv.
friday, october 24, 10 pm
Groovasaurus
blues-edged groove rock. $6 adv
saturday, october 25, 7 pm
Kenny Rankin
acoustic jazz-pop ballads. $16 adv.
saturday, october 25, 10 pm
Lord Hill
plus Foxtrot Zulu, $5 adv.
monday, october 27, 7 & 10 pm
Junior Brown
twang guitar marvel. $17.50 adv.
tuesday, october 28, 7 pm
Frank Manzi
Valley-based rock singer-songwriter. $6 adv.
wednesday, october 29, 7 pm
Corey Harris & the 5x5 Band
heir to the Delta blues throne. $9 adv.
thursday, october 30, 10 pm
Aquarium Rescue Unit
power rock - best monsters. $8 adv.
OCTOBER 31: VERTICAL HORIZON AND SISTER 7
TICKETS: For the Record, at the Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686.
24-HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413.584.0610

KAI CHI
WE DELIVER
586-2774
Sun-Weds noon-midnight Thurs-Sat noon-2am

Collegian sports says "warm up the bus"

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
Voted Best 1997
"We bring Chinatown to you"
★BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY★
SINCE 1987
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924 FAX: 253-1173
103 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Delivery Express: 549-0077

Cahillane Auto Rentals
Rt 9 @ Howard Johnson's in Amherst
48 Damon Rd, Northampton
Amherst 549.8099 Northampton 584.8099
on the Web @ http://www.cahillane.com
Now Featuring the ultimate 4-WD Jeep Grand Cherokee & Dodge Caravan
LEASING RENTALS

Marshall Steinbeck
Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service
(413) 256-8157
53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #1398

classé cafe'
GREAT BREAKFAST TILL 3 P.M.!
REMEMBER: -All Homemade- YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT.
Mon - Sat 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291
O.C.M.P. Welcome

HAPPY HALLOWEEN!
25 CENTRAL
150 Main Street •Northampton, Mass.
Located Downstairs at Thornes • 413-586-8017

This Thursday Nite fro m 9:00 to 11:00...
A Free Snack Basket!
Your Choice of:
W ings
Spicy Wedges or
Fried Shrimp
W ith A Purchase of Any Pitcher of Beer
MIKE'S WESTSIDE CAFE
163 Sunderland Rd, Amherst
253-9202

A Canadian Immigration Alternative For International Students
The Pakistani Student Association invites all interested international students to attend a seminar on permanent residency in Canada presented by:
•John Baker, a former Canadian foreign service officer with 29 years of experience, and a current Immigration Advisor at Shostack Dorsey Frankel Kligerman, a law firm in Toronto
•Asher Frankel, a senior partner and immigration attorney at Shostack Dorsey Frankel Kligerman firm, with 15 years of experience.
Presenters will give an overview of Canadian immigration law and policy, and will talk about procedural issues such as timing and cost.
Come join us on Sunday, October 26, 1997, 4-6pm at 101 Campus Center. The seminar is open to the five-college community.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION STUDENTS
Apple Computers will be presenting at the Campus Center, Monday 10/27, 10am-5pm. Come check out the latest operating system from Apple and some of the newest, fastest Powerbook and desktop systems available. A Systems Engineer will be on hand to answer your questions. Cool computers, nice reps., and your questions answered all in one place. Not bad, huh? Hope to see you there. Sincerely, Dan Stra, Your Apple Representative

ATTENTION FACULTY
Apple Computers will be presenting at the Campus Center, Monday 10/27, 10am-5pm. Present will be your new Account Executive (AE) and a Systems Engineer (SE). As your new AE, I am inviting you to stop by and meet me, or if you have a technical concern, to stop and speak to our SE. See you then. Sincerely, Dan Stra, Apple AE

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst- Cherning 1 bedroom Excellent location, on bus route, available 11/1 $475. 549-8248

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Nissen Sentra 4 speed, 2 door, 35-40 miles per gallon, 172,000 miles. $950 585-5041 after 6pm

Toyota Cressida 84 4 door, fully loaded, automatic. Needs some work. $500. 549-8248

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k Fiberglass Shell Call Truck .No rust. $4500. Call 582-9872

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std, power everything. Very fast $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

EMPLOYMENT

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate in a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work Monday through Thursday evenings. The position requires good communications skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Health and Dental insurance is available for Part-Time employees. Free transportation is provided from the PVTA busline. For further information or to arrange a personal interview, Call: 413-587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Personal Care Attendant for weekend morning: $7.85/hour. Call 546-0666

Human Services- Want to make a difference in someone's life? Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma, driver's license and a true interest in helping people. Call 323-8872 to start application process. AA/EOE

HELP WANTED
Hadley Office has several part-time positions available. Department hours 10am-2pm Monday through Friday and 4pm-9pm Monday through Friday.
- On busline
- Flexible schedule
- Positive atmosphere
- No experience required
- $6.00 hour to start
- Daily, weekly and monthly bonuses

Call 584-0215
10am to 4pm for interview

EMPLOYMENT

VIRGIN RECORDS COLLEGE REP POSITION
Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at 310-288-2433 Soph or Jr with car preferred. Previous music industry experience a plus!

Arby's Hempshire Mall Now Hiring Part-time, flexible schedule, good pay. Apply in person.

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

For Sale: One Elton John Tix Great seat. Call Enette @ (413)256-1734

For Sale- Canon BJ-EX Printer $160 or Best Offer. 665-7145

FOR SALE

MacIntosh Quadra 605 8/250 Includes monitor, keyboard, mouse, software, and printer. $575. Call Alyssa (413)545-4668 (days) (978)544-2837 (eves)

2 Elton John Tickets For Sale. Call 256-6022

Toshiba 486 Laptop $500. (413)549-4753

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

COMPUTERS!
New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 562-9186 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

A Residence Hall Key found in Worcester OC Parking Lot. Call 6-0420 if it's yours.

Found: Keys outside Textbook Annex in front of meters. Call 665-7686

Large cosmatic bag with many personal belongings found at Puffton Parking Lot on 10/19/97. Call Shauna 256-3094

Found: Calculetor in Thompson 106 about a month ago. Also, Walkman in Machmer Lobby with Oead Tape from Red Rocks. Call Jeff and leave # 586-7931

INSTRUCTION

Kung-Fu-Spirit of the Heart offers new student introduction: 3 lessons and a T-shirt- $19.95! Convenient Northampton location. 585-1661

LOST

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6 Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 35.

ROOM FOR RENT

Bedroom for rent in house. On Shumway Street. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call 253-9410

Available Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call Dave @ 256-3442 Don't Miss Out!!

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking For Roommate ASAP $360/month. Call (413)532-9075

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Transcription, Editing. Typing for students, professors & businesses Domenichelli Transcription Services (413)783-9607 domenbus@javanet.com

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 1/2 Bedroom Apt Puffton. $575, heat included. Available from 11/1. Call 549-1868

TRAVEL

Port Antonio Jamaica
Seaside Cottages
Real Jamaican Neighborhood
$150/Week
367-9350

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call 1(888)SPRINGBREAK Today!

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!
CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!!
Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN From $599
JAMAICA From $579
Best
BAHAMAS From $529
FLORIDA From $99
NOW HIRING REPS!
1-800-234-7007
http://www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Earn $125
Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study. 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS

available on the concourse or visit our friendly office

HALF PRICE SPECIALS

Place an add on a:
MONDAY- and receive half price on Birthdays

*TUESDAYS-*and receive half price on Personals

students: 10¢ / word
non-students: 20¢ / word

Charge your Classified by phone @ 545-3500.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identities and/or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE!)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 23

Book reading — Author James Carroll will read from his National Book Award winning memoir, An American Requiem at 4 p.m. at Food for Thought Books in Amherst.

Meeting — Come help organize a week of events for World AIDS Day at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 802. All are welcome.

Meeting — Intramural foul shooting and/or 3 point shot players meeting at 6 p.m. in Boyden, room 249. Mandatory for all entered. Can enter at meeting.

Party — Simchat Torah party at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House. Celebrate the completion of the Torah cycle with food, fun and friends. Sponsored by Hillel.

Poetry Reading — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is holding an open mike poetry reading at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union Gallery. All are welcome to read or just listen. For more information, call the office at 545- 2240.

Workshop — MISSION IMPROVable is offering an improv comedy workshop at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163. All levers welcome.

FRIDAY, OCT. 24

Blood Drive — Help save someone's life by donating blood from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 1o1. Call 800–462–2229 for an appointment, walk–ins welcome.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation from 3–4 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545–0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Meeting — International graduate students are invited to talk about issues affecting them at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. Food and refreshments provided, sponsored by GEO.

Service — Shabbot services with Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All families are invited to come to this creative service led by Professor Julius Lester.

SATURDAY, OCT. 25

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Service — Morning service at 10 a.m. at the Hillel House.

NOTICES

Art contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406e or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www–ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, N.H. on Friday October 24–26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545– 2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech, voice, auditions on Saturday, Oct. 25 at 11 a.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. RSVP by Oct. 24 call 545–0415.

FYIs can be public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

FYIs can be dropped off at the Campus Center Room 113, and then your event may be a true success.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
28	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 23, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Home Waters (In Stereo)		Mystery: Blue		Wall to Wall	Keeping Up	Murder-Horrid	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Reel TV	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Nothing Sacred (In Stereo)		Cracker (In Stereo)		20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BayWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Deceived" (1991, Suspense) Goldie Hawn, John Heard.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 5 -- Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News		Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Married...With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Grace Under	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids		Fame L.A. (In Stereo)		News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	World Series: Game 5 -- Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Living Single (Between Bros.		413 Hope St. "Heartbeat"		News		Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	World Series: Game 5 -- Atlanta Braves or Florida Marlins at Baltimore Orioles or Cleveland Indians.				News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Doctors on Cell		Mystery: Blue		Bridesheed Revisited		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	28 News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Nothing Sacred (In Stereo)		Cracker (In Stereo)		20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Deep Cover" (1992, Drama) Larry Fishburne, Jeff Goldblum.				News	M*A*S*H	M*A*S*H	Reel TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"Shakedown" (1988, Drama) Peter Weller, Sam Elliott.				"Trespass" (1992, Drama)		Bill Paxton, Ice T.
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Skin Deep"		Biography "Marilyn Monroe: The Mortal Goddess"				Unexplained		Law & Order "Helpless"
CNN	29	23 WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	63	26 Tim Allen	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Blazing Saddles (1974, Comedy) Cleavon Little.				NHL Special	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	49	Wings "Strange Planes" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Serpent		Into Unknown	Movie Magic	Wings "Eagles of the Crown"		Justice Files "Why They Kill"
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter		Wkend Kickoff	Bloopers	Sumo (R)	Strongest Men	World's Strongest Men		Bodybuilding		Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait: "Bette Davis"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Deep Dark Secrets" (1987, Drama) James Brolin.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	MTV Live	Viewers	Ewan-Comm	Best of MTV	Beevis-Butt,	Beevis-Butt,	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Yo! (In Stereo)		Oddville, MTV	Loveline
NICK	65	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Heppy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Text	Newhart
SCIFI	60	Twilight Zone		Time Trax "Happy Valley"		Sequest 2032 "Good Soldiers"		"Kill or Evil" (1963, Horror)		Cliffort Evans, Noel Willman.		Time Trax "Happy Valley"
TLC	62	28 Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Bugsy Siegel (R)		TWA Flight 800 (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	50	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superman.		"Riverboard" (1967, Comedy) Goldie Hawn, Kurt Russell.					Rough Cut	"Hope" (1997) (In Stereo)
USA	55	Baywatch		Highlender: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		"School Ties" (1992, Drama) Brendan Fraser. (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings "Voices" (R)
HBO	35	"That Thing You Do!" (1996) Tom Everett Scott. "PG"				"Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" (1995)		It's "Pinocchio's Revenge" (1996) Rosalind Allen.		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	45	"Short Circuit" (1986, Comedy) Ally Sheedy. "PG"				"How to Steal a Million" (1966, Comedy) Audrey Hepburn.				"Highlander" (1986, Fantasy) Christopher Lambert. "R"
SHOW	66	"GoldenEye" (1995, Adventure) Pierce Brosnan. (In Stereo) PG-13				"Never Say Never Again" (1983, Adventure) Sean Connery. (In Stereo) PG				Fast Track		"Bullet" (1997)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

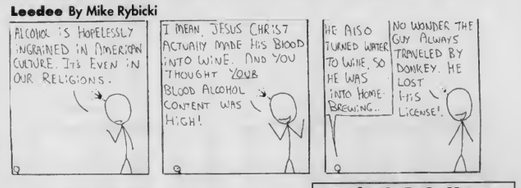
Sven By Stephen Higgins

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Leedeo By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are likely to hear from someone who shares important news, but won't be able to tell you everything you need to know. Investigate!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Keep yourself on track today, regardless of whatever others have going. It is important that you remain true to your intents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Seek and ye may find today, but most likely you will only get a better idea of what you're looking for. You will get a hidden message.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You are going to have to get certain things done sooner than expected today if you plan to take advantage of an unexpected opportunity.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You should be able to make an important identification today which allows you more freedom to make the choices you want to make.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — A message you don't understand entirely will prove pivotal to you in the days to come, but right now you can let things take their course.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You have been weighing yourself down with one or two burdens you need not bear. Lighten the load today, and proceed at a faster pace.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Cooperating with those who are suspicious of you will ease tensions on all fronts. Avoid the tendency to get defensive with critics.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — It is likely to take you longer than expected to complete routine jobs today. Energy may be running low, and enthusiasm suffers as a result.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You will get what you want today, provided you're direct in your requests. Get all pertinent information before you're put to the test.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — A hidden attraction is likely to come out in the open today, and put you in a position which demands the utmost tact and discretion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — The news is out, and others are going to start coming to you with requests of all kinds. Today, you can remain rather free of burdens.

Quote of the Day

"She's turning me into a criminal, when all I want to be is a petty thief."

–Bart Simpson

Close to Home By John McPherson

Through well-planned provocation, Vince was able to harvest enough toilet paper during Halloween to keep the family supplied for an entire year.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Lemon Pepper Cod
Lemon Grill Burger
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Vegetarian Egg Roll, Fried Rice
Macaroni/Tomato or Alfredo Sauce
Vegan Black Bean Quesadilla

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders/Dipping Sauces
Lentil Chili
Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Baked Fish w/Herb Stuffing

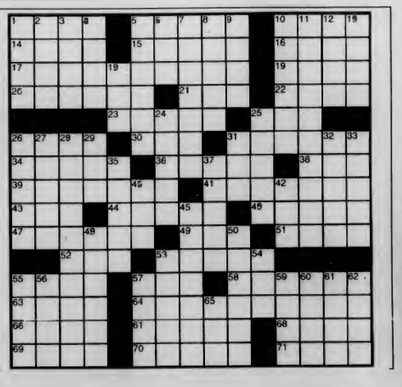
Berkshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Spaghetti/Meatballs
Meatball Grinder
Spicy Black Bean Burger

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders/Dipping Sauces
Lentil Chili
Pastabilities

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Laura Stock
Photo Technician	Lauren Kaski
Copy Editor	Melissa Tauber
Production Supervisor	Sam Smullin
Production Staff	Angie Agnese Jennie Huang



ACROSS
1 Where to buy pastrami
5 Aquarium fish
10 Fellow
14 Type of rock
15 Baseball great Hank —
16 Atmosphere
17 Freshwater catch
19 Muslim prince
20 Illuminated naturally
21 Manipulate
22 Team
23 Signified
25 Buddy
26 European capital
30 Winter mo.
31 Punctuation mark
34 Bone —
36 First and reverse
38 Collection of anecdotes
39 Grill
41 Barnyard strutter
43 Miscalculate
44 Skinflint
46 Depleted
47 Raised
49 Actress West
51 Tacks on
52 Legal matter
53 Vast chasm
55 Ship's jail
57 Mouths, in biology
58 Gentlest
63 Shakespearean king
64 Pottery clay
66 "Green Gables" heroine
67 Gold bar
68 Speak sharply
69 Party giver
70 Type of wall
71 Wise one

DOWN
1 Tiny amounts
2 Neutral color
3 Circus animal
4 Matinee —
5 Made lace
6 Listener's need
7 Drub
8 Disturb
9 Poker stake
10 Comedian Sid —
11 Very embarrassed
12 Like the Gobi
13 Skin
18 Actress Novak
24 Patronage
25 Mexican coins
26 Yellow pigment
27 English county
28 Reference experts
29 — roll: winning
31 In favor of 32 Upright
33 Scurries
35 Peaks
37 Assortment
40 Slashed away
42 Health resort
45 Prohibition of a sort
48 Remorse
50 It could be real
53 "— You Glad You're You?"
54 Pouch
55 Dull
56 Gambling town
57 Elevator maker
59 Shade of green
60 Sicilian volcano
61 For men only
62 Masking —
65 Actor Silver

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	O	R	C	E	D		S	A	P		A	L	D	A
A	P	O	L	L	O		A	L	E		S	L	I	P
D	E	T	A	I	N		D	O	E		S	A	G	A
		S	T	A	N	D	U	P	C	O	M	I	C
T	H	E	S	E		O	L	D		I	R	A	T	E
H	O	P	I		A	G	E		A	R	T
A	V	O	C	A	D	O		T	I	C		B	A	A
T	E	X		S	O	D		E	M	U		R	U	N
S	L	Y		T	R	Y		N	E	S	T	E	G	G
		T	E	E		M	A	D		R	E	E	L
E	D	G	A	R		F	A	N		P	A	D	R	E
B	R	O	W	N	M	U	S	T	A	R	D
B	I	R	D		A	S	I	D		F	I	E	S	T	A
E	V	E	R		Z	E	E		A	D	R	O	I	T
D	E	N	Y		E	S	S		R	E	S	U	M	E

10-23-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS WEEKEND

Thursday, October 23, 1997 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UM volleyball falls short against UConn

It's cold in Ohio

Former Collegian staffer Jeremy (aka J.R. or Isiah) Adams meandered back to Amherst last weekend from lovely Susquehanna University (not quite hell, but you can see Olean, N.Y. from there). Selinsgrove, Pa. 17870 isn't exactly Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210 (or even Hadley, Mass. 01035) so we had to send him back right Monday night. To him, Amherst has a sort of hallowed aura to it, and the evening just couldn't include the Bills and Colts in the worst Monday night game since Milli Vanilli. On the crisp evening, the staff ventured to my Puffton palace. Our stomachs glowing after steaks with Rudy's Famous No. 2 sauce, we got some beers (because we're off campus and we can), and were exactly as you'd expect a sports staff to be.

Leigh Torbin

Then, on the telly came HBO's new documentary "Where Have You Gone Joe DiMaggio," just in time to ignite a war that even endless Sega Hockey couldn't settle. The very well done chronicle pointed out that whenever the pristine and almost holy icon makes a public appearance he insists on being introduced as "the greatest living baseball player."

Thankfully, his cooler head prevailed before launching into a battle that could have raged on until either Buffalo or Indianapolis found the end zone. That or Napoleon rising from the dead to dunk over Hakeem Olajuwon and give the Vancouver Grizzlies the NBA title.

"It really doesn't matter," he said squelching the potential conflict on this otherwise joyous evening. "He was married to Marilyn Monroe."

Whether .406 is a more astounding mark than 56 is moot. DiMaggio has an aura. A luster. A certain Tao about him that athletes today just don't have. It's partly from his love of the Yankees — a tremendous passion, although horribly misguided. Players just aren't loyal to one team these days, just as people get married and divorced several times, jumping from spouse to spouse like a free agent.

Explain how a little further downtown on the 1, 2, or 3 trains at the corner of 34th and 7th, the Knicks have traded away each of their last four No. 1 picks in a two–week span, a pair of them to rival Boston last night.

Then you look at someone like Paul Kariya (St. Paul if you're a Mainer). Arguably the best player in the NHL today just flat–out turned down $70 million of Disney's dough because he didn't like the manner in which it was offered, and has said that he might sit out the entire season.

Turning down $70 million! Kevin Garnett calling $103 million an outrage! Heck, I'll take just one million, thank you very much.

If I had $1 million I could afford to have my Kraft Dinner with the added bonus of little bits of chopped up hot dogs mixed in.

If I had $1 million, myself, and many of my friends would have much more reliable automobiles. No stinkin' K cars.

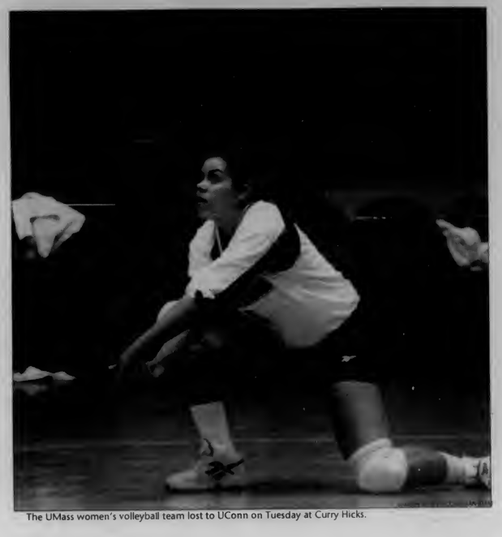
If I had $1 million, I could afford a last row, upper deck seat at a Bruins game.

If I had $1 million, I'd be rich, so why wouldn't a kid who played collegiately at Maine be rich too?

If I had $1, million, I could pay the Barenaked Ladies for the upcoming copyright suit and still post bail.

• CBS had an interesting choice of announcers for the Pitt– Notre Dame game. Calling the action between the Panthers and the Fighting Irish... Sean McDonough and Terry Donahue. Oh, yeah, two people with no sense of Irishness. Was Billy Bulger doing sideline reports with Michael Flatley? Have anutha' pint of 'da Guinness why donicha.

• Last night the Fall Classic was played in a scene that looked more like a Winter Wonderland. Oh yeah, forget all about pinstripes, red, white and blue bunting and Hanson singing the national anthem. Nothing screams of classic baseball like a team in teal playing through a snow storm.



• Before I launch into field hockey below, let's just talk about what a great and unique place UMass is. The state of Pennsylvania has both a Schmecksville and a Schwenksville and we have a student–athlete from each here.

• Although this column was tough to fill with precious little going on, it's nothing because a friend of mine has an arduous task of an even longer piece to write and not enough information. She's talking about the turf at Garber Field and is having trouble filling space, even with coach and player quotes and fact sheets.

"The turf was unavailable for comment," she said glumly. "It took the fifth."

The turf won't talk. What's next? Crappy late–October weather in Cleveland?

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnis

The UMass women's volleyball team lost to UConn on Tuesday at Curry Hicks.

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

In the Northeast, there's the Big East and the Atlantic 10. That's the way it's always been. The Beast of the East has had its day, but the A–10 is on its way.

In the national scene, the Big East has always been regarded as the east coast's representative along with the ACC. But in recent years, the A–10 has turned a few heads. Last night, the Massachusetts volleyball team tried to turn a few more against a very strong Connecticut squad. Despite a very impressive night by sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers, UMass (10–11, 5–5 in the A–10) fell one game below .500 overall with a 15–7, 15–6, 8–15, 15–10 loss to the Big East stalwarts.

UCONN	3
UMASS	1

UMass looked good when the whistle blew. They jumped out to a 6–1 lead and was in control. But it was all downhill from there, at least for the first two frames. UMass just didn't seem to click. UConn, on the other hand, did. The Huskies manhandled the Minutewomen, outscoring them 29– 7 to take a two sets to nothing lead.

To say the least, things didn't look too good for the Minutewomen going into game three. Down two sets, coach Bonnie Kenny opted to shuffle things up a bit; sophomore outside hitter Sarah Watters in, freshman Courtney Bowen out.

Lead by Meyers and Watters, UMass connected on 20 kills and committed only three errors, en route to a 15–8 decision to make things interesting.

But all the hoopla was short–lasted. Although showing plenty of resiliency and pride, there was just too much UConn for UMass to handle. It wasn't the Huskies that turned the key in the ignition on the UConn bus. It was the Minutewomen.

In the fourth game, UMass committed 10 hitting errors to UConn's three, and the Huskies needed only six kills on the set to wrap things up.

"We laid over in the first two games and unfortunately we made up our mind to play a little too late," Kenny said. "Against a team like UConn who's in the upper half of the Big East, you can't afford to hit the way we did tonight."

Along with her 16 kills, Meyers collected six blocks (two solos) and two service aces. Watters was the only other Minutewoman with double–digit kills with 13.

"I liked the way Jill Meyers played tonight. She played like a leader, she stepped it up, and did a great job. She carried us tonight, but at this level, you're going to need more than one player to step it up," Kenny said

UMass as a team hit .188 at the net, but only .030 in game four when it counted. Once again, outside hitting was the Achilles' heel for the Minutewomen. Compared to UConn, UMass had 10 less kills and nine more errors.

Freshman middle blocker Rebecca Hasson had a solid performance in limited playing time. In only two games, Hasson registered seven kills and a hitting percentage of .455.

UMass is in the midst of a five–way tie for fourth place in the conference standings. Only four teams are admitted to the A–10 Conference championships in Dayton in late November.

The Minutewomen return to conference action this weekend when they travel to Ohio to take on Xavier and Dayton tomorrow and Saturday, respectively. UMass defeated both schools when they visited the Cage in late September.

Switch to turf an important change for field hockey

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts field hockey team began its 1997 campaign, it did so on the on the newly renovated AstroTurf at Richard F. Garber Field.

Saturday, before the Minutewomen's contest against rival Connecticut, Athletic Director Bob Marcum and Associate Athletic Director Elaine Sortino will preside over a dedication ceremony for the new turf.

The installation of the new surface has been a long awaited change for not only the field hockey team, but also the men's and women's lacrosse squads. In addition, other athletic teams will benefit from the practice and workout possibilities the turf opens to them.

"It will help a number of other sports besides field hockey," UMass field hockey coach Patty Shea said. "It helps men's lacrosse, women's lacrosse, softball, baseball. It helps a lot of different areas, and it does definitely give a huge benefit to our program."

And it is field hockey that has christened the field. And the change — and resulting move from the team's former home at Totman Field — is a major one for the Minutewomen.

The majority of the UMass squad plays almost the entirety of its summer training on AstroTurf, and the international players (UMass has two players from Great Britain) have spent practically their entire careers on turf.

"When they go and play during the summer the players play on turf. Any camp, any development camp is played on turf," Shea said. "That's what the international game is played on. So if you have any player who has the aspiration to go on and play on the international level, they have to play on turf."

The switch to Garber Field does not diminish what the Minutewomen accomplished at Totman; in fact, it magnifies those accomplishments. In their time on the natural grass at Totman, the Minutewomen were consistently one of the region and nation's premier teams. From 1974–96, Massachusetts compiled a higher winning percentage than UConn, New Hampshire, Northeastern and Providence.

"It needs to be in perspective how amazing it has been for the University of Massachusetts to be as consistent and as much of a power as they have been playing on grass, because a turf game and a grass game are two totally separate games," Shea said. "For them to be able to compete against teams that play everyday on AstroTruf and for them to be able to challenge in a national tournament setting is a huge statement to the commitment of the players and the coaching staff. And that's the history of this program."

The statistics speak for themselves,

Turn to FIELD, page 11

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

A scene during the reconstruction of Richard F. Garber field this summer during its transition from grass to turf.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN STAFF

Let the games begin

Mike Caffrey and the Massachusetts men's hockey team open up the 1997–98 season this Friday against the Riverhawks of U–Mass–Lowell.

Patriots offensive line poses problems; big Monday night clash against Packers

Jonathan M. Place on The NFL

Lots of respect out to those scumbags in the ugly green jerseys. They showed the Patriots a thing or two.

New England performed almost as bad as they did against Denver.

The offensive line played a disgraceful football game, allowing lets linebacker Mo Lewis and Co. to penetrate the line on a consistent basis. If Patriots right tackle Zefross Moss is about 400 pounds, and Lewis is 250, how is it possible that he can get around him and the rest of the offensive line so easily?

Hey, Moss, do your joh.

I think I have some ointment to cure that bad case of Zefross Moss.

Also, and I don't usually bring this up, but the officiating was outrageous. Not during the whole game, but on two very important accounts.

First, there was the interference penalty called on Ty Law in the endzone against Jeff Graham. I'm not an official, and I'm not sure whether or not it was a penalty, but there has to be something written about how long a referee can think about whether or not he is going to throw the flag.

After that particular play had been completed and the ball was bouncing on the ground, the line judge was waving his hands, calling the play incomplete. Then, the Meadowlands crowd started to go nuts and Graham began to cry and moan. Then and only then did the line judge decide to toss the yellow snot rag. I'm not sure if you saw it, but I think it was Graham who told the head referee what the penalty should be, because obviously the line judge had no clue.

Second, there was the incomplete pass to Shawn Jefferson which ended the game for New England. Now that play was close, real close. How can two officials on opposite sides of the field make that call as quick as they did? Brain surgeon in the endzone took a lunch break to make the interference call and yet Bert and Ernie made a calculator–fast call to end the football game.

It's a conspiracy I tell you.

• Enough with the sour grapes, though, I was just a little perturbed. Now for the big game.

Everyone is forcing me to address the Monday night game coming up between New England and Green Bay.

Gladly.

To rehash what I said last week, I'm going with the Pats for the rest of the year. They can win on any given day and have more healthy talent at this point than does the Pack.

However, compare Reggie White to that lame–O Lewis on the Jets. If White can penetrate through New England's line like Lewis did then Drew Bledsoe will be in a world of hurt.

• Keys to the game

For the Pats: Terry Glenn needs to toughen up and play like the man Bill Parcells never thought he was. Bledsoe needs a big game, but Curtis Martin is averaging over 4.5 yards per carry. Give him the pigskin. Don't turn the game

Turn to NFL page 11

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 37 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, October 24, 1997

Scream II? Hardly.

Sarah Michelle Geller stars as a teen beauty queen in I Know What You Did Last Summer (see Arts & Living, page 6).

The defense never rests

Senior Brad Norton and the defense corps of the UMass hockey team will look to help defend the Alumni Cup this weekend in the Minutemen's season opener. (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Agreement reached in Sierra Leone coup

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — West African leaders and the military junta that seized control of Sierra Leone reached an agreement yesterday to return the country's elected president to power within six months.

A statement released after two days of talks in Conakry, Guinea, and signed by the participating parties also called for an immediate cease-fire in Sierra Leone, amnesty for the leaders of the bloody coup and nationwide disarmament. It was signed by representatives of Sierra Leone's military ruler, Maj. Johnny Paul Koroma, and delegates from Guinea, Nigeria, Ivory Coast, Ghana and Liberia.

The five nations have spearheaded diplomatic efforts to end the standoff that began May 25 when Koroma led army officers in a coup that drove out the elected president, Ahmed Tejan Kabbah. Koroma did not attend the Guinea talks and has blocked other attempted peace plans, so the chances of this one succeeding were far from certain.

NATION

Dole offers to testify in Senate hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole offered yesterday to testify at Senate campaign fund raising hearings to respond to "suggestions of impropriety" during 1996 presidential bid and invited President Clinton to do the same.

In a letter hand delivered to the panel's chairman, Sen. Fred Thompson (R-Tenn.) Dole said "there have been statements questioning my activities as a candidate and some that cast doubt on my integrity."

Senate Democrats have charged that the Republican National Committee improperly used "soft money" to air ads that promoted Dole's candidacy, including a commercial spot that was a biography of the former Senate majority leader.

Dole said "it would be my hope that this offer will encourage President Clinton to express his willingness to do the same." Thompson was preparing an invitation for Clinton to testify, said Paul Clark, spokesman for the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

This week, Senate Democrats produced documents suggesting that GOP fund-raiser Jo-Anne Coe forwarded checks from big Republican donors to special interest groups.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 41	HIGH: 52 LOW: 39	HIGH: 56 LOW: 42

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Senate endorses Scott's stance on alcohol

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate yesterday officially voiced their support of Chancellor David K. Scott's actions to curb the abuse of alcohol on campus, including his suspension of alcohol at tailgating and his creation of an alcohol task force.

The motion, which was passed unanimously by the Senate, read, "That the Faculty Senate strongly endorses the steps taken by the Chancellor to eliminate the abuse of alcohol as a characteristic of campus life, and; That the Faculty Senate strongly encourages students to exercise all possible moderation and restraint in their consumption of alcohol and to exercise extreme care and caution in circumstances where the life and safety of an individual might be at risk."

Professor Brian O'Conner, of the biology department, said that the motion was in response to "the events of the past several weeks," referring to the alcohol–related death of junior Adam G. Prentice on Sept. 27 and complaints of alcohol–related behavior during Homecoming tailgating, as well as the administration's subsequent efforts to address the issue.

Faculty Senate President John Bracey said the intent of the motion was to let students know the faculty is concerned about their consumption of alcohol, not to promote a ban on alcohol.

"We have no intention of engaging in a 'just say no' campaign with our students," Bracey said. "The idea was to make a statement as soon as possible... to tell our students we are concerned that they are hurting and poisoning, and in some cases, killing themselves. We want to get this message out."

Scott also announced that the makeup of the 50–person alcohol task force has been finalized, and said the task force will be presenting recommendations on the University's alcohol policies in three weeks.

In other Senate business, Vice Chancellor Royster Hedgepath presented an update on Campaign UMass, the University's five–year fund–raising drive.

"One year ago this October we formally introduced Campaign UMass with three goals," Hedgepath said. "To raise money, to engage advocates for the University and to strengthen the image of the University."

Hedgepath reported that to date, $47.5 million has been raised through Campaign UMass, out of an original five–year goal of $125 million.

He also noted that in the past year, a larger number of alumni, 23 percent, made donations to the University than ever before.

"We have got some encouraging results," Hedgepath said. "But the question is, where do we go from here?"

Hedgepath said he has raised the total goal of the campaign to $139 million, "the projection which we will measure our success against."

He also called for the support of the faculty, telling the Senate their participation is critical for the success of the campaign.

"We need to get our faculty out to meet with people, to build the alumni program and the visual image of the University," Hedgepath said. "You are the primary spokespersons to potential donors as they come to campus, and we will need your help and support."

The Senate also voted to approve the creation of an undergraduate major in linguistics. The major will have to be approved by the Board of Higher Education and the Board of Trustees before it is opened.

In addition, the Senate voted to endorse the concept of providing one practicum credit for students who participate on Senate councils and committees.

Professor Kandula Sastry said he hoped the opportunity to earn a credit would encourage students to join the Senate councils and committees.

"We always urge the students to come and participate," Sastry said. "Let's hope this may provide an impetus for them to come and participate."

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

Royster Hedgepath speaks at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting.

Walk this way

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

James Horty, a junior philosophy major, gets a lesson on how to walk from a street sign.

Former student's death ruled suicide

The death of former University of Massachusetts student Jennifer Skolski was ruled a suicide Wednesday by the Medical Examiner's office in Springfield.

Skolski's cause of death was determined to be "asphyxiation by hanging."

Skolski, who was a music major at UMass, but withdrew this semester, was found dead last Saturday at the Mt. Pollux Conservation Area in Amherst, three days after her roommates reported her missing.

An Amherst police officer discovered Skolski's car last Friday night at 9 p.m. A search of the area was immediately conducted by Amherst police and fire personnel.

The search was suspended at 11 p.m. and resumed early the next morning. Skolski's body was removed from the scene at noon by the Medical Examiner.

The search effort was coordinated by Captain Charles Scherpa.

Funeral arrangements and obituary information have not yet been released.

—Leigh Faulkner

Chinese, U.S. roles in the world system discussed as nations prepare for summit

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Where does China fit in the world order?

That, along with the meaning of life, have been two of the most often asked questions in the past 100 years, said Smith College professor Steven Goldstein during a panel discussion, sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS), at Amherst College on Wednesday.

The panel, which included Goldstein, Amherst College Professor Ronald Tiersky and PAWSS director and moderator Michael Klare, discussed "China, the U.S. and the Emerging World System."

On the eve of Chinese President Jiang Zemin's summit with President Clinton next week, the discussion focused on U.S. and Chinese relations and their roles in the international community.

Goldstein described China and the United States as two nations which were doomed to conflict by the roles they were cast in the international system, in that China wants to change a status quo which was settled 150 years ago, making it a natural enemy to the United States.

Director of the CIA George Kennen has referred to China as a potential threat to U.S. security, and as a peer competitor which must be prepared for, Klare said.

It is unknown what the nature of a conflict with China will entail, and armed conflict is far from an assured result, Goldstein said.

In fact, panel members said that a peace process is probably the most likely course both nations will take.

Klare said that for practical reasons, China would not engage in armed conflict, despite having the world's largest standing army.

China does not have the technology to compete with better armed countries, such as Taiwan, which has a number of F– 16s from the United States and Mirages from France.

"They have a comical nuclear missile system," Klare said. "You need to climb the missile with a wrench and actually crank the top to aim it."

However, a peace process is marred by differing ideologies and perceived human rights violations.

Once the floor was opened up to the audience, some questioned whether a U.S. trade engagement with China would actually influence that nation's politics.

"That's the pious hope," Goldstein said. "But I don't believe political change follows economic change."

Yet, Goldstein cautioned, many believe that the economy and politics are intertwined.

Many have objected to U.S. dealings with China because of alleged human rights violations, citing government oppressionist actions in Tienemann Square and Tibet.

Yet, Goldstein said, Chinese human rights changes have been enormous, and the Chinese have a right to be offended by the United

Turn to SUMMIT, page 2

Teen takes stand in murder trial

By Alison Fitzgerald
Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE — A teen–age English au pair charged with murdering a baby in her care took the stand yesterday to deny ever hurting the child.

Louise Woodward said that from November to February, she did not violently shake, hit, slam, or do anything else to hurt 8–month–old Matthew Eappen, who died of head injuries.

"Never," said Woodward, a nervous smile punctuating her answers.

Woodward gave details of her large family at home in England, where she is the oldest of 13 grandchildren and often acted as a big sister to her cousins. She spoke quietly, occasionally biting her lip and drinking water from a paper cup.

"I love kids," she said.

Woodward's parents sat in a corner of the courtroom, holding hands as they watched their daughter testify.

Woodward also testified she left another Boston–area family to work for the Eappens, saying she had

Turn to TRIAL page 2

Congo's military takes over capital

By Kamanga Mutond
Associated Press

BRAZZAVILLE, Republic of Congo — The Republic of Congo's new military leader swept into its devastated capital yesterday in a looted Mercedes, promising to seek international aid and imploring citizens to help "restore brotherhood" to the country.

It was Gen. Denis Sassou–Nguesso's first appearance in Brazzaville since his Cobra militia seized the central African capital and the country's second–largest city, Pointe Noire, from President Pascal Lissouba last week.

In brief comments to thousands who gathered outside his Brazzaville home, Sassou–Nguesso, riding in a car seized from his predecessor's government, promised to end the looting that has continued to traumatize the city. He also appealed to civilians who fled the fighting to return home.

"We fought the enemy and we have won, the criminals fled. Now we have to get Brazzaville back on its feet," Sassou–Nguesso said. "We must restore brotherhood, we must work together and listen to each

Turn to CONGO, page 2

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

Club Kennedy now open!

Co–managers Kristie Carrier and Billi Liberti work on the 19th floor of Kennedy, serving up a little something for the folks in Southwest.

■ trial

continued from page 1

disputes with the first family over an 11 p.m. curfew that was later extended to midnight. "I was unhappy about having a curfew," she said, talking about how she felt it increased her isolation.

Matthew Eappen's parents had testified that they were unhappy with Woodward because of her late hours, and had issued her an ultimatum about being more diligent a week before the baby died. Her appearance, which the jury was told in opening statements to expect, came near the end of a trial dominated by two weeks of complex testimony by medical experts.

They used models of brains, diagrams of heads and plastic vertebrae to help describe their version of what caused Matthew's death.

Dr. Ayub Ommaya, the fourth defense expert witness to testify, abandoned the medical jargon that had become familiar in the murder trial. He used plain English to say that Matthew could not have been killed by violent shaking, as prosecutors claim.

Ommaya said the injuries that killed Matthew must have occurred well before Feb. 4—the day Woodward, 19, is accused of shaking him and slamming his head against a hard surface. The baby died five days later.

The neurologist, who formerly directed the head injury prevention program for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, bounced a wad of Silly Putty on the floor to illustrate damage that could be caused by impact. The demonstration elicited a rare burst of laughter from jurors and observers at the emotionally wrenching trial.

Ommaya, who was being paid $500 an hour by the defense, acknowledged that he had treated only a few babies injured by impacts and was not an expert on the type of eye injuries the prosecution argues indicate the baby died by violence.

Yesterday morning, a pathologist who had also testified on behalf of O.J. Simpson said he agreed with the neurologist's finding that the baby was not violently shaken.

"There are no marks on the baby that would support such a possibility," said Dr. Michael Baden.

When he first studied the case this summer, the doctor said the baby's injuries occurred between 12 and 72 hours before he was hospitalized, he admitted on cross-examination.

■ summit

continued from page 1

States dwelling on the "dark side" of China.

"Until we recognize this, we can never form a real national policy concerning China," he said.

One man in attendance inquired about China's role in Tibet.

"I think the extermination of an indigenous people qualifies as genocide," he said.

Goldstein rebutted that the behavior is clearly unacceptable, but that the Chinese saw Tibet as a theocracy which favored a very few.

"They see themselves as enlighteners which are taking a nation out of the dark ages," he said.

He also added that it will be very difficult for the United States and China to discuss human rights, because China's concerned with the rights of the community to eat, where as the United States is concerned with individual rights.

According to Goldstein, the United States will bear the position of finding a place for China in the current world system, but that this is made difficult by U.S. thinking.

Goldstein described the United States and China as two boxers who spent the early rounds feeling each other out, and who were seriously hobbled in their dealings with one another.

"We keep trying to cram China into stereotypes," he said.

He listed the "Pearl Buck" view of the Chinese as a meek and feeble nation in want of salvation, the "Roosevelt" view of the China as a second class nation, the "Cold War" view of China as the most virulent force of Communism and the Reagen view of China as a possible anti-Communist ally.

Tiersky brought up two New York Times editorials as examples of current stereotyping of China.

One took a high moral position and denounced America's inviting Jiang, whom it labeled a leader of a "brutal regime." The other criticized China as modernizing too quickly, which would cause the nation's economy to crash.

Tiersky labelled these reactions to China as two types of hysteria, and said that China was instead a nation where Communism was dying, and patriotism was thriving.

Since 1976 and the disappearance of a single leader who can effectively make policy (which Mao Tse Tung was), local and military bureaucracies have been empowered, and mounting nationalism have created a shift in the Chinese government's basis of legitimacy, Goldstein said.

They now see their mission being to regain China's "proper place in the world," he said.

According to Tiersky, crowds assembled spontaneously in Tienemann Square the night of China's annexation of Hong Kong, and seemed to be patriotic "not to the Tienemann oppressors, but to the government which wants to make China a world power."

China's Communism lives on in "deadly dull" rhetoric pushing people to ever higher levels of socialist behavior, Tiersky said, which none of them really even believe in anymore.

This formerly oppressive government was not evident to Tiersky when he was in Beijing, and that such "rear guard actions" may be on the way out, Tiersky said.

"People in Beijing live lives today not thinking of the government, they live without it," Tiersky said, "if government is out of there lives, that's a fundamental change."

Tiersky added that he didn't know how one couldn't conclude that Communism is fading.

Goldstein pointed out that the U.S. is having trouble dealing with China because we have a president who doesn't care about foreign policy and a coalition in Congress which seems determined to confront China.

He also points out that the Defense Department and the Department of Commerce have competing interests for and against China, but that both must work together for certain relations with China.

...BLUP... ...BLUP... ...BLUP... ...BLUP...
ONE FISH..
TWO FISH..
RED FISH..
BLUE FISH... -DR. SEUSS
Be like Dr. Seuss and write lots and lots of really cool stuff for LOTS of interesting people! Write for the COLLEGIAN.
ALL SCUBA AND SWIMWEAR PROVIDED

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Oct. 22
A minor two-vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue.

Alarm — Fire
Oct. 20
A trash can was on fire in Parking Lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Oct. 22
A fire caused extensive damage to a vehicle parked on the 4th level of the Campus Center Parking Garage. The fire was extinguished by the Amherst Fire Department.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 21
An individual knocking on doors was bothering a resident in Mary Lyon Residence Hall.
Oct. 22
Police checked on intoxicated individuals in Cashin Residence Hall.
Oct. 23
An individual from McNamara Residence Hall reported being harassed on the Internet.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Oct. 20
An office in the Campus Center was broken into and files were taken.

Drug Law Offenses
Oct. 20
Stephen M. Carriagan, 21, of 8 S. Richard St., Millford, and Richard W. Hague, 19, of 177 Burke Ave., Pittsfield were arrested in Washington Residence Hall for possession to distribute a class D drug.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 21
An alarm was sounding in Goessmann Laboratory.
A trash can fire next to Marcus Hall was extinguished.
An odor of natural gas was reported from Hamlin Residence Hall.
Oct. 22
Environmental Health and Safety was called to check heat control in Thoreau Residence Hall.

Larceny
Oct. 20
An individual reported his wallet stolen from a classroom in Herter Hall.
A bicycle was reported stolen from Hills House.
Oct. 21
An individual from Thatcher Residence Hall reported a watch and cash stolen.
A wallet was reported stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.
Oct. 22
An individual from MacKimmie Residence Hall reported her diary stolen.
A display was stolen from office in Berkshire House.
Fog lights were reported stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
Oct. 23
A bicycle was reported stolen from Thatcher Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
Oct. 21
Pedro M. Santos, 22, of 14 Alvord Ave., Chicopee, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and speeding.

Vandalism
Oct. 20
A sani-can was tipped over in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Chalk graffiti was written on Dickinson Building and on the sidewalk.
Oct. 22
Sexual graffiti was written in the men's bathroom in Bartlett Hall.

■ Congo

continued from page 1

other. Congo must become what it used to be."

Sassou-Nguesso said he was asking the international community to help rebuild the devastated city, but added that repairs were needed for more than infrastructure.

"There have been fractures in our society," he said from his Brazzaville residence. "It will take lots of work to regain harmony in all of this. And after that, elections."

Sassou-Nguesso is to be inaugurated president tomorrow at the parliamentary palace. The building is one of a few not badly damaged during the war, and Red Cross workers for the past two days have been clearing bodies away from the area around it in preparation for tomorrow's ceremony.

This will be Sassou-Nguesso's second chance to lead Republic of Congo. He ruled over a one-party Marxist state from 1979 to 1991, when public demands for democratic reforms and anger over the country's economic problems forced him out. He lost the country's first multiparty election to Lissouba in 1992.

During his earlier reign, Sassou-Nguesso was sometimes derided as a "Champagne Marxist" for his unabashed enjoyment of Western luxuries, and his arrival Thursday in the rainy, poverty-stricken capital was a reminder of that. A 60-car convoy of mainly luxurious new sedans taken from the previous government accompanied Sassou-Nguesso's Mercedes.

En route to Brazzaville from his hometown of Oyo, 250 miles north, Sassou-Nguesso stopped in the Kintele refugee camp outside the capital and thanked the thousands of people there for supporting him.

In Brazzaville, he went directly to his residence, where the June 5 war began when Lissouba sent forces to try to disarm Sassou-Nguesso's private militia.

The militia was formed in the wake of 1992 political violence. Lissouba said he wanted to disarm it to prevent violence during campaigning before July presidential elections, but Sassou-Nguesso accused Lissouba of provoking violence so he would have a reason to cancel the vote and remain in power.

The election never took place. Lissouba fled to Burkina Faso after the fall of Brazzaville and Pointe Noire, becoming the third regional leader in five months to be driven from office by military force.

In neighboring Congo, formerly Zaire, Laurent Kabila's rebel army drove dictator Mobutu Sese Seko from power May 17 after an eight-month uprising. Later that month, soldiers overthrew Sierra Leone's elected president, Ahmed Tejan Kabbah, in a bloody coup. Like Sassou-Nguesso, all of the new leaders have pledged allegiance to democracy but none has scheduled elections.

NIGHT GRAPHICS..
HELPING YOU CROSS THE STREETS
ONE MINUTE AT A TIME...
ALWAYS REMEMBER TO LOOK BOTH WAYS WHEN CROSSING THE MAIN STREETS OF LIFE

Campus Activities presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY
Leighann Lord
COMEDIAN
BLUEWALL CAFE
8:00PM
Friday, October 24, 1997
Movie: "CONTACT" to follow performance @ 9:30PM
"CONTACT" Featuring: Jodie Foster, Matthew McConaughey, and James Woods will also be shown on SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26 at 8 & 10PM in the Campus Center Auditorium.
Visit our web site:
Http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/sef.htm
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a Grant from the UMASS Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs

Hungry?
$5.99
Large One-Topping Pizza
No Limit • No Coupon Necessary • Offer expires 10/31/97
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
Better Ingredients. Better Pizza.
Call 586-7772
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley

UM community, MassPIRG unite to help Food Bank Quarter Drive

By Eric Petersen
Collegian Correspondent

Members of the University of Massachusetts Community Service Program and MassPIRG (Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group) staked out the dining halls, the Campus Center Concourse and various dormitories this past Monday through Thursday in support of a Quarter Drive to benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts.

The spare change collected from students in the Drive will be used by the Food Bank to pay for transporting food donations from other sources to more than 330 programs throughout Western Massachusetts.

UMass is one of more than 25 schools lending their aid to the Food Bank, but most other schools are donating non- perishable food items.

"Since so many students here eat in the dining halls, they don't really have as much food in cans and things like that around," said Flavia Stanley, a representative of the Community Service Program and the driving force behind UMass's involvement in the Drive. Therefore, MassPIRG and the Service Program decided that asking for monetary donations would be more effective.

"It costs about 25 cents per pound to transport the food donations," Stanley said. In 1996, according to a press release sent by the Community Service Program, the Food Bank received and distributed $7 million of food, or about 2.8 million pounds. This translates into $700,000 in transportation costs.

"The spare change we collect from students helps to offset transportation prices," Stanley said.

Last year's Quarter Drive made $800, thus paying to transport 1,600 pounds of food. This year, volunteers hope to have achieved their goal of $1,200.

"It [the Quarter Drive] is good because it's so easy for students to take part," said Bruce Miller of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. He and some of his fraternity brothers, like Chong Bang and Walter Maderas, donated some of their time Wednesday to help man the collection point in the Campus Center Concourse.

Sara Bolduk, who was also taking a turn at the donation table, agreed with Miller. Bolduk said that the Quarter Drive was an opportunity for those who don't have a lot of time to give to still get involved.

"A lot of people aren't going to want to spend hours going out and painting or something like that," Bolduk said, referring to "Make A Difference Day", a community service at which volunteers will clean parks and hiking trails and fix up various community agency buildings. "This [the Quarter Drive] makes it easy for these people to contribute a small amount that will have a big effect," Bolduk said.

The food collected in last year's Drive was distributed to more than 330 programs throughout four counties. Among them were the Family Recovery Program, Not Bread Alone, conducted by the Center for Human Development in Amherst, the Friends of South Hadley Elderly in South Hadley and the Child Care Center in Northampton. In all, the food helped to feed more than 125,000 people.

Any groups or individuals who wish to help with the Food Drive can contact the Food Bank at 1-800-247-9632. To help the Community Service Program and MassPIRG with this, or any of their community services, contact the Community Service Program at 545-3568 or contact Allison at MassPIRG at 545-0199.

Reparation plan for Apartheid debated

By Paul Harris
Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Victims of human rights abuses committed during South Africa's apartheid rule would receive at least $3,640 a year for six years under a reparations plan proposed yesterday.

In announcing the proposal, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission emphasized that no amount of money can atone for the brutalities that took place over the three-decade period. But it suggested that the plan was the best possible option, given financial and other limitations.

"You cannot put a monetary value to a person's suffering," said Archbishop Desmond Tutu, chairman of the commission, which is investigating political crimes during apartheid. "How do you compensate a husband who has lost his wife?"

The plan calls for paying victims $3,640 to $4,925 a year for six years, with more money going to those who live in isolated rural areas and have larger families.

The commission expects about 22,000 people to qualify for the payments. Those chosen will come from a list of people who have made statements at the commission's hearings on apartheid-era abuses.

The deadline for making statements is Dec. 14 and Tutu conceded that people may now rush forward in order to qualify for compensation.

The commission is compiling a report on human rights abuses during apartheid and has the power to grant amnesty to those who make full confessions for political crimes.

Deciding on reparations for victims is its other main task, a sensitive one in a country that remains racially divided and in need of funding for services for blacks neglected under apartheid. The $642 million plan —$107 million paid out annually over six years— must be approved by the government and Parliament when the commission submits its final report at the end of July.

Tutu said government officials reacted warmly to the proposal, but expressed concern over paying for it. Most of the money would come from the government, although some was expected from private donors at home and abroad.

Tutu said he knew many South Africans who lost loved ones or who were maimed and tortured would consider the money too little, too late. But he said South Africa could provide little more.

The reparations proposal also includes reduced health care and education costs for victims, as well as psychiatric counseling for the needy. People unfairly convicted under apartheid would get help wiping their criminal records clean, while relatives of those who were killed would receive money for reburying their loved ones in proper graves.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEKY/ COLLEGIAN

I'm all swing baby...!
Ron Barrie poses in front of the Campus Center

Mandela calls for end to Libya sanctions

By Mohammed El-Dakhakhny
Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — Pledging support for a "brother leader," Nelson Mandela urged the United Nations yesterday to lift sanctions on Libya, saying they hurt ordinary Libyans, not just Moammar Gadhafi.

The South African president's call was a rebuff to the United States, the main backer of the sanctions that prohibit arms sales to Libya, ban flights to and from the country, and limit diplomatic contacts.

State-run Libyan television gleefully declared Mandela's two-day visit "an expression of solidarity with Libya against the conspiracy it is facing."

Thousands of Libyans turned out to greet the South African leader, chanting "Mandela! Mandela!" Libyan children showered Mandela with rose petals on his arrival Wednesday; Gadhafi met him with hugs and kisses.

"It is our duty to give support to the brother leader," Mandela said yesterday of Gadhafi in comments broadcast on Libyan television. "Especially in regards to the sanctions, which are not hitting just him, they are hitting the ordinary masses of the people."

"Those who object to my visiting Libya have no morals, and I will not join them because I have morals," Mandela was quoted as saying in the Arabic-language Al-Hayat newspaper yesterday. "Gadhafi is my friend, he helped us at a time when we were alone. And the ones who are stopping us from coming here were helping our enemies at that time," Mandela was quoted as saying. In Washington, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said he hoped Mandela would raise with Libyan officials the issue "that has put Libya beyond the pale of the international community." "And that is their refusal to turn over suspects responsible for... an international act of terrorism," Rubin said.

Gadhafi repeated his long standing offer to try the two Pan Am bombing suspects either in Libya or in a third world country, a proposal that Britain and the United States have rejected.

Mandela drove across the border from Tunisia to avoid violating U.N. sanctions. He headed back to Tunisia Thursday in an air-conditioned bus.

Mandela will also travel to Morocco on his four-nation tour.

graphics
sue this, warren...

PERSPECTIVES ON INTERMARRIAGE
A PANEL DISCUSSION WITH:
* A MAN WHO CONVERTED TO JUDAISM AFTER INTERMARRYING
* A JEWISH WOMAN WHO IS INTERMARRIED.
* A STUDENT WHO HAS DECIDED TO MARRY ONLY A JEWISH PARTNER
* A STUDENT WHO GREW UP IN AN INTERMARRIED HOUSEHOLD
Hear different views that may be helpful in making your own choices. An open discussion will follow. Free
HOPE TO SEE YOU THERE!

COUNTING CROWS
plus special guest
dog's eye view
recovering the satellites
on sale now!
saturday november 1
MULLINS CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE. THRU OUTLETS: NYNEX MUSIC • RECORD TOWN • FYE/THE SG & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500 • (203) 525-4500. FOR MORE INFO CALL (413) 545-0505. EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537
A NEW ENGLAND ORCHARD & COUNTRY MARKET
SPECIAL CARE PACKAGES FOR STUDENTS
Birthday Cakes
delicious, made to order cakes
Floral
mixed bouquets, fresh & fragrant
Nacho Pak
everything your student needs to make delicious nachos
Snack Pak
fruits, cheeses & crackers, trail mix, cookies, cocoa and Atkins famous cider donuts Get Well Pak
everything your student needs to feel better, including home-made chicken soup and orange juice
Happy Birthday Gift Basket
a festive basket with all sorts of goodies: Atkins fudge, fruit, sparkling cider, and party horns!
All Natural Crunchy Snack Pak healthy snacks including humus,flat bread & Ginseng Tea
Delivery Charge to UMass is $3.00
Call Atkins Today between 8 Am & 5 PM for these and other healthy and delicious gift packages.

Do you want to work with an industry leader?
Do you want to make multi-million dollar decisions?
Do you want to impact a company's profitability right from the beginning?
Do you want to work for The Boston Globe's "Company of the Year - 1997"?
Corporate Careers
Where You'd Least Expect To Find Them
Stop by our Information Session:
October 27th
5:00 pm - 6:00 pm
The Faculty Club
Interested candidates should forward their resume to: College Recruiters, T.J. Maxx/Marshalls, Dept. CR1097, 770 Cochituate Road, Framingham, MA 01701. FAX: (508) 390-2650.
TJ maxx Marshalls.
© The TJX Companies, Inc. 1997
T.J. Maxx/Marshalls is an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Quitting the proverbial day job

Alexander Phillips

1959— When my father was 15 years old, he wrote a poem. He showed it to me once. The poem was composed in rhyming verses separated by visual poetry—pictures of blackboards and so on. It rendered both a savage intensity and an ethereal lightness. It effectively evoked a melancholy portrait of a boy's understanding of the heavens and man's folly under them by means of adult imagery and phrasing.

My father was proud of it. He felt as if he'd somehow captured with his words something to which men are not commonly privy: beauty. As someone who is proud of something is wont to do (like father, like son), he took it to a person whom he thought of as an authority on things literary, his high school English teacher. The high school English teacher read the poem and fell in love with it, and, hoping to do my father a favor, sent it off to a friend of his whom he thought of as an authority on things literary, a college English professor.

1997— About a week ago I was assigned a one page response to UMass' own James Tate's In the Worshipfull Company of Flechers. Because it is one of my favorite volumnes of poetry, I assumed upon receipt of the assignment that I would have more than enough to say about it. It turns out I was wrong. I had absolutely nothing to say. This caused problems logistically and emotionally because I had to turn a paper in; and also because I had a lot I wanted to get off my chest, so to speak, with regard to the book. But, alas, the more I thought about it, the less a paper idea presented itself to me.

In order to resolve these conflicts, I decided to compose a few poems and pass them in. I prefaced them, in part, with this: "These are not James Tate imitation poems, but I wrote them shortly after I was thinking about James Tate, so I suppose that might count for something. I don't think I'd feel too comfortable writing a poem all the while knowing it was a James Tate imitation poem. I'd never feel at ease with the poem, always afraid that it would want to run home to James Tate (or some imitation of him)."

After completion of the poems and, as a consequence, the paper, I was elated. I was very happy with the poems and felt they paid due credit to my subject. I remember the day distinctly; I couldn't have been happier.

1959— After a period of nervous anticipation, my father received a letter from the esteemed English professor. With the anxious hands of a 15–year–old boy, he tore the letter open to find these words: "This is good, but definitely not the work of a genius."

1997: Today, my poetry was returned to me with the words "Don't quit the proverbial day job just yet" written conclusively and succinctly at the bottom of the page. "Cursed fate!" I thought.

My father now goes by the title "Marketing Communications Manager." The title is ironic, hinting at his boyhood hope with the notion of "Communication" as a distinct part of his occupation. He still communicates and he still writes poetry; it is still good and he is happy.

I have two questions in response to this. First, how do people allow the opinion of others, in the form of one brief (probably devised in passing) negative comment by an individual person, to affect them so profoundly? Perhaps my father would never have been a poet by trade, perhaps he would have, but the fact is that he capitulated upon hearing that he was not a poetic genius at age 15.

Secondly, when will academia abandon the haughty doctrine which gives its individual members of faculty the right to pass judgement on art and aspiring artists as if by decree of God? None too soon for me and my father.

Well, if left with the responsibility of designating myself poet or non–poet, then I will capitulate. It seems quite arbitrary; I will always write poetry.

Alexander Phillips is a UMass student.

Write for Ed/Op!

The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle, or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by e–mail (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Editorials should be 500–700 words long and should include a phone number so we can call you back.

Eviction notice

Ann Rubinstein

Want to hear a funny story? I got evicted this weekend! Still waiting for the funny part? So am I.

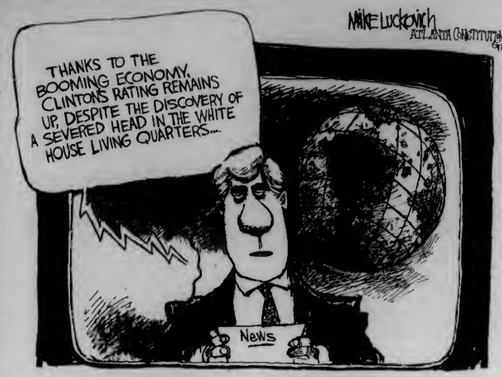
It was my roommate's 21st birthday on Sunday, so we decided to go to the bars and then have after hours in our apartment. To spare you the boring details, after just 20 minutes of our quiet little soiree, our party was broken up and the next morning we were informed of our eviction.

"The children will torment me by pushing me into my cart and wheeling me around town and then rolling me into an out–of–the–way ditch where I will stay pinned until night comes..."

For real though. Evicted. It totally sucks. The blame and such do not really matter. (Let me just say it was not our fault.) But it does matter that this could happen. This is the first time I've ever even had a party and it ends like this. It's so unfair. Where was my warning, my first notice? Of course I don't get one; the first time I mess up it had to be outside the cushy world of the dorms. There is no system to keep me protected from myself here. No getting written up, no R.A. to plead to, no R.D. to appeal to. There is one person who decides and his word goes.

Reality bites.

Sometimes I think my actions have no effects on anyone. Like I live in a bubble and no matter how much I kick or scream or anything, no one even cares, all it does is shake the bubble a little.



But this proves my theory wrong. There is no bubble, nothing to separate me from the rest of the world. Nothing to protect me from them and nothing to protect them from me. It is just us, no me, no them, just the whole world living together in one big bubble. Of course I am sure I could have learned this lesson some other, not so permanent way— some way that did not involve me losing the best apartment in the world. The location is unbeatable, the rent is so low, the rooms are huge, my roommates are the best. Everything was perfect here. But really, it is a good lesson.

Well, with this on my record, I now have no hope of ever getting anyone to rent anything to me again (quite the optimist, aren't I). So now my big plan is to dig a hole in Amherst Green and live there. I'll come up with the earthworms to shower. The local squirrels will come to appreciate me as their new leader. They will offer up their stored nuts for my dinner, and soon I too will learn to save for the winter. I'll keep all my belongings in a shopping cart and wear slippers and an overcoat when summer comes. I'll chain my cart to a bike rack while I am in class. The townies will soon come to know me as a local character.

The children will torment me by pushing me into my cart and wheeling me around town and then rolling me into an out–of–the–way ditch where I will stay pinned until night comes and I feel safe enough to crawl back to my hole. The Amherst police will eventually take a night off from breaking up small, unobtrusive parties and become aware of my living quarters and I will have to do the unthinkable, move back in with my parents!

Good tidings, it now actually becomes a funny story. My landlord just stopped up, he changed his mind, we can stay. Yeah, no need to invest in a shopping cart, I have an apartment! So the real world is not that bad, people are fair. My permanent record remains unblighted. My 21–year–old roommate compares our living situation to "Three's Company." I guess this just proves her right; anything that goes wrong can be solved in a half–hour, or in this case, 24 traumatizing hours. All in all though, Mr. Roper is a pretty great guy and next week some new, crazy circumstances will keep us entertained.

Ann Rubinstein is a UMass student.

Time for change

Casey Kane

I pulled into the parking lot at Totman yesterday, late as usual for my fencing class. As I searched for a place to park where I wouldn't get ticketed, someone backed out of a space next to the mobile classrooms that are set up right near the building.

I grabbed my shorts, water bottle and wallet and hopped out of the car, hoping that I wasn't too late. But I stopped short at the parking meter. On the coin slot there was a white sticker that read "quarters only" covering the dime slot.

Dismayed, I looked into my wallet. I had exactly six dimes and three nickels, but no quarters. Hoping I wasn't doomed to miss class, I jumped back in my car and frantically searched where I keep my spare change. Luckily I was able to unearth a couple of the shiny silver discs and race into class.

But here's my problem: for as long as I have been a student here, the parking meters have accepted both quarters and dimes. This is not necessarily ground–breaking news considering that practically every other meter in America is the same way.

Then, all of a sudden, UMass became a "quarters only" campus. I'm sure I'm not alone in my dismay over this trend. I'm sure I'm not the only person who has had to fish through spare change or rifle through a purse or pocket just to come up with the precise coin.

And I'm sure I'm not the only person who has run out of quarters because I need them for other things. Vending machines and copiers will usually accept other coins, but those hulking vacuums people use to clean out their cars are quarters only.

Most noticeable, though, is the grandaddy of them all — laundry. A wash on campus is a buck, quarters only, and a dry is another, quarters only.

Off campus Laundromats can range anywhere from 50 cents to a dollar for a wash. The dryers are usually timed by how many quarters are put in the machine.

So, if we are expected to wash and dry our clothes and maybe even clean our cars, how should we be expected to park on campus Ironically, change discrimination is not isolated on just the UMass campus. No, in fact, another form of this monetary disease has spread throughout the land in the form of one of America's favorite department stores.

J.C. Penney is anti–dime. That's right. Buy something in the store, especially early in the morning, and if your change totals less than 25 cents, you will walk out of there with several more nickels than you had anticipated.

I know. I worked there. But James Cash Penney had a reason. Apparently when he opened his store pennies and dimes looked too much alike, so in the spirit of his last name, he did away with dimes.

Speaking of pennies, the lowest of monetary units has suffered age–old discrimination. You can't use pennies in a vending machine. You can't throw pennies in the 50 cent automatic toll booth in Boston. You can't wash your clothes with 100 pennies.

It's ridiculous, and it's gotten out of hand. I say this campus should go back to the days of dime and quarter parking meters. Laundromats should start accepting nickels. Everyone should be more penny–friendly.

It's time for some change.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

MY ADMINISTRATION HAS THE HIGHEST RESPECT FOR BRAZIL AND ITS PEOPLE AND WE ARE JUST THRILLED TO BE HERE, MR. PRESIDENT.
PAT
PAT
PAT

"I said get up and clap your hands!"

COURTESY NOVUS

The consummate funkmaster, Maceo Parker brings his sax to the Student Union Ballroom this Sunday for a show that promises to be invigorating. Tickets can be purchased at For The Record in Amherst, at Tix Unlimited in the Campus Center, or at Turn It Up! in Northampton. Tickets are $15 for UMass students, $17 for 5–College students and faculty and $20 for the general public.

■ trax

continued from page 5

in the guitar/bass/drums department. Their unique balance of slow and fast tempos are taken a step further by the dynamic and husky vocals of Monique Powell. The swinging lounge flavor of the music makes you feel like you should be sitting in a dark smoke– filled bar somewhere, sipping on a martini as Powell sings atop a piano, brooding, pouting and pouring her heart out.

Surely, many can relate to the fact that we cannot be sitting in that bar because, as one of their songs says, we are "Under 21." As Powell says, "You can't buy an alcoholic drink, so we don't care what you really think." Instead, why not just go home and listen to their current single, a kickin' version of "Come On Eileen." A–
(Alexandria Lipka)

I'M AFRAID OF AMERICANS
David Bowie
Virgin

A six–track collection of remixes, the recently released I'm Afraid of Americans EP (Virgin), off David Bowie's underrated Earthling album, is a bit of a misnomer.

Trent Reznor and his hired cohorts in Nine Inch Nails have been commissioned by Mr. Aladdin Sane to rework the track and that they do, albeit with little imagination and creativity.

The first remix, "VI" builds to the same climactic chorus as the album version, but instead of the cacophony of percussion, Reznor throws in a low–end bass that sounds as if it's signalling the onset of the apocalypse.

There's also an ill–advised guest appearance by Ice Cube on "V3," but why? Bowie has already re–established himself as a vital music voice for the '90s. Still, Cube is fairly entertaining as he gives a haunting spoken word reading of the Pledge of Allegiance.

Beyond those two moments of shallow pleasures though, I'm Afraid of Americans is little more than a vehicle for Reznor to show off his new studio toys, and more importantly, delay work on the much–anticipated (but perilously delayed) follow–up to 1994's breakthrough concept album The Downward Spiral.

TRANSMISSIONS FROM THE SEA OF TRANQUILITY
The Samples
What Are Records?

Those of you who missed the fantastic Samples show at Pearl St. on the first of this month may not be aware that the Boulder–based rock band has released a new 2–CD set.

Mixing live and studio tracks, and including songs like "Prehistoric Bird" and the beautiful "Flying," which have never seen release until now, the CD has its strong and its weak points. Some of its weaker points are in Sean Kelly's unstable voice.

On some tunes, like "Flying" and "Losing End Of Distance," it is quite nice and sonorous; at times, though it seems off–key as in "Prehistoric Bird" and "Still Water." "Giants" and "Feel Us Shaking," are done here in rocking electric arrangements with jams. B– (Joshua Boyd)

TRAILER PARK
Beth Orton
(Dedicated/Heavenly)

While most singer–songwriter records tend to sound like '70s leftovers, Trailer Park (Dedicated/Heavenly) blends traditional songcraft with ghostly, forward–looking production. With a voice that at times recalls the austere splendor of Linda Thompson's, Beth Orton weaves folk–pop tunes into a beguiling tapestry of live strings, deep–sea bass lines and eerie trip–hop effects.

"Live As You Dream" and "How Far" each confirm that this British singer can deliver melodies that might seduce a 10,000 Maniacs fan, but it's her willingness to drift into a "Galaxy Of Emptiness" on the 10–minute closing track that best nails the mood of uneasy bliss. B+
(M.K.)

Last Summer is a poor screamer

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Correspondent

I KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER
Directed by Jim Gillespie
with Jennifer Love Hewitt, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Freddie Prinze Jr.
Playing at Mt. Farms Theater

Beauty queen Helen Shivers is having a very bad summer. She failed out of acting school, someone cut off most of her hair and now she's being stalked by a crazed fisherman. Gee, and I thought my history mid–term was stress–inducing. Luckily, Helen has momentarily escaped from her killer and is in the custody of a local policeman, who is driving her home. There's a detour, so the policeman takes a side road, but his path is blocked by an ominous–looking truck with an equally ominous–looking man standing next to it. The policeman gets out of the car, and reassures Helen, "I'll be back in a couple of minutes." Guess what happens?

If you saw Scream, and I'll bet my tuition that you did, you know exactly what occurs next. After all, there are certain "rules" to the scary movie. But while Scream was self–aware and tongue–in–cheek, I Know What You Did Last Summer tries to be a serious morality tale mixed with the usual slashing and screaming. The key word here is "tries"— Last Summer is exactly the type of movie Scream made fun of; in fact, it's worse.

This is all very surprising, considering the film's screenwriter is Kevin Williamson, the man behind Scream and the upcoming Scream II. It's as if Williamson had so much fun outlining the horror genre that he decided to launch an attempt to revive it— which means cheesy dialogue, bad acting, and a ridiculous plot.

In the small town of Southport, N.C., four high school seniors are coming back from a night on the beach, when, by accident, they hit a man in the middle of the street. All of them have bright hopes for the future, so instead of going to the police, they dump the body in the ocean, hoping no one will ever know the truth. One year later, however, things aren't so serene. All four of the teenagers have failed miserably after high school, and to make matters worse, they're being stalked by someone who "knows what they did last summer."

COURTESY JAMES BRIDGES

TV's Buffy The Vampire Slayer, Sarah Michelle Gellar, stars in the new thriller I Know What You Did Last Summer.

Jennifer Love Hewitt, from "Party of Five," takes the Neve Campbell role, and plays it like, well, Neve Campbell, with a puckered mouth and cute little glances. She comes up a bit short, as do all the other actors in the film. The only one with a bit of personality is the beauty queen (Sarah Michelle Gellar), so when it's her turn to get chased, it's the only time we actually care. A welcome sight to this bland but always attractive cast is Volcano's Anne Heche, but her part as an eccentric, odd hermit is exactly that—odd.

After setting up the characters, Williamson and novice director Jim Gillespie rely solely on gore and thrills in the movie's second half. This is where Last Summer becomes totally ridiculous, featuring a fisherman killer who seems to come back to life more times than the Terminator. While Gillespie's involving camera tricks do provide a few thrills, they're undermined by the fact that Last Summer takes itself way too seriously.

The four teenagers constantly mull over their fateful decision, trying to reassure themselves that the whole thing was only an accident. Thus, instead of humor, we get soul–searching. And it doesn't help that Williamson's screenplay contains more dialogue cliches than an episode of "Melrose Place."

Speaking of cliches, every scene in the film is scored with the typical horror music of Halloween and Nightmare on Elm Street. Except this time, there's eerie music even when nothing eerie is going on. Otherwise, the movie's technical credits and dark, polished photography keep it from slipping into the cheesy slasher movie hall of fame.

I Know What You Did Last Summer is based on a book by middle school novel queen Lois Duncan, who wrote a lot of stories featuring titles like "Killing Mr. Griffin" and "The Attack of the Mysterious UMass Graduate Student." Okay, so I made the last one up, but you get the picture. This is the kind of movie populated with beauty queens, star football players, pretty Ivy League girls, and crazed killers who won't give up. In other words, it's a stereotype of real life. We don't care a bit for these characters or what they did last summer.

There's no troubled, confused teenager (Neve Campbell) or quirky, boyish police officer (David Arquette), such as in Scream, to root for. And worst of all, because of Scream, we know exactly what will happen from the very beginning. Let's hope that Williamson returns to form with Scream II. It won't be hard, because I Know What You Did Last Summer gives him yet another "scary" movie to make fun of—his own. D+

COURTESY JAMES BRIDGES

A poorly conceived ripoff of Wes Craven's Scream, I Know What You Did Last Summer is a disappointing foray into the world of mock horror.

Dogbert says: write for Arts and Living

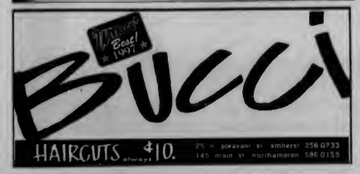
LET'S PLAY VIDEO
All Movies $.99 / day
best of the new releases
Saturn / N64 / Genesis / S
Trade Games & Sys
Pleasant Call us
(The Pub") 549-45



KAI CHI
WE DELIVER
586-2774
Sun -Weds noon-midnight
Thurs-Sat noon-2am

amc
Movies in a Different Key
Hampshire 6 · 584-7550 Hampshire Mall
MT. FARMS 8 · 584-9153 MT. FARMS MALL
Gattaca (PG-13)
Today at (5:00), 7:50, 10:20 • Sat at 1:40, (5:00), 7:50, 10:20 • Sun. at 1:40, (5:30), 8:10
Playing God (R)
Today at (5:20), 10:40 • Sat. at (5:20), 10:40 • Sun. at 1:50, 8:20
I Know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at (5:10), 8:00, 10:30 • Sat. at 1:50, (5:10), 8:00, 10:30 • Sun. at 1:50, (5:40), 8:20
The Full Monty (R)
Today at (5:30), 8:20, 10:40 • Sat. at 2:00, (5:30), 8:20, 10:40 • Sun. at 2:00, (6:00), 8:30
Rocketman (PG)
Today at 8:10, • Sat at 1:50, 8:10 • Sun. at (5:50)
Kiss The Girl (R)
Today at (5:10), 8:00, 10:50 • Sat at 1:40 (5:10), 8:00, 10:50 • Sun at 1:40, (5:30), 8:30
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at (5:00), 10:40 • Sat. at (5:00), 10:40 • Sun. at 1:50, 8:20
A Life Less Ordinary (R)
Today at (5:20), 8:10, 11:00 • Sat at 1:50, (5:20), 8:10, 11:00 • Sun. at 1:50, (5:40), 8:40
In And Out (PG-13)
Today at (5:30), 8:30, 11:00 • Sat. at 2:00 (5:30), 8:30, 11:00 • Sun. at 2:00, (6:00), 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at (4:40), 7:40, 10:40 • Sat at 1:30, (4:40), 7:40, 10:40 • Sun. at 1:30, (5:10), 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at (4:50), 7:50, 10:50 • Sat at 1:40, (4:50), 7:50, 10:50 • Sun. at 1:40, (5:20), 8:30
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 7:40 • Sat at 1:30, 7:40 • Sun. at (5:10)

The Mercantile
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1306
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9
INCENSE • CANDLES • TAPESTRIES • POSTERS • BASKETS • RUGS
NECKLACES • WALLETS • BOXES • CHOPSTICKS • BERETS

UMass looks to avoid letdown vs. Fordham

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

It's a dilemma.

Today, for the No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team, there is a dilemma concerning the danger of their matchup at Fordham at 4 p.m.

- Will the match versus the Lady Rams, a participant in last season's Atlantic 10 postseason tournament with their record of 8–7–3, be the dangerous part?
- Or, will actually travelling through Brooklyn to get to Fordham for the match be the dangerous part?

Women's Soccer
No. 13 Massachusetts @ Fordham
Today, 4 p.m.

Maybe one —possibly both— but with a 5–6–2 mark on the season (3–3–1 in A–10), Fordham might not pose too much of a test for the 13–2 Minutewomen (9–0 in the A–10). Yet, after two tough, exciting conference matches against Dayton and Xavier last weekend, the dreaded letdown might occur against a less than formidable opponent.

Sandwiched between two straight 2–1 wins over two of the top teams of the A–10 and an important tournament for strength of schedule in Athens, Ga. next weekend with matches against No. 21 Clemson and Georgia, today's match with Fordham and Sunday's 1 p.m. match with La Salle could be forgotten by UMass.

However, what UMass will not forget this weekend is the return of senior defender Amy Burrill to the lineup. After a "season–ending" knee injury in the final minutes against Temple on Oct. 5, Minutewoman coach Jim Rudy speculated that Burrill might see some fitness time this weekend.

Fordham will be led by junior midfielder Christine Geres, who is the team's leading scorer with 13 points on six goals and one assist. Junior Erin Schmitt and sophomore Kim Kasper have split time in the Lady Rams' net, with Schmitt holding a 3–3–2 record, and Kasper a 2–3 mark.

■ Iverson

continued from page 10

"But I'm used to it. It's just another way to try to tear me down and it's another obstacle I've got to overcome. I've always said today's newspaper is tomorrow's toilet paper. And I'll always believe that, always."

Some people seem to have a profound dislike for last season's rookie of the year, but they better get used to him.

When it comes time for someone to get a bigger contract than Kevin Garnett's, it might be Iverson. When Michael Jordan is gone, the Bulls are bad and basketball fans start to focus on the next generation, they'll turn to Iverson, the unrepentant speed demon who can score like Jordan, wreak havoc like Isiah Thomas and get into trouble like Marvin "Bad News" Barnes.

No one else is as fun to watch, no one else says things the same way, no one else will be as interesting in the future. Not Grant Hill (too happy), not Garnett (too unproven) and not Tim Duncan (too bland).

The 22–year–old Iverson wants to be "The Next Man.'

"Definitely. It would be a great honor to be the 'next guy' after Michael Jordan. I'll be able to accept that role and I'd love to take on that challenge in my life," Iverson said.

■ water polo

continued from page 10

The Minutemen's greatest foe this weekend may be their own fatigue. "We're a little bit tired," Yarworth said. "We're understandably beat up from the weekend."

There can be no doubt that the previous weekend was tough. Aside from the long plane ride, the Minutemen had to play five teams, all of whom were ranked higher than they were. Nevertheless, UMass was able to pull off two upsets and stay remarkably close in two other games while gaining momentum heading into this weekend's tournament.

"I just wanted the team to play hard," said Yarworth of his squad's progress during the recent trip. "They found the difference. They found what it means to play at a super– intense level... it was fun to be coaching these guys this weekend and see what they could accomplish."

Yarworth credits the recent string of success to the team's maturation. "We had a 20–watt bulb, and now were up to a 100–watt bulb. They know what they have to do to be successful."

Men's tennis serves up Rhode Island

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team will serve it up in its final fall match today against Rhode Island in Kingston.

The match was postponed from last month due to rain. Usually, the matches would be continued with scores hung, but the coaches agreed to start fresh.

"It works out better to start over," UMass coach Judy Dixon said. "We are the favored team, and the match was even at 3–3 anyway."

However, Alex Aller was not in the lineup during the first meeting, so the clean slates will give him a chance to play.

Despite Aller's return, all is not dandy for the Minutemen.

In addition to Todd Cheney's sore ankle, he has now possibly come down with a case of bronchititis.

This condition will force Dixon to play Pat Slyman at the No. 1 singles spot. Luckily, Slyman has been playing well lately.

"I'm prepared to step in and play No. 1 singles," Slyman said. "The way I've been playing lately has given me a great deal of confidence."

If Cheney can play tomorrow, UMass will attack URI with its red hot 1–2–3 punch consisting of himself, Slyman, and Rob Manchester.

Men's Tennis
Massachusetts @ Rhode Island
Saturday

While Cheney has not been in top form for obvious reasons, Slyman and Manchester have smothered their opponents as of late. A healthy Cheney makes UMass almost invincible at the top of the lineup.

As expected, extra weight has been placed on this match by the coaching staff. Not only will it conclude the fall season, but URI is an Atlantic 10 opponent.

"This match will matter down the road," Dixon said. "The outcome of interleague matches greatly affects the seedings in the A–10 tournament in the spring."

Due to traveling difficulties, UMass did not get to play many league rivals in the fall.

So far this autumn, UMass has posted tough wins against M.I.T, Vermont, UConn, Boston College and Amherst College. The lone setback came against Boston University.

The one troubling spot in these triumphs has been the doubles play. "We have been working really hard on doubles practice all week," Dixon said. "It is imperative that we finish up strong in this area."

Despite the troubles, Dixon will stick with Jason Lin and Parsa Samii at the No. 3 doubles position. She noted that they have shown vast improvement in play and teamwork.

"The guys have really proven a lot to me this year," Dixon said. "They have played through injury, and really given it their all. It has been a very productive season."

Lilburn intensity keys UM soccer

Freshman forward looks to position Minutemen for tournament

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

This weekend is a critical one for the Massachusetts men's soccer team. They finish up their Atlantic 10 regular season play this weekend with home games against Fordham and La Salle. How UMass performs this weekend will determine whether or not they qualify for the A–10 Tournament.

To help them win this weekend the Minutemen will be looking towards a critical player — freshman phenom Seth Lilburn.

Men's Soccer
Massachusetts vs Fordham
Today, 3 p.m.

The 6–foot 1–inch forward out of Boonton Township, N.J., was a highly touted and highly recruited player, and has turned out to be everything head coach Sam Koch had hoped for.

"We knew Seth would be this good coming in," Koch said. "We expected him to have as much of an impact as he has."

Lilburn has made the transition from high school to college very well. He is behind only senior Mike Butler in points this season, with 14 (3 goals, 8 assists), and he has started fourteen out of fifteen games.

"High school and college are very different, in many aspects, but it's been pretty easy to adjust," Lilburn said. "In high school, I was the go–to–guy, and here I'm more of a role player... It's (college play) a lot more difficult, a lot more physical, there's more pressure and more at stake than in high school."

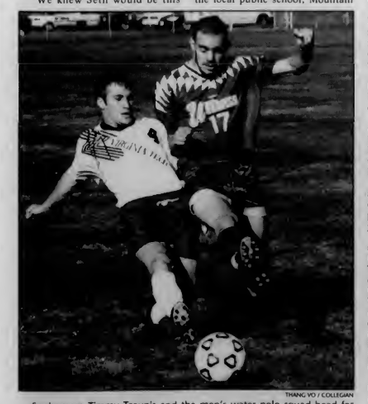
Lilburn went to Gill St. Bernard's Prep School for two and a half years before transferring to the local public school, Mountain Lakes High School. He was a letter–winner in all of his four years in high school, leading his teams to an overall record of 61–15–1. He registered a total of 40 points and was the named the MVP of his team in his senior year.

Lilburn collected a number of other honors through his high school years as well, including being a three–time All– State and All–County selection, as well as a member of the U.S. Under–17 National Team.

He was recruited by several schools other than UMass, including the University of Maryland, University of Connecticut, St. John's and Ryder University. But it was Massachusetts that won his heart —and talents— in the end.

"The coaches were straightforward from the beginning," said Lilburn of the UMass staff. "A couple of the other schools weren't. When I visited here I really liked the guys on the team and the school... it just seemed like the right choice for me."

What also attracted Lilburn to UMass was the closeness of the men's soccer team, as well as the idea that this team is much more concerned about the team as a whole than with individual play.



"It's nice to see that in a team," Lilburn said. "You don't see that kind of thing very often these days."

Lilburn has been able to fit right into the team's ideals, quickly becoming a key role player— he brings a fiercely competitive attitude to the field that helps him to keep his play at a top level.

"My attitude is to just do my job and to help the team the best that I can. I'm a pretty naturally intense person when it comes to playing. I just love to play."

UMass will need Lilburn's intensity this weekend. They take on Fordham today at 3 p.m. on Totman Field. Fordham is the defending A–10 champion and is led by junior John Welyniec. Welyniec is a force, leading the nation in points, and coming in second in goals scored. On Sunday, the Minutemen will take on La Salle University. UMass and La Salle are currently tied for third in the A–10 rankings.

"Our games this weekend are big," Lilburn said. "If we don't win them, we'll be looking a the end of our season."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Timmy Troupis and the men's water polo squad head for the CWPA North playoffs this weekend.

■ football

continued from page 10

over for Jeff Smith mid–way through the New Hampshire loss— the Minutemen have posted 266 yards rushing per game, more than 130 yards more than their average in the first five weeks.

"We're attacking things we think we can attack," Hodges said. "Nothing in the running game will change dramatically."

On top of the impressive running performances in the last few games, UMass has successfully managed to engage a passing game. Catterton has completed 57 percent of his passes over the last two games.

"We're trying to take advantage of the things we do well," Hodges said. "We're going to exercise different facets of the team in order to do that. The ability to run the option has helped us confuse defenses."

Unfortunately for UMass, the Hens' defense has only allowed three rushing touchdowns all season.

"They are a very mobile defense, very big," Hodges said. "We're going to have a great, very physical game."

Senior free safety Bryan Mooney continues to dominate the A–10 in tackles, leading the pack with 91 total. Just behind him are two other Minutemen, junior inside linebacker Khari Samuel and outside linebacker Chris Price. Together these two have combined for 163 total tackles. Just a little further down the list is the other outside linebacker, junior Matt Dawson who has 50 total tackles on the season.

Like Maine, Villanova and Buffalo, Delaware will most likely exploit UMass' weak pass coverage. In last week's game, the Minutemen allowed the Bulls to pass for 459 yards — the most ever compiled against a UMass defense.

For the Hens, playing UMass is never a disappointment. Delaware holds a 17–2 all–time record against the Minutemen. Fortunately for UMass, those two losses have come within the last five meetings — the first back in 1990 and the latest in 1993.

On Oct. 22, 1993 in Amherst, the Minutemen defeated the hens for the first time ever on Amherst soil. Led by a rushing charge which posted 476 yards — then a school record — UMass went on to defeat the then–No. 7 Blue Hens, 43–29. It was an all–around great effort by the Minutemen. While the running game took care of things offensively for UMass, their defense helped muzzle the Hens' offensive attack. Matt Rojotte led the team with 16 tackles while Silas Burke recorded three sacks on the day.

In order for another upset like the one in 1993 to occur, the Minutemen will need all their cylinders churning.

"This is going to be a big test," Hodges said. "We will have to perform extremely well in order to keep them off the field.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

will return to the place of their past River Amherst–Lowell battles.

Taking the season series last year with a 2–1 edge, the Minutemen won the Alumni Cup for the second straight season — which, according to insiders, is a series pushed by Lowell to supposedly boost their stature as the "better" state campus.

However, the River Hawks did make it to the Hockey East semifinals last season with their impressive sweep of Providence at Schneider Arena in the quarterfinals.

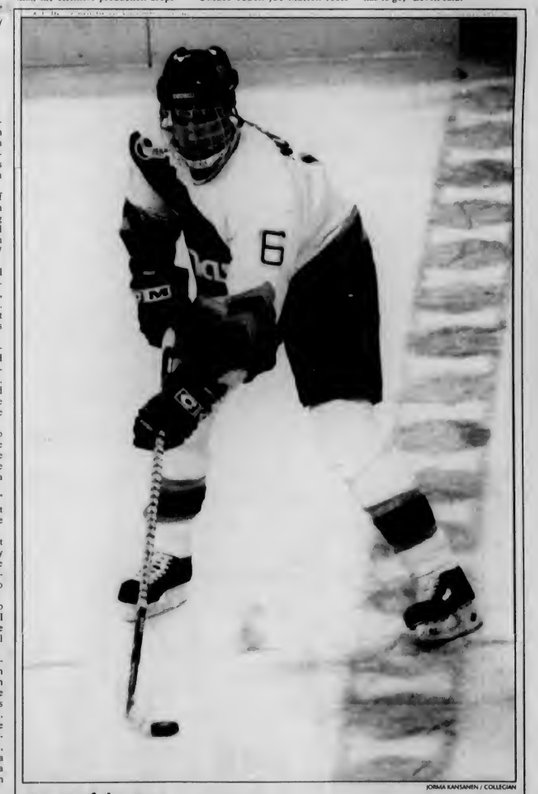
After losing a close 3–2 game to NCAA championship runner–up Boston University in the semis, Lowell finished their 1996–97 season with a 2–2 tie against Boston College in the HE consolation game. They ended their season with a 15–21–2 record (9–14–1 in HE).

Sophomore forward Greg Koehler (37 GP in '96–97: 16 goals, 20 assists, 36 points), who was voted the HE Rookie of the Year, returns to the lineup for Lowell, but after that, the offensive production drops off with senior forward Shannon Basaraba (38 GP, 6–20–26) and senior defenseman and All–HE selection Mike Nicholishen (38 GP, 3–22–25).

The key to the River Hawks' season will be goaltender Martin Fillion (27 GP, 12–14–1, 4.01 GAA, .882 Save percentage), also an All–HE selection, who will need to fill the role as a premier puck stopper for Lowell to crack the top four teams in the conference this season.

Senior experience will be the key for UMass as well this season, with the Minutemen returning four seniors on the backline. Defensemen Mike Gaffney, Brad Norton and Tom O'Connor, along with goalie Brian Regan, will anchor a UMass defense that is the first to play four years in HE.

Gaffney was the catalyst in the Alumni Cup win on Feb. 8, with an end–to–end rush in the third period resulting in his game–winning goal— the fourth goal scored by both teams in a span of 2:37.



UMass coach Joe Mallen feels their experience, along with forwards like Tim Lovell, Dan Juden and Chris Fawcett, will set a solid base for success in the conference this season.

"We're moving towards that level playing field in the conference, where all of our seniors have played three or four years of Hockey East, as opposed to the past," Mallen said. "We're anticipating great things."

The Minutemen ended their season with a 12–23 record, the best record for UMass since they took on a complete Division I schedule. The 12 overall wins and seven conference wins for the team were new season highs, and the Minutemen look to improve on those marks this season and move into position for a home HE playoff berth.

For co–captain Lovell, the offense will be key, but winning begins with the defensive zone play of the team —simple and concise.

"If we don't play good defense, we're screwed, and that's the way it has to go," Lovell said.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Beast of the East

Senior co–captain Brad Norton will lead the maturing UMass hockey program through another exciting season. Check out the Collegian's Hockey Preview on Oct. 30.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Amherst- Cherming 1 bedroom Excellent location, on bus route, available 11/1. $475. 549-8248

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Nissan Sentre 4 speed, 2 door, 35-40 miles per gallon. 172,000 miles. $950. 585-5041 after 6pm.

Toyota Cresside 84 4 door, fully loaded, automatic. Needs some work $500. 549-8248.

Toyota Long Bed Pick-Up 1986 with 75k. Fiberglass Shell Calif Truck. No rust. $4500 Call 582-9872

88 TOYOTA SUPRA Grey with leather interior, 2 alarms, tinted windows, std, power everything. Very fast. $5800 or B/O. 549-4832

EMPLOYMENT

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate in a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work Monday through Thursday evenings. The position requires good communications skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Health and Dental insurance is available for Part-Time employees. Free transportation is provided from the PVTA busline. For further information or to arrange a personal interview, Call: 413-587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Care Attendant for weekend morning. $7.85/hour. Call 546-0666

Human Services- Want to make a difference in someone's life? Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma, driver's license and a true interest in helping people. Call 323-6872 to start application process. AA/EOE

HELP WANTED

Hadley Office has several part-time positions available. Department hours 10am-2pm Monday through Friday and 4pm-9pm Monday through Friday.

- On busline
- Flexible schedule
- Positive atmosphere
- No experience required
- $6.00 hour to start
- Daily, weekly and monthly bonuses

Call 584-0215
10am to 4pm for interview

VIRGIN RECORDS COLLEGE REP POSITION

Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at 310-288-2433. Soph or Jr with car preferred. Previous music industry experience a plus!

Arby's Hampshire Mall Now Hiring Part-time, flexible schedule, good pay. Apply in person.

EMPLOYMENT

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Reo's Coffee is hiring P/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

Hiring For Pizza Hut Cashiers and Pizza Help. All shifts. Come down and fill out an application. 586-2940

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily

Two Floor Seats- Elton John Call 665-0241 at any hour.

Mongoose Bike For Sale Large. $240 or B/O. Call 549-6926

Elton John 4 excellent seats. 11/5. (516)867-7392

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

FOR SALE

Macintosh Quedra 605 8/250 Includes monitor, keyboard, mouse, software, and printer. $575. Call Alyssa (413)545-4668 (days) (978)544-2837 (eves)

2 Elton John Tickets For Sale. Call 256-6022

Toshiba 486 Laptop $500. (413)549-4753

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

COMPUTERS!

New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

A Residence Hall Key found in Worcester DC Parking Lot. Call 6-0420 if it's yours.

Found: Keys outside Textbook Annex in front of meters. Call 665-7686

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Danielle! High School Chorus! Love, Beck-Beck, Pete, Emily & Elana

LOST

Gold Bracelet Monday 10/6 Mullins Field. Reward. Sentimental. Call Jen 549-4460

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95

ROOM FOR RENT

Housemate Wanted $220-270/month. 548-7972

Bedroom for rent in house. On Shumway Street. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call 253-9410

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female Roommates Wanted Boulders Apts. Amherst. On busline. 259-2995

Looking For Roommate ASAP $360/month. Call (413)532-9075

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

1 1/2 Bedroom Apt Puffton. $575, heat included. Available from 11/1. Call 549-1868

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 98

Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf & Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577.

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!!

Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK

Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15 Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplash-tours.com

WANTED

Earn $125

Running and Sedentary Females wanted for a research study. 19-35 years old. Please call Tom @ 549-0465

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

THIS SPACE COULD BE YOURS !

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center.

PRICE SPECIALS

Place an ad on a:

Monday: and receive 1/2 price Birthdays.

Tuesday: and receive 1/2 price Personals.

Students- 10¢ / word
Non-students- 20¢ / word

Charge your classified by phone.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses of students in personals, first person descriptions or meetings as well.
5. Personals that are insulting or derogatory in nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the student signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad, in order to verify the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 24

Blood Drive — Help save someone's life by donating blood from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. Call 800-462-2229 for an appointment, walk-ins welcome.

Computer Orientation — Students, faculty, and staff interested in using the computers at the Foreign Language Resource Center are encouraged to attend a computer orientation from 3–4 p.m. in Herter 19. Enrollment is limited. For more information and to register, contact Irene at 545-0950 or check out www.umass.edu/langctr.

Meeting — International graduate students are invited to talk about issues affecting them at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. Food and refreshments provided, sponsored by GEO.

Service — Shabbot services with Julius Lester at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All families are invited to come to this creative service led by Professor Julius Lester.

SATURDAY, OCT. 25

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 163.

Service — Morning service at 10 a.m. at the Hillel House.

Workshop — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding free theatre workshops, including acting, dance, tech and voice, auditions at 11 a.m. in the Campus Center, room 168. All are welcome. RSVP by Oct. 24 call 545-0415.

SUNDAY, OCT. 26

Entertainment — The Hampshire College Chorus will perform the Faure Requiem with the Valley Festival Orchestra at 2 p.m. at Grace Church on the Amherst Town Common.

Seminar — The Pakistani Student Association invites all interested international students to attend a seminar on permanent residency in Canada from 4–6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. The seminar is open to the Five- college community and will give an overview of Canadian immigration law and policy, and will talk about procedural issues.

MONDAY, OCT. 27

Discussion — Perspective on intermarriage, a panel discussion, the first in the series "Making Choices about Loving, Living, and Dying," at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0792.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406e or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

Workshop — The Craft Center is offering a nature photography expedition to the White Mountains, N.H. on October 24–26. Space is limited to 12 and sign up is now available in the Craft Center. Any questions, call 545–2096 or stop by the craft center which is located across from the Hatch in the Student Union.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3 Hartford	24 CNN SI
4	CBS/4 Boston	25 Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	26 UCTV
6	PBS/57 Springfield	27 TBS
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	28 BET
8	UPN/20 Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel	30 Univision
10	NBC/30 New Britain	31 Comedy Central
11	Fox/61 Hartford	32 Cartoon
12	PBS/24 Hartford	33 Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40 Springfield
22	NBC/22 Springfield

545-3500

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 24, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	62	(13) Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Great Travel and Leisure Auction						Great Travel and Leisure
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Family Matters	Meego	Gregory Hines	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Ripcord"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Meego	Gregory Hines	Step by Step	Nash Bridges "Ripcord"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	You Wish	Teen Angel	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Only the Lonely" (1991, Comedy-Drama) John Candy.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Players "Con Law" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Married...With...	Cheers	Judge Judy	Grace Under	"The Karate Kid" (1984, Drama) Ralph Macchio.				News	LAPD	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Players "Con Law" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Visitor "The Black Box"		Millennium (In Stereo) (PA)		News		Seinfeld	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Players "Con Law" (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Stele We're In	Follow Money	Cincinnati Pops Holiday		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sabrina-Witch	Boy-World	You Wish	Teen Angel	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	"In Country" (1989, Drama)		Bruce Willis, Emily Lloyd.		News	M*A*S*H	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"An Officer and a Gentleman" (1982, Drama) Richard Gere, Debra Winger.				"The War of the Roses" (1989)
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Life Choice"		Biography: Betty Grable-Pinup		America's Castles (R)		Grand Tour		Law & Order "Bad Faith"
CNN	43	(2) WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News		Burden-Proof	Larry King Live	World Today		Sports Bus.	Moneyline
COM	63	NHL Special	Make-Laugh	"Manhattan Murder Mystery" (1993, Comedy) Alan Alda, Woody Allen.						"Caddyshack" (1980, Comedy) Chevy Chase, Bill Murray,			"Blazing"
DISC	64	Wings "Flight Deck" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Kangaroo		News		Storm	Fangs! (R)	Justice Files (R)
ESPN	45	Up Close	Sportscenter		Sportslight	NHL Hockey: Dallas Stars at Chicago Blackhawks. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	66	Supermarket	Debt	Voices of Hope (R)		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Escape From Terror: The Teresa Stamper Story" (1995, Drama)				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	MTV Live	Viewers	Fight for Right	Week in Rock	Beevis-Butt	Beavis-Butt	Countdown to the 10 Spot		Live From the 10 Spot		Oddville, MTV	Loveline (R)
NICK	55	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	68	Swamp Thing	Gerilaca	Night Stalker		"The Howling VI: The Freaks" (1991, Horror) Brendan Hughes.				Friday the 13th: The Series		Night Stalker
TLC	65	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Real America: 48 Hours		Tutankhamen Mystery		Crash Course (R)		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	67	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superman		"Above the Law" (1988, Drama) Steven Seagal, Henry Silva.				"Boiling Point" (1993, Drama)		Wesley Snipes, Dennis Hopper.
USA	59	Baywatch "Short-Sighted"		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger				"Mad Dog and Glory" (1993) Robert De Niro, (In Stereo)		"Army of Darkness" (1992)
HBO	70	(5:30) "Ladybugs" (1992)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		"Mission: Impossible" (1996, Adventure) Tom Cruise. "PG-13"				"Acts of Betrayal" (1997) Maria Conchita Alonso.		Chris Rock
MAX	71	"House of Cards" (1993, Drama) Kathleen Turner. "PG-13"				"Surviving Picasso" (1996, Drama) Anthony Hopkins. "R"				"Never Say Never Again" (1983) Sean Connery. "PG"
SHOW	60	"Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) "PG"				"Sunset Park" (1996) Rhea Perlman. "R"				Extras		Stargate SG-1 "Hathor"	Fast Track "SierOther"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Non Sequitor By Wiley

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Monkey Socials By Constant Jones

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may have to fight for what you think is right today. Do not let a competitor push you too far without standing up for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Circumstances are favorable for a change, but you don't want to be so dramatic that those around you think you've lost touch.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You are nearing a personal victory, but there is still a great deal of work to do before you can enjoy the fruits of your labors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — What was kept under wraps until recently will prove more important to you than expected. You are going to need a little more information.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You will have a good reason to enjoy yourself with others today, but you may choose to do things in a slightly different way from them.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — This is not time to let fear or uncertainty make the decisions for you. You have got to remain on top and in control of your destiny.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You will encounter a tricky obstacle today, but words of advice will ring in your ear and you'll be able to overcome it with relative ease.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You will enjoy great strength, inspiration and peace of mind today, thanks to a number of supporters who seem to come from nowhere.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You must be willing to stay the course today, no matter how much criticism you may receive for doing things in an unorthodox manner.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — This is a good day to do things over, not because they were done badly to begin with, but because you have a chance to increase your rewards.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Concentrate on opposites, and on how they affect you, both directly and indirectly. It is important that you are able to make sense of things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — A revelation early in the day will have you taking steps to improve things on all fronts at a later date. Take the time to tend to details.

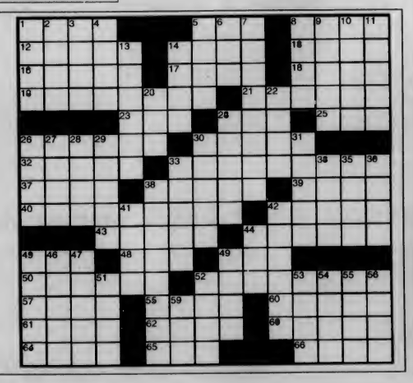
Close to Home By John McPherson

Whenever one of his daughters returned from a date, Mr. Shelburne would carefully dust her for fingerprints.

Quote of the Day

"Put your hand down... I'm getting pissed."

–Overheard in an Environmental Science class



ACROSS
1 Gymnast Korbut
5 Faint
8 Not any
12 Question
14 Island near Borneo
15 Done with
16 Canadian doctor
17 Baltic Sea feeder
18 Eugene O'Neill's daughter
19 Lizards and turtles
21 Blow a —; explode
23 Be ill
24 Compact mass
25 Woolly one
26 Shrine
30 Lofty nest
32 Bristles
33 Flatter
37 Church calendar
38 Breakfast item
39 Cure
40 Cold-weather garb
42 Twill-weave fabric
43 Poet's spring
44 Sullen
45 Baseball great Mel —
48 Finale
49 Boxer's punch
50 — May Alcott
52 Crude
57 Lodges
58 Cat's utterance
60 Dodge adroitly
61 Gore, to Clinton
62 Rainbow goddess
63 Baker's —
64 Vortex
65 "My Gal —"
66 Shipshape

DOWN
1 Smell
2 Misplace
3 Swig
4 Assist in crime
5 Some parents
6 "— Got You Under My Skin"
7 Elizabeth's sister
8 Monkey homes
9 Call forth
10 Extend a subscription
11 Climb a soapbox
13 Court cases
14 Actor Grey
20 Fib
22 Mine entrance
24 Tiniest
26 Quaker's pronoun
27 Deserve
28 South of France
29 Evidence
30 Look forward to
31 An anesthetic
33 Logical
34 Flying prefix
35 Dawdles
36 Artist Paul —
38 Tidal waves
41 Negative votes
42 Wept
44 Spring mo.
45 Martini addition
46 — up: got fit
47 Adjusted
49 Wrench parts
51 Early Cosby show
52 Seethe
53 Cosmetics company
54 Demolish
55 Theory
56 Not worth a red —
59 Important time period

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

D	E	L	I		T	E	T	R	A		C	H	A	P
A	C	I	D		A	A	R	O	N		A	U	R	A
B	R	O	O	K	T	R	O	U	T		E	M	I	R
S	U	N	L	I	T		U	S	E		S	T	O	E
			M	E	A	T		P	A	L
O	S	L	O		D	E	C		P	E	R	I	O	D
C	H	I	N	A		G	E	A	R	S		A	N	A
H	I	B	A	C	H	I		R	O	O	S	T	E	R
E	R	R		M	I	S	E	R		S	P	E	N	T
P	E	A	R	B	U	T		M	A	I	L	A	D	D	S
		R	E	S		A	B	Y	S	S
B	R	I	G		O	R	A		T	A	M	E	S	T
L	E	A	R		T	E	R	R	A	C	O	T	T	A
A	N	N	E		I	N	G	O	T		S	N	A	P
H	O	S	T		S	T	O	N	E		S	A	G	E

10-24-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Taco or Vegie Taco
Fried Clam Strip Sandwich
Reuben Sandwich on Rye
Reuben Sandwich in your Eye
DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Risotto Italiano
Spaghetti/Tomato Lentil Sauce
Quarter Pound ~~Booger~~ Burger

Worcester
LUNCH
Captain's Catch on Sesame Street
Grilled Bread Stuffed with Cheese
Fettucini/Tomato Sauce
Black Eyed Peas
DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Pineapple Ham Steak
Korean BBQ Tofu
Ravioli Alfredo (pastabilities)

Hampshire
LUNCH
Cowburger
Chicken Puks
Captain's Catch on Sesame Roll
Grilled Cheese
DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Glazed Harvest Ham
Super Savory Baked Chicken
Glazed Harvest Honey Ham Haunches

Berkshire
LUNCH
Captain's Catch on Sesame
Fettucini/Tomato Sauce
Grilled Cheese on Bread (w/ a cheesy center)
Wheatball Grinder
DINNER
Somewhat Savory Baked Chicken
Pretty Pork Ginger Stir Fry
Friday's Fabulous Tempeh Stir Fry
Rip-roarin' Ravioli Alfredo (pastabilities)

Night Editor — Mark McGrath
Photo Technician — Chris Cesnek
Copy Editor — Luke Meredith
Production Supervisor — Leon Latino
Production Staff — Teresa Rodrigues, Keren Charles

SPORTS

Hurricanes aren't much of a storm

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Brian Mooney

You own a professional sports team... well, you own the Hartford Whalers.

Fans don't come to the games as much as you want them to. You get between 8,000–11,000 a game. Your city (best known for insurance and well, insurance) won't build you a state–of–the–art "mega–arena" so you can overcharge the suburbanized denizens of Northern Connecticut to watch a hockey team that's had about as much chance to win a Stanley Cup as Kenny has of surviving an episode of South Park.

Those bastards.

But this is the '90s. No longer do you have to put up with the poor souls who don't see things your way. There is a solution.

Raleigh–Durham, N.C.

The Raleigh–Durham region has long been known as a hotbed of a

Luke Meredith
2005
Around the Horn

cultural fabric of American society, so we know the good citizens of southern North Carolina (or is it northern South Carolina?) aren't suffering from "minor league city" complex.

Raleigh–Durham is definitely "big–time."

For instance, did you know Raleigh–Durham was on the final set of lyrics for Frank Sinatra's hit song "New York, New York?"

(Apparently some small–minded producer changed the words on Old Blue Eyes at the last minute. In some shows in the Deep South, rumor has it Frank switches them back to croon "Ral–eeeeeeeee.")

Thank God for bootlegs.

Did you know Raleigh–Durham hosted the World's Fair in 1937? (Long known as the landmark event that brought the world pantyhose and the rubber–ducky.)

Did you know that Raleigh–Durham is the place where they invented air travel? (Kitty Hawk? Yeah, okay. Who's kidding who here, huh?)

Did you know Wayne Gretzky was born in Raleigh– Durham? (Rumor has it he learned how to handle a stick by flipping cow dookie over the barn.)

You can see how opportunistic the region is for a hockey team, though the team has to play in Greensboro for two years.

(Did you know Raleigh–Durham invented the term "fashionably late?")

So bye–bye Hartford Whalers, hello Carolina Hurricanes. I don't think the NHL will ever be the same. Just a word of advice to Peter Karmanos, the guy who owns Les 'Canes. Don't worry about all those empty seats. Remember, you're big–time now.

•Bye–bye Chris Mills. I guess Slick Rick wanted all his ex–Wildcats on the C's. The way I see it, it doesn't matter how well the system works in the NBA, because the NBA was and always will be a player's game. Chris Mills is an NBA player. Walter McCarty ain't.

• There are no football teams in Los Angeles, Houston or Cleveland, and yet Memphis sports the Oilers. Oh yeah, sorry. They're waiting on that new stadium in Nashville.

• There is a committee that wants to build the UConn football team a domed stadium when they jump to D–1. Apparently it's in the best interests of the people of Connecticut to use their money to build a stadium for a team that struggles to get 10,000 of those taxpayers to even pay to go to any of their games.

Quite a racket.

• Steve Fisher turned down the South Alabama job two weeks after being fired from Michigan.

It isn't really clear why Fisher was fired from Michigan, except that he was shady and that nobody was really surprised when they canned him.

But what about South Alabama? Do they realize just how bad this makes them look? Do they even care?

Sometimer college basketball is a scary thing. One of the worst things is when small schools trip over themselves to hire the first criminal the big school fired, so they can become a big school. Rhode Island did it, Fresno State did it and South Alabama wants to do it.

I guess the sound of turnstiles clicking and school funds growing makes it hard to hear the slowly dying calls of sanity and class in the NCAA today.

No wonder everyone roots for Princeton in March.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Recharged UM to host Delaware

Minutemen try to duplicate performance that garnered 1993 upset

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

In the last two weeks, the Massachusetts football team (2–5 overall, 1–5 in the Atlantic 10) has completely contrasted with the group that played the first five games. However, only a flawless performance on both the offense and defense will enable them to keep up with a team like No. 6 Delaware (6–1, 5–1 A–10).

"We have to get control of the line of scrimmage, just like any other game," UMass head coach Mike Hodges said. "We can't help them win the game."

The Minutemen are hosting the Blue Hens at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium tomorrow for a 1 p.m. conference showdown.

Delaware's only loss of the season came against No. 3 Villanova in the second week of the season. Apart from that, the Hens have defeated such quality foes as New Hampshire, Richmond and James Madison — three teams which have already defeated UMass this season.

Football
Massachusetts vs No.6 Delaware
Saturday, 1 p.m.

For UMass to give the Hens a game, they will need to play like they did in the second half against Villanova, when they scored 27 points to the Wildcats' 14. Otherwise, Delaware's offense, which averages 193.4 yards rushing and 181.4 yards in the air, will terrorize the Minuteman defense.

UMass' offense has been the most impressive part of the team during the last two weeks. Led by senior quarterback Anthony Catterton —who took

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Defenseman Mike Gaffney, who scored the game–winner in the deciding Alumni Cup game against Lowell last season, is preparing for tonight's game in Lowell.

Rothenberger, Garber turf to be honored on Sat.

By Aaron M. Saykin
Collegian Staff

In the midst of a season–high four–game winning streak, the Massachusetts field hockey team could not have chosen a more appropriate time to look its sharpest, as it prepares to atone for a 1996 loss to border–state rival UConn tomorrow at noon, following the dedication of the new AstroTurf at Richard F. Garber Field.

Athletic Director Bob Marcum and Associate AD Elaine Sortino will take part in the dedication ceremony at 11:45. At halftime, former UMass field hockey star Kyle Rothenberger will be recognized for being named UMass Woman of the Year by the NCAA.

It will be all business, though, for the Minutewomen, as they look to build up steam at the end of the regular season.

Field Hockey
Massachusetts vs. No. 14 Connecticut
Saturday, Noon

"We have continued to build on the success we've had," said UMass coach Patty Shea of her squad's impressive string of consecutive triumphs. "A victory is always important because with victory comes confidence."

Fresh off a 6–1 pounding of the La Salle Explorers last Saturday, the Minutewomen (9–7, 3–0 Atlantic–10) enter tomorrow's game against the Huskies (11–5, 3–1 Big East) in high spirits, and they'll look to set the tone in the match's early stages.

"I just think we need to establish the tempo of the game form the opening whistle," said Shea, who watched her team play with a 1–0 deficit against the Explorers after a slow start, but respond with six unanswered scores. "UConn has a number of key players. They are a physically strong team, and will play very hard."

Although in her first year as head coach of the Minutewomen, Shea is no stranger to the heated rivalry, which dates back to her days as a player in a UMass uniform in the early 1980s.

"This is my first year coaching in it, but I played in it. It goes back years," she said of the famous UMass–UConn contention. "It's the game. Two large state schools are competing against one another on the field, but we also vie for a lot of each other's states' athletes (recruits)."

Despite an absence from competition for an entire week, Shea feels that the UMass layoff will pay tremendous dividends in Saturday's contest.

"They needed to take time off, and to come back for this weekend," Shea said of her tired team, which recently played three games in a span of only four days. "It brings a whole new life back, it brings confidence back, and it gives our players more enthusiasm for the game."

With the anticipation of border–state powerhouse UConn coming to town, the Minutewomen players cannot ignore the hype, nor can they forget their 1996 2–1 road loss to the Huskies.

"UConn is a very physical team," junior midfielder Kate Putnam said. "It's a big game that everyone looks forward to. It's going to be tough.'

UM starts season at Lowell

Minutemen begin chase for third straight Alumni Cup

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Historically, the Massachusetts–Lowell hockey team has the more storied tradition compared to their sister campus, Massachusetts–Amherst. NCAA appearances. All–Americans, etc., have put on the River Hawks uniform, and taken the ice at Tully Forum with team pride in their hearts.

Well, the past two seasons, the so–called "less–storied" hockey program has taken the Alumni Cup — which goes to the winner of the season series between the two teams — and Massachusetts—Amherst has walked away with the most pride in their hearts.

Tonight, UMass will return to Tully Forum in North Billerica, where they won the Cup with a 6–4 win last Feb. 8, to open up the 1997–98 season against Lowell at 7 p.m. Because construction on the new Paul E. Tsongas Arena is not finished for the start of the season, the Minutemen

Hockey
Massachusetts @ UMass Lowell
Tonight @ 7 p.m.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN
Goalie Brian Regan will anchor the Minuteman defense against Lowell in the UMass hockey team's season opener.

No. 14 UM polo to play BC in first round of playoffs

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN
Sophomore Timmy Troupis and the men's water polo squad head for the CWPA North playoffs this weekend.

By Jim Eltringham
Collegian Staff

The No. 14 Massachusetts men's water polo team (19–7, 7–2 Collegiate Water Polo Association) will have little time to rest this week. Fresh off a series of impressive efforts last weekend in California, the Minutemen will head to Providence for this weekend's CWPA North Division playoffs.

Boston College will be the Minutemen's first opponent. A first round win is vital because the Minutemen would be guaranteed a spot in the Eastern Championships. A first round loss, on the other hand, would mean the end of the season.

"Basically our goal is to win our first round game," says UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "What I'd rather do, obviously, is win the whole tournament, so we can head into Easterns with the first seed... but I'm focusing on winning the first round game and progressing from there."

Water Polo
CWPA North Tourney
Saturday and Sunday

Winning Easterns would send the Minutemen to the NCAA Tournament (where they have claimed fourth place the last two seasons) for the fifth consecutive year.

Tomorrow's matchup with the Eagles certainly bodes well for UMass. The Minutemen have downed the Eagles twice this year, by scores of 12–4 and 17–10. Nevertheless, Yarworth is cautious.

"If they lose that game, their season's over, so we have to be ready for them to be very fired up," Yarworth said. "We have to play hard, aggressive and tough."

The first round shouldn't give UMass too much trouble, but if history is any guide, Queens College is a force to be reckoned with. In each of the past two seasons, Queens has ousted the Minutemen in the playoffs. Of course, UMass has exacted its revenge in both years by defeating Queens in the finals of the Eastern tournament.

Turn to WATER POLO, page 7

Iverson next NBA superstar

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

One moment he's pouring in points unlike any rookie ever has, the next moment he's being dogged for it.

One moment he says he's not hanging out with the wrong crowd, the next he's being arrested on gun and drug charges. One moment he's huddling with the commissioner, the next he's being suspended by him.

Bad things and good things happen to Allen Iverson, and it seems everyone wants to dwell on the bad.

Never has there been a young NBA player with as much talent and as bad an image. Never has someone who will be such a big part of the league's future turned off so many people.

"A lot of people judge me on what they heard or read, but it wasn't fair," said the star guard of the Philadelphia 76ers. "People were writing terrible stories about me and they hadn't even interviewed me.

Turn to IVERSON, page 7

Also Today

- Women's soccer may get Burrill back... page 7
- Men's tennis to butt heads with Rams... page 7
- Men's soccer gets boost from freshman... page 7

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 38 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, October 27, 1997

Dishing the suds

November sweeps are upon us and what do the crafty daytime writers have in store for soap opera aficionados? (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Blue Hens pluck Minutemen

It wasn't pretty for Mike Hodges and the Massachusetts football team on Saturday, as they fell to Delaware 40–9 at home (see Sports, page 10).

UMass group among 1.3 million at March

MICHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN
Over the weekend, thousands of women gathered in Philadelphia to celebrate the Million Woman March.

By Allana E. Todman
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — On Saturday, Oct. 25, an estimated count of 1.3 million African–American women gathered in the center of downtown Philadelphia, Pa.

Two hundred women attending the march were from the University of Massachusetts. For a march that did not appear to those attending as one fully organized, the women allowed fate to lead them.

Before the march the Collegiate Coalition of Black Men for Community Consciousness provided additional support to the women who were in attendance.

With the help of others, Kenny Lacoste, a junior English major, planned a scheduled day of events for the men on campus who could not attend the march. In support, the men packed individual bags of hand–made sandwiches, which was well–appreciated by the women.

"I was surprised, it was really sweet of them to come out and show support," UMass graduate student Dolly Fernandes said.

Angela Osci–Mensah agreed.

"It's so beautiful. That's so unbelievable, you can tell it's coming from the heart," she said.

Dan Lizana, offered prayers on all four of the buses for the safe journey and arrival back from the march. Other men encouraged the women to look inward during the march.

Anticipating the arrival, the women on the buses began to create dialogue about what they hoped the march would be like. There was also discussion about the reasoning for the lack of unity amongst the sisters on the UMass campus.

African–American women from UMass began to sing inspirational songs during the long awaited journey to Philadelphia. From "Lean On Me" to "The Greatest Love of All," an environment to communicate was created on the bus.

When they arrived, the UMass group expressed its enthusiasm as thousands of women pulled into

Turn to WOMEN, page 2

WORLD

Banned painting returns to South Africa

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A painting of a black Jesus Christ banned under apartheid was hung in St. George's Cathedral yesterday, marking its return from a long exile overseas.

In the racially mixed congregation of about 200 that sat in half–filled pews was Albertina Luthuli, daughter of Chief Albert Luthuli, whose face is depicted as Jesus on the cross in the painting.

The 1961 work, an attack on apartheid called "Black Christ," shows Luthuli flanked by two Roman soldiers who bear the faces of apartheid's architect, former Prime Minister Hendrik F. Verwoerd, and his justice minister, John Vorster.

The artist, Ronnie Harrison, was arrested and the painting banned in 1962. It was later smuggled overseas, wrapped in linoleum and stowed on a cargo flight, and displayed at St. Paul's Cathedral in London by John Collins, a canon and anti–apartheid activist at the church. It also was used for fund–raising campaigns for the anti–apartheid movement.

NATION

Hillary Clinton celebrates her 50th

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton spent a quiet 50th birthday yesterday, ensconced at home with her husband and daughter after a surprise party that had her dancing until the wee hours. The weather in Washington was in the low 50s and damp, which kept the first family firmly indoors. Not a peep came from the White House residence all day; the Clintons didn't emerge for church or even an impromptu birthday brunch.

In true Washington fashion, Mrs. Clinton's special day was fodder for the Sunday talk shows. ABC–TV's "This Week" offered a video birthday card in which average Americans politely swore that Mrs. Clinton looked much too young to be 50.

"Oh, to be 50 again! Just a kid!" said host Sam Donaldson, 63, as he wished Mrs. Clinton a happy birthday with a quote from poet Robert Browning: "The best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first was made."

Yesterday's low–key activity was in stark contrast to what's in store for Mrs. Clinton beginning today: a public, two–day celebration in her hometown of Chicago that includes a speech, a chat with a historian, a birthday bash at the Chicago Cultural Center and a TV appearance with talk show maven Oprah Winfrey. But a relaxed birthday seemed in order because Mrs. Clinton began celebrating in the minutes after midnight by taking a few spins around the dance floor during a surprise party at a posh hotel here.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 68	HIGH: 44	HIGH: 50
LOW: 42	LOW: 37	LOW: 32

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Alcohol ban overwhelmingly opposed, Honors College supported by students

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

According to last week's Student Government Association (SGA) election, University of Massachusetts students overwhelmingly oppose a campus wide ban on alcohol.

An unofficial vote total shows that 92 percent of all voting students oppose the ban, leaving only eight percent in favor of it.

At their December meeting, the University of Massachusetts Amherst Board of Trustees will meet to vote on the proposed ban. University Chancellor David K. Scott has already voiced his opposition to a complete ban of alcohol on campus.

Another heated issue that had divided the SGA involved the proposed Honors College. Two thirds of voters (68 percent) voted in favor of the SGA officially supporting the Honors College.

"I support the Honors College and I have all along. I think what the vote says to me is that the student body feels the same way, but they have concerns about student input and enacting the proposal," said Jennifer Casasanto, a newly re– elected senator.

Students also voted overwhelmingly to allow students to have legal representation at judicial hearings which may result in suspension, expulsion or eviction. Ninety–four percent of students voted in favor of this proposal with only six percent opposed.

Seventy–four percent of voting students oppose video

Turn to ALCOHOL, page 2

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN
Worthy causes
Jaime Coutu, a junior biology major, donates socks to the Amherst Survival Center Tree, located in the Campus Center Store.

Alumni Pres. "lives among" students

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Going to class, eating at the dining commons, socializing with dormmates on a Thursday night — the normal student routine became the focus of study for University of Massachusetts Amherst Alumni Association President Attorney Robert Goodhue this past week.

Goodhue, a 1970 graduate, returned to his alma mater last Thursday and Friday to "live among" current UMass students and see what life at the University is like today.

Goodhue said he stayed overnight in Washington Tower, traveled to five classes, ate in several of the dining commons and spoke to students, faculty and staff across the campus in an effort to get a better sense of student life.

"Many administrators had talked to me about student life," Goodhue said. "I wanted to get a handle on it myself, so I thought it would be beneficial to live with the students and learn from primary sources."

Goodhue said that although the dorms were "a little louder" and the weekend started "a little earlier" than he remembered from his days at UMass, he was very happy overall with what he saw on campus.

"I have been very pleased with this experience," Goodhue said. "It's not until you have actually been on campus, talked to students, and seen classes, that you are really reaffirmed as to the quality of the students and the instruction."

All of the classes he attended, Goodhue said, were so "great" that he wished he could come back to school.

"I found excellent instruction and interested and motivated students," Goodhue said. "My intellectual curiosity was stimulated on five different occasions. I was most pleased with the classroom experience, and ultimately, that is what it is all about."

The physical conditions of the classrooms, however, Goodhue reported was "mixed, at best."

Goodhue said it is essential for the State Legislature to release bond money to finance renovations of classrooms and other buildings on

Turn to ALUMNI, page 3

Carroll warns of threat of nuclear addicted U.S.

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Blood was poured on draft records 30 years ago today.

It was an act of protest committed by priest Philip Berrigan, during the height of Vietnam anti–war protests, while author and Boston Globe columnist James Carroll was in seminary school.

As a result of this act, Carroll learned about the role priests, writers and artists could play in bringing about change, a role which has been forgotten today, he said in his lecture, entitled "The Virtue of Writing, Politics, Art and Moral Responsibility," at Amherst College on Friday.

Berrigan's lesson

In referring to the Berrigan incident, Carroll contrasted the activism of artists, priests, and writers in the 1960s with those professions' reserve in the '90s.

"Art for art's sake, we say; separation of church and state, we say," Carroll said. "But when we move from art to politics, we can change an immoral policy."

On Oct. 27, 1967, Philip Berrigan went into a draft board in Baltimore and, with the help of two others, poured blood on the offices records.

"We pour this blood upon these files; here in these offices begins the pitiful waste of U.S. and Vietnamese blood," Berrigan said afterwards.

Young people have fallen down a memory hole, in which today's shallow images of the 1960s — sex, drugs, rock and roll — have been taken out of context, Carroll said.

"Do young people have any idea of the crisis invoked by the war?" Carroll asked. "Do we remember the desperation we felt, rooted in the knowledge that our government, year after year, was committing heinous crimes?"

Carroll and his father, Lt. General Joseph Carroll of the Defense Intelligence Agency, were at the crux of this conflict.

He recalled his father referring to Berrigan as a "kook," and how he secretly took part in protests against his father's government afterwards.

"Virtue and politics were not abstractions then," he said.

During that time, nuclear weapons were nearly used on three separate occasions to end the stalemate of Vietnam, Carroll said.

The anti–war protestors, including Berrigan, had a hand in preventing this, he said.

Even when Richard Nixon vowed never to be the first president to lose a war, the acts of protestors prevented him from doing as much as he might have wanted to.

Carroll said the Berrigan incident violated the "good order" of society, in which artists keep to their studios and priests keep to their cloisters; a good order already vio–

Turn to NUCLEAR, page 3

Casino Night fundraiser a "great gambling experience"

By Jason Eiseman
Collegian Correspondent

The atmosphere is smokey. The cigarette girls circle like sharks. Frank Sinatra is singing on stage. James Bond is sitting in the corner, sipping a martini, playing a hand of baccarat. It's Vegas.

Actually, there was no smoking allowed, there was a D.J. on stage, and there were no baccarat tables. It was Casino Night, sponsored by the Asian American Student Association (AASA). It was held Friday night in the Campus Center Auditorium.

There were 20 blackjack tables, one double roulette table, and one Wheel of Fortune. Once inside, players exchanged their cash for chips. There were black–one–dollar chips, red– two–dollar chips, green–five–dollar chips, and yellow–ten– dollar chips. Most of the tables were two–dollar–minimum bets and ten–dollar–maximum bets, although some tables had four–dollar–minimum bets for high rollers.

Kieu Tran, a junior apparel marketing and consumer studies major, was Casino Night manager. She said that this was the third year they have had a Casino Night.

"It's pretty successful every year," she said. While

Turn to CASINO, page 2

YVONNE YANG / COLLEGIAN
Hit me!
LaKeisha Kennedy, a junior psychology and legal studies major, deals a hand of blackjack to Shawn O'Donnell, a freshman political science major, and Mike Corbin, a sophomore biology and psychology major, on Friday's Casino Night, an AASA charity fundraiser, in the Campus Center Auditorium.

women

continued from page 1

Pennsylvania from Boston, Chicago, Delaware, Detroit and other cities from around the United States.

Throwing fists in the air and raising their voices, the students prepped themselves for the long day of women's empowerment.

Drums were heard from the right of the street as soon as the women came out of the train terminal. On the way to the front of the march site, the messages from guest speakers were hard to hear, but that did not discourage Belinda Martin.

Martin, a senior pre-med student from Howard University, said, "I can't even hear everything that some of these women are talking about, but that's OK, because all I have to see is women screaming or clapping and I know it's something worth me agreeing with because we as sisters have the same struggles."

For those in the front, or closer to the platform, they were able to hear the words of Tynetta Muhammed, Winnie Madikizela-Mandela, Sister Souljah, Jada Pinkett and Maxine Waters.

"We are no longer going to be the tail of the lion. We're going to be the head. We were called here by God," said Muhammed

Muhammed addressed the concern of women taking their stance as women made with divine power and strength. She also spoke of the external forces in our society that lead to the misunderstanding of the black man as well as the black woman and each other.

A transfigured mind and spirit was one of the solutions that Muhammed proposed to the crowd. Her answer for the black woman learning how to take control of her life in all aspects, such as relationships, family and health care, was given in her statement, "It is imperative to have God's thinking. Think like God, and we will have God-like resistance."

Waters, a Congresswoman known for her heavy stance on the war on drugs, provided the million women with statistics on employment rates and health.

"Fifty-nine point nine percent of African-American women have low paying jobs. The average amount of money earned per year is $20,000," she said. "The African-American woman makes 64 percent of every dollar that a white male earns. Twenty-nine percent of African-American women are in poverty."

In her conclusion, Waters said, "We are strong innovative survivors, we love our children, we believe in education. We will stop allowing others to define us."

Jada Pinkett, who introduced the guest speakers, also conveyed her own personal message to the women. She said that black women need to read. She listed titles from books by Sister Souljah, Dr. bell hooks, and Audrey Lorde.

Lastly key note speaker Winnie Madikizela-Mandela said, "To the women of the United States, to African-American women, I say 'Amandla.'" Madikizela-Mandela stressed this word until the women repeated it.

With 1.3 million women, a collective voice spoke as one.

alcohol

continued from page 1

cameras in lobbies of residence halls, and 70 percent of voting students are in favor of the SGA opposing the University Picketing Code.

Seventy-four percent also voted to change the SGA constitution to change the term of office for SGA president from June 1 to May 31. Twenty six percent of the students opposed this action.

The second attempt by the SGA to hold a senatorial election captured close to 15 percent voter turn out, due in part to more advertising around campus for the election.

"I think we potentially had one of the best turnouts ever on this campus. The questions really hit home with the students and pulled them out to vote," said Peter Kilbourne, speaker of the senate.

The voter turnout was almost three times the turnout of last month's SGA election.

"The voter turnout was outstanding. It shows that the campus is not as apathetic as it's perceived to be," said Elections Chancellor Jodi Bailey.

At press time, SGA president Lia Wong was unavailable for comment.

The first student senate meeting will be in the Commonwealth Room this Wednesday at 7 p.m.

casino

continued from page 1

there are usually two Casino Nights every year, Tran said that this year there will only be one.

Tran said that Casino Night is a big fundraiser for Asian Night, held every spring, and for other cultural events sponsored by the AASA. "We also donate money to other RSOs," she said.

According to Tran, two months of planning went into making Casino Night possible, and she praised the efforts of the 70 volunteers who worked Friday night. Student volunteers played the roles of blackjack dealers, worked the roulette table, and the Wheel of Fortune. Former Casino Night volunteers trained the volunteers for Friday night.

Students also monitored the cash-chip exchange, and worked security, although Tran said that most of the security was provided by a police sergeant and two officers.

Chiu Chan, a senior hotel restaurant and travel administration major, and former AASA member helped Tran organize the event.

"I've done this before," Chan said. He expected 1,000 people to turn out for the event. "We normally have a really good turnout," he said.

"The biggest problem is recruiting and training, it's hard to get people motivated to do this," Chan said. He said that planning an event such as this was stressful and included obtaining a raffle permit from the City of Amherst, which is good for one year. "As long as they know it's a charity event they don't have a problem," he said.

Some members of the AASA do not fully support Casino Night, said some volunteers.

"Casino itself is a huge ethical issue, but we're not here to debate, it's a charity," Chan said.

"Some see it as a problem, gambling is very rampant in the Asian American community," said Michael Chan, a junior member of the AASA. "But it's a big fundraiser, it's fun, it's popular," he said.

Many of the players said they had a good experience.

"I enjoyed myself, despite losing money, because it all went to a good cause," said Seth Freeman, a senior journalism major. "It was a very low pressure situation, with the dealers, and the players, it was very friendly. Everyone was kind of rooting for each other, not like a real casino with pit bosses watching you," Freeman said.

The rules were similar to those at a casino except for a few changes at the blackjack tables. The dealer was required to draw on 16 and stay on 17, double downs and splits were legal plays. The only major change in blackjack was the rule that a push was a win for the dealer, but at a real casino a push is a win for the player.

"Unfortunately I lost some money, so it wasn't as good an experience as I thought it would be. My dealer took all of my money," said Justin Murphy, a senior economics major. "It was very well run, the dealers were outstanding, they did their jobs, it was a great gambling experience."

SGA Election Results for the 1997–1998 Undergraduate Student Senate:

Southwest Residential Area

At Large
Becky Friedman
Eric Magazu
Ricardo Rodriguez
Mikale Billard
Jennifer Casasanto
Daniel McDougall
Ryan Castillo

Washington
Michael Rossettie
Alicia Maglione

Patterson
Jaime Jee

Cance
Pat Gilmartin

Kennedy
Anne-Theresa Mueller
Thomas Hnitecki

Coolidge
Jim Eltringham
Jolyon Yates

John Adams
Seth Avakian
Brian McManus

John Quincy Adams
Benjamin Gaumond

Sylvan Residential Area

At Large
Martin Lewis-Gonzalez
Neb Abebe
Craig Cincotti

Brown
Dawn Pavao

Cashin
Varant Minasslan

McNamara
Robert Chirwca

Orchard Hill Residential Area

At Large
Sara Coady
Phillip Blue

Webster
Cindy Gargano

Dickinson
Jeffery Howe

Grayson
Amy Pellegrino

Field
Mike Meideros

Northeast Residential Area

At Large
Brian Runyon
Melante Haslam
Satish Iyer
Jean Hoffman
Thao Tran
Sarah Koske

Central Residential Area

At Large
Jessica Sachs
Kanistar-lo Gilbert
Carlos Alvarez
Kevin Lombardi
Xenon Yuan
Gilllan Formatto

Baker
Jared Brocelin

Gorman
Brian Hutchings
Juliet Okalor

Commuter Area

Allison Feinstein
Adam Feldman
Paul Ferro
Carl Litsch
Brenda Fitzpatrick
Scott Buchanan
Christopher Brittain
Stephen Johnson
Brian Palmucci
Michele Abraham
Amy Lacasse
Brendan Greally
Elizabeth Leeds
Elliott Glass
Jeremy Bolio
Greg St. Louis
Liz Boulette
Nathan Peyton
Matt Cronin
Marc Carroll
Alisa Croci

Note: There are currently nine vacant Commuter Area senator seats vacant due to a 21-way tie.

Hampden Convenience Store

Buy 6 Cups of Coffee and get your next cup FREE with your C-Store Coffee Card!

Available in all C-Stores!
Serving gourmet Omar coffees

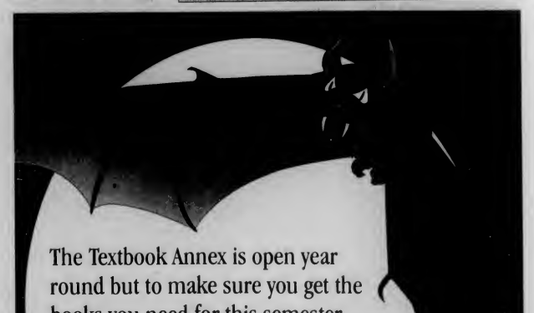
New Hours
Monday - Friday
6:30 am - 12 midnight
Saturday
12 noon - 6:00 pm
Sunday
& Holidays
3 - 9 pm

And now you can join the new C-Store Coffee Club
Starting October 6, 1997

Pizza
Tuition
Dentist

Guess which one can't

Movies
Concerts
Cabs



go on your MasterCard?

Gas
Shopping
Postage

A: They can all go on your MasterCard. No card can be used in more places or ways. Which makes it easy to guess which card is the best one to carry.

MasterCard

© 1997 MasterCard International Incorporated

The Textbook Annex is open year round but to make sure you get the books you need for this semester, buy them before

Halloween

We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Monday, October 27.

University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX

We accept VISA, MASTERCARD, DISCOVER and the UCARD

Monday-Friday: 9 am to 4 pm 545-3570

alumni

continued from page 1

campus.

"I think we really need to push to get the money allocated for bonding released so we can provide the infrastructure improvements that this type of teaching and student involvement deserves," Goodhue said.

In order for the University to get funding for deferred maintenance on campus, Goodhue said, the leadership of the state must be convinced of the academic excellence and worth of the University.

"We have to lay the groundwork for asking them to release the funds, so that we can make the physical surroundings equal to the faculty and students," Goodhue said. "I intend to write the Speaker of the House, the President of the Senate and the governor letters telling them what my experience has been this week and reinforcing my belief that this school is the best value for our tax dollar."

The most important thing, Goodhue said, is to impress upon the leadership the academic excellence that takes place on campus.

"I want to first tell them about how overwhelmed I am about the quality of the faculty and students," Goodhue said. "They don't always remember the quality of that experience."

Goodhue said that many of the students he talked to told him they "love it here," and that advocates of the school need to get that message out to the rest of the state.

"I kept hearing students tell me that they love it here," Goodhue said. "I love UMass, and it was obvious that most of them do, too. It made me feel pretty good."

Goodhue said he was "revitalized" in his role as advocate for the University by his visit to campus and his conversations with students, and wished the governor, Senate President and House Speaker accompanied him.

"My wish would be that the governor, speaker and president could have been with me these past two days," Goodhue said. "I think if they had been with me, they would have even more resolve to continue to support the University. They would know that they are doing the right thing."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Returning to our roots
Traditional Korean fan dancers performed at the Asian TeaHouse at Smith College on Saturday night.

nuclear

continued from page 1

lated by a government conducting an immoral war in Vietnam.

This good order has been reinstated, he said.

Artists, priests and writers keep to themselves while America quietly builds up its nuclear arsenal, and refuses to assist Russia in dismantling its arsenal.

Nuclear threat

"We claim we won the Cold War," Carroll said. "We didn't; [the Soviet citizens] decided they didn't want to see this world go down in flames."

According to Carroll, the nuclear problem is largely ignored, and the crisis is much more severe.

"It's disturbing to me that at a certain point we're taught by ourselves not to know what we know very well," he said.

He continued that he is afraid something awful will have to happen to get people to pay attention to the problem.

"In the years we should and could have dismantled nuclear arms, we didn't," Carroll said. "Since the cold war, we've quietly raced to become the dominant military power in the world."

He also said the nuclear threat has become worse than it had been because the Russian states have moved to rely on their nuclear arms, because their conventional forces and arms have been destroyed.

He compared the condition of the Russian nuclear arsenal with the space station Mir, saying both were in equally deteriorating shape, and that as a result the potential for horrible accidents was that much greater.

"A number of senators believe that helping the Soviets to disarm their warheads is helping the enemy," he said.

Yet, Carroll said, the Soviets, a people demonized by the American public, did the inconceivable and decided to dismantle [their government's] system.

"And they did it non-violently," he said.

Carroll said that a number of people in the Pentagon can't wait until there's a reestablished threat, because then they're back in the game of deterrence.

He described nuclear weapons as irrelevant to the peace process, and said that America's nuclear addiction could bring the threat of a nuclear war that much closer.

"If China develops nuclear ability, guess why?" he asked. "Because they saw us refuse to back down from ours."

He stressed the role of priests, artists and scribes to actively do something to remedy the situation.

"Our moral responsibility as church people, writers, and artists is to the public, or it is nothing," Carroll said.

He then switched gears, and admitted to the audience that nuclear disarmament was neither his nor the audience's highest priority.

"But guess whose it is?" he asked.

"On Feb. 12, Ash Wednesday of last year, Philip Berrigan and five others broke into the Bath Iron Works in Maine, to pour blood on the missile launcher of a new destroyer. A ritualized attack on the United States nuclear addiction."

Berrigan's lesson redux

Today at 10 a.m., thirty years to the day after pouring blood on the draft records in Baltimore, Berrigan is being sentenced.

"I confess I felt overwhelming sadness for the country, and worry for the aged Philip Berrigan," Carroll said.

Berrigan, who turns 74 next month, could face up to a 15 year sentence if convicted.

During his trial, Berrigan attempted to explain his actions to the jury, by referring to former General George Butler, one time head of the Strategic Air Command, who has sounded the alarm warning the world of nuclear winter since his retirement.

"Our preemptive nuclear arsenal keeps other nations armed and dangerous," Butler has said. "This has to stop, this must stop, this must be our highest priority."

Berrigan also referred to the world court in The Hague, which judged the possession of nuclear weapons a crime.

The judge, however, told the jury to disregard such testimony, Carroll said.

During the fall, winter and spring from 1967–68, the events, with all those heroes such as John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King, were not enough, Carroll said.

Nuclear war may have been prevented, but war was permitted, he said.

"History might praise us for not doing as much as we could've, but history will have to judge us for allowing an immoral and illegal war to go on," he said.

Now, in regards to Berrigan, whether or not he was a kook will be left to history. But in his actions during Vietnam, however, he was a hero, said Carroll.

In regards to nuclear weapons, Carroll said people are too complacent.

"The greatness of human beings is that our restlessness moves us to something; on nuclearism we're not restless, we should get more restless," he said.

He also said to students of UMass, that they should start to demand that leaders in the country pay attention to the crisis of the nation's nuclear addiction.

On Wednesday, October 29, a few of the others involved in the break-in at the Bath Iron Works will be sentenced.

"Students should go up there [to the courthouse in Cumberland County, Maine] and make themselves heard," he said.

Speaking on today's lack of public action, Carroll said that if the world is very lucky, nuclear weapons will never be used again.

"Those of us who preferred our studios and cloisters to the streets, if we are lucky, history will judge us generously too — those of us who chose to do nothing," he said.

Then he considered the alternative.

"If we are unlucky, survivors — if there are any — will wonder about our ideas of art and politics, church and state, the relationship of the academy and the world."

They will ask the question of us, what was the virtue of your writing, what was your moral responsibility.

Panel discusses diverse views on Jewish, non–Jewish intermarriage

Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Intermarriage between Jews and non–Jews will be addressed from various points of view at a panel discussion tonight.

At 7 p.m., the Hillel House will host the discussion as part of a series of panel debates called "Making Choices About Living, Loving and Dying."

Intermarriage is a paramount and complex issue for American Jews, who comprise approximately two percent of the nation's population. Panel members will discuss various social and cultural effects of intermarriage, and the various ways it can influence an individual's life.

Four panelists will participate in the discussion. Amy Leos Urbel, a family therapist and the mother of two children, has been a Jewish partner in marriage for the last 20 years.

Mark Leue, a Jewish ritual artist, converted to Judaism after 10 years of marriage and has three children.

Dan Deustch, a sophomore School of Management student will explain his reasons for deciding against intermarriage.

Jesse Pasackow, a freshman social thought and political economy major, will be discussing growing up as the product of an intermarriage. Pasackow, who was not originally scheduled to participate, said he expressed his interest in participating once he found out about the event because of the unique point of view he could present.

"I don't argue against it [intermarriage]," Pasackow said. "I'd like to marry a Jew, but love will be the underlying factor in what I decide," he said.

Pasackow's mother converted to Judaism seven years ago, and he says is more knowledgeable about the tradition than his father. He said a child of mixed parentage can be raised Jewish, it all depends on what the parents decide.

"I'm the product of an intermarriage and I am a Jew," he said.

This event is free and open to the public. The next event in the series will take place in the first week of November and will focus on questions regarding the environment.

Your Competitive Edge

The Elliott School offers career-oriented graduate programs in:

- International Affairs
- Science, Technology and Public Policy
- International Trade and Investment Policy

and 14 other specialized programs in our regional/professional fields

For more information, meet with an Elliott School representative at the James Madison University Graduate Fair in Phillips Hall Ballroom on October 9, from 11:00am - 3:00pm

or contact:
Elliott School of International Affairs
The George Washington University
2013 G Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20052
(202) 994-7050
e-mail: esiagrad@gwis2.circ.gwu.edu
Website: http://www.gwu.edu/~elliott/

The George Washington University

THE ELLIOTT SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

PERSPECTIVES ON INTERMARRIAGE

A PANEL DISCUSSION WITH:

- A MAN WHO CONVERTED TO JUDAISM AFTER INTERMARRYING
- A JEWISH WOMAN WHO IS INTERMARRIED.
- A STUDENT WHO HAS DECIDED TO MARRY ONLY A JEWISH PARTNER
- A STUDENT WHO GREW UP IN AN INTERMARRIED HOUSEHOLD

Hear different views that may be helpful in making your own choices. An open discussion will follow. Free

PROFESSIONAL GRADUATE TRAINING

Master's and Doctoral Degree Programs

Applied Psychology, Clinical Psychology, Education, Environmental Studies, Management

VISIT OUR BOOTH

AT THE FIVE-COLLEGE GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 10AM-3PM
UMASS-AMHERST, CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM

Antioch New England
GRADUATE SCHOOL
KEENE, NEW HAMPSHIRE 603.357.6265 admissions@antiochne.edu www.antiochne.edu

Votes are in — finally

Student turnout in last week's University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) election was increased from the semester's first failed election attempt. The turnout of approximately 2,400 students proves that UMass students have an interest in campus issues and want their voices heard.

Unsurprisingly, 92 percent of the voters were against a University ban on alcohol. However, this was not the only issue that the voters cared to express their opinions about. Ninety-four percent of the voters felt that legal council should be present in hearings that involve suspension, expulsion or eviction. This outcome, contrary to many media portrayals, shows that students think beyond "saving their beer."

A decided majority of students, 74 percent, voted against the installation of video cameras in residence hall lobbies — making it clear that students are wary of a potential "Big Brother" factor in their dorms.

Students voted that the SGA should support an Honors College, 68 percent to 32 percent. While the results show that a majority of the students support the Honors College, this question received the second smallest number of votes (2,352). This demonstrates that students do not have enough facts about the Honors College to make an informed decision.

The only question which received fewer votes was the question asking if the SGA president's term of office should be changed. The lack of information about and late addition of this question to the ballot resulted in the small response.

While these results paint an important picture about how students stand on major issues, the SGA did a poor job in conveying results. The vote was held last Wednesday, yet official results were not released until last night.

Given the poor response to the last election, SGA should have reported back to the students immediately, not four days after the fact. The semester is half over. SGA has finally heard the students' stance on the issues, now they need to act on their behalf — something they have not done as of yet this semester.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

Insufficient funds

"I regret to inform you..." That's how the letter began. Not exactly the type of opening someone likes to read. It always means bad news. The letter came from the United States Department of Defense Finance and Account Services. At least I knew that the subject was money before I even opened the letter.

Roderick Oreste

All the other students and citizens who are National Guardsmen and reservists have also probably received this letter if they applied for the Ready Reserve Mobilization Insurance Program (RRMIP). The letter's purpose was to inform all soldiers that the RRMIP was about to be cancelled the government claims it can't afford it anymore. This insurance plan was implemented during November of last year, so it was a relatively new insurance plan. If it had been offered by a company other than our own U.S. government, I would have immediately thought I'd been suckered into a money-making scam. But our government wouldn't do something as devious as that to a U.S. soldier — or would they?

Before anyone passes judgement on me or the government, allow me to recount the story of the RRMIP. As a member of the Massachusetts Army National Guard, I am required to attend a weekend drill every month. At the end of last year, rumors were floating around that my unit would be mobilized for Bosnia in the spring. Since we would be the first company in our battalion to be called to war, the company leaders told us it was a strong possibility. This created much excitement as well as anxiety among the troops.

Enter the U.S. government and the Department of Defense. While the rumor was still fresh, the other soldiers and I were introduced to the RRMIP. We were told by the RRMIP representative that under this outstanding new program we would pay a monthly minimum of $12.20. In the event that we were called to war, our government would pay us $1,000 for every month we were away from home. Of course, if we wanted to pay more, the insurance could cover us up to $5,000 a month.

"Wow!" I thought, "this seems too good to be true! Why are the reserves being offered this program?" Many reserves and National Guard members were mobilized for the Persian Gulf War and couldn't support their businesses or pay their bills. Many went bankrupt when they returned. RRMIP was geared to insure that this wouldn't happen again, I was told.

"I thought, 'Hmmm... I'm most likely going to Bosnia in the spring and a thousand dollars would be a definite plus.' I signed up right then. In fact, about 90 percent of the company signed up for the program that weekend."
--Roderick Oreste

I thought that was a legitimate reason — and it's good to know the government cares.

When another soldier asked the RRMIP representative if we could have a little time to think about it, the pushy salesman tried to close his sale. He said the program was to be implemented as soon as possible, and that this was our only chance to apply. We could always sign up now and cancel the program at any time if we decided against it. Payments could be automatically deducted from our bank accounts monthly.

I thought, "Hmmm... I'm most likely going to Bosnia in the spring and a thousand dollars would be a definite plus." I signed up right then. In fact, about 90 percent of the company signed up for the program that weekend.

It is now October, almost a year later. We were never mobilized. The letter I recently received states "I regret to inform you that your Mobilization Insurance will be cancelled due to insufficient funds." What about the reserve soldiers that were mobilized during this year? Their payments have been prorated to 5 percent. Five cents on the dollar?!

Instead of the thousands of dollars a month many soldiers at war think they're receiving, they are only getting $50 a month. I'd bet that most of them are not even aware of the cutback yet.

In the letter, the government promises make reimbursements once the funds are available, but there is no definite date. The soldiers will probably see extra payments once the national debt is paid off, which in a nutshell means never.

For the rest of the troops who were not sent to war, we, will receive nothing for the money we put in: the RRMIP will be cancelled at the end of the fiscal year. We are, however, supposed to keep making those payments until then. Who knows, the funds may miraculously become available again. The government would never mislead its soldiers and citizens, it was all just a miscalculation. It couldn't be another scandalous example of greed — or could it?

Roderick Oreste is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Public computing labs needed

To the Editor:

As a student at UMass, a prominent public university, I am appalled that there is not a single 24-hour computing lab on campus. I can't say that I'm aware of any other school which has the same sort of set up. Fortunately I have access to my own computer, but the majority of people that I know here don't, and their frustration with their lack of access to computing resources is clear.

There is simply no excuse not to have multiple 24-hour labs. I transferred this year from another large university which maintained over 10 separate 24-hour labs, all without consultants; this is quite possible.

Not only do I find it strange that UMass does not have this type of access, but I also find their user policy to be quite restrictive and unreasonable. Why, for example, must one sign into the BCRC? I've never written my real name down there. And why should I have to collect what I've printed through some consultant? This is totally ridiculous. There is no reason to set up barriers to technology that just serve to scare away those who might be skittish to begin with and consequently unwilling to utilize the resources at hand.

OIT has to take a look around them and realize that computers are for everyone and university students need as much access to them as possible.

Eli Slater
eos@student.umass.edu

Christians need to confront leadership

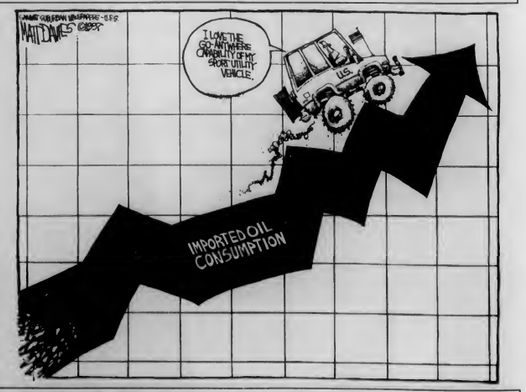
To the Editor:

Chris Sulham's editorial, "Playing devil's advocate" (Oct. 23) interested me. I wanted to ask him a couple of questions.

Mr. Sulham, did you speak to the leadership of the church after the service about your views and how you found the display to be offensive? I believe that if the leaders step out of line, you confront them. It instructs you in the New Testament, if you think someone is out of line, to prayfully and humbly ask them about it... and if they continue, you get together with others and confront that person in private again, etc.

What you described was a blatant lack of respect. No matter what the belief is that "Jesus Christ is the only way to God," it is not a Christlike example to put others on display, saying "hah! they went to hell!"

Only God knows where He has them, and it is not our place to pick out specific people as being hell-bound. God has defined an order and the way for us to be free from guilt and sin — and if we choose it, and keep His commandments, we have to collect what I've printed through some consultant? This is totally ridiculous. There is no reason to set up barriers to technology that just serve to scare away those who might be skittish to begin with and consequently unwilling to utilize the resources at hand.



Instead of distancing himself from the people everyone considered lost causes, sinful and dirty, Christ ate with them, talked with them, slept near them, and gave Himself to healing and teaching them.

It is the self-righteous ones — in His time, the Law-abiding Pharisees — that Christ condemned.

Rachel Smith Field

Your letters to the editor

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Write for a Point/Counterpoint!

The Collegian Editorial page will be running a point/counterpoint feature on the proposed Honors College. Articles must be well–written and researched. The deadline for submission is Wednesday, October 29, at 9 p.m.
Anyone who is interested should submit material by email (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices in the box of Ed/Op editor Dan Bodah.
Editorials must be 500–700 words long and include your name and phone number.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voklan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quint Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri- Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Amandla! The power of one million women

Two million strong, March powers women

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN
The women of the March came in droves to show their support for the cause at the Million Woman March

Two million strong, my black women. Yes, I know that the media does not want to convey how powerful this movement was. They were not ready for a million women to come together in a collective voice. They were not ready for black women to come together to denounce the negative ideology that has been placed on the black woman.

The voices were too strong and too loud to permeate within the outsiders who were looking in. But for those who participated in the March, a true story of unity and hope, showed this was only the beginning.

Before leaving for the march, 100 women from UMass stood in the South Side room for the casual social for the women who were going to attend. Men of the African diaspora sat quiet. Their efforts to show complete support were appreciated by all of the women.

The UMass women stood in the South Side room looking at each other. The looks, some frowns and smiles, glowed from faces that did not know what to expect.

Jealousy and bigotry were encouraged to have no place in the environment between the UMass women. Many women spoke of their skepticism of this utopic belief. Questions about whether or not one million women were going to be in attendance struck in their minds.

Realizing the March was not about the number of people that turned out, sisters reclaimed their reasoning for attending.

Whether Hispanic, African–American or Haitian, for once we were all sistas. Whether Christian, Muslim or of another religion, we would all come together in belief of a higher being. With heads bowed before taking our journey Dan Lizana, along with other brothers, gave prayers for the women to be inspired for the cause.

As the bus rolled off discussion began. Questions were asked. "Why can't sistas at UMass get together?"

"Why can't we say hi when we see each other, especially when there are so few of us?"

These types of questions that were being asked are the exact questions needed for a social movement. With a society that places black women so low on an economic and social scale, it's important to understand that in this society we were never given opportunity to work with each other. But in every way we were always given the chance to work against each other.

From issues as small as beauty, we were told how to define ourselves, from shades of color to texture of hair. Instead of embracing each other on an acceptance level, we try to see how much we can match up to this society's standard of beauty.

For too long instead of being called by our name, "black women," we have been given the nickname "Jezebel." As if we have no control over our sexuality or place in the economic or social arena, black women never acknowledged their definitions of beauty in their terms.

Internalizing the media's images of who we are, we got used to our nicknames. Traitor, cheater, flaunt, and lazy; just some to recall. This March is where we could begin to do what bell hooks calls, "Talk Back."

Elijah Muhammed's great words of wisdom were echoed by the many speakers who spoke in reference to the March. "When you teach a man, you teach an individual, when you teach a woman, you teach a nation."

For so long it was the Fannie Lou Hammers who kept the struggle during the '60s alive. It was Sojourner Truth, who voiced, "Ain't I A Woman."

Finally, for once in our generation, over one million women were called to attend a march that would attempt to embrace its black women.

"Manifest your power, your strength... to be able to stand liberated."
-Winnie Madikezel-Mandela

The arrival

Finally reaching Philadelphia safely, we had to go to the train terminal to get atop City Plaza where the March site was. The women waited in anticipation for the train to come. In the train terminal the echo of hundreds of women's voices transcended in the bus station.

On the way to the train terminal we began to change the words to "When the Saints Go Marching In" to our own version of "When the sisters go marching in."

The momentum kept growing stronger as we watched other busloads of women with their matching Million Women March t–shirts on.

Faces of all generations were present and a combination of struggles from women who came with different experiences appeared. Heads wrapped, sneakers and sweat clothes, the women were focused.

Though slightly perturbed by the pushing that was on the train only because of the amount of people, the women still managed to smile.

Arriving at City Plaza, where the sight was, the UMass women began to scream and voice chants that were related to woman upliftment. As our cheers rose, the many other women who were in attendance would take pictures or comment saying, "Right on, sistas." We were definitely ready to hear the speakers.

The walk that would lead us to the main platform was half an hour due to the thousands of people that were in attendance.

City Plaza

With no room to move women stood in awe at the number of women present. With hairstyles that aren't enough to be in Essence magazine, women of all decors were surrounded by each other.

Once reaching the site, there were women holding flags that represented all islands. Yet the focal point was not one of just unity. It was important that these guest speakers spoke of real issues.

With so many women in attendance, the process of the actually moving and leaving the million packed crowd, to some, took away from concentration.

Some women expressed the attitudes that some sisters had as they tried to move up into the crowd to hear the guest speakers. Other women were distracted by brothers who every five minutes tried to sell Million Women March paraphanalia or get a number from a female. If one could get past these distractions, then one could get the important issues that were addressed at this March.

The women are empowered

Tynetta Muhammed, wife of Islam founder Elijah Muhammed, said. "Free yourselves of the need for man's approval and society to agree with you."

At this comment the thousands of women held fists in the air and yelled in agreement. The words of wisdom questions and solutions to complicated issues were given by many other guest speakers that were present.

How to be responsible to ourselves was one of the main issues addressed. The fact of defining ourselves in a manner that we are proud of was one of the key points.

As a nation of black women, we were reminded of the divine spirit that carried our nation for generations. We were defined as the core creator of God's universe. We were defined as the queens of Mother Earth.

With a young generation of women, Sister Souljah expressed to the women that not the only way that women could gain control of themselves.

"As a nation of black women, we were reminded of the divine spirit that carried our nation for generations. We were defined as the core creator of God's universe. We were defined as the queens of Mother Earth."
Allana E. Toddman

While others gave true statements, Tynetta Muhammed spoke of what it would take to have a mind that would transcend our personal desires for internal change to occur.

She said that it was imperative to have the thinking that God would have. With this type of thinking, Muhammed stated that we would be able to resist the types of things that God would.

The prayer for patience was given and women heard the difference between patience and mere acceptance. Other prayers were given in regards for women to take their place in business, education and political arenas.

To love ourselves, each other and then our black man was the order in which advice was given to empower ourselves. To be secure in our beauty and place in society, is to become secure in the relationships we have with our black man.

Ladies, some day we hope to get married and to have well balanced, stable relationships. Before this can happen we need to learn how to balance our lives: our health, spirituality and goals. We need to learn how to set our own goals and agendas. The guest speakers offered many other solutions.

In an effort to break the same repeated patterns of destruction by using the "victim" mentality, women were urged to educate themselves.

Jada Pinkett had a voice that was loud and echoed over the million women. She yelled, "Black women read!"

Silenced concerns about the black women were raised by well known Congresswoman Maxine Waters. Waters addressed issues of health and low pay rates for the African American women. Saying that we need to "collect our intellect," Waters urged women to take their place to stop the "old boy networkism" that takes place in the economic world today.

Keeping the spirit of the march alive, Faith Evans sang the well know gospel hymn "His Eye is on the Sparrow."

'Amandla'

Later in the course of the day, the long anticipated key note speaker was ready to speak. Winnie Madikizel–Mandela said, "To the women of the United States, to African– American women, I say Amandla!"

This is the same word that Madikizel–Mandela used in her struggle in South Africa. With her husband Nelson Mandela being taken to prison, Winnie Madikizel–Mandela took on the battle herself. Being tortured and taken to prison so much, she packed her books and placed them on a shelf near her bed expecting the white regime to take her.

Madikizel–Mandela addressed the African–American women saying that it was the inner strength and power that allowed her to survive. She closed saying "Manifest your power, your strength... to be able to stand liberated."

Not a quick solution for a generation of silenced problems over one million women gathered in Philadelphia. This March is only the beginning. The self evaluations we make of ourselves and contributions we make by educating our peers and communities will determine how much impact we have made.

To all my sisters, "Amandla."

Allana E. Toddman is a Collegian columnist.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN
Power!
Sistas holdin' it down at the Million Woman March, united and strong.

Along the color line: Struggling to pay the rent

The majority of all African–American families are renters, not homeowners. Most people with low incomes — racial minorities and the unemployed — are always confronted with the difficult challenge of finding decent housing which they can afford. Increasingly, for millions of Americans — black, Latino, Asian and white alike — that challenge has become an "impossible dream."

A recently released study by the National Low Income Housing Coalition, which represents a broad spectrum of housing advocacy groups, fully documents this growing problem. The study observed: "Housing costs, for most people, represent the largest monthly expense. Most people pay their rent first, buying food, clothing and health care with what remains."

The report used an index developed by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to estimate the cost of decent but modest housing in cities and states throughout the U.S. The study found that in almost every state "more than 30 percent of renters paid more than they could afford for one–bedroom apartments and more than 40 percent did so for two–bedroom apartments."

Not surprisingly, housing conditions were worse in major urban centers and in states with high concentrations of low income working class and unemployed people, such as New York. The study found that 48 percent of all renters in New York State were unable to afford the estimated fair market rent for a one–bedroom apartment, $687, and 54 percent were unable to afford a two–bedroom rent, $796.

The report estimated that New York renters would have to earn wages exceeding $13.22 and hour to afford a one–bedroom apartment, and $15.32 an hour to afford a two–bedroom apartment.

"We need to devote a greater share of national resources to guarantee that clean, basic shelter is considered an inalienable right."
Dr. Manning Marable

Even these dire statistics fail to capture the vast social consequences of the housing crisis. Hundreds of families in New York City, largely black and Latino, live doubled or tripled up with their relatives, friends and neighbors. Crowded housing conditions push poor families frequently into unsafe or unsanitary conditions, threatening the health and welfare of their children. Youngsters who have no space for homework and study are less competitive when they go to school. The lack of adequate shelter directly contributes to domestic violence and spousal abuse.

What are the solutions to the housing crisis? Conservatives who say that the federal government should get out of the housing business, and let the marketplace determine the availability and cost of shelter by the laws of supply and demand, are just wrong. The private sector overall has little interest In constructing millions of new housing units for people of modest means. Luxury condominiums and shopping malls have larger profit margins. We need to devote a greater share of national resources to guarantee that clean, basic shelter is considered an inalienable right. No one should be homeless or poorly housed, in a land of vast material affluence.

But the real solution to the housing crisis can only be achieved by raising all incomes to meet the cost of basic human needs. In short, you can't pay the rent if you don't have a job, or if the job you have doesn't earn enough for you to pay your monthly bills, including rent.

According to the research of the New York based National Jobs for All Coalition, as of 1996 there were nearly 17 million adults working full–time, year–round jobs, who were earning less than the poverty levels for a family of four. Another 4.3 million workers have part–time jobs, but aren't able to get full–time positions. Adding to these millions of Americans are the displaced former recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The draconian 1996 Welfare Bill hurled a million children into poverty, and coerced hundreds of thousands of women into workfare programs and low wage jobs that don't pay enough to afford decent shelter.

Building more affordable housing is helpful, but not enough. Only when all Americans have a real living wage or a guaranteed income if they are unable to work, will all of us be able to pay the rent.

Dr. Manning Marable is Professor of History and Director of the Institute for Research in African–American Studies at Columbia University. New York City. "Along the Color Line" is distributed free of charge and regularly appears in over 325 black and progressive publications worldwide.

Guitar quartet wows Bowker

LAGQ interprets musical traditions from around the world

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

LOS ANGELES GUITAR QUARTET
Bowker Auditorium
Oct. 24

Spanning several continents, the Los Angeles Guitar Quartet brought its interpretations of the musical traditions of many cultures to campus last Thursday night.

During the program, the ensemble played songs which were either composed in or influenced by Spain, Scotland, Indonesia, Eastern Europe, Africa and Latin America. Following the performance the quartet participated in a talk back, where they fielded questions from the audience.

Discarding the traditional classical garb of tuxedos, the LAGQ — as they are popularly known — arrived in earth tone vests and slacks on this stop of a tour which will take them as far as Japan. The group members are all classically schooled musicians and several of them hold teaching certifications. The quartet consists of John Dearman, William Kanegiser, Scott Tennant and Andrew York.

The evening began with selections from El Armor Brujo, by Manuel de Falla. After a brief pause for tuning, which the ensemble had to do quite frequently throughout the evening, they slid into a piece called Passage, composed by York.

"There are some elements of rock in this piece. We're trying to incorporate more modern things into classical style," York said.

LAGQ then played several more pieces and incorporated them into a Latin quartet. The tone during these pieces fluctuated from soft and melodic to furious and up-tempo. This was the only point in the concert where another instrument was used, a small wooden panpipe which added to the mystique of Andean imagery to the segment.

The group began the second half of the show with a piece called Gongan, composed by Kanegiser. Kanegiser said the piece was inspired by a traditional Indonesian dance festival which they attended several years ago. The piece involved the application of alligator clips and bells to the guitar strings in order to replicate the gong sounds of the festival.

"We did this piece first [following the intermission] because we had to put all this stuff on the guitars," York said.

LAGQ then played Bantu, and Mbira, two pieces they had composed based on traditional African drumming. They used hand drumming techniques against the guitar to produce the beats necessary for the transition. They also played Jewish Klezmir music, a Scottish folk song, and selections from the Carmen Suite.

During the talk back session, the group discussed their philosophies for repertoire during performance.

"What it comes down to, there is a little bit of fear in playing new music," Dearman said. "We do a lot of new stuff, but it all has a familiar, an inviting sort of sound. It's a trick to add new pieces to the repertoire."

The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers to cover books, music, arts and more. If you're interested, come and talk to Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor or call 545-1491.

The skinny on the November sweeps

Well, there is good news for "Days of Our Lives" fans... NBC has confirmed that Jason Brooks (Peter) will be returning to the show for anywhere between six months to a year. Brooks left the show last year to pursue other projects (a guest spot on "Friends," a cheesy USA movie of the week, etc). What made him change his mind? Sources say the actor was offered a deal he couldn't refuse, including an extremely intriguing storyline and an out in his contract, should a more interesting role come his way. With Stefano becoming a humanitarian and all, maybe Peter can pick up the slack and raise some hell in Salem. Word is, he'll be doing just that as he tries to reclaim Jen's love... through any means possible. I can't wait to see him back in action because this little affair between Jack and Jen has become oh so boring.

Speaking of "Days"... I can't believe I'm going to admit this but "Days" almost moved me to tears last week (usually it's hysterics). In what was an extremely moving scene, not to mention well written (another shocking praise), Roman had a heart to heart with his mother, Alice, trying to make her come to terms with his imminent death. Bravo to the writers, for adding some semblance of tragedy to the three ring circus that "Days" has become.

A few more quick notes: absolutely love Mike and Carrie (why won't the writers wake up and realize that these two are hot). For once, I'm actually rooting for Sami, although she's still an annoying witch. Please honey, Austin isn't that much of a prize. It's time to find yourself a new man, preferably one with a personality.

What the hell is Franco trying to say? And more importantly, who cares?

Whether you love it or hate it, "Young and the Restless" has struck gold with the whole Nina ordeal. This is drama at its best. In case you haven't been following the show, Nina, distraught over the possibility of losing Ryan, pulled a gun on Tricia (the other woman in Ryan's life). Ryan walked in and tried to dissuade her from shooting Tricia. She then turned the gun on herself. Ryan tried to wrestle the gun from her, the gun went off and Nina was hit. He sat there holding her in his arms until the EMTs showed up. The whole scene was an extremely powerful one and all three actors definitely deserve props for their performances, especially Tricia Cast (Nina). Geez, I tell ya, the women of daytime seem to be losing it. Psychotic is the persona of choice lately.

As much as I enjoy the storyline, it's a shame that it has to come at Nina's expense (she's physically okay but her character's been somewhat tainted). If "Y&R" is trying to justify the sleazy little affair between Ryan and Tricia with this stunt, it's not working. Anglicizing Tricia (who my friend, Randi, thinks is nothing more than an annoying twit) isn't working either.

Ah, November sweeps is finally upon us. This is the time when the networks and their respective soap operas pull out all the stops to try and lure viewers. Whether it be torrid affairs, nuptials, murder, blackmail or a little possession by the devil, here are some of the rumored happenings (according to the Web).

Guiding Light: Look for all hell to break loose between Dinah and Cassie as the two lock horns this Wednesday. Dinah's not giving up Hart without a fight!

Bold and the Beautiful: Sheila's beginning to catch on to James' scheme to win back Mary. I hope Sheila nails the jerk.

Young and the Restless: Diane has a fit when she finds out who encouraged Victor to have a vasectomy. Nina has some shocking news for Ryan.

Sunset Beach: Gregory discovers Olivia's duplicity. Olivia, Cole and Caitlin stare death in the face. Who will come out alive?

General Hospital: Carly's scheme(s) begin to unravel. Rumor has it, Bobbie may discover the truth about Carly sooner than you think. Liz shows her more vulnerable side to Lucky (didn't know she had one).

All My Children: Liza discovers Adam's connection to Corview. Could this be the end of Pine Valley's most interesting duo?

As the World Turns: Molly resorts to drastic and possibly fatal measures to win back Holden.

Port Charles: Dr. Devlin's wife comes to PC with an ax to grind. Scotty loses custody of Serena.

One Life To Live: Dorian takes steps to ensure that the "truth" will never come out. Will Max and Blair give in to their desires?

Another World: Jake and Vicky take the next step, as far as their relationship is concerned, while Shane continues to fight for Vicky's affections.

Days of Our Lives: Bo and Hope rekindle the magic. Susan lets Stefano have it. Will John make it to Salem before Roman and Marlena tie the knot?

I've decided to add a little something call the "sink or swim" list to the column every week. The list includes happenings within the soaps (and the industry itself) that I think are either cool (swim) or that bite (sink). I'd love to hear from you guys on this too so if you have any opinions, either way, please feel free to email me, etc. I could always use your help.

Swim: Max and Blair rekindling the fire (these two sizzle). Llanview, watch out, these two will stop at nothing to get what they want.

• Molly on "ATWT." You know what they say about a woman scorned... Lesli Sterling has been incredible.

• Skye's dilemma on "AMC," especially now that Dimitri is on to her.

• Carly vs. Bobbie on "GH" (the fight last week). Never a dull moment with these two.

• The new Joey on "OLTL." Can't imagine why you hired this one. It must be because he's... such a good actor.

Sink: Sarah on "GH." Get off your high-horse. You bore me, I only hope you don't rub off on Nik.

• Tim coming between Trevor and Janet on "AMC." Get your own life loser.

• Bashing Eve on "PC." Note to Karen, why don't you give the woman a break. You've certainly had your fair share of them.

• Marlena playing the role of the unselfish heroine on "Days." She's willing to marry Roman to appease his dying wish. How noble...makes me want to vomit.

Jacob Fanning is a UMass student.

Series belongs to Florida after 3-2 Game 7 win

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

MIAMI — Edgar Renteria ended one of the most thrilling Game 7s ever, singling home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Florida Marlins their first World Series championship with a 3-2 win over the Cleveland Indians last night.

The 5-year-old Marlins became the youngest expansion team to win a championship, while adding more heartbreak to the nearly half-century of disappointment for the Indians.

The Marlins, masters of the late-inning comeback, tied it at 2-2 in the ninth on Craig Counsell's sacrifice fly and then took advantage of second baseman Tony Fernandez's error to score the winning run. This marked just the fourth time in history that a Game 7 had gone to extra innings.

A see-saw Series finished with the teams alternating wins for all seven games. Devoid of drama for the first six games, Game 7 packed an entire season's worth of thrills into one night that kept getting better as the clock passed midnight.

Jay Powell pitched one inning for the victory. Charles Nagy, passed over in favor of rookie Jaret Wright for the Game 7 start, lost in relief.

Florida pitcher Livan Hernandez became just the second rookie to win the Series MVP award, joining Larry Sherry of Los Angeles in 1959. The trophy was even more special for the 22-year-old Hernandez, who Games 1 and 5, because his mother was allowed by Cuban officials to visit the United States for the final game.

Marlins manager Jim Leyland celebrated his first trip to the Series, watching the wild-card Marlins win after spending nearly $100 million during the winter to bolster a team that had never had a winning record.

Indians manager Mike Hargrove found no joy on his 48th birthday. Born a year after the Indians' last title in 1948, his club added another heartbreak to a city that has only known losing for too long. It was their second World Series loss in three years. Cleveland relief ace Jose Mesa was just a double play grounder away from clinching the championship in the ninth, but Counsell tied it with a deep fly to right.

Bobby Bonilla, one of Florida's high-priced free agents, singled to start the 11th against Nagy. One out later, Counsell hit a grounder to the right side and Bonilla may have screened Fernandez, racing to third when the ball rolled past the second baseman's glove.

Visions of Bill Buckner's misplay in the 1986 Series stirred as the Indians intentionally walked Jim Eisenreich to load the bases. Devon White grounded into a force play at the plate before Renteria lined an 0-1 pitch past Nagy for the victory.

The Marlins raced on to the field in triumph while Indians first baseman Jim Thome crouched alone in front of the mound.

Pack starts Pats' uphill battle

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Monday night football. Super Bowl rematch. Green Bay Packers vs. New England Patriots. And no World Series to take away some of the national television audience.

It's a major spectacle and a big challenge for two teams with problems that could foil their high expectations. But no matter who wins tonight, tomorrow morning both teams will still have half the season to play.

"I don't think this game will have a whole lot of outcome on who goes to the Super Bowl," Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre said. "We could still lose this game and win the rest of them and have homefield advantage [in the playoffs] as can New England." Both teams are 5-2, but New England faces a tougher schedule. Six of its eight opponents after tonight have winning records, while only two of Green Bay's last eight games are against teams over .500.

The Patriots current stretch of four road games in five weeks — with the NFL champion Packers their only home opponent — is critical. They lost the first one 24-19 at the New York Jets, then visit Minnesota, Buffalo and Tampa Bay the next three weeks.

"It's the hardest thing in pro sports to win in an away game in pro football," New England tackle Bruce Armstrong said. "We're coming off a loss and, as a team, we can't wait to get back out there and sort of redeem ourselves."

The Patriots other loss also came on the road, a 34-13 setback in Denver that spoiled their 4-0 start at the expense of mostly weak competition. New England and Miami, which plays Chicago tonight, share first place in the AFC East, a half-game ahead of the Jets (5-3).

"It's those that come back and sustain the level of play that wind up on top at the end," New England coach Pete Carroll said. "And that's what we have to find our way to do."

The Patriots struggled in the second half of both losses. Six penalties in the third quarter helped Denver stretch a 14-13 halftime lead, and a defense that couldn't keep backup Glenn Foley from completing 14 consecutive passes for the Jets squandered a 12-3 lead.

"When we started out the season, we knew it was going to be a long road," Patriots guard Todd Rucci said. "We didn't think we were going to come out and be perfect on every Sunday. We struggled at times and we're trying to pick up and correct the mistakes."

The Packers, beset by injuries, have had problems, too. Their run defense has been weak, they have just one rushing touchdown and only one win was by more than six points.

"We expect to win by a larger margin," strong safety LeRoy Butler said. "Sometimes it makes you lose confidence because you're shocked at people running up and down the field on you and you're supposed to be a great defense."

■ Lowell

continued from page 10

Lowell zone, dished off to MacKinnon who was rushing down the right side, with the junior forward scoring on a backhander for the 1-0 lead.

After Koehler tied the game at the 2:59 mark, the No. 1 line reacquainted themselves with River Hawk goalie Martin Fillion. Lovell once again penetrated the center of the Lowell zone, and MacKinnon found some free space to beat Fillion top shelf to his stick side for the 2-1 lead at the 8:08 mark of the period.

Blanchard teamed up with Lovell 4:19 later, with the two penalty killers forechecking with a vengeance, and after his first short-handed scoring opportunity, Lovell converted on his second try for the 3-1 lead.

However, consecutive penalties for UMass brought about freshman forward Kyle Kidney's power play goal at the 16:49 mark, and a 3-2 lead for UMass going into the second period.

The second period signaled the return of the Minutemen's chief nemesis — the penalty — and three goals for Lowell to push the game up to 5-3. Sophomore forward John Campbell converted on the first of two power play goals in the period at the 5:27 mark on an assist from junior Anthony Cappelletti.

Koehler finished off his hat trick with the second and third River Hawk goals of the second frame, and UMass senior defenseman Tom O'Connor's goal with :51 left in the third period brought the game to 5-4. However, O'Connor failed to control the ensuing faceoff, and junior forward Shannon Basaraba scored the empty netter for the final of 6-4.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

playing with added intensity.

"It was definitely tough," senior captain Jennifer Gutzman said, after falling to the Huskies by the same score three years in a row. "There's a lot of emotion because they're such a big rival. I'm from Connecticut, too. I guess that's a bit ironic."

Although the rivalry with the Huskies means a great deal to Shea, who was the UMass goalkeeper in the first NCAA National Championship against UConn in 1982, the first- year coach offered a calming perspective of her team's defeat.

"It's just another game," she said. "You need to take the names out of it, or it can be paralysis by analysis. We take care of the first 10 minutes of the game, and we're fine."

Hoping to rebound from their tiring defeat, the Minutewomen will host Dartmouth on Wednesday.

■ soccer

continued from page 10

keeper and into the back of the net.

Fowler then came up big down the stretch with a pair of saves before the fireworks which occurred in the final two minutes.

La Salle defender Graham Walker hit the turf hard with a knee injury with 1:45 to play, screaming in obvious pain. The whistle was blown and a scuffle ensued with punches thrown. Castma was pointed out as the man who threw the punches, and was given a red card and a subsequent ejection.

And while La Salle was still complaining as play resumed, they never bothered to double team Butler, who headed a bounce pass from Paul Corcoran over the goal line for the game-winner.

"It was unfortunate that we didn't put the game away in the first 15 minutes," Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch said. "When they scored the goal they brought their level of play up. That was a credit to them. But we played hard the whole game and I was pleased with the whole team, which is a credit to us."

"We knew that we needed to win today if we wanted to keep our playoff hopes alive," Butler said. "We fought hard and played with intensity, and now we're in the best position that we could have put ourselves in."

UMass is in such good position to make the A-10 playoffs because of Sunday's win as well as a 3-0 blanking of Fordham on Friday afternoon at Totman.

Marc Saad, Seth Lilburn and James Redmond each scored a goal and Fowler had three saves in recording his third shutout of the season.

Koch was quick to praise his defense as well, mainly Brad Kurowski, Steve Jones, and Carmelo Garcia, who held John Wolyniec, the nation's leading scorer, pointless on the afternoon.

"Brad Kurowski was the man of the match on Friday," Koch said. "He marked the leading scorer in the nation all day with the help of Steve and Pie for double and triple teams. It got so bad for [Wolyniec] that at one point he yelled 'I just can't do anything today.'"

Saad opened the scoring at 58:23 after a scoreless first half. Lilburn and Redmond would then tack on a pair of insurance goals late in the contest to put it away for UMass.

UMass is currently atop the A-10 with a 7-4 record, but has finished its conference schedule already. Most of the other teams in the conference still have two or three games left to play. Nevertheless, it appears that the Minutemen will be one of the four teams playing in Philadelphia on November 7-9.

"We won't know until next weekend probably if we are in or not," Koch said. "Now we'll go to California to play Cal- State Fullerton and UCLA to see where we are as a program. It should be a good tune-up for us."

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Senior Mike Butler became UMass' all-time leading scorer with his game winner yesterday against La Salle.

■ conference

continued from page 10

goals, 12 assists, 34 points) scored her fifth game-winning goal of the season at the 43:51 mark of the first half against La Salle, on an assist from junior forward Sophie Lecot (12–3–29).

Lecot made a run down the right flank to the end line, and crossed the ball to the far post with Green heading in the eventual game winner.

The five saves Napoli had to make in the match were all of the important variety, and the Explorers had two near misses to start the second half, with one shot hitting the crossbar. But Green put any comeback bid out of reach on a collision with keeper Erin Lenox, who was called with the foul in the penalty area.

On the ensuing penalty kick, sophomore forward Emma Kurowski scored her 12th goal of the season (32 points) for the 2–0 lead. Kurowski added her eighth assist of the season on a corner kick at the 67:30 mark, with senior defender Erica Iverson heading in her seventh goal of the season to make the match 3–0.

Senior defender Amy Burrill made her return to the UMass lineup this weekend after injuring her knee at Temple on Oct. 5, and factored into the final goal of the match. A long serve into the penalty area by Burrill deflected right to sophomore forward Kate Webb, who easily knocked in the fourth and final goal of the match.

On Friday, the duo of Green and Kurowski struck again, scoring both goals for the Minutewomen in their 2–0 win over Fordham. Kurowski scored her fourth game–winning goal of the season as the 32:27 mark, collecting a loose ball and beat keeper Kim Kasper inside of the left post.

On the next shot of the match, Green pulled a Kurowski and also collected a loose ball in the penalty area, scoring the goal from 10 yards out at the 40:40 mark to make the final score of 2–0.

UMass will return to action at 4 p.m. this Friday against No. 22 Clemson, as it travels to Athens, Ga. for two matches in the University of Georgia Tournament. The Minutewomen will face Georgia on Sunday at 1 p.m.

JOHNA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Senior Amy Burrill returned to the line–up this weekend, helping the Minutewomen improve to 15–2, 11–0 in A–10 play.

LIFT YOUR SPIRITS!
Regency Hairstylists
184 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526
JBK

amc
There is a Difference!
$2.50 (Tue-Lite) Show Daily
• Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Gattaca (PG-13)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
Playing God (R)
Today at 8:20
The Full Monty (R)
Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:30
I know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Rocketman (PG)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at 8:20
A Life Less Ordinary (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
In and Out (PG-13)
Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at 5:10 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:30
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 5:10 ($2.50)

Quest
is Here!
Tuesday
October 28
7:00 P.M.
Room 224, Greenough (in Central)
QUEST is a weekly Bible Study open to all UMASS Amherst students. The setting is informal, the program real and relevant, and Free coffee and Sugar Jones' cookies are served the entire meeting time.
YOU'VE BEEN SEARCHING.....
•For Answers
•For Open Discussion
•For Friends
Give QUEST a try and YOU decide if you want to join us again.
FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT QUEST, EMAIL JESSICA AT jlsachs@student.umass.edu (QUEST IS SPONSORED BY THE BAPTIST CONVENTION OF NEW ENGLAND)

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE
• Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
• Full Selection of genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
• Fine Selection of new and used cars & trucks.
• Ask about our FREE 18 point maintenance check
PAIGE'S Chevrolet Amherst Geo
DICKINSON ST • BETWEEN RT 9 & MAIN ST • 253-3444

The Collegian.
Everyday.

Auto Glass Center
Amherst & Forest
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Graduate studies are the best prescription for career advancement.
The Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.
You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Bouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's finest medical research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as a full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the late afternoon and early evening.
For more information, call Mary Beth at (617) 373-2718 or fax (617) 373-4701 or write Graduate School, Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Sciences Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115.
ATTEND OUR OPEN HOUSE
Saturday, November 1st, 9:00 - 12:00 pm, 3rd Floor, Curry Student Center
Graduate Programs and Degrees
Counseling Psychology, Rehabilitation and Special Education:
Master of Science
• Applied Behavior Analysis
• Applied Educational Psychology
School Counseling
School Psychology
• Rehabilitation Counseling
• College Student Development & Counseling
Master of Science in Counseling Psychology
Master of Science in Education
• Intensive Special Needs
• Special Needs
Certificate in Early Intervention
Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Communication Disorders
Master of Science
• Audiology
• Speech-Language Pathology
Certificate in Early Intervention
Health Professions
Master of Science
• Clinical Exercise Physiology
• Perfusion Technology
Master of Health Professions
• General Option
• Health Policy
• Physician Assistant (previous admission PA Certificate program required)
• Regulatory Toxicology
Biomedical Science
Master of Science
• General Biomedical Science with specializations in Pharmaceutics, Toxicology and General
• Medical Laboratory Science
• Medicinal Chemistry
• Pharmacology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Biomedical Science with specializations in Medical Laboratory Science, Medicinal Chemistry, Pharmaceutics, Pharmacology, Toxicology, Immunobiology
Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Northeastern University

KAI CHI
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
$2 HALF TIME BUFFET

GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY
Important Reminder
Membership Deadline
November 1st
If you have any questions, please call 545-2684

SKI Snowboard & more $229
College Ski Weeks '98
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
55 SLOPES...Walk to Lifts from the condos
23 Black Diamonds, Scenic Blue Ice & Moguls
1-800-848-9545

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Video Game and System Rentals
All Rentals $3.00 / night
The best DVDs are released!
Buy / Sell / Trade Games & Systems
Call us at 549-4505

HAMPDEN, FRANKLIN AND WORCESTER CONVENIENCE STORES
OCTOBER SPECIALS
VIDEO RENTALS
MONDAYS AND TUESDAYS
$1.00 Off
PEPPERIDGE FARM COOKIES
REGULARLY $2.49
NOW $1.99
Famous Amos Cookies
Regularly $2.99
Now $1.99
Bart's Ice Cream
Flavor of the Month
1 pint $2.19

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4114
La Cucina di
PINOCCHIO
of Amherst 30 Boltwood
#1 Delivery in Town
Monday Night Football Special!!
1 Large Cheese Pizza $6.95
PLUS
10 Free Buffalo Wings
Must Mention Ad When Ordering!
Any Large 1 Topping $7.50
Any Calzone $4.00
Delivery Only. Not Valid in Resteraunt
Offer Expires 5/31/98

NBA
RETURNS TO SPRINGFIELD!
See Some Of Today's Newest NBA Players:
★Marcus Camby ★Kerry Kittles ★Tracy McGrady
★Damon Stoudamire ★Keith Van Horn
MONDAY • OCTOBER 27, 1997 • 7:30 PM
1997 NBA HALL OF FAME GAME
TORONTO RAPTORS VS NEW JERSEY NETS
Ticket Prices: $25 • $15 (Children under 12)
*Limited VIP Seating Available
SPONSORED BY Advocate 102
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
For Tickets Call The Box Office (413) 787-6600 or 1(800) 639-0600
TicketMaster (413) 733-2500 or (617) 931-2000
Group Sales: Call (413) 787-6610, ext. 241
Marcus Camby

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Visit New York Law School on your campus! Law School Fair, [10/29/97]. Come pick up on application and speak to an Admissions Counselor. Visit our website at : www.nyls.edu

ATTENTION STUDENTS
Appia Computers will be presenting at the Campus Center today, 10am-5pm. Come check out the latest operating system from Apple and some of the newest, fastest Powerbook and desktop systems available. A Systems Engineer will be on hand to answer your questions. Cool computers, nice reps., and your questions answered all in one place. Not bad, huh? Hope to see you there. Sincerely, Dan Stra, Your Apple Representative

ATTENTION FACULTY
Appia Computers will be presenting at the Campus Center today, 10am-5pm. Present will be your new Account Executive (AE) and a Systems Engineer (SE). As your new AE, I am inviting you to stop by and meet me or if you have a technical concern, to stop by and speak to our SE. See you then. Sincerely, Dan Stra, Apple AE

AUTO FOR SALE

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

85 Mazda RX7 Good shape. $1000 or Best Offer. 549-5172

1990 Nissan Sentra 4 speed, 2 door, 35-40 miles per gallon, 172,000 miles. $950. 585-5041 after 6pm.

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Administrator with good typing, organizational, and PR skills. Contact 549-3613

Personal Care Attendant for weekend morning. $7.85/hour. Call 546-0666

Human Services- Want to make a difference in someone's life? Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma, driver's license and a true interest in helping people. Call 323-6872 to start application process. AA/EOE

HELP WANTED
Hadley Office has several part-time positions available. Department hours 10am-2pm Monday through Friday and 4pm-9pm Monday through Friday.
- On busline
- Flexible schedule
- Positive atmosphere
- No experience required
- $6.00 hour to start
- Daily, weekly and monthly bonuses

Call 584-0215
10am to 4pm for interview

EMPLOYMENT

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED
for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst
Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0 COLLEGE NEWS

VIRGIN RECORDS COLLEGE REP POSITION
Get music industry experience as our local College Rep! P/T paid position, 10 hrs/week. Please fax resume and cover letter to Elizabeth Gruenewald at 310-288-2433. Soph or Jr with car preferred. Previous music industry experience a plus!

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

Mongoose Bika For Sale Large. $240 or B/O. Call 549-6926

Elton John 4 excellent seats. 11/5. (516)867-7392

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

Good Quality Full-Sized Futon and Black Metal Frame. $150 or B/O. 665-0332

COMPUTERS!
New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

8 Millimeter Camera at Fine Arts Center Bus Stop on 10/23. Call 253-7695

LOST

LOST- GLASSES green case. Lost on 10/21. If found please call 549-6909

Lost: Watch with a brown wristband. Swiss Army Watch. Please call 546-3344

Watch: Gold-colored copper band; square shaped. Lost in or around Chadbourne or Upper Central Area on Sunday, October 12, around noon. If found please contact Barry at 546-7246. Reward will be offered! Thank You!

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK
Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

Availabla Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call 256-3442. Don't Miss Out! Harlow Properties

Housamata Wanted $220-270/month. 548-7972

Bedroom for rent in house. On Shumway Street. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call 253-9410

Available Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call Dave @ 256-3442. Don't Miss Out!!

ROOMMATE WANTED

RFemala Roommates Wanted Boulders Apts. Amherst. On busline. 259-2995

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS
Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign-up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call 1(888)SPRING BREAK Today!

TRAVEL

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!!
Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicuraan Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplash-tours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

FREQUENCY DISCOUNTS

The following discounts are contingent upon consecutive repetition.

RUNS	DISCOUNT
5 RUNS	5%
10 RUNS	10%
15 RUNS	15%
20 RUNS	20%
25 RUNS	25%
30 RUNS	30%
EVERY DAY FOR ONE SEMESTER...	35%

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals, ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals..this means dorm room numbers as well
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identities and/or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 20

Discussion — Perspectives on intermarriage, a panel discussion, the first in the series "Making Choices about Loving, Living, and Dying" at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Discussion — Incarcerated Revolutionary Leaders lecture and discussion on imprisoned revolutionary leaders and revolutionary leadership in prisons at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

TUESDAY, OCT. 21

Book Signing/Lecture — Doctors Lynn Zimmer and John P. Morgan, authors of Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson, room 106. Sponsored by the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition.

Colloquium — Susan Grant Rosen, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from Union Theological Seminary, will give a Colloquium entitled "Student Protestantism and the College Woman" at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Discussion — Discussion entitled "Shut Down the Control Units at Marion Prison" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Info-Social — The Pride Alliance will be holding an info- social at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 802. Come share your ideas and socialize. For more information, call the office at 545-0154, email lbga@stuaf.umass.edu or stop by the office in the Student Union, room 413B.

Meeting — The Index (UMass yearbook) is holding its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordkian at 545-0848.

Meeting — University Democrats is having a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 22

Dance — Israeli folk dancing at 8:30 p.m. in Bowditch. Learn new dances or request old ones. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Film — "With Intent to Harm" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Support Group — The Health Education Division at University Health Services sponsors a Tobacco Cessation Support Group from 7–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 801. Come get peer support, professional counseling, proven quit tips and advice. Just drop by or call 577-5181 for more information.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is December 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406E or just bring the artwork by.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
16	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
28	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

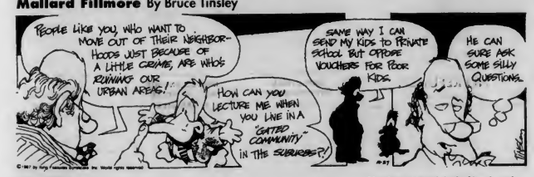
TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 27, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		World of Wonder		Full Circle		Marathon Monks of Mount Hiei		Hershey Park: Sweet Memories
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Cosby	Raymond	Cybill	George & Leo	Where Are They Now?		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Raymond	Cybill	George & Leo	Where Are They Now?		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Patriots Pre-Game		NFL Football: Green Bay Packers at New England Patriots. (In Stereo Live)
WLVI	6	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	7th Heaven "Halloween" (R)		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier (R)	Fired Up	Caroline	Sudden-Susan	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	(6) Married... With	Cheers	Judg'e Judy	Judge Judy	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks	News	Greco Under	Vibe
WVIT	9	(9) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Frasier (R)	Fired Up	Caroline	Sudden-Susan	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(11) Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "The Promise"		News		Simpsons	Babylon 5
WWLP	57	(22) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier (R)	Fired Up	Caroline	Sudden-Susan	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	(6) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Full Circle		Stephen Hawking's Universe		Adventurers		News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	(28) News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	TBA	N.E. Patriots	NFL Football: Green Bay Packers at New England Patriots. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK	38		Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Good News	Sparks	News	M*A*S*H	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	42		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach		"Narrow Margin" (1990, Suspense) Gene Hackman				"Desperate Hours" (1990, Drama) Mickey Rourke
A&E	45		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Family Values"	Biography: Gonna Vanderbilt		Poirot "Triangle at Rhodes"		Miss Marple (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order "Breeder"
CNN	46	(27) WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	53	(36) 1 Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Blazing Saddles" (1974, Comedy) Cleavon Little				Unauthorized	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	48	Wings "The Killer Bee" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wolves at Our Door		Ultimate Guide: Dogs (R)		Real ER (R)		Justice Files "Kidnapped" (R)
ESPN	51	Up Close	Sportscenter		NFL Prime Monday			Figure Skating: Professional Legends Championships.		Cheerleading		Sportscenter
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"In My Daughter's Name" (1992, Drama) Donna Mills				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	52	MTV Live	Viewers	Sports	TBA	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	All-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Oddville, MTV	Lowline (R)
NICK	44	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Teal	Newhart
SCIFI	50	Twilight Zone		Time Trax "The Cure" (R)		Seaquest 2032 (In Stereo)		"Fright Night" (1985, Horror) Chris Sarandon				Time Trax "The Cure" (R)
TLC	47	(29) Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Extreme Machines		UFOs and Alien Encounters		Mythical Beasts and Monsters		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	45	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark: Superwomen		WCW Nitro (In Stereo Live)				WCW Nitro (R) (In Stereo)
USA	43	Baywatch (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings "Soul Kiss"
HBO	60	(4:30) "Racing"	"Mr. Mom" (1983) Michael Keaton. "PG"			"Twister" (1996, Drama) Helen Hunt. (In Stereo) "PG-13"				"Sabrina" (1995, Comedy) Harrison Ford. (In Stereo) "PG"
MAX	61	(5:00)	"In the Line of Duty: Street War" (1992, Drama)			"Ricochet" (1991, Suspense) Denzel Washington. "R"				"Friday the 13th" (1980) Betsy Palmer. "R"		"A Time to Kill"
SHOW	59	(4:30)	"Airplane!" (1980) Robert Hays. "PG"			Stargate SG-1 "Horus" (R)				"Scream" (1996, Drama) Jennifer Ellis. (In Stereo) "R"		"Lone Star" (1996) "R"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



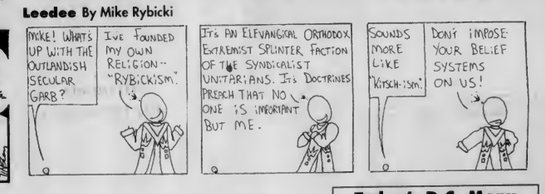
8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Sven By Stephen Higgins

University² By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You should be able to make a project your own today, simply by forging ahead while listening carefully to that inner voice of yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You will be lucky to make some connections today which have eluded others, and they may result in an important revelation late in the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may be expecting the worst today but you still must progress as if you are confident that success is within reach.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Protection and security are on your mind today, and home affairs may demand a little more attention as a result. Concentrate on that hunch.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may be temporarily confused about the status of a key relationship at this time. Today, you'll have a chance to clear the air.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Heed the warnings of others who have been in the position in which you find yourself today. Your instincts may not be keen enough right now.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You are facing a new challenge at home, and the complexity may be magnified by your unwillingness to say what you mean the first time.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Your preoccupation with finances may presage some bad news on the horizon, but you can avoid a major crisis by remaining conservative.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You have a good deal of hard work to do, but first you must be willing to let someone else show you how to begin. You need a little more experience.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Someone may go back on a promise today, but though you are initially disappointed you'll realize that you're really much better off.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Someone will be ready to open up to you in a new way today, so you'll want to be receptive to him or her. Do not be defensive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — A good deal of discussion will be necessary before you can plot a positive course for yourself and those under your care.

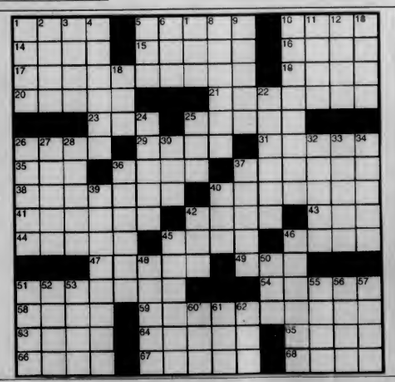
Quote of the Day

"Shut up!!!!!"

–Andy Kauffman, Intergernder wrestling champion.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Barry does his trick of clenching all his muscles at once and getting his I.V. bag to expand.



ACROSS
1 Fictional captain
5 — of the ball
10 Loosen
14 "Tonight Show" host
15 Bay window
16 Actress Deborah —
17 Boston baked beans go-with 19 Russian river
20 Kriss Kringle
21 Earth science
23 "— too late now!"
25 Bag
26 Type of squad
29 Gardening aid
31 Site
35 Savings-plan info.
36 Sedimentary material
37 Small quake
38 Lush greenery
40 Suppose
41 Aim
42 Donkey's sound
43 Dry, as wine
44 Ocean waters
45 Utters
46 Try out
47 Relaxes
49 Garden tool
51 School employee
54 Catch
58 Tell —
59 Legislator's delaying tactic
63 Field mouse
64 Swiftly
65 Sicilian volcano
66 Filled with reverence
67 Repaired a seam
68 Dell loaves

DOWN
1 Priests' robes
2 Wife of Zeus
3 Pretty soon
4 Tuxedo accessory
5 Choreographer Fosse
6 Blunder
7 It could be white
8 — of Nations
9 Church official
10 Luau instruments
11 Roman emperor
12 Pull along
13 Pans airport
18 — King Cole
22 Fish hawk
24 Unisex garment
25 Calif. hrs
26 Graphic
27 Singer Cara
28 A la —
30 Bullfight cheer
32 Make laugh
33 Arrives
34 Build
36 Famous Strip
37 Rubbish
39 Needy
40 Use a crowbar
42 — -relief
45 U.S. flag feature
46 More on edge
48 Couches
50 Buckeyes' sch.
51 Starbucks' purchase
52 State positively
53 Egypt's river
55 Legal eagle: abbr.
56 Painter Magritte
57 Time periods
60 Ordinance
61 Rapper — -T
62 Flower plot

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	P	A	D	E		B	E	T	A		A	B	B	A
L	O	G	A	N		A	P	E		W	E	L	D
A	D	E		A	R	O		A	S	I	A
G	R	E	E	N	T	H	U	M	B		R	O	M	P
		D	U	E	L		E	X	E	M	P	T
E	L	D	E	S	T		E	L	S	E
M	A	I	L		O	T	T	O		N	E	W	T	S
I	M	P	L	O	S	E		N	I	A	G	A	R	A
L	A	S	E	R		E	K	E	D		G	L	O	W
		C	A	M	E		A	S	S	E	T	S
U	P	R	O	A	R		E	C	H	O
B	L	I	P		B	A	L	L	O	F	F
O	A	S	T		O	T	T	O		T	I	B	I	A
A	T	T	E	E		R	A	N	T		E	V	I	L
T	E	N	D		S	I	G	H		R	E	S	E	T

10-27-97 © 1997 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Italian Sausage Grinder
Pizza
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Beef Stroganoff
Tofu Fajita
Stuffed Shells

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Seafood Salad
Ziti/Italian Sausage Sauce
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
N.E. Lite Style Cod
Tofu Fajita

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Boy house in effect
Italian Sausage Grinder
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Beef Stroganoff

Berkshire
LUNCH
Pizza
chef's Pizza
Hamburger
Ziti/sauce
DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Chicken Fajita
Tofu Fajita
Stuffed Shells

Today's Collegian

Night Editor	Casey Kane
Photo Technician	Yvonne Yang
Copy Editor	Erin Murphy
Production Supervisor	Jocelyn Burrows
Production Staff	Matt Wolover

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, October 27, 1997 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Massachusetts blown out by Delaware, 40–9

TYANG YO / COLLEGIAN

Delaware quarterback Brian Ginn points his way to a first down in the first half of Saturday's 40–9 Blue Hen win. Delaware passed for 350 yards on the day.

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

In a season filled with tough home losses, this was by far the toughest.

Though the struggling Massachusetts football team acknowledged that there wasn't much it could do to stop the high powered attack of No. 4 Delaware on Saturday, the end result, and its ramifications, was still tough to swallow.

Delaware	40
Massachusetts	9

Delaware was never seriously threatened, as it built a 23–6 lead at halftime and cruised in the second half, drubbing the Minutemen 40–9 before 5,317 rain–soaked fans. UMass is now 2–6 — 1–3 at home — and has assured itself its first losing record since 1994. The Minutemen will need to win two of their final three games to avoid their worst season since 1987.

The 31–point defeat is the worst loss at home since a 54– 10 loss to Holy Cross in 1987, and comes on the heels of a season–opening 21–6 home loss to Richmond and a 28–10 defeat to rival New Hampshire at McGuirk on Oct. 4.

The Blue Hens, considered one of the premier I–AA teams in the nation, dominated every phase of the game Saturday. They gained 636 yards, including 350 passing yards. They out rushed UMass 286–92 and controlled the ball for 37:18. Delaware improves to 7–1, and trails only undefeated Villanova for the inaugural Atlantic 10 football conference title.

"They executed as well as they can," Hodges said. "When a team comes in as balanced as Delaware, that's as difficult as it gets. We got beat by a very good football team today. They should be in the [Division I–AA] playoffs."

Halfway through the second quarter, UMass trailed Delaware only 9–6. After a long UD drive to open the game netted only a field goal, UMass stopped the Blue Hens at the Massachusetts 1–yard line to keep the score 3–0. But UMass couldn't move the ball, and Delaware increased the lead to 9–0 when quarterback Brian Ginn found talented wide–out Courtney Batts for an 18–yard touchdown pass.

The Minutemen scored their only touchdown on a seven– play, 67–yard drive in which freshman standout Marcel Shipp racked up 56 total yards. Senior quarterback Anthony Catterton hit Shipp for a 31–yard pass on a critical third–and–eight, and Shipp ended the drive with a pretty 25–yard touchdown run.

But Delaware outscored UMass 31–3 over the rest of the game, including 14 points in the last 2:43 of the first half. Batts made the second of three touchdowns on the day a memorable one, snagging an 85–yard touchdown from Ginn to make it 16–6. On the ensuing UMass drive, UD very confident offensively in the things that they do, and they don't make many mistakes."

Delaware is one of the last teams in America to run the Wing–T offense, a complicated scheme that emphasizes the running game. But Batts gained 178 yards receiving, and Ginn went 14–of–20 for 286 yards, with two touchdowns and no interceptions.

"They could run any offense they want [and be successful]," Hodges said. "They have very good athletes, and they played very well."

A–10 Notes: Boston University has announced that it is dropping its football program after the 1997 season, citing cost and lack of fan interest. UMass will play the Terriers for the last time on Nov. 8 at Nickerson Field in Boston. BU is 0–7 this season, and 1–17 over the past two seasons... After losing to No. 1 Villanova 35–25 in September, Delaware put itself behind the Wildcats for the A–10 title and the automatic berth in the NCAA playoffs. "We looked at [Saturday's game versus UMass] as a challenge to our national ranking," Delaware coach Tubby Raymond said. "If Villanova keeps winning, we have to be the next best team, and keep winning. Good teams blossom at this time of year."... The Yankee Conference (now the A–10) placed three teams in the playoffs last season — Villanova, Delaware and William and Mary.

Butler breaks scoring mark; UM positions for A-10 spot

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

For Mike Butler and the Massachusetts men's soccer team, Senior Day at Totman Field turned out to be a day to remember.

Butler scored two goals, including the game–winner with 1:33 left in regulation to propel the Minutemen (11–5–1, 7–4 in Atlantic 10) to a 2–1 victory over La Salle on Sunday afternoon. With the two goals, Butler is now the all–time leading scorer in Massachusetts men's soccer history with 94 points.

UMass	2
La Salle	1

"I was kind of oblivious to it [breaking the record] all year long," Butler said. "The thing that is most important to me is winning and trying to reach the A–10 championship."

The Minutemen got off to a high–flying start in the opening 15 minutes. Butler and fellow senior Joenal Castma each had numerous opportunities to put UMass on top early, but were denied.

After that opening flurry the action was relatively slow– paced on both ends through a scoreless first half. It wasn't until early in the second stanza when the Explorers jumped on top of the Minutemen. Senior midfielder Cesidio Colasante pounced on a loose ball in the box and ripped a shot past Todd Fowler for a 1–0 La Salle lead.

UMass appeared to be nervous and impatient as the half progressed. However, things looked up after a La Salle defender was called for a hand–ball in the box, giving the hosts a free kick.

Lady luck was on the side of La Salle during the kick, as the seemingly always reliable Butler fired a shot over the goal's top left corner and out of play, keeping the game 1–0 in favor of La Salle.

UMass	3
Fordham	0

But that luck ran out for the visitors later in the half, as Todd Baron intercepted a La Salle clearing attempt and threaded a perfect pass to Butler, who rifled a low liner past the Explorers'

Turn to SOCCER, page 7

UM finishes A-10 play 11-0, its best conference mark ever

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

The quest for perfection can be considered one of the most conceited, self–flagellating, inane and inept aspects of the human psyche... except in certain circumstances.

With this weekend's sweep of La Salle and Fordham, the No. 13 Massachusetts women's soccer team accomplished just that for the first time in the Atlantic 10 conference — perfection.

UMass	4
La Salle	0

Sunday's 4–0 win over the Explorers in Philadelphia, and Friday's 2–0 win over the Lady Rams in Brooklyn, N.Y., signified the first time that an A–10 team has swept its regular season slate since the 11–match schedule was created.

UMass	2
Fordham	0

The Minutewomen's 11–0 conference record (15–2 overall) sets the mark for the most regular season wins in the conference's young history, and the team has now outscored its A–10 competition this season by a remarkable 47–5 margin.

On an individual note, sophomore goalkeeper Angie Napoli continued her shutout streak, extending it to 12 straight matches.

Battling difficult playing conditions against La Salle due to the weather, UMass met one other challenge with success, and one indirect challenge, but with an equal amount of success. Two seasons ago, the Minutewomen lost their first ever A–10 match to Temple — a 1–0 disaster that still rocks the team to this day.

The indirect challenge was the fact that the team stayed in the Holiday Inn, Fort Washington this past weekend. Yes, the same hotel they stayed in during their loss to Temple, and now the team has a 1–1 record staying at that hotel.

A telling stat, and a telling story, if there ever was one.

Not at a loss for telling any kind of story, UMass coach Jim Rudy was pleased with his team's performance in less than desirable conditions, and playing surfaces.

"We're real happy to win in tough conditions — sloppy, wet and miserable," Rudy said. "We survived two trips to two hard fields to play on, and with this being the first year of an 11–game schedule [in the A–10], our challenge was to sweep, and we did."

Freshman forward Kara Green (11

Turn to CONFERENCE, page 7

Hockey drops opener to Lowell

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

NORTH BILLERICA — Old habits die hard... with a vengeance.

Such was the case for the Massachusetts hockey team last Friday night, travelling to Tully Forum to face Lowell in its season opener. Jumping out to a 3–1 lead against the River Hawks (1–0, 1–0 in Hockey East), the fast start for the Minutemen (0–1, 0–1 HE) became mired in a historical tendency to commit too many penalties.

UMass Lowell	6
Massachusetts	4

Four unanswered goals, helped by three power play tallies and a hat trick by last season's HF Rookie of the Year Greg Koehler, pushed Lowell to the 6–4 win over UMass, giving the River Hawks temporary vengeance for their second consecutive Alumni Cup loss last season.

The Minutemen travelled to Tully last Feb. 8 to take the Cup — which is awarded to the winner of the season series between the two sister campuses — in a 6–4 win themselves. However, a reversal of fortune resulted in this game, and the Minutemen are now left to wonder what could have been in this rematch.

A four–point performance by senior co–captain Tim Lovell (one goal, 3 assists), and a three–point night by junior forward Steve MacKinnon (2g, 1a) were to no avail, and now the team has to look forward to Friday night's game at Boston University (7 p.m.), and Sunday afternoon's home opener against Boston College (2 p.m.) for justification.

For UMass coach Joe Mallen, the faults in his team's game in this loss can be worked on in practice, but the plus of the night was the play of his No. 1 line in Lovell, MacKinnon and sophomore Jeff Blanchard.

"This was a great Hockey East game, and it just taught us that we can't take anything for granted," Mallen said. "We came back with a strong third period, and sure, the penalties hurt us, but that is something we can fix. Our failure to clear the puck is what hurt us the most.

"Tonight, Tim Lovell proved that he is one of the best forwards in the league, and all and all, I saw some good things out there tonight."

The Lovell era — as the forward made his regular season debut for the Minutemen in this game — began quickly for UMass, and with only :43 gone in the first period, he set up the first goal of the game.

Lovell rushed into the center of the Turn to LOWELL, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Senior goalie Brian Regan made 22 saves Friday night, but Lowell beat UMass 6–4 in the season opener at Tully Forum.

Minutewomen lose to UConn, 2-1

By Aaron M. Saykin
Collegian Staff

Despite a dominating performance to close the game, the Massachusetts field hockey team was unable to overcome an early 2–0 deficit, as it fell to border–state rival Connecticut, 2–1, Saturday at Richard F. Garber Field.

Despite the cold air and the wet turf conditions, the Huskies (12–5) were able to explode for a scoring surge just 3:21 into the contest, as sophomore Nicole Castonguay blasted Wendy Hohmann's penalty–corner pass into the back of the goal.

UMass	2
UConn	1

Fifteen minutes later, Hohmann notched her second assist of the game when Katie Stephens lifted her shot over outstretched UMass goalie Zowie Tucker.

"I think we came out and we were hesitant in the first 10 minutes, and that's why we lost the game," Massachusetts coach Patty Shea said after watching her team battle back from an early–game stupor. "That's where we've been hurt all season."

With the rivalry hype brewing all week, and the extra faces on hand to witness the pre–game dedication to their new AstroTurf stadium and halftime ceremonies celebrating former UMass star Kyle Rothenberger's achievements, it comes as no surprise that the distractions may have caused the Minutewomen's focus to stray in the opening moments of the contest.

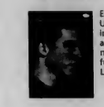
A sluggish effort is not uncharacteristic of the 1997 UMass squad, which found itself playing from a 1–0 deficit last weekend before romping Atlantic 10 opponent La Salle 6–1.

After their hesitant start, the Minutewomen (9–8, 3–0 A– 10) battled back, as they narrowed the gap to 2–1 before the half, when junior forward Erica Johnston scored the game's third penalty corner goal and shifted the momentum back to UMass, which controlled the tempo for the remainder of the contest. But UMass was unable to beat UConn netminder Danielle Vile, who collected three incredible second–half saves to hold–off the Minutewomen rally.

"Their goalkeeping was very good," Shea said of Vile's impressive performance. "We needed to go around her, but since we were down, we went straight at her, and she played really well."

As neighboring–state adversaries, members of both teams look forward to the annual rivalry, and always

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 7



THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Former Minutewoman field hockey All–American Kyle Rothenberger (on right) receives the 1997 NCAA UMass Woman of the Year Award before Saturday's game against UConn.

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 39 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Tuesday, October 28, 1997

A brave new world

Ethan Hawke and Uma Thurman star in a disturbing film about genetic engineering in the future (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Doug knows...

Two sport athlete junior Doug Clark proves why he shines on both the football and basebail fields (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

England's Rolls-Royce up for sale yesterday

LONDON, England (AP) —Rolls-Royce, builder of rolling palaces for the unabashedly rich, was put up for sale yesterday — perhaps destined to be a prestigious sideline for one of the world's major automakers. Rolls-Royce has made cars for monarchs, oil sheiks and movie stars. It crafted a Phantom V in psychedelic paint for John Lennon and two cars for Lenin, the former Soviet leader. It made the Silver Wraith that took Grace Kelly to her wedding with Prince Rainier and the hearse that carried Princess Diana's body home for burial.

Apart from its size and massive radiator grill, a Rolls-Royce is instantly identified by "the Spirit of Ecstasy," the sinuous female figure adorning the hood.

Vickers PLC, which acquired Rolls-Royce in 1979, said it was selling to concentrate on building tanks, howitzers, propulsion systems and Cosworth engines.

NATION

Clinton signs rent subsidy legislation

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — No longer will the government enable Newark, N.J., landlords to receive $1,032 for an apartment that ordinarily would rent for $784, or Providence, R.I., landlords to take in $956 for a unit they otherwise could rent for only $625.

President Clinton is signing legislation to rein in the rent subsidies the Department of Housing and Urban Development pays on apartments occupied by 850,000 low-income tenants across the country.

At the same time, however, the spending bill for veterans, housing and environmental programs will allow many landlords to refinance their mortgages at lower rates to help them weather the drop in rental income.

"You just can't reduce the rents on some of these buildings without refinancing," HUD Secretary Andrew Cuomo said in an interview. "I believe the American people want to provide affordable housing, but they want to do it in an efficient, effective way and they don't want to be ripped off."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 37	HIGH: 53 LOW: 37	HIGH: 46 LOW: 32

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Marriage and the Jewish faith; a panel discussion of life choice

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Last night's intermarriage discussion panelists, from left to right, were Amy Leos Urbel, Dan Deustch, Jesse Pasackow, and Mark Leue.

By Bryan Schwartzman
Collegian Staff

Last night approximately 35 students and community members of multiple religious and ethnic backgrounds gathered for a panel discussion on one of the most important choices one can make, whether or not to inter–marry.

Four panelists spoke at the first event in a series called, "Making choices on living, loving, dying.." The audience widened the topics to include: the Holocaust's relationship to Jewish consciousness, race relations and the acceptance of Jewish converts and the differences and similarities between Zionist culture and Jewish spirituality.

"There is an element of risk [on the part of the panelists] in putting one's life experience on the line," Hillel Executive Director Saul Perlmutter, who introduced the panelists said. Perlmutter said that 52 percent of American Jews are involved in an intermarriage.

The first panelist to speak was Amy Leos Urbel, a family therapist and the mother of two children, both of whom are active participants in the Jewish community. She has been in Jewish partner in a non–Jewish marriage for the last 30 years.

Urbel said that marrying a Polish–Catholic connected her to another culture (she did not advocate marriage for this reason) and forced her to re–examine what it meant to be Jewish. She said that whether or not one marries a Jew is not the most important question for an American Jew, it is what is one's relationship to the spirituality and the traditions.

"In choosing a life partner one cannot make any assumptions... don't offer choices to your children [of mixed parentage regarding religions] that you're not ready to make," Urbel said.

Mark Leue was raised as a secular Christian, converted to Judaism after 10 years of marriage and has three children with a Jewish wife. In his early 20's, Leue discovered that his grandmother was born Jewish, but was forced to convert to Christianity in Germany. He said although he was confused at the time, it opened up a door for him later in life to explore Judaism and overcome his distrust of organized religion.

"The beauty and joy of Jewish ritual seeped into my soul," he said.

"With regard to the survival of our people, I guess I'm against intermarriage, but then where does that leave me?" Leue said.

The other members of the panel were UMass students, sophomore School of Management (SOM) major Dan Deutch, and freshman social thought and political economy major Jesse Pasackow.

Deutch, who grew up in a religious household and was active in Jewish youth groups said he could not imagine his children growing up without those experiences, so he could never inter–marry. Pasackow, who is the product of an inter– marriage, said he would prefer to marry a Jew but that love would be the ultimate factor.

The discussion continued for over a half an hour once the panelist concluded. Marc Reissman, a senior communications major said his parents were Jewish and Christian and that he and his siblings were given a choice with regard to religion.

"[The most important things is] did you receive love and morals?" he said.

Amrish Dias, a freshman computer science major said he is looking to become more involved with his girlfriend's life but her grandparents won't accept him because he is not white.

"Judaism is interesting, jugemental, fascinating, and confusing," Amherst resident Howard Singer said.

GEO action against admin; bargaining for new contract

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) has taken extensive action within the past two weeks in bargaining for a new contract with the University of Massachusetts administration.

GEO formed the STOMP (Strategy to Organize Membership Participation) letter–writing campaign and since Oct. 15, various groups of graduate students from different academic departments have been marching, with letters in hand, to Chancellor David K. Scott's office expressing their concerns for acquiring a new contract.

Although the STOMP campaign officially began almost two weeks ago, GEO has been bargaining for a new contract for over 20 months and has been working without a contract for 15 months.

GEO's four main issues, included in their proposal for a new contract, incorporate better wages, expanded health care options other than University Health Services (UHS), increased options for child care and more affirmative action, leading to a more healthy campus diversity.

The administration has yet to budge.

"Most grad students are in school for two to three years," Sangeeta Rao, GEO Secretary, said. "We've been bargaining for over 20 months. By the time we get a contract, we'll be out of here."

GEO's main concern of earning better wages led to a review of teaching assistants' salaries at UMass, compared to those at other state universities.

The organization found UMass Teaching Assistants (TA's) are paid significantly less than TA's at other schools. The current TA salary on campus stands at $6,990 a year, while TA's at the University of Connecticut are paid between $12,000 –$13,000 a year. UMass TA's are also being paid below the poverty level for one person in Massachusetts, which is less than $7,340 a year.

GEO's demands are basic and simple, according to Rao, who says working under the old contract doesn't allow for "good grad students."

"We feel devalued and not respected because the University is making more money than ever before," Rao said. "Our work suffers because we often have to take on two jobs. It doesn't allow us to be good graduate students."

On the health care issue, GEO members say they hope to have more options for health care providers.

"You can pretty much forget about teeth and eyes as long as you're in grad school," Rao said.

Aside from marches to Whitmore and letters to the Chancellor, GEO said people need to realize the battle for a new contract is not just an excuse to blow off steam and get some recognition.

"One important message to get out is this is not just a group of people in GEO concerned about the issues," Mahmood Ketabchi, GEO President said.

GEO's lack of a new contract affects the larger community, he said, especially when teaching assistants are not being paid the money they deserve.

"If you have a grad TA and he has to go out and find a [second] job at Stop and Shop, you wonder how much he can really focus on teaching and his [school] work," Ketabchi said.

A higher stipend for teaching assistants can benefit the University because it allows for more qualified graduate employees, Ketabchi said.

GEO doesn't expect to get any immediate response from the administration right now, Ketabchi said, but at this point they are hoping to get as many people involved in the campaign as possible.

"We don't know when we'll get a new contract," Ketabchi said. "But we're determined and working around the clock to make it happen."

IBM makes Russian sales

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C.— The Clinton administration is investigating the unauthorized sale of advanced computers to Russia, concerned that they may have been used in Russia's nuclear weapons program. The Department spokesman, James P. Rubin said yesterday. The government had rejected permission for the sale, but according to a report in The New York Times 16 IBM computers were secretly provided to a Russian nuclear weapons factory by a Moscow company.

The investigation is being conducted by the Commerce Department and the Customs Service under Justice Department supervision, Rubin said.

An IBM spokesman, Fred McNeese, said IBM had cooperated with the investigation from the outset and was trying to locate and recover any computers shipped to Russia.

In fact, he said, "when an overseas reseller refused to cooperate in those efforts we terminated our relationship" while IBM continues its efforts to recover the computers.

"IBM has earned an excellent reputation for its efforts to comply with U.S. export controls and intends to maintain that hard–earned reputation," McNeese said by telephone from company headquarters in Armonk, N.Y.

Under U.S. policy, the high–performance computers require validated licenses for export to military and nuclear

Turn to SALES, page 2

Women unite for National Day of Action

By Kelly Parent
Collegian Correspondent

"The fire will not consume us, we will take it and make it our own," the women on stage cried as they consumed the flames on their burning sticks to symbolize an internalized power and strength.

These women were part of the activities consisting of music sung with feminist themes, speakers and booths which educated women on related issues last Thursday evening.

The activities began at 4 p.m. on the Amherst Common where approximately 100 women braved the cold and gathered together for National Women's Day of Action.

The Day of Action was started five years ago to commemorate the death of Rosie Jimenez, a 26–year–old woman who died from an illegal "back–alley" abortion in October 1977 after Congress passed the Hyde Amendment, which is still in effect today, denying federal Medicaid funding for abortions. The abortion was performed with a Foley Catheter, a long rubber tube, that was unsterilized which caused Jimenez to contract an infection that resulted in her death.

"Some of us can't afford to pay for abortions, or we can't tell our parents for fear of getting beaten or we are afraid because we are so young. They made us feel ashamed of choosing ourselves first," Marisa Howard, rally co–organizer said.

Howard, a senior at Smith College, said the goal of the rally was to move the focus of reproductive rights away from just being an abortion issue to making women see how larger issues such as racism, access to contraception, education and poverty are all connected together.

Representatives from the Everywomen's Center, Student Labor Action Coalition, MassPIRG and Family Planning Center were present at the rally.

Leslie Laurie, Executive Director of the Western Massachusetts Family Planning Centers explained the importance of sexual education and the fact that so much money is spent by Congress on "abstinence only education," which is unrealistic.

"It is imperative that all of us do act," Laurie said.

Smiley Arroyo, an outreach worker from Holyoke, spoke of the apathy with which she is treated by the system.

"The system never helped me and I pay a high price for who I am. My main issue is how lesbians are not counted," Arroyo, who is a lesbian with HIV said.

Other issues addressed at the rally were welfare reform, domestic violence, lesbian, gay, bisexual rights, equality in the workplace. Speakers also tried to raise global awareness of sweatshops across the country that are utilized by companies such as Nike, and Guess where in Haiti women workers make as little 30 cents an hour.

"If we truly care about women's rights, we have to talk about all women," Elizabeth Kennedy, a junior from Smith College, said.

"We hope to promote an awareness that young women are active and dedicated to the future of women," Smith College senior Crystal Dougherty said.

Rallliers later marched through downtown Amherst to fraternity row using a bullhorn to chant, " Women's bodies, women's lives, we will not be victimized."

The march ended at Haigis Mall where a circle was formed on the green for a candle light vigil ending in a moment of silence.

Election victor keeps eye on Argentina's Peronists

By Ian Phillips
Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — She took on the ruling Peronists on their turf and routed them in unprecedented style. Now Graciela Fernandez Meijide says it's time to turn the heat on their "frivolity, complicity and corruption."

That straight-talking stylè led Mrs. Fernandez Meijide's center-left coalition to victory over President Carlos Menem's Peronist Party in congressional elections Sunday — the Peronists' first nationwide defeat as the governing party in their 51-year history.

Mrs. Fernandez Meijide, 66, is a former French teacher who was driven into politics by the disappearance of her 17-year-old son during Argentina's "dirty war." She now is being tipped as a candidate for the presidency in 1999.

The two parties that make up her Alliance coalition — the Civic Radical Union and the left-leaning Frepaso — beat the Peronists nationwide 46 percent to 36 percent Sunday.

In Buenos Aires province, a long-time Peronist stronghold that is home to 40 percent of the electorate, Mrs. Fernandez Meijide beat the ruling party by 7 percentage points. In the capital itself, The Alliance crushed the Peronists by almost 40 percentage points. Mrs. Fernandez Meijide said the Alliance's victory was "a warning to the government, the start of a new system of checks and balances and the building of a new alternative" to old-style politics.

Under Menem's leadership since 1989, the Peronists have transformed "Argentina's economy but they also have been dogged by sleaze. Former Economy Minister Domingo Cavallo, architect of many of Argentina's free market reforms, has accused the government of graft and manipulating judges to protect organized crime.

Lucrative business opportunities in Argentina's new, dynamic economy

Turn to ELECTIONS, page 2

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Shall we dance?

In the elegant Totman Gymnasium, freshman undeclared major Marianka Madey and computer science graduate student Jeremy Pickens practice for a competition at Harvard University with the UMass Ballroom Dancing club.

Amherst marks namesake's anniversary: mixed feelings, "military hero or monster"

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

AMHERST— At the august college bearing his name in the town named in his honor, the bicentennial of Jeffery Amherst's death is passing with little public notice — and a hint of shame. Once revered for making the American colonies safe for settlers, the British general now is widely reviled as a pioneer of germ warfare for his efforts to infect Indians with deadly smallpox. He remains a figure of profound ambivalence, reflecting the complicated historical relations of this nation with its motherland and native people.

Amherst College, which once set out to celebrate the bicentennial, is instead marking it discreetly in an outlying wing of its Mead Art Museum with an exhibition called "The Cult of Lord Jeff." Acting Museum Director Jill Meredith calls it an attempt to expose both poles of his myth — each perhaps exaggerated — as a "military hero or monster."

Beside portraits and writings of Amherst the historical figure, the exhibition juxtaposes a featureless clay figure evoking an Indian covered by a canvas blanket marked "smallpox" in military lettering.

"He's a sad footnote because he represents everything that I think is contrary to why I'm here to educate myself," said sophomore Alexis Salas, a Spanish major from Los Angeles, at the exhibition recently. "I'd like to think that through my education, I'd bring some positive change to the world."

But Raymond D. Gozzi, a retired English professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and a graduate of Amherst College, recalled the relief he felt as an American soldier when the atomic bomb ended World War II. He said Amherst, like President Truman, was "a man of his time doing probably what we would do." Still, it is a very different New England community and college that have evolved since the bombing of Hiroshima. Other places around the country have changed in similar ways, but few had as much tradition to slog past in reaching ethnic heterogeneity, the politics of diversity, and political correctness.

Founded in 1759, this town was named for Gen. Amherst one year after his great victory over the French at Louisbourg, on the northeastern reaches of North America. The next year, he consolidated British control over Canada with a surprise assault on Montreal via the St. Lawrence River. American settlers and the British could now hope for freedom from Indian raids encouraged by the French.

But the British soon fell out with the Indians. During Chief Pontiac's uprising, Gen. Amherst — along with other British officers — contrived to pass a Trojan horse gift to "extirpate this execrable race" of Indians: blankets infected with the smallpox virus. Such infected articles eventually helped weaken and defeat the Indians, who lacked both the natural resistance and inoculations of the British.

In the wake of the American Revolution, this town remained a bastion of Yankee ways. Amherst College perpetuated Amherst's name when it was named for the town — not for Amherst himself — at its founding as a men's school in 1821.

However, through school song, lore, and memorabilia, the college, and its alumni, began to cultivate the myth of an integral association between the knighted British commander-in-chief and the school. Lilliputian Amhersts chased Lilliputian Indians around the perimeter of dishes in the school cafeteria. Amhersts on horseback struck noble poses on college necktie. An Amherst descendant was feted as a guest of honor.

Yet Amherst never set foot in Amherst or anywhere nearby. "He's the college's hero as a total fiction," said the museum director. The fiction ripened in the first half of this century, when this country battled beside Britain in two world wars and early American history underwent a renaissance.

Then along came the Vietnam War, minority rights, the questioning of authority, and — perhaps an even more monumental event — coeducation at Amherst College. Students rediscovered Amherst's smallpox project, known to historians since at least the mid-19th century. At the height of his disfavor, the idea of changing the town's name even circulated. The Persian Gulf War, with its worry about germ warfare, gave rise to another wave of distaste for Amherst in the early 1990s.

Yet the myth lives on. The college song, written for its glee club in 1905, intones that Amherst's "loyalty and bravery and fame abides here among us still."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Save it for a rainy day...

An abandoned umbrella affords no protection from the bleak Monday weather at Haigis Mall.

■ sales

continued from page 1

installations. Without identifying any company, Rubin said licenses were sought in 1996 by American companies to export the computers to two nuclear weapons laboratories.

Rubin said the applications were not approved because of a risk of diversion to nuclear weapons programs at the two facilities and because a Russian minister said they were to be used to keep Russia's nuclear stockpile safe and reliable.

"Assisting Russia to maintain the reliability of its nuclear weapons is contrary to U.S. policy," the spokesman said.

Rubin said "it would be a horse of a different color" if the computers were put to non-weapons use, although American companies still would have required U.S. permission to make the sales. Still, he said, "there is no question that the Russians have computers, and we believe they are computers that they specifically requested a license for that we turned down. And we believe they are at locations precisely where we didn't want them to be. And that is why we consider this a very serious matter."

Rubin accused the Russian government of at first refusing "to cooperate in finding a mutual acceptable solution."

■ elections

continued from page 1

also have been clouded by scandals.

Computer giant IBM was accused of paying bribes to win a $249 million contract with state-owned Banco Nacion. A former presidential aide is one of 10 people indicted in the case. Earlier this year, the Peronist head of Buenos Aires' city council, Juan Manuel Pico, fled the country after being accused of receiving kickbacks from construction companies. Argentine agents found him in Brazil.

Argentines also have grown tired of a climate of impunity. A symbol of one case hung from the microphone Mrs. Fernandez Meijide used to deliver her victory speech: a photo of Jose Luis Cabezas, a photojournalist killed in January while investigating police corruption.

Cabezas had been the first to photograph Alfredo Yabran, a reclusive postal magnate whom Cavallo has accused of heading a Mafia. Yabran twice has been questioned in Cabezas' death. His security chief is charged with plotting the slaying.

Mrs. Fernandez Meijide, who will resign her Senate seat to enter the Congress, refuses to discuss whether she will run for the presidency in 1999. Instead, she has offered to help Menem complete his term by lending support from the lower house, where he saw his majority wiped out Sunday.

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUM PRESENTS:
the SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY PANEL annual
October 29/97
3 pm 9 0 4 campus center
3 - 5 pm 9 0 4 campus center
Greg Bouris, BS '83, Director of PR & Communications, New York Sportschannel
Jon Guppy, MS '92, Director of Business Development, API Soccer
Joe Fitzgerald, BS '90, Licensing Administrator, MLB Properties
SuzanneWalmsley, MS '93, Assistant Director of Atheletics, Wellesley College
Sponsored by Campus Career Network, Sport Management Program and the University of Massachusetts Alumni Association

At Simmons, you don't just learn. You learn how.
Come see us at the Grad Fair on Oct. 29
Nestled in one of the world's great centers of learning and commerce, Simmons College offers its 2000 graduate and 1300 undergraduate students a first-rate academic education, together with real-world experience through internships and other access to Boston's rich academic and cultural resources.
GRADUATE PROGRAMS: Children's Literature; Communications Management; Elementary, Middle, and High School Teaching; English; French and Spanish; Liberal Studies; Special Education; Teaching English as a Second Language. To learn more, call (617) 521-2910.
GRADUATE SCHOOL FOR HEALTH STUDIES: Health Care Administration; Nutrition; Primary Health Care Nursing; Physical Therapy. To learn more, call (617) 521-2650.
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE: Archives Management and History; Library Administration (D.A.); Library and Information Science; School Library Media Specialist. To learn more, call (617) 521-2800.
Undergraduate education for women. Graduate education for women and men.
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT: A unique M.B.A. focused on behavioral courses specifically designed to prepare women managers for leadership positions. To learn more, call (617) 521-3840.
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK: Preparing clinical social workers at the master's and doctoral levels. To learn more, call (617) 521-3920.
DOROTHEA LYNDE DIX SCHOLARS PROGRAM: Undergraduate education for women 23 years of age and older. To learn more, call (617) 521-2502.
SIMMONS COLLEGE 300 THE FENWAY, BOSTON, MA 02115-5898

USC Leventhal School of Accounting Master's Programs
Chrislynn Freed, Director
(any degree) + (one year) = (master of accounting) (or master of business taxation)
Visit us at the:
Graduate and Professional Schools Information Day
Wednesday, October 29, 1997
10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Campus Center Auditorium

ALL STUDENTS!
Annual Five Colleges Graduate & Professional Schools Information Day
Wednesday, October 29, 1997
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts-Amherst
10:00 am to 3:00 pm
Information & Literature on Admission, Financial Aid, and Housing
Over 100 Schools including:
Albany Law School
Assumption College
Boston University
Clark University
Columbia University
Drew University
Harvard University
University of Maryland
New School for Social Research
New York University
National College of Chiropractic
Tufts University
Coordinated by the Campus Career Network, University of Massachusetts-Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges
Campus Career Network

Alum lectures on Latin America

By Joseph Fountain
Collegian Staff

In a crowd-filled room at the University of Massachusetts Campus Center, Jeffrey Davidow UMass alumni and Assistant Undersecretary for Inter American Affairs, spoke on yesterday afternoon about the future of Latin America in the 21st century.

The event was sponsored by the Leonard Horowitz Memorial Lecture Award and was the first to be awarded since the grants were made by the late Leonard Horowitz of the UMass political science department.

Davidow is, according to Howard Wiarda, the Leonard Horowitz memorial professor in the political science department, one of the four most powerful people in government to have graduated from UMass.

According to Davidow, who graduated with a degree in history, Latin America has more effect on what happens here in the United States than anywhere else in the world.

The problem, as Davidow explained, is that we largely either become too involved in Latin American countries during times of trouble or we simply ignore major parts of the region.

"Massachusetts, for example, does more trade with Mexico than it does with Russia and China combined," Davidow said. "We must recognize Latin America as extremely important for our own futures."

On illegal immigration Davidow said, "I hate the term illegal aliens. They are simply people who are here without proper documentation."

According to Davidow, it is not a criminal offense for people who want to live in the U.S.

"With countries becoming more stable, people want to stay in their own countries and immigration will become less a problem," Davidow said. "Mainly right now it is all political.

"The future of Latin America is [one] where almost all the countries are democracies except Cuba. The fundamentals for these governments are very stable where they are holding elections and there is a general consensus on having a free market economy and centralized economies are becoming privatized," Davidow said.

Davidow also gave advice to students on getting jobs in international affairs.

"There are hundreds of jobs in banking and business... The MISER (Massachusetts Institute for Social & Economic Research) office on campus is a great resource for students and people in general to use," Davidow said.

Davidow's lecture lasted approximately thirty minutes and then allowed a period for question and answers.

One question asked by Cristina Basto, an Industrial Engineering and International Relations, was "Why, if the U.S. cares so much about Latin America, does she do things that ultimately hurt the people of Columbia by causing them to join the guerrillas?"

This question was of particular interest to Davidow because, as he told the audience, he spent a lot of time in Venezuela a bordering country with Columbia.

"The real problem with the guerrillas is that there has been a loss of credibility on the part of the government," Davidow explained.

A former classmate of Davidow, Ken Jacobson, a doctorate candidate in Anthropology said, "I am very proud of what he has achieved and UMass should also take great pride in his accomplishments."

Market falls 554 points; worst since '87

By Bruce Meyerson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average suffered its worst single-day point drop yesterday, tumbling 554 points in a $600 billion sell-off that shut down the market for the first time since the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

The market's best known barometer fell 554.26 points to 7,161.15, surpassing the 508-point Black Monday crash of 1987. But on a percentage basis, Monday's 7.18 percent drop by the Dow only ranked as the 12th biggest ever and didn't come close to the 22 percent loss on Oct. 19, 1987.

Although the Dow is still up 11 percent since the beginning of the year, the sell-off put the Dow's losses at about 900 points over the past four sessions and 1,100 points since it set a record high at 8,259.31 on Aug. 6.

"It's a bloodbath," said Arnold Kaufman, a market analyst at Standard & Poor's. "It scares you because when you get a decline this fast, there's a risk it will keep snowballing."

The stock market's drop amounted to a $600.04 billion loss Monday, shrinking its value to $8.537 trillion, as measured by Wilshire Associates Equity Index, the combined market value of all issues on the New York Stock Exchange, American Stock Exchange and Nasdaq composite index.

The Dow's drop triggered two circuit breakers on the New York Stock Exchange that had never been set off since they were put in place after the 1987 sell-off. The first circuit breaker, at 350 points, closed the market for 30 minutes. The second, at 550, halted trading for the day.

It remains to be seen how much of Monday's selling was fueled by mutual fund investors. Publicly, however, many individual investors portrayed an unflappable facade.

"I wish I had more money to invest," said Helen Ginty, 60, a secretary in New York, asserting that she plans no change in her retirement investment strategy. "I don't think people are as crazy as they used to be" during a downturn.

For many analysts, the drop was notable because the Dow has now fallen 13.5 percent from its Aug. 6 record high of 8,259.31, its first downturn of at least 10 percent in seven years, the longest such streak since the 1960s.

Declining issues also outnumbered advancers by an astounding 16-to-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 685.52 million shares, the busiest day in the exchange's history. Stocks started the day lower as another sharp sell-off in Hong Kong triggered another wave of selling in financial markets around the globe, but the selling didn't pick up steam in the United States until Monday afternoon. The Dow, for example, was down just 115 points at midday.

Later in the day, Asian stock markets got off to another rocky start. Tokyo's Nikkei Stock Average tumbled 423.77 points, or 2.5 percent, to 16,614.59 points after the first hour of trading Tuesday. It was the lowest level so far this year for the benchmark indicator of 225 blue chip stocks.

The mounting financial crisis in Hong Kong has ignited fears about whether global business conditions will be undermined by Southeast Asia's shaky economics.

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Waffling...

Ona McCarthy, a freshman psychology major, "makes her own waffle" at Berkshire dining hall yesterday afternoon.

Canadian teachers' strike largest in North America

By David Crary
Associated Press

TORONTO, Canada— Parents across Ontario scrounged for baby sitters and students faced the prospect of homework-by-Internet on yesterday as the largest teachers' strike ever in North America shut down classes for 2.1 million children.

Joined in some cases by students and parents, picketing teachers trudged through snow or cold rain at hundreds of public schools to protest the provincial government's attempt to take over policy-making powers now held by local school boards.

The Conservative government, a target of repeated labor protests since 1995, says it wants to improve the quality of education by taking control of such matters as how much time teachers spend in the classroom.

The unions representing Ontario's 126,000 public school teachers say the bill proposing these changes would set the stage for layoffs of up to 10,000 teachers to slash hundreds of millions of dollars from the education budget. They are demanding the government withdraw or rewrite the bill.

"We hope the government will feel the pressure," said Eileen Lennon, president of the Ontario Teachers' Federation. "This bill scares people. ... Parents want to have some influence over their schools."

The dispute has sparked an intense battle for public opinion, and polls show Ontarians are sharply divided over whether the strike is warranted. The government is depicting the unions as selfish, while the teachers depict the government as eager to cut education spending to finance a promised tax cut.

Most of Ontario's schools were closed by local school boards Monday, but some buildings stayed open — without classes — under the supervision of administrators and non-teaching staff. There were a few reports of teachers crossing picket lines, but overall support for the strike appeared widespread.

"I'm thinking the worst," said picketing teacher Peter Shaw in Kitchner. "We could be out here for weeks because this government is really trying to break us."

Working parents of elementary school students scrambled to find baby sitters or spots in day-care centers. In Kingston, ninth-grader Alan Jackson opened a makeshift day-care program at his home; in Peterborough, 46-year-old Philip Francolo opted to take his vacation time to look after his two daughters.

"I totally support the teachers," Francolo said. "They are responsible for our most important resource, our kids."

Some students brought hot drinks and doughnuts to picketing teachers; others celebrated the unscheduled holiday by playing in the early snowfall. But the strike offered no sure immunity from homework — parents were advised that assignments could be obtained at public libraries or on the Education Ministry's Web site. The government has promised that parents with children under 13 will receive $30 U.S. daily during the strike to help cover the costs of child care. The payments would come from money that school boards save on strikers' wages.

The strike is illegal because virtually all the teachers are still under contract with their school boards.

The government has not ruled out seeking fines against union leaders, and Premier Mike Harris indicated his aides were preparing to seek an injunction.

Dont Let The Marshall Catch You Going Anywhere Else!
Marshall STEINBECK
Collision Repair & Auto Body
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our specialty
•Users of Sikkens paint products
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair
53 S. Prospect St.
Amherst Center
256-8157
Shop Reg. #RS1212

Wake up to the daily Collegian
Not your average cup of joe.

La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
... hand made cooking ... seasonal menu
... superb margaritas
... extraordinary tequila list
... warm hospitality!
Please join us!
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
7 OLD SOUTH STREET
NORTHAMPTON
413 • 586 • 0400

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN

A non-native species...

While the Massachusetts weather was cold and rainy, this palm enjoyed the tropical style climate inside of UMass's Durfee Conservatory yesterday afternoon.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Sisterhood

Louis Philippe S. Sterlin

On Friday, I witnessed the most beautiful sight since the Goodell Takeover. What I saw and participated in was the gathering of Asian, Latin American, Native American (ALANA) men supporting the women attending the Million Woman March.

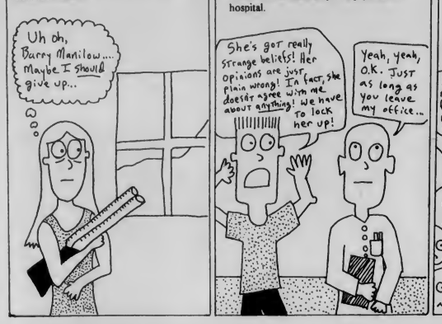
The blessing started at 8:30 p.m. in the Malcom X Center. When I entered the center, I saw the male supporters making lunches, which included sandwiches, water, soft drinks and chips. Most of the men were restless and tired, but that didn't stop us from achieving our purpose and that was to show the women, whether in rain, sleet or snow, we'll always have your back.

Around 9 p.m. the men in the Malcom X Center headed over to the South Side room to meet and greet the women who were headed for Philadelphia. When we arrived at the South Side Room, there weren't many women waiting inside. Seeing the few women who were there and hearing sounds of hip-hop blasting in each corner, I exhaled a feeling of joy. The moment made me feel proud because of what we were doing, and who we were doing for.

In the process of welcoming the women and the DJ, some other men and I went over to a table and started to make signs. Thinking of supportive phrases was difficult at first, but slowly we came up with "Set it off," "We'll Miss you," "Peace to all the Earths," "Behind every strong man is a stronger woman," and "Without our strong minded women, society would be out of control." We felt it was only right to provide the women with more than just verbal support, because to have support which is tangible means what they had done and what we had done will never be forgotten.

Late after 9 p.m., more women came through the doors holding their pillows, coats and bags. On the faces of many I saw relief and joy. The reason for relief was because their time of bonding had finally come. The joy came from all the support they were receiving, from the men who set up the send-off to Philly, from the fact that a new challenge awaited them — the chance to connect with each other.

As time went on, the room filled up with more women. Kenny Lacoste and James Callahan III said a few words of support to the crowd, which waited patiently. Aside from the male support, one of the marchers spoke of how it is women's time to unify. As more people chose to speak out on what they hoped would happen at and after the march, I began to believe that for a lot of the UMass women who were heading to Philly their lives would be changed, but only for the best.



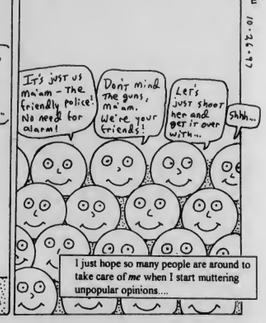
These were women on a mission to help themselves, and help us become stronger men, so I carried five huge bags to Haigis Mall when we went to load the buses. And if I had to, I would do it again.

As we loaded the women and the luggage onto the four buses, I noticed an expression of certainty on their faces. They knew it was going to happen. They knew that the change had to take place, because people live for the future, not for the past. Our past is what we learn from and the past of Generation X shows that sisterhood needs some work. And as I left each bus, I left with the belief that more than half of the women will build for the future — but this time it will be done together.

Louis Phillippe S. Sterlin is a UMass student.

Fubar

In what has been described as "the longest one-person hold out in United States history", 51 year-old Shirley Allen has held off more than 30 police officers for over a month in a small town in Illinois. The police have tried everything short of an armed assault: they have shut off her electricity and heat, turned off her water and telephone, fired tear gas at her and shot her with beanbag bullets. They even played Barry Manilow music.



Joe Gabriel

Mrs. Shirley Allen has not been accused of any crime. Instead, the authorities have come to take her in for a psychiatric "evaluation," due to the fact that she believes she is followed whenever she goes into a restaurant, that helicopters hover over her house, and that her relatives are really impostors wearing masks. These beliefs have so disturbed her family members that they filed a petition in state court to get her committed involuntarily to a psychiatric hospital.

Anodyne

Luckily, the police are there to make sure Mrs. Allen gets the care she needs. "This is the hardest thing we've ever had to go through," says her brother. "We're just trying to get her some help." Mrs. Allen's daughter-in-law agrees, saying "My stepmother is living in a nightmare. But that nightmare is in her head, not outside her door."

anodyne@acad.umass.edu 10-24-97

Write for a Point/Counterpoint!

The Collegian Editorial page will be running a point/counterpoint feature on the proposed honors college. Articles must be well–written and researched. The deadline for submission is Wed., Oct., 29, at 9 p.m.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by e–mail (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices in the box of Ed/Op editor Dan Bodah. Editorials must be 500–700 words long and include your name and phone number.

Promise Keepers explain their pledge

When the Promise Keepers met in Washington recently, the evangelical Christian men's group attracted quite a bit of controversy. Though it was largely praised — who, after all, wants to take umbrage with a stadium full of men professing their devotion to their families? — some feminists expressed concern about statements made at earlier Promise Keeper rallies. Of particular concern were speeches that urged men to take back their role as the head of the household.

This rhetoric was toned down for the Washington event, and Promise Keepers leaders interviewed on television usually insisted that they believed in equal partnerships between husbands and wives. But do they? In an earlier column, I asked Promise Keepers to tell me where they stood on this issue, and I received a strong response.

Overall, the Promise Keepers who wrote struck me as nice guys, who genuinely love and revere their families. But make no mistake: They aim to lead.

Well, most of them. Some Promise Keepers flatly denied that it was the group's intention to have women submit to their husbands, per the Biblical injunction, "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord."

"All men, Promise Keepers or not, need to 'Stand the Gap' by being better husbands, fathers and friends. We men need to let our loved ones know that we want to be in equal partnership with our wives," wrote G.M. of Sugar Land, Texas.

But more representative was the letter I received from A.W. of Waco, Texas: "Let me assure you that it is not the aim of the Promise Keepers to subjugate their wives," writes A.W., who then goes on to explain why he should be the leader of his family. "In every endeavor there must be a leader, else chaos is the result. The next time I fly, for example, I don't want any doubt in the crew's mind that the pilot is in control. The pilot casts no aspersions on the co-pilot, just as a husband's leadership of the family casts no aspersions on the wife."

L.H. of Kokomo, Ind., expressed similar sentiments: "I do not 'lord it over' my wife or family. I serve them. I lead them like (frequently quoted Promise Keepers speaker) Tony Evans says, by being sensitive and gentle, listening to them and loving them. I am the head of the family which functions like a healthy organism; therefore I am no more important than the heart or lungs, etc. I serve my family and they serve me. We submit to each other. Only I strive to be the greatest servant in the family."

FOCUS ON WOMEN

SARA ECKEL

Later in the letter, he gets to the heart of the matter: "[My wife and I] make lots of decisions together, but sometimes as head I have the final say. My family trusts me because they know I love them and will never harm them. I take the blame when things go wrong, too. That's part of leadership."

The servant/leader model came up frequently in these letters. "The word for leader actually means servant," explained happy Promise Keeper wife B.C. of Aurora, Ill. She went on to say that "True 'submission' isn't difficult at all."

Personally, I was unmoved by the servant/leader paradox. However, there were many Promise Keeper wives who, like B.C., who wrote in praise of their husbands, and of the renewed devotion their men have expressed since joining the group. And interestingly, they were far more blunt about the gender roles than their husbands were. M.C. of Carlsbad, N.M., needed no fancy analogies to explain the situation: "Biblically, man is to be the head of the household. The man is to be submissive to Christ and the woman to her husband. By doing this, we teach our children to be submissive to us and the Lord."

But not every Promise Keeper wife was a satisfied customer: One woman wrote that since her husband joined Promise Keepers he has become violent and taken control of the family finances (and subsequently, has driven them $80,000 into debt): "Since [my husband] has come into religion and Promise Keepers he's got a completely different personality, and it's not pleasant."

So now I pose a question to the women of America, conservative and liberal alike. How does Promise Keepers sound to you? Would you want to be married to a Promise Keeper? Are you willing to let him lead the household if it means he'll do more chores?

Sara Eckel is a nationally syndicated columnist.

Send her e-mail at saraeum@aol.com or write to her at Newspaper Enterprise Association, 200 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10016.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by email to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

No laughing matter

Lillian Chan

"Oh my god! Do I look like an FOB?"

The girl was actually going ballistic over this. She came into my room looking frantic and worried. Apparently, someone had asked her if she was an FOB (Fresh Off the Boat) just because she had her shirt tucked into her pants. I was trying my best not to burst out into laughter because it was the most ridiculous notion I had ever heard. Furthermore, I couldn't believe that this girl was actually stressing out over something as minor as this.

My friend had to calm her down and reassure her that she did not look like an FOB in any way whatsoever. An FOB is usually a reference to Asians who look as though they have just arrived in the United States via a boat. They don't wear the "right" clothes in the "right" way. And they don't have the "right" car along with the "right" people to hang out with. It's a stupid stereotype — like every other stereotype out there — but it exists nonetheless. Some people within the Asian community look down upon FOBs because they think that FOBs aren't as cool as they are.

I have to admit that I am guilty somewhat of looking down on people who I think are FOBs. I know that it's wrong, but when I see a fellow Asian wearing pants cut off to the top of their ankles with their shirts tucked all the way in and wearing Payless shoes, I can't help but make fun of them with my other Asian friends.

These days, though, I'm trying my best to change my outlook. It's not right for me to be such a judgmental person when I have just as many — if not more — faults myself. And this isn't how my parents raised me to be. They raised me to accept people for the way they are, no matter what they look like on the outside. Somehow, somewhere along the way I started to engage in disrespectful and shameful behavior.

Ever since that girl came running into my room, I've been thinking a lot. What gives me the right to judge someone based on what styles they wear or don't wear? What gives me the right to think that I may be better than some other person? What gives me the right to act in such a childish way?

When I make fun of FOBs, I'm essentially making fun of my parents. How's that? It just dawned on me that people who I refer to as FOBs are immigrants — and my parents came to the United States as immigrants.

I've become too Americanized. I'm materialistic and arrogant. I think that I'm better just because I wear this type of clothing from this store rather than that store. I care too much about how I will look to others. When did I become so shallow?

My parents — and many of your relatives as well — came to this country in the hopes of a better future for their children and themselves. They didn't come here to be called an FOB or to have other people look down on them just because they're not as "cool" as other folks.

So the next time you see someone who looks like an FOB, think again. Nearly all of our forefathers — our parents, grandparents, great grandparents, etc. — were FOBs. They sacrificed for the future of their children. Do we really want to make fun of our own families?

Lillian Chan is a UMass student.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Preston Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marry Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

One million women: cultivating a community

Viraphanh Douangmany

Early Sunday morning, over 200 women stepped off the buses at Haigis Mall ending a one-day stay in the City of Brotherly Love.

As a participant of the Million Women March, I joined with other women to thank the University of Massachusetts community for its institutional support, the contingent of men that sent us off with food and fanfare, and especially Lisa Scott Crump, Director of the Women of Color Program at the Everywoman's Center, her staff, and the team of volunteer chaperons for having the vision, the patience, and the amazing capacity to pull off and along, all of our journeys every step of the way.

What was so impressive about the Million Women March was the sheer volume of grassroots activities that have spawned and will continue to grow from one person's vision of African–American unity. What came out of a small community in Georgia gave rise to an entire nation's awakening. People from every part of the country toiled incessantly to bring forth the spirit of hope and happiness present in the faces of black children. They were among one million women who could vocalize what the children could not. Carrying banners, waving flugs, holding signs, and singing songs were the black women who have historically battled in the front lines for social change, spearheading movements, advocating for better living conditions.

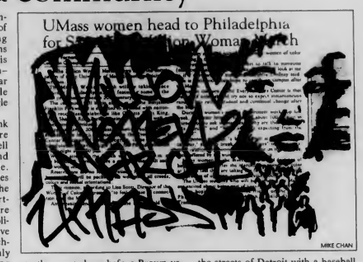
I reflected on the first massive gathering I attended four years ago which commemorated the 30th anniversary of the March on Washington, when the Reverend Doctor Martin Luther King made his famous "I Have a Dream" speech. About a dozen young people representing the Coalition for Asian Pacific American Youth (CAPAY) hopped on a bus sponsored by the Urban League and headed down to Washington, D.C., to honor the work and re-commit to the unfinished business of the civil rights movement. That march was named, "Passing the Torch."

While "Jobs, Justice, and Peace" signs enamored the crowd, I listened intently to the speeches made by officials and Coretta Scott King. I even caught a glimpse of Rosa Parks sitting up on stage. What was important was not so much the quotes or the disappointment of not leaving with a specific set of instructions if young people were to be the next torch bearers, but the deep and lasting impression when people come together to make headway in the push and pull of social change.

I found hope coming from the hearts of the people that were present, with their reasons for being there. It is not untill recently that the directions inaudible in 1993 became loud and clear with the advent of the Poor People's March last fall, and now the apex of the Million Women March last weekend. I wanted to be part of the making of history, and I wanted to take notes to take back to my community. Needless to say, last Saturday there was a resurgence of energy, infectious when people came together to make headway in the push and pull of social change.

Long–time local Asian American activists and the Asian American Resource Workshop (AARW) paid for our bus ride and encouraged us to experience an opportunity of a lifetime in 1995. As Asian–American youth, desperate for fundamental rudiments that could be provided for by an Asian–American Studies curriculum in our schools, we sought our education wherever we could to be given some relief from a system saturated with Eurocentric pedagogy. Questions such as our role in the Civil Rights Movement and our place in the context of American history were taught and answered in such a way that Asian–Americans were distorted or marginalized to the point of oblivion. For us, going to this march meant seeking out the truth. What we found were national Asian–American organizations represented, but not Asian–Americans in sheer numbers coming out.

The desire to someday have an Asian–American community empowered enough to come together in massive numbers, rallying around a common agenda for progressive social change for all Americans, is yet unfulfilled.



I want to take this opportunity to comment on the apparent physical separation, social, and mental isolation, exacerbated by misinformation or no information among communities of color.

In the past year I have heard the appreciation for hearing about the Chicano movement from black, Latino, and white students and being inspired to know more. However, I have not heard from the Asian–American community here at the University for similar efforts to reach out intellectually to people outside their tight circle, their community, their world.

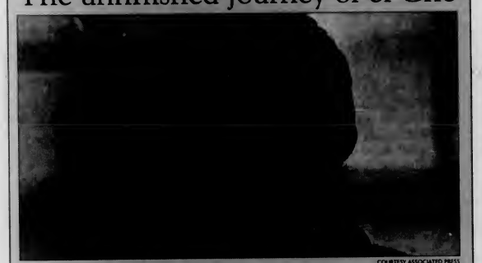
Those who do not participate in this progressive thinking draw their knowledge from a Eurocentric perspective. Some speculate that Asian–Americans adopt and therefore relate more to Eurocentric thought, ideology and identity because of their learning/living environments/arrangements and or socio–economic order. Due to a sense of alienation from those communities that have a long history of protest and struggle— including their own — these Asian–Americans are not likely to contribute. This would explain why Asian–Americans would exhibit similar resistance as some white people would and be absent in the struggle for racial, and economic justice.

For some Asian–Americans I think this could explain why they are absent in protests, like in Goodell when a dozen Asians were in and only a dozen more were outside. However, if Asian–American Studies were actually legitimized just like the African–American Studies department, you would have a lot more Asians participating in student politics and advocating for progressive issues. But because graduate teaching assistants have been the only ones teaching and offering Asian–American studies courses, unpaid, unsupported, and unrecognized by the University community, only a handful of students each semester get to learn about the Asian–American movement, its peoples, histories, and struggles, beyond how to stir–fry vegetables. Tragically, some Asian Americans do not know about the revolutionary poems carved into the wood pilings of Angel Island over a century old that were haphazardly constructed to imprison thousands of Chinese immigrants who were displaced by the economic and social disaster created by European imperialism in their homeland.

Sadly, they do not know that one of the first legal challenges to discriminatory practices in public education came from the Asian–American community. When their children were refused schooling because there was no bilingual education offered, parents appealed to the courts long before Brown vs. Board of Education. Even more disturbing than the ignorance of history is the ignorance of current issues affecting the Asian–American community.

MIKE CHAN

How many people knew that in the mid–eighties, a Boston Police officer in broad daylight clubbed, punched, and kicked an elderly Chinese immigrant crossing a Chinatown street, repeatedly slamming him into a brick wall? The officer claimed he had solicited a prostitute, but how could he have when the elderly man barely spoke a word of English? Even the Mayor of Boston at the time, Ray Flynn, visited the victim in his home to offer his condolences to the family, but nothing could erase the brutality that met that man and his community who organized on his behalf.



We could talk about the Chinese–American male, Vincent Chin, who was beaten to death on the streets of Detroit with a baseball bat swung by two disgruntled auto workers who mistook him as being Japanese. We could also say that the two white men served not one day of time. But; why venture out there when Massachusetts has the highest rate of hate crimes being committed against Asians? In 1994, Fall River claimed one Cambodian's life who was in his own backyard taking out the trash and was confronted with racial violence by his neighbors. A white Lowell youth, son of a well–known racist, killed an Asian–American classmate by throwing him into the river.

I think that if Asians listened more closely and ventured out a little they could learn a lot about how the struggles waged by people of color have benefited them. They would feel less alienation from the people they ought to connect with, learn from, and work for.

Viraphanh Douangmany is a UMass student.

The unfinished journey of el Ché

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcóatl

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ernesto "Ché" Guevara

The life of Ernesto Guevara Serna is a journey into the conscience of humanity, a journey unfinished.

Guevara began as el Pelao, a 14–year–old boy known for his natural analytical skills. El Pelao began dreaming about a trip around South America with his older friend Alberto Granado.

It is the dream of every Latin American adolescent, el viaje, a journey to bring one to terms with the past, with ancestors in original cities . . . Cuzco, Tenochtitlan, Chichen–Itza. It is also to visit the modern cities . . Mexico, Rio, Santiago, meet fellow Latin Americans, and indeed discover whether we really believe in the idea of a Latin America.

El Pelao was destined for this voyage of discovery, although he first prepared himself by exploring Gardel's Buenos Aires Querido and the expanse of his Argentinean patria. In 1945, on a bicycle with a small engine, el Pelao made this thousands of miles journey around the Argentinean countryside, through the deserts, valleys and flat pampas in order to regain contact with Mial (Alberto's knickname). El Pelao had become el Fuser, Furibundo, an invocation of his tenacity and fearless style of playing rugby and futbol.

It took seven more years of discussion and planning before Mial and el Fuser would ride through South America on La Poderosa II, a 500 cc Norton motorcycle. Despite the unnecessity of the dream, most Latin Americans never get to this stage, opressessed by the tyranny of day to day life. El Fuser was about to graduate as a medical doctor when he decided the time was ripe for el viaje.

Their trip took Mial and el Fuser through the leper colonies of Latin America. The heightened sensibility needed to treat and respect lepers would later be a foundation for the politics of Guevara. By the end of the journey in Caracas, el Fuser was filled with questions. He had seen the pre–colombian ruins of Machu Picchu, the Amazonian forests, the militarized city of Bogota and, not least of all, Yanqui Imperialism at its crudest in the Chilean copper mines of Chuquicamata.

El Fuser finished his medical degree but quickly he found that as medical doctor he could do nothing but treat the afflicted individual. He became more interested in attacking the source of the disease, both individual and social. For this purpose he landed in Guatemala City shortly before Christmas, 1953. The elected government of Jacobo Arbenz was undertaking a gradualist approach to social change, including land reform. When Arbenz was deposed by a CIA sponsored coup in 1954, Guevara determined to devote himself to the Revolution.

His journey continued from Guatemala to Mexico City, where his fate became intertwined with Fidel Castro and other Cubans plotting to overthrow the dictator Batista. In the process, he became the legendary Ché Guevara — a pioneer of guerrilla warfare, ready to die for the idea of LatIn America which by definition is a free Latin America. The rest is history.

Ché overcame asthma attacks, harrowing months of jungle warfare, and Batista's army culminating in his great triumph in the city of Santa Clara, where he was reburied last week.

His journey continued from Guatemala to Mexico City, where his fate became intertwined with Fidel Castro and other Cubans plotting to overthrow the dictator Batista. In the process, he became the legendary Ché Guevara — a pioneer of guerilla warfare, ready to die for the idea of Latin America which by definition is a free Latin America. The rest is history.

In the new revolutionary government, Ché became the head of the tribunals at La Cabaña, and later President of the Central Bank and Minister of Industry. He left these glorious achievements for Africa It was not without pain, but he wanted to fight, shoulder to shoulder, in the anti-colonial struggles.

Ché spent his last days in the Bolivian altiplano trying to gain support for the Revolution. Even Félix Rodriguez, the CIA operative in charge of Ché's murder, says his last days were filled with "grace and courage."

You could say he was an accomplished man, a true revolutionary, but more than that, he was a viajero, a traveler into the soul of humanity. He left everything behind but his love for justice, equality and freedom, his love for mankind.

And, for that, Ernesto Guevara Serna, el Pelao, el Fuser, el Ché remains the idol of Latin American youth. He exemplifies, in victory and defeat, the pride that has been lost in Nuestra America, since 1492.

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzalcóatl is a UMass student.

The new McCarthyism

Hussein Ibish

McCarthyism in its ugliest form has reemerged in the United States. New laws provide for guilt by association, closed trials with secret evidence, and the power of the government to arbitrarily designate political organizations and opinions effectively illegal.

At a time when this nation is recalling with horror the abuses that began 50 years ago in 1947, the worst excesses of McCarthyism, and more, are being quietly re–written into the law in the name of anti–terrorism.

The "Anti-Terrorism Act of 1996," which was passed in the hysterical aftermath of the Oklahoma City bombing, provides the bedrock for these civil rights abuses. Although that bombing proved to be the work of all–American fascists trained by the U.S. Army, the law specifically targets foreigners, especially Arabs and Muslims, for punishment by giving the State Department the authority to illegalize them.

Three weeks ago, under the terms of this law, the State Department issued a list of 30 "terrorist organizations," more than half of which are Palestinian or Lebanese.

The new McCarthyism, unlike the great purge of the late 1940s and early 1950s, but reminiscent of earlier Red Scares of the Sacco and Vanzetti variety, enacts a distinct ethnic and racial animus. It is also thoroughly infected by the anti-immigrant virus sweeping this country.

Moreover, the absence of the Irish Republican Army from the list is clearly indicative of the ethnic sensibility that informs the content and enforcement of the new laws.

In a resurrection of the notorious MacCarran-Walter Act, which barred Communists from entering the U.S., non-citizens deemed to be "members" of the newly designated "terrorist" groups are banned from this country.

Just as the organizations listed have been arbitrarily designated "terrorist" on the basis of unspecified actions, there is no provision in the law describing what is defined by membership in these groups.

Is an individual who goes around making speeches on behalf of Hamas and raising money for their schools in Gaza a "member" of Hamas? Is everyone who voted for Hizballah, one of the largest political parties in the Lebanese Parliament, a "member" of that Hizballah?

U.S. citizens are barred from giving the designated groups any material support whatsoever, including material support for nonviolent, charitable, and political activities. Such contributions will be punished by a ten year federal prison sentence.

For example, it is now absolutely illegal to provide support to the hospitals and orphanages run by some of these groups — most obviously Hamas and Hizballah, which are mainly social service organizations.

In contrast, financial support to groups such Ataret Cohanim and other Zionist settler organizations remains not only legal, but tax deductible. This is in spite of the fact that such settlement activity in occupied territories is strictly illegal under the Fourth Geneva Convention and international law in general, and has been described as "illegal" by every U.S. administration since 1967.

The ban on contributions to selected political organizations, whose opinions the State Department dislikes, also constitutes a major restriction of free speech.

One of the major barriers to campaign finance reform in this country is that the Supreme Court has ruled financial contributions to political organizations constitute a form of speech protected by the First Amendment. The Congress and State Department have now made such speech, in the case of the selected organizations, illegal.

The Kafka–esque "Anti–Terrorism Act of 1996" treats non–citizens as threats to state security by allowing indefinate detention without charges based on secret eveidence and anonymous accusation. With tiresome predictability, all the prosecutions in which the Justice Department's case relies on secret evidence have been aimed at Arab men.

Nasser Ahamed, an Egyptian who has lived in New York City since 1986 and has three American children, has been in prison for over a year without charges on the basis of secret evidence that is unavallable to him or his attorneys.

Mazan Al-Najjar, a professor at the University of South Florida in Tampa, has similarly been imprisoned since May 19 solely on the basis of secret evidence.

Ali Ternuo, a Lebanese man who has lived with his American wife for over ten years in Michigan, spent over a year in prison and was finally deported without a hearing, all on the basis of secret evidence. His imprisonment was transparently designed to prevent him from changing his status to permanent resident, as he would have been entitled to do, thus preventing such a summary deportation.

The only suggestion of what the accusations against him were came during his interrogation by FBI agents, which focused on his political opinions and contributions he made to an orphanage in south Lebanon.

The broader implications of this "terrorism list" are simultaneously both chilling and absurd.

The State Department, perhaps without realizing the implications, has designated illegal most of the constituent organizations that make up the PLO, the U.S.' "partner in peace." The U.S. relies on these groups, whose acknowledged members include senior figures in the Palestine National Authority (PNA), to further its strategic goals in the Middle East. At the same time, Americans are now barred from all association with these groups and their members may not enter the U.S.

Furthermore, Hizballah, which is the organized Lebanese resistance movement against Israeli occupation in south Lebanon, is included in the list of "terrorist" organizations. The U.S. thereby effectively denies the right of the Lebanese people to resist Israeli occupation, and implicitly endorses the occupation by illegalizing support for the resistance.

In other words, if you are a non–citizen who points out that the Lebanese have a right, clearly enshrined in international law and treaties to which the U.S. is a party, to defend themselves from the foreign soldiers who have occupied their land, under this law you could find yourself secretly tried, accused by evidence withheld from you and your attorneys, and summarily deported.

And, if you are a U.S. citizen who donates textbooks to the wrong school, blankets to the wrong orphanage, or towels to the wrong hospital, you could be sentenced to ten years in federal prison as a "threat to national security."

Senator McCarthy would have loved it.

Hussein Ibish is a UMass graduate student.

Foreign Terrorist Organizations

Released by the Office of the Coordinator for Counterterrorism, U.S. Department of State
October 8, 1997

- Abu Nidal Organization (ANO)
- Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG)
- Armed Islamic Group (GIA)
- Aum Shinrikyo (Aum)
- Euzkadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA)
- Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine– Hawatmeh Faction (DFLP)
- HAMAS (Islamic Resistance Movement)
- Harrakat ul–Ansar (HUA)
- Hizballah (Party of God)
- Gama'a al–Islamiyya (Islamic Group, IG)
- Japanese Red Army (JRA)
- al–Jihad
- Kach
- Kahane Chai
- Khmer Rouge
- Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK)
- Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE)
- Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front Dissidents (FPMR/D)
- Mujahedin–e Khalq Organization (MEK, MKO)
- National Liberation Army (ELN)
- Palestine Islamic Jihad–Shaqaqi Faction (PIJ)
- Palestine Liberation Front–Abu Abbas Faction (PLF)
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP–GC)
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC)
- Revolutionary Organization 17 November (17 November)
- Revolutionary People's Liberation Party/Front (DHKP/C)
- Revolutionary People's Struggle (ELA)
- Shining Path (Sendero Luminoso, SL)
- Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA)

ARTS & LIVING

New book exposes the myths about marijuana

By Jeff Hnatio
Collegian Correspondent

MARIJUANA MYTHS, MARIJUANA FACTS
Lynn Zimmer Ph.D., & John P. Morgan, M.D.
The Lindesmith Center

Marijuana and marijuana use are extremely controversial and emotional issues in American Society. There are a wide range of opinions and claims about marijuana's effects. A new book written by two doctors, Lynn Zimmer, Ph.D., and John P. Morgan, M.D., explores the scientific evidence available on marijuana and its effects.

Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts contains 20 chapters, each one focusing on a major myth about marijuana. Scientific facts are presented which counter each myth. Overall, the book deals with nearly every major myth of marijuana's effects on humans.

A number of topics are covered in the book. Among the more interesting topics examined is medicinal marijuana. Based on current evidence, the authors conclude that marijuana is valuable as a medicine, not only as a pain killer but also since it is inexpensive to produce and can be ingested in multiple ways.

Another interesting topic is marijuana and highway safety. Some of the studies discussed in the book reveal that in general, high amounts of marijuana cause less driver impairment than low amounts of alcohol, and low amounts of marijuana cause practically no impairment at all.

Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts also delves into politics and current marijuana policy. The Dutch government's policy on marijuana is analyzed and the extent of marijuana usage in the Netherlands and the United States is compared. Also, the results of two major US government investigations on marijuana's effects, the Shafer Commission and the Eastland hearings, are contrasted and analyzed.

Other topics covered by the book include marijuana and addiction, marijuana's effects on pregnancy, memory and cognition.

Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts is a clear, well written book that is fairly easy to read and understand. The research presented by the authors is well documented with nearly 70 pages of references. While this book may be read cover to cover, the chapters can be read individually if the reader is interested in only certain topics. This book does not deal with the moral issues related to marijuana, but presents scientific facts and conclusions on marijuana's physical effects on humans. To this end, the book achieves it goal. A

YVONNE YANG/COLLEGIAN

"Ecstasy"
Rusted Root played an energetic show at Amherst College on Saturday night.

Ethan Hawke strives for perfection in Gattaca
New sci–fi film explores an imperfect future

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

GATTACA
Directed by Andrew Niccol with Ethan Hawke, Jude Law, Uma Thurman
Playing at Mt. Farms Four Theater

Gattaca contains all the ambition of a frightening morality tale — a disruptive look into the not–so–distant–future that is as predictable as it is horrifying. A shameless world where prejudice takes on new dimensions and destiny is relative to genetic make–up.

The world of Gattaca is a homage to fascist architecture, clean streets and empty lives, a world so proper, so precise that one can not help but be ultimately intrigued, at least in theory.

However, the film's conflict lies in its inability to focus on any of these apparent factors, rather than explore this haunting non–utopia it limits itself to uninteresting subplots. Freshman director Andrew Niccol has lost himself within his eerie vision of a world dictated by genetics. He is saved by a talented cast, each contributing greatly to this vision, everyone representing a different aspect of Niccol's world to come. The characters are not as defined by good and evil, but rather the hierarchy of a society controlled by the perceptions of perfection.

Gattaca represents a time where parents can actually choose the genetic make–ups of their children. Eventually this establishes a segregation between those who are considered valid and the others who were born naturally, or in this future context they are rather referred to as inferior and invalid. Vincent Freeman (Ethan Hawke) is one of the unlucky ones, conceived for no other reason than the love shared between his parents. In our world this is considered noble, but in Gattaca, Freeman's life is limited to inferior positions in society. As a result, his brother is engineered in the lab and for that he excels in everything that Freeman can not. Their ongoing swimming competitions attempt to represent a theme for the characters' motivations and hope to allude to an allegorical look at segregation and brotherhood. Instead they are unfortunate displays of random editing and macho nonsense.

The breathtaking cinematography is a character in itself, instilling an unnerving sense of precision which coincides with the attitudes of Niccol's future. The pace is slow, one of the film's unfortunate flaws and a common trademark of many non–utopian films, yet at least the cinematography allows us something to look at as we anticipate a shocking climax that never occurs.

Production wise, however, it is Gattaca's elaborate, fascist inspired sets that create the film's psychological continuity. Within the control room of the Gattaca Corporation, a futuristic NASA, we see the young, flawless navigators relentlessly diagraming the best route for space missions. These rooms are so clean they appear untouched or even intangible, yet they are fascinating in their characteristics, representing architecture so removed from human imperfection.

The outside sets are equally as disturbing, perhaps modeled after a combination of the production designs of Woody Allen's Sleeper and George Lucas' THX–1138. Here the design of the future symbolically coincides with the film's plot, both working together to outline a tortured world plagued by conceptions unattainable by our standards.

COURTESY DARREN MICHAELS

A zealous investigator (Loren Dean) compares murder scene notes with Detective Hugo (Alan Arkin) in Gattaca.

Freeman, despite his handicap of being born without medical intrusion, finds a way to realize his dream of becoming a navigator for Gattaca. He switches roles with a valid man, played brilliantly by Jude Law who, due to a accident resulting in paralyzation of his legs, can no longer be considered legitimate. Freeman becomes Jerome Morrow and lands a position at the elitist Gattaca Co. In return he provides companionship for the real Morrow, whose dysfunctional legs are not as near of a burden as the fact that his position in an unforgiving society has been stripped away.

Gattaca makes certain intriguing points, most specifically in its similarities to Nazism, Niccol has created a thought provoking film which criticizes our notions of perfection. In its true essence, Gattaca is a terrifying film, because it plays on how obsessed we are with physical appearance and how the next stage of our neurosis may not be too far away. Yet when an uninteresting murder mystery erupts, alluding to the fact that the Gattaca director was killed by Freeman when he may have discovered his secret, the film begins to lose touch with its apparent purpose. The love interest, played by Uma Thurman, also seems thrown into the plot at the last minute, serving more as a hindrance than fuel for the narrative.

With its faults intact, Gattaca can still give us something to think about, as all successful science fiction should. However, Gattaca will not blow your mind, but rather allow you to gently nod your head and say, "hmm that was kind of interesting." B–

Goldfinger proves to their fans that punk isn't dead

By Alexandria Lipko
Collegian Correspondent

GOLDFINGER/SAVE FERRIS/KARA'S FLOWERS
Pearl Street
Oct. 25

NORTHAMPTON — It was an almost filled to capacity crowd last Saturday night when Goldfinger played Pearl Street. People had shown up pretty early to get prime spots on the floor for what would turn out to be one of the most sweat–filled energy feasts that this concert–goer has ever experienced.

First up was Kara's Flowers who, in keeping with the theme of the evening, tried their best to turn their wiry, electric guitar rock into punk. The crowd was a little less than hospitable but they just needed to keep in mind that the best things come to those who wait.

The real warming up began when Save Ferris hit the stage, setting the pace of the evening with their bouncy ska rhythms and dynamic eagerness. Save Ferris, a band perfectly comfortable on stage, played just about every song off of their new album including "Come On Eileen," my own personal favorite "Under 21" and a cover of Operation Ivy's "Artificial Life." Needless to say, by the time Goldfinger got on stage, the hot and sweaty crowd was pumped and ready to let lose.

Opening furiously with the hard–hitting "Answers," Goldfinger struck with such time–bomb–like force that had been waiting too long to go off and suddenly detonated before everyone's eyes. Frontman John Feldman was nothing short of spectacular as he and his bandmates sang, jumped, kicked, danced and stage dove their way into out hearts, serving up pure punk seasoned with just a hint of ska. The signature bass of Simon Williams, supplemented by the guitar of Charlie Paulson and the drumming of Darrin Pfeiffer, were the solid backdrop for a small horn section that swept the crowd into a frenzy, leaving me nearly dizzy and the guards near the stage in sheer awe.

Goldfinger played radio friendly hits such as "Here In Your Bedroom" and "This Lonely Place" and many more not so radio friendly hits. Crowd pleasers "Carlita," "Skaway" and "King For a Day" spurred hectic mosh pits that sprung up like little tiny tornadoes ready to swallow up any and all unsuspecting victims. Despite some technical difficulties through the first half of their set, the band was all smiles as they made the best of it, allowing those lucky enough to make it on stage to become a part of their delightful antics.

The encore, opening with "Mable" and wrapping up with "Miles," was one of their best. Goldfinger proved to be a band with an extremely firm and proud fan–base more than willing to attest to the fact that punk is not dead.

Maceo Parker shows fans the true definition of funk

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Correspondent

MACEO PARKER
UMass Student Union Ballroom
Oct. 26

"Everything we do from now on shall be funky!"

It was with these words saxophonist Maceo Parker aroused his audience Sunday night at the Student Union Ballroom.

Parker demonstrated how strong connections with everyone on stage and off are the signature of a good performer. Parker's unique brand of funk, soul and jazz had virtually every audience member captivated — as well as thoroughly entertained.

A former backing player for the godfather of funk, James Brown, Parker has since leaft the R&B horn section (The JB Horns) and has gone on to establish a name for himself world–wide. Becoming an absolute master of his craft, Parker has been given the nickname "The architect of groove." Indeed, he proved this to no end at the Student Union Ballroom Sunday evening.

The show began with a keyboard solo, his six–piece backing band chanting "Come on, Maceo!" Making a big entrance into the audience before taking the stage, Parker immediately fed off this rousing welcome. Before one breath was blown into his sax, the audience was awestruck by his on stage charisma. When he said, "It's great to be here," the audience actually believed him because his excitement was so visible.

Parker is a musician who loves to perform live, and he uses that positive energy to his advantage by feeding it all into his music and using what is left over (there is a lot left over) to interact with his band and the audience.

During the extended jam of the Maceo favorite, "Shake Everything You Got," Parker let each band member have his turn in the spotlight. He later invited an audience member on stage to wish her a happy birthday, then brought another on stage just because she was having fun, and brought up yet another to dance with him.

Admitting that he had forgotten a line, or laughing too hard to sing, Parker clearly enjoyed his time on the SUB stage. Rather than allowing this banter to be a hinderance Parker used it to his advantage. With a tempo ranging from fast and funky, to slow and bluesy, Parker displayed his versatility as a musician. The energy emitted from the stage and from the audience filled the room and left only a few in the crowd who were not dancing.

Overall, Maceo Parker's performance Sunday night was entertaining to say the least. With the skills of a performer who knows how to keep even the most disinterested spectator watching, Parker showed just what "funk" is all about. Fans and non–fans alike had to agree that Maceo Parker put on a great show.

Halloween
LOG ON AND WIN UP TO $250!
FREE!
Hear your e-mail by phone!
Chat • Message Boards • Personal Web Pages
E-mail • Voicemail • Student Stories
COLLEGE CLUB
WWW.COLLEGECLUB.COM
or call toll-free (888) E-MAIL ME
The Student Communication Network

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

visit us @ http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
YOU Play Hard
Amherst 256-6446

We're worker-owned. We do it all, we do it cheap... 7 days a week.
CollectiveCopies
1 N. Pleasant, Amherst 413-256-6425

amc Theatres A Different Set
$2.50 (Tax Ltd) Show Daily
Special Engagement No Passes or Coupons
Silence is Golden - No child under 8 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153 MT. FARMS MALL
Gattaca (PG-13) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
Playing God (R) Today at 8:20
The Full Monty (R) Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:30
I know What You Did Last Summer (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Rocketman (PG) Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
The Peacemaker (R) Today at 8:20
A Life Less Ordinary (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
In and Out (PG-13) Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R) Today at 5:10 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:30
L.A. Confidential (R) Today at 5:10 ($2.50)

■ baseball

continued from page 10

gated to the bullpen. It was only when Alex Fernandez went down with a torn rotator cuff that Hernandez was called to action.

He responded by becoming the second rookie ever to win the Series MVP (Larry Sherry, 1959). But more importantly, his mother was in Pro Player Stadium to see him accept his trophy; Cuban officials allowed her to visit the U.S. for the seventh game.

He's a World Series legend and a Cuban national hero.

All these players were trying to do was prove they belonged. All they did was make history.

• I'd like to officially say that before the season even began — under the tutelage of renowned baseball guru Matt Sexaur who plays a little saxophone too — I crunched the numbers and picked the Florida Marlins to win the World Series.

I did have the Yankees in the playoffs, despite what you may think, losing in the first round. Hmmm...

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist

■ Clark

continued from page10

player on the team.

"You know, everyday I think about how lucky I have been," Clark said. "Words can't describe it."

All of the hard work and commitment payed off when Clark was drafted by the Milwaukee Brewers in the 20th round of the 1997 amateur baseball draft in June.

"I was in disbelief," Clark said. "People were telling me that I'd get drafted, but I just shrugged them off. I must have been touched by somebody. No matter if I make it or not, I'll always have that with me."

Clark decided to remain in school this year, and put off joining the Brewers farm system for the time being. It was a difficult decision for him to make, but Clark said it all came down to one thing.

"Loyalty. I made a commitment to play football here and I didn't want to let them down," Clark said. "Coming back was more important than any amount of money a baseball team could give me."

Clark takes the same approach to his school work, which he admits can easily get lost in the frantic mix of traveling, games and practices.

"I've always maintained a 2.5 GPA or better," Clark said. "But it's been hard. Time management is one of those things you have to have. You need to have a good balance or you'll fall off."

Clark is lucky, in some ways, to have a relatively similar schedule all year long. His mornings begin early, usually around 8 or 9 a.m. He's on campus until 2:30 p.m. when he heads to football practice in the fall, baseball practice in the spring, and training in the winter.

Clark doesn't return home until around 7 p.m. when he eats then heads back to campus for tutoring sessions or to the library to do his homework.

Clark is now working hard on the field for UMass football and equally hard off of it towards receiving a degree in Biology. He's not sure where the major will lead him, though he has often thought of attending dental school if baseball does not pan out.

"The classes are really challenging, but it's important to my family and myself that I get a degree," Clark said.

Clark's family is a large one with six brothers and sisters. He credits them for giving him the support to continue on each day.

"I've excelled because of them," Clark said. "They come to the games and I always know they're in my corner when I need them."

Clark said he needs them around quite a bit, because the pressure along with the daily grind can really wear down on him.

Despite adversity, men's tennis demolishes URI

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The men's tennis team concluded its fall campaign with an ace, smashing the University of Rhode Island by a tally of 6–1. For the fifth straight match this season, the singles play picked up the doubles teams that could not a pull out the point.

The Friday afternoon match against Atlantic 10 rival U.R.I., started off in ominous fashion. No. 1 singles player Todd Cheney had come down with bronchitis and was bumped to the second position. Alex Aller was also a last minute scratch by UMass coach Judy Dixon. Parsa Samii was moved up to No. 4 while Kevin Curley played No. 5. Jason Lin stepped into singles action at No. 6 for only the second time this season.

Impressively, the Minutemen captured all six singles matches despite their last–minute scratches. Coach Dixon was almost astounded with the effort.

"This was a first–class win," Dixon said. "For the guys to step up like that was just terrific."

Even though the A–10 tournament may be a long way off, this win holds extra bearing because it was an inter–league win and it will affect the seedings later on.

Slyman, who has been outstanding all season, stepped into the No. 1 singles match against Chris Bender with beaming confidence. He pulled out a 7–6, 6–4 win over Bender which will go down as his biggest victory of the season. With the effort, Slyman maintained an undefeated record for the entire season.

"It was an intense personal victory, but more importantly, I really helped out the team," Slyman said.

Cheney, overcame all his physical ailments to hold off Kevin Collozzi 6–4, 6–2.

"For him to even go out there was impressive," assistant coach Jason Bedford said. "The fact that he won just proves how dedicated he is to the team."

Rob Manchester completed his near perfect season with an easy day at the office. He knocked off Josh Schofield 6–1,6– 1.

"I was really pleased that the lower half of singles players did so well," Dixon said. "This is a really positive thing heading into the off–season."

Parsa Samii also turned in his most productive appearance by coming out with a 6–3, 6–2 victory. Curley and Lin were also straight set victors.

"The fact that we can shift around the lineup like this and still come out on top is a really good indication," Dixon said.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
Beginning Nov. 1
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $162 $295
PARIS $218 $399
ROME $274 $473
MADRID $226 $415
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Enroll/passes available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / 3DO
Buy-Sell-Trade Games &
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30 Sat 12:00-7:00 Closed Tuesday

GRADUATION
Sunfire
$400 Bucks of Incentive*
Hot Looks Great Performance
Land Big Job
Raises
Summer Home
Nobel Prizes
Some Other Car
Zero Incentive
Drives Like a Shoebox Looks Like a Shoebox
Interview After Interview
Working Two Jobs
Living Back With Parents
Join Bowling Team
☛ Excitement ☛ Rapture ☛ Bliss
☛ Boring ☛ Dullsville ☛ Miss
Sunfire BY PONTIAC
FINALLY. A REAL SET OF WHEELS YOU CAN REALLY AFFORD
Call 1-800-SUNFIRE
©1997 GM Corp. All rights reserved. Always wear safety belts, even with air bags.
*See your participating Pontiac dealer for details on the $400 College Graduate purchase incentive. GM reserves the right to change or withdraw this offer.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCMENTS

Visit New York Law School on your campus! Law School Fair. [10/29/97]. Come pick up an application and speak to an Admissions Counselor. Visit our website at: www.nyls.edu

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Corolla 1992 AC, Sharp, Clean, Drives Like Sharp! $5700. Call 549-7166

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

85 Mazda RX7 Good shape. $1000 or Best Offer. 549-5172

EMPLOYMENT

Jobs for the Environment Campaign with MassPirg to reduce pesticide use. Flexible schedule. $50-$75/day. Call Terry @ 256-6434

Personal Administrator with good typing, organizational, and PR skills. Contact 549-3613

Personal Care Attendant for weekend morning. $7.85/hour. Call 546-0666

EMPLOYMENT

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED

for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst

Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext: 0 COLLEGE NEWS SERVICE

Human Services- Want to make a difference in someone's life? Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma, driver's license and a true interest in helping people. Call 323-6872 to start application process. AA/EOE

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

Rao's Coffee is hiring F/T and P/T. Food experience necessary. Please apply in person.

EMPLOYMENT

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: Professional DJ spinning all types of music for your next party or function. Call for more details. 253-6593. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim)

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily

Mongoose Bike For Sale Large. $240 or B/O. Call 549-6926

Elton John 4 excellent seats. 11/5. (516)867-7392

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

FOR SALE

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

FOUND

Camera at Fine Arts Center Bus Stop on 10/23. Call 253-7695

LOST

LOST- GLASSES green case. Lost on 10/21. If found please call 549-6909

Lost: Watch with a brown wristband. Swiss Army Watch. Please call 546-3344

Watch: Gold-colored copper band; square shaped. Lost in or around Chadbourne or Upper Central Area on Sunday, October 12, around noon. If found please contact Barry at 546-7246. Reward will be offered! Thank You!

THIS SPACE FOR RENT

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

Available Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call 256-3442. Don't Miss Out! Harlow Properties

Housemate Wanted $220-270/month. 548-7972

Bedroom for rent in house. On Shumway Street. On bus route. Close to center of Amherst. Available immediately. Call 253-9410

ROOMMATE WANTED

Prefer female non-smoking grad student. Nice house with yard. Available Jan 98. 323-9268

Bedroom for rent on Ingate Farms. Large ranch. Scenic hiking. South Amherst. $350. 256-5983

Female Roommates Wanted Boulders Apts. Amherst. On busline. 259-2995

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Please Take Over My Lease One bedroom apartment at Cliffside. $540/month inclusive. Great area. Willing to help with 1st month rent! Must leave area to care for ill parent. Call 665-0334. Available ASAP.

TRAVEL

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!! Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

TRAVEL

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

CLASSIFIEDS SPECIAL FEATURES

BOLD WORDS	$.50 / word
GREEK LETTERS	$1.50 / line
BLACK REVERSE BOX	$2.00 / run
BORDER BOX	$2.00 / run

HOW CAN I PLACE A COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED?

Classifieds are available in "the box" on the concourse or you charge yourclassified over the phone @ 545-3500.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT. 28

Book Signing/Lecture — Doctors Lynn Zimmer and John P. Morgan, authors of Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson, room 106. Sponsored by the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition.

Colloquium — Susan Grant Rosen, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from Union Theological Seminary, will give a Colloquium entitled "Student Protestantism and the College Woman" at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Discussion — Discussion entitled "Shut Down the Control Units at Marion Prison" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of the prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Info-Social — The Pride Alliance will be holding an info- social at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 802. Come share your ideas and socialize. For more information, call the office at 545-0154, email lbgs@stuaf.umass.edu or stop by the office in the Student Union, room 413B.

Meeting — The Index (UMass yearbook) is holding its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union, room 304. All are invited. For more information, contact Jill Aordkian at 545-0848.

Meeting — University Democrats is having a general meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 29

Dance — Israeli folk dancing at 8:30 p.m. in Grayson. Learn new dances or request old ones. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Film — "With Intent to Harm" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of the prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911-915. All are welcome. Bring your own work, someone else's or just come and listen. For more information, call Tim at 546- 0879 or Chanel at 546-6301.

Support Group — The Health Education Division at University Health Services sponsors a Tobacco Cessation Support Group from 7-8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 801. Come get peer support, professional counseling, proven quit tips and advice. Just drop by or call 577-5181 for more information.

THURSDAY, OCT. 30

Book Reading — James Salter, author of the new memoir Burning the Days, reads at 8 p.m. at Memorial Hall.

Lecture — "Anti-Semitism Today: From the Subtle to the Extreme" one credit course given by Lauren Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director, Anti-Defamation League from 7-9 p.m. at the Hillel House. The public is invited to sit in on this lecture.

Open House — UVC-TV 19 is holding an open house between 3-5 p.m. in the Student Union, room 216, behind the Hatch. There will be information sessions, tours, and refreshments offered to all those who attend.

Prison Awareness Week Events — Rally against the Criminal Injustice System at noon on the Student Union Steps. Planning/informational meeting for the American Prisons On Trial Conference (Feb 22-26) at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Discussion on censorship in America at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Speaker — Alison Bechdel, creator of the comic strip Dykes to Watch Out For, will speak on "Assimilation and It's Discontents: Chronicling Fin-de-Siecle Queer Culture" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. Part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and co-sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB, GSO, Women's Studies, the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters, Pride Alliance, Hampshire College Cultural Studies Program, and Words and Pictures Museum. For more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

Study Abroad Fair — Find out opportunities to study abroad with UMass Amherst International Program from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Campus Center Concourse.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545-0782.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will have their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec. 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406E or just bring the artwork by.

Entertainment — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of Botho Strauss's Big and Little on Thurs., Oct. 30, Fri., Oct. 31, and Sat., Nov. 1, at 8 p.m. in Kirby Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free; reservations are suggested and can be made by calling the box office at 542-2277 between 1-4:30 p.m. weekdays and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, October 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, October 1 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545-2726.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 28, 1997

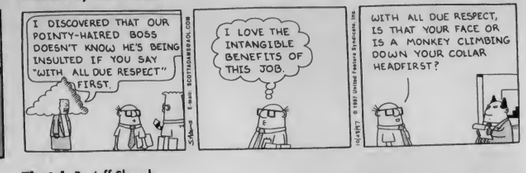
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "The Proof" (In Stereo)		Stephen Hawking's Universe		Frontline "Dreams of Tobe"		In the Life (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	JAG "Vanished" (In Stereo)		Michael Hayes "Radio Killer"		Deliverance "Fathers"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Vanished" (In Stereo)		Michael Hayes "Radio Killer"		Deliverance "Fathers"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Soul Man	Over the Top	Home Imp.	Hiller-Diller	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Rambo: First Blood Part II" (1985) Sylvester Stallone.				News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Married... With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Clueless	Moesha	Hitz (In Stereo)	Head-Heels	News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Med Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Wolf" (1994, Horror) (PA) Jack Nicholson. (In Stereo)			Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You	Newsradio	Frasier	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "The Proof" (In Stereo)		Frontline "Dreams of Tobe"		On the Brink of Peace		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Soul Man	Over the Top	Home Imp.	Hiller-Diller	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Clueless	Moesha	Hitz (In Stereo)	Head-Heels	News	M*A*S*H	M*A*S*H	Real TV
WTBS	17	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"Taking Care of Business" (1990, Comedy) James Belushi.				"Smokey and the Bandit" (1977, Comedy) Burt Reynolds.
A&E	45	Northern Exposure "Only You"		Law & Order "Sanctuary"		Biography: Alice Faye		"Dead on Time" (1992, Mystery) John Thaw, Kevin Whately.				Law & Order "Sisters of Mercy"
CNN	49	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	39	Unauthorized	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Comedy Nrt 3	Lizards	Sinbad: Brain Damaged (R)		Vivo Variety	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	48	Wings "The Flying Tank" (R)		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Polar Bears		New Detectives (R)		Traitors		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		Strongest Men	NHL Hockey: Buffalo Sabres at Colorado Avalanche. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait				Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline: Mind of a Killer" (1990, Suspense) Teri Matheson.		Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	53	MTV Live	Viewers	Ab-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Ab-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Ab-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Oddville, MTV	Loveline (R)
NICK	46	Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	Wonder Years (Bewitched		I Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi	Newhart
SCIFI	60	Gerbera	Twilight Zone	Time Trax "Perfect Pair" (R)		Sequest 2032 "Brainlock"		"Children of the Night" (1992, Horror) Peter DeLuise.				Time Trax "Perfect Pair" (R)
TLC	29	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	(Home Again)	Trauma II – Life in the ER		Wolfman-Myth and Science		Bigfoot		Trauma II – Life in the ER (R)
TNT	42	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		"Assault on Devil's Island" (1997, Adventure) Hulk Hogan.				"Assault on Devil's Island" (1997, Adventure) Hulk Hogan.		WWF Clip Show (R)
USA	47	Baywatch "I Spike" (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		WWF Clip Show		Boxing Joseph Kiwanuka vs. Thomas Tate. (In Stereo Live)
HBO	44	"Dolores Claiborne" (1995, Suspense) Kathy Bates.				"Michael Collins" (1996, Drama) Liam Neeson. (R)				Where Have You Gone, Joe DiMaggio? (R)			"South Beach"
MAX	52	"Dolores Claiborne" (1995, Suspense) Kathy Bates.				"Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991) (PG)				"Phantasm" (1979) Michael Baldwin. (R)			"Gentleman"
SHOW	55	(5:30) "Independence Day" (1996) Will Smith. (PG-13)				"Top Gun" (1986, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) (PG)		"The Fan" (1996, Suspense) Robert De Niro. (In Stereo) (R)		"Joe Torre: Baseball's Along the Way" (1997)			Women

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

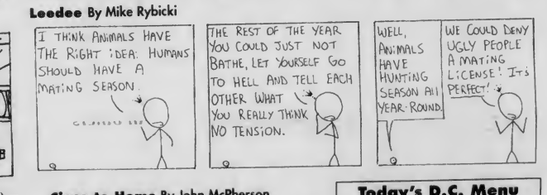
Non Sequitur By Wiley



Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

8 Years in Braces By Erik Petersen

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Fortune-telling is not for you today; you only want the facts, except, of course, for that one special piece of inside information.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — A grand start to what you feared would be an ordinary day bodes well for this developing phase. You mustn't take things personally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Remain in control today, or you may find that you are allowing circumstances to ride roughshod over you quite unintentionally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Pay attention to figures on paper today, but be sure to interpret with help of your considerable instincts to uncover the facts.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can do what cannot be done today, provided you pay attention to hidden messages that are all around you.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may be able to turn even the most boring of jobs into something memorable today. Trust in your abilities and seek help when you need it.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may want to get up and out at this time, but you must remember that there is a time for everything, including waiting your turn.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You have a few surprises in store for those who think they can anticipate your every move. Today, you may be quite unpredictable in the extreme.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You think very little of something that may soon prove to be quite important to you. Today, think of things as they may be.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — The experts may know very little of a pivotal situation today, but your instincts can be relied upon to guide you quite well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You are making too much of something that will soon be forgotten. Do not be confused by smoke screens; more important issues are surfacing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Complete all tasks and run all errands as efficiently as you can today, and you'll have more time to dream those dreams of yours.

Quote of the Day

"Do or do not, there is no try."

—Master Yoda

Close to Home By John McPherson

With just three days until Halloween, the kids of Maple Avenue had their surveillance teams in place.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
Any Combination of Above

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Southern Fried Steak
Caponita with Pocket Bread
Flouride

Worcester
LUNCH
Ruskburger on a Roll
Spaghetti with Sauce
Hot & Spicy Chicken Wings
Harvest Burger

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Pastabilities
Sicillian Spaghetti w/Vegetables
Pretzels (I wish)

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken a la King
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Stray Bits of Hair

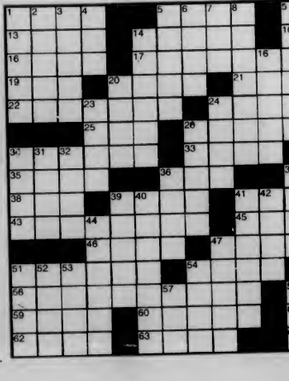
DINNER
Roast Turkey
Southern Fried Steak
Vegetarian Roast Turkey
Vegan Southern Fried Steak

Berkshire
LUNCH
Harvestburger on a Roll
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Meatball Grinder
Spaghetti

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Pastabilities
Sicillian Spaghetti w/Vegetables
Country Style Ribs

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Chris Stamm
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Petra von Ziegesar
Production Supervisor — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Mike Krezy, Joe Savitch

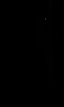


ACROSS
1 Amphibian
5 Nursemaid
9 Andes country
13 Sooner st.
14 Constellation
15 Wading bird
16 Date tree
17 Well-driller's concern
19 GI's address
20 Pokes
21 Washed (off)
22 Stringed instruments
24 Chin's ex
25 Canine comment
26 Known beforehand
30 Sounds of an old typewriter
33 Defeat
34 Beginning of "historic"
35 Corn part
36 Take a chair
37 Floor piece
38 Annapolis grad
39 Gaul
41 Propped up
43 Trumpet flourishes
45 "— Send Me"
46 Mimicked
47 Fly chaser
51 Giddy
54 Wearing sandals
55 Tiny
56 "Ben Hur" racer
58 Swiss capital
59 Swamp
60 Christened
61 Soft cheese
62 Muslim prince
63 Cheshire Cat's expression
64 Gush

DOWN
1 November birthstone
2 Short-necked giraffe
3 Apportion
4 Beaver's construct
5 Fine horses
6 Gets tangled
7 High card
8 Chilled features
9 Spinets, e.g.
10 Recedes
11 Irritate
12 Exploited
14 Doc and Happy
18 Pitchfork parts
20 Tug
23 Literary drudge
24 Cowboy's shoe
26 Darts
27 Heroic
28 Writer — Stanley Gardner
29 Require
30 Cook
31 Moon goddess
32 Pt. of AMA
36 Toboggan
37 Tight
39 Blue Grotto site
40 "And thou shalt know—"
41 Pet phrase
42 "— to Rio"
44 More like Snow White?
47 Gloss
48 Insignificant one
49 Spooky
50 Extend a subscription
51 Peak
52 Impulse
53 Mata —
54 18-wheeler
57 Paving goo
58 Air-rifle ammo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

AHAB BELLE UNDO
LENO ORIEL KERR
BROWNBREAD URAL
SANTA GEOLOGY
ITS PURSE
VICE HOSE PLACE
IRA SUIT TIMOR
VERDURE PRESUME
INTENT BRAY SEC
DEEPS SAYS TEST
RESTS HOE
JANITOR SINARE
AVIV PILLBUSTER
VOLE APACE ETNA
AWED SEWED EYES



10-28-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

Three rookies make series a true Classic

Two teams that most believed shouldn't have even been in the World Series played into the 11th inning of Game Seven on Sunday night to try to prove that they actually belonged.

The tension and the strain of every pitch, every swing, every slide beckoned for a veteran star, or merely someone who's been there before, to emerge and pull his team to victory.

But throughout the series, and ultimately in this epic Game Seven, the guts and past experiences of three very different and equally inexperienced rookies may have made this series a classic.

The Marlins' second baseman Craig Counsell was on third base in the home half of the 11th inning when Edgar Renteria slapped a Charles Nagy offering into short center (actually deep shortstop). Counsell sprinted plate-ward and after stepping on the magic dish, vaulted himself in the air because he just won the World Series.

Who's Craig Counsell?

Counsell is a 27-year-old rookie second baseman. He more than paid his dues trudging through the minor leagues and found himself playing in October in the middle of a championship rally. He was acquired from the Rockies mid- season because the Marlins super-prospect second baseman Luis Castillo wasn't playing so super.

He's a scrawny little guy with a big nose. He's a punch- and-judy hitter who has as much power as a VW bug in a foot of snow.

He's a World Series hero.

On this improbable evening, Counsell was driving the Marlins' comeback wagon. In the ninth, with Moises Alou 90 feet away from tying the game after hustling from first to third on a Charles Johnson single, the scrawny reject infielder stepped to the plate.

There was one out with a pinch runner (Gregg Zaun) on first. The Indians needed a double play and the Marlins needed a fly ball. Counsell is a slap hitter who rarely lofts the ball, but he took a vicious cut on a heavy fastball down in the zone and nearly hit the ball out of the park. The Marlins settled for the sac fly and a tie that sent the game into extra innings.

For a guy who came to the Marlins to bide time until their real second base prospect was ready for the show, Counsell has performed rather well.

In strong contrast to the path Counsell took to the major leagues, Indians' rookie Jaret Wright strolled in on the red carpet right through the front door. Wright is a 21-year-old fireballer who is compared by most to Roger Clemens.

He was probably supposed to be in Buffalo or Canton polishing his skills to ease into his imminent role as ace in a year or two.

Wright is a much-heralded "can't miss" prospect who was thrust into the Indians rotation this summer. He won Game Four and was chosen to pitch the deciding game by manager Mike Hargrove despite Nagy, the veteran ace, being available. Wright was phenomenal in the post-season throwing heat — and overwhelming confidence — down opposing batters' throats. He comes from strong baseball lineage — his father Clyde Wright was a long-time big league hurler.

The burly, cocky, star-in-waiting pitched one of the greatest Game Sevens in Series lore, yet his historic performance was for naught as the Tribe bullpen (with help from Tony Fernandez) let Wright's impending career- making victory slip away.

He could have been a World Series hero.

Livan Hernandez, like Wright, is a young hurler with a rocket arm and a bright future. He's only 22-years-old and made a quick trek up through the Marlins minor league chain to Miami.

His trek to America, though, was a bit more treacherous. Hernandez began his career with the Cuban national team and quickly became a sensation. He defected from his home, leaving behind his mother and his older brother who is largely regarded as the more talented of the two.

Sometimes it appears that he's pitching with a vengeance, giving hitters little hope to even make contact.

He dominated the NLCS, winning two games and being named the series MVP. He starred and won Games One and Five of the World Series, and was even warming up in the bullpen in the tenth inning of Game Seven.

He wasn't even supposed to be in the rotation. After a stellar second-half performance he was put on the post- season roster, but relegated to Carus. The ghost stories are, on the other hand, rumor and the leaders of this tour emphasized that all of the stories about spirits are from hearsay and are to be interpreted by the listener.

Turn to BASEBALL page 7

Volleyball splits pair on weekend Atlantic 10 road trip

LAUREN KOSKY/COLLEGIAN

Courtney Bowen and the Minutewomen split the weekend versus Xavier and Dayton, 1–1.

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

While the state of Ohio was in front of the television biting their nails as their Indians were in the World Series, the volleyball courts were packed with their own heart pumping action.

The Massachusetts volleyball team had its hands full this weekend. In late September, UMass went 2–0 against the Ohio connection of Dayton and Xavier when they squared off in the Curry Hicks Cage.

This time the situation was a little different. The Minutewomen were on the road, away from the friendly confines of the Cage playing against two very improved squads looking for revenge.

UMass (11–12, 6–6 in the Atlantic 10) continued their "win some, lose some" attitude by going 1–1 on the weekend. Saturday night, the Minutewomen dropped a heartbreaker to the University of Dayton 3–2, one night after having their way with the Musketeers of Xavier, finishing them off 3–1.

Saturday was truly a beautiful thing to watch, at least while it lasted. Down two games to none against the A–10's third place team, UMass was just about ready to pack things up. Dayton's duo of Ou Huang and Zhaohui Ma, both of whom represented China in the 1996 Summer Games in Atlanta, were dominating the net.

All of a sudden, UMass mounted a furious comeback. It looked like an entirely different Minutewomen squad as they took the next two stanzas 15–4 and 15–11 respectively.

After some flat play in the first two games, the Minutewomen attack showed signs of life. But once again, they folded when the spotlight was on them — at the peak time they were expected to perform.

An .059 UMass attack percentage in game five sealed the deal for the Flyers. Dayton, on the other hand, hit .667 in the fifth and deciding set, en route to a 15–10 decision.

Senior outside hitter Lesley Nolan came through for UMass, accumulating 13 kills (3 errors), 13 digs, and three service aces. Sophomore outside hitter Kari Hogancamp compiled her team–leading 14th double-double performance with 12 kills and 10 digs.

In Friday's match against Xavier, sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers packed the stat sheets, helping UMass to a 3–1 win. Meyers collected 26 kills and 18 digs on the night while fellow sophomore Sarah Watters chipped in with 19 kills of her own.

After hitting only .031 and dropping game one 15–6, it was all maroon and white from there. Game two saw the potential of this UMass team shine. Massachusetts picked up 26 kills and only four errors, on their way to a 15–3 thrashing of the Musketeers.

So after the dust cleared this weekend, UMass found themselves in a fifth place tie with Duquesne in the A–10 conference standings. The Hokies of Virginia Tech are a full game ahead of the two squads while, with disappointing results over the weekend, George Washington and Xavier dropped to 5–7, for dual possession of sixth place.

Only four teams will move onto the A–10 Championships in Dayton next month. If the season ended today, UMass' would do exactly that — end. There are eight matches left to play, four at home, four on the road.

The battle for fifth will be settled this weekend when the Dukes and the Minutewomen clash on Friday night at the Cage. On Saturday, UMass takes on winless St. Bonaventure. Both matches are set for 7 p.m. starts.

Men's water polo 2-1 in CWP Northern Division playoffs

By Jim Ellringham
Collegian Staff

The No. 10 Massachusetts men's water polo team (21–8, 7–2 Collegiate Water Polo Association) completed the most grueling part of their schedule last weekend, posting a 2–1 record in the CWPA Northern Division Playoffs. This troika of games came exactly one week after a five–game, three– day trip in California (capped off by a red–eye flight home), providing the Minutemen an excuse if their performances displayed a touch of fatigue.

UMass started with a bang in the first round, routing Boston College 13–5 Saturday morning. The win ensured the team a place in the CWPA Eastern Championships. Later that day, the Minutemen built a big lead against No. 13 Brown and held on to post a 13–9 victory. On Sunday, however, the streak ended with a 10–3 loss to No. 17 Queens College.

"Our goal for the weekend was to qualify for Easterns," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. UMass attained this feat with the win over a young BC squad. Junior standout Brian Stahl, leading the charge with six goals, was one of eight Minutemen to score.

"We took care of business," Yarworth said of his team's performance. "We didn't play especially well, but we did what we had to do... the team is very tired, though."

The effects of the California trip began to show in Saturday evening's matchup with Brown. The Minutemen held a half–time advantage of 9–1, highlighted by a 5–0 second half. The Bears roared back in the second half, netting six third period goals to put the game in doubt, but UMass prevailed, led by Stahl's five goals and sophomore goalkeeper Richard Huntley's thirteen saves.

"I think it was lack of concentration. We relaxed a little too early," Yarworth said of his team's second half swoon. "We opened the gates for them, and Brown came back pretty hard."

The fatigue was evident the next morning when the Minutemen took on Queens. The Royals registered a 4–0 first period and never looked back, posting a decisive 10–3 victory.

"We were thoroughly out–coached, thoroughly outplayed, totally beaten," admitted Yarworth. "They were much better prepared for the game than we were."

Stahl was held scoreless by a swarming Royal defense. "They weren't going to let Brian beat them," Yarworth said. "Our coaches and our players were unable to adjust."

The loss to Queens is becoming a tradition. In each of the last two seasons, UMass has fallen to the Royals in the Northern Division playoffs, only to roar back and avenge the defeat in the Eastern Championships. Yarworth promises that, when the team's meet again this year, a "vastly different UMass team" will show up.

The Minutemen have two weeks off before the begin Easterns on Nov. 8. Yarworth stresses that rest will be as important as practice, "[We're going to] rest up a little bit, lick our wounds, circle the wagons, and get ready to roll."

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

The UMass men's water polo finished their weekend at 2– 1.

Two-sport standout Clark UMass' man of all seasons

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

Doug Clark limps out of the Massachusetts football locker room with a sour grimace on his face.

His body, bruised and aching from the weekly Saturday showdown, shows what 60 minutes of punishing football can do.

"It's alright," Clark said. "That comes with the package."

In fact, Clark has gotten used to the shooting pains and the aches that greet him every night before he sleeps. As a two– sport athlete at UMass — in football and baseball — they've become an everyday reality. But still he gets up every morning and goes through the same routine day after day, because for Clark, there is no off–season.

"I have a commitment to both sports," he said. "This is my life and I love it."

Clark came to UMass as a local football product from Springfield's Central High School. Recruited by Massachusetts coach Mike Hodges as a quarterback, the junior redshirted his first year before settling into his current role as a wide receiver/special teams/long snapper for the football team.

"It was a little difficult at first," Clark said. "I had the childhood dreams of playing quarterback in the NFL, but football is my life and I just wanted to play."

However, after his redshirt freshman season in football, Clark decided that football just wasn't enough.

"I wasn't satisfied," Clark said. "I needed something else."

Clark looked to his family for advice, then to coach Hodges before he started looking at baseball. But because he chose to play tennis during the high school spring season instead of baseball, he was hesitant at first.

"I wasn't really driving to play tennis here," Clark said. "I wanted to try out baseball. Coach Hodges gave me his blessings, so I went for it."

Clark took his experience playing summer baseball in Springfield to Massachusetts baseball coach Mike Stone, who rewarded him with an opportunity during the spring tryouts at Boyden Gym.

Clark took advantage of it, catching the eye of Stone with his performance in the combines.

"He told me I showed potential and put me on the team as a reserve," Clark said. "I worked hard and by the end of the season I was playing all the time."

During his sophomore campaign, Clark emerged as one of the team's strongest hitters and one of their best defensive outfielders as he took over the centerfield duties for Stone.

Heading into his junior season, Clark has made huge strides from a walk–on among scholarship athletes, to a captain and perhaps the most valuable

Turn to CLARK, page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Doug Clark shows off his athletic prowess on the football field.

JOHNA KANSANBEH/COLLEGIAN

Clark proves he's a winner on the diamond as well after capturing the baseball Beanpot last season.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVII Issue 40 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, October 29, 1997

Coming out of obscurity

Jarvis Cocker and his band Pulp have reissued their three first albums. Find out what our Trax write Pulp (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Ah yes, she's a Caron soul

Senior Marie Christine Caron won her singles match against Colgate last weekend, helping the Minutewomen finish with a 6–5 record in the fall (see Sports, p. 10).

Scholarships offered to top community college grads

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The top graduate of each of the 15 community colleges in Massachusetts next spring will be offered four–year scholarships to the University of Massachusetts.

The $8,000 a year scholarships, which cover tuition and all mandatory fees, can be used at any of the University's four undergraduate campuses and are renewable for up to eight semesters.

President William M. Bulger announced the scholarships, which are part of his system–wide plan to upgrade the academic standards of incoming students at the University, during his visit to Chicopee Comprehensive High School last week.

"The University of Massachusetts believes that effort and achievement should be rewarded," Bulger said in a release. "Expanding our University Scholars program to include community college graduates illustrates our desire to recognize hard work, as well as our commitment to attracting the best possible students."

Bulger initiated the University Scholars program last year, offering four year, $8,000 a year scholarships to all Massachusetts high school seniors graduating first or second in their class.

This fall, 87 of those students accepted the scholarship offer and 69 of them came to the Amherst campus. In order to renew their scholarships, the students must maintain a grade point average (GPA) of 3.0 with at least 12 credits per semester.

The scholarships are financed through a $500,000 grant from the state Board of Higher Education.

Raising admission standards overall

Bulger and the Board of Higher Education have also instituted stricter admissions standards for all incoming students system–wide.

John Hoey, of the President's Office, said that Bulger has placed GPA threshold requirements of 2.75 in all academic courses for incoming students in the fall of 1997 and 3.0 in the fall of 1998.

"The goal is to attract the highest achieving students possible," Hoey said. "It is becoming a lot more competitive to get into the University."

Hoey said that some Massachusetts high school seniors who would have been admitted to the University in the past will not be able to get in with the new standards in place.

"There are going to be some students who would previously have gotten in to the University and are not going to get in because of the higher standards," Hoey said. "It is something that they should be aware of as they enter their junior and senior years in high school."

However, Ruth Green, associate director of admissions at UMass–Amherst, said that the admissions office will continue to look at a variety of factors, not just a student's GPA, in evaluating a student's application.

"It is just one element in a mix of things," Green said. "We look at a variety of things; we look at the total student."

Green said the admissions staff

Turn to SCHOLARSHIPS, page 3

CATE will guide students to make course decisions

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) continued work on the Course and Teacher Evaluation (CATE) guide will come up for discussion as the University of Massachusetts faculty contracts expire this June.

Five years ago, the Student Government Association (SGA) asked SCERA to work on establishing a way to evaluate courses and teachers that would be accessible to students.

The result is the CATE guide, which is a means of giving students more information about the courses they will be taking and the professors who will be instructing them. Similar guides have already been made available at campuses nationwide.

"It will help students make more informed decisions when choosing classes, and it will highlight both quality teaching and inadequate teaching," said Marc Kenen, SCERA professional staff member.

"Both good teachers will be recognized and hopefully rewarded and inadequate teachers will be designated for help and training. The goal is not to target faculty, only to help them," Kenen said.

A 1994 UMass Amherst Project Pulse survey found that over 80 percent of undergraduate students would like to see a CATE guide.

Faculty feedback from a pilot study underway since the spring of 1995 showed that faculty members were not as enthusiastic.

The Student Response To Instruction (SRTI) form was used in the pilot study and consisted of 12 questions, only the last three of which would be included in the CATE guide, known as "global" questions. The other nine would be used for personel purposes such as raises and promotions.

According to the survey, 38.8 percent of the faculty would not support the use of all SRTI items for student information. 31.1 percent answered "maybe" and the remaining 29.9 percent were in support of student access to these evaluations.

"Students fill out evaluations on

Turn to STUDENTS, page 3

WORLD

Japan may legalize birth control pills

TOKYO (AP) — Japan should legalize birth control pills, a government panel recommended yesterday, clearing the way for an end to Japan's ban on oral contraceptives.

A subcommittee of the Central Pharmaceutical Affairs Council, a group that advises the Ministry of Health and Welfare, recommended allowing women to use low-dose birth control pills, the Kyodo News reported.

The full council will now seek public comment on the proposed change before deciding whether to accept the recommendation at a meeting in December. Government officials said some type of birth-control pills could become legal next year, according to Kyodo.

Although oral contraceptives are widely used worldwide, Japan has yet to approve them for general use, partly because of worries that reducing reliance on condoms could increase the spread of AIDS.

In practice, an estimated 200,000 Japanese women already use the pill, exploiting a legal loophole that permits doctors to prescribe oral contraceptives for menstrual pain.

NATION

Massachusetts voters rethink death penalty

BOSTON — You know Massachusetts: Lots of liberals. Lots of colleges. Lots of taxes. And no death penalty.

Now, shaken by a monthlong spree of crimes that include the rape and slaying of a 10-year-old boy, the people who have elected three generations of Kennedys are closer than they've been in decades to joining the 38 states that have capital punishment.

"The people overwhelmingly support this because they want this violence to end, they want justice," said acting Gov. Paul Cellucci, a Republican who has pushed a death penalty bill for the past seven years.

While the Senate has passed a death penalty bill three times this decade, the measure has always died by a narrow margin in the House. But some lawmakers said the gruesome slaying of 10-year-old Jeffrey Curley could help change all that.

Two men are accused of luring the boy into their car with promises of a new bike, smothering him with a gasoline-soaked rag and then sexually molesting the corpse. The boy's body, stuffed in a concrete-filled tub, was pulled from a river earlier this month. As the House began debating the bill yesterday, the boy's father, Robert Curley, issued a warning to death penalty opponents.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 37	HIGH: 55 LOW: 42	HIGH: 46 LOW: 39

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Resident Assistants lead a ghostly tour of UMass

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

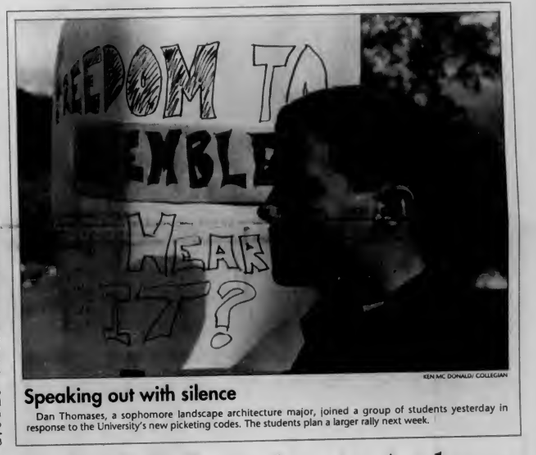
In celebration of Halloween, three University of Massachusetts Residents Assistants (RAs) hosted a ghost tour of the UMass campus last evening. The social/educational program incorporated ghost stories with historical information about the campus.

The RAs, Jennifer "Yen" Naman of Brett, Gregg Lindskog of Patterson and Robin Carus of Chadbourne, were all former participants of this tour when it was run by its original host, Patrick Browne. Browne, an alumni of UMass' undergraduate and graduate programs, was a counselor for the New Students Program over the summer. He returns each summer to lead this tour for the New Students Program counselors.

"This is oral history that Patrick wanted to give us as a gift, now this is our gift to you," Carus said.

The stories were compiled from Naman, Lindskog and Carus' memories.

"We tried to remember them as best we could," Naman said. "Then we asked others to read them and remember anything we missed."



The historical facts are all true and were researched by Browne, according to Carus. The ghost stories are, on the other hand, rumor and the leaders of this tour emphasized that all of the stories about spirits are from hearsay and are to be interpreted by the listener.

The tour began on the steps of Crabtree and the leaders took turns telling the story of a woman who hanged herself in the back stairwell of Mary Lyon. Because that particular stairwell was not often used, the woman's body remained there for about a week. According to the guides, the residents of Mary Lyon have reported hearing people running down the hallways, yet no one is there.

The tour continued on through Northeast and into Central. On the way the group stopped on Worcester Path, the walkway which runs from the Worcester Dining Hall to Orchard Hill. The leaders of the group told of the old Infirmary that stood at the bottom of the hill and was just torn down last year. This infirmary was there prior to the construction of University Health Services and legend says that it had spooks and ghosts that haunted its halls.

In Central, the tour traveled to Greenough where the listeners learned of a little boy whose ghost plays ball in the hallways and then ventured up to

Turn to TOUR, page 3

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

Speaking out with silence

Dan Thomases, a sophomore landscape architecture major, joined a group of students yesterday in response to the University's new picketing codes. The students plan a larger rally next week.

Botched raid was caused by ambush

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Twelve Israeli navy commandos killed in a botched raid in Lebanon stumbled into a random ambush and were not victims of an intelligence failure, an internal army report found. There had been speculation in the media that the Sept. 4 deaths were the result of poor intelligence information concerning the target or a leak to Lebanese guerrillas about the mission. But the report of an inquiry committee given to The Associated Press yesterday said no one was to blame for the tragedy.

"After reviewing all the events connected with the operation, from the planning stages until it ended, the committee did not find faults or

Turn to RAID, page 2

Clinton and Jiang have private, informal "chat"

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton invited Chinese President Jiang Zemin for a private chat last night before their formal summit, hoping the personal touch would help narrow the wide gap in their political views.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright pledged yesterday that the U.S.-China talks will be "candid and comprehensive," including on the American request that the Chinese release political prisoners. Nonetheless, Albright said human rights won't be allowed to overshadow the summit, "We

Turn to CLINTON, page 2

Mitten Tree to benefit homeless in Amherst

YVONNE YANG/ COLLEGIAN

The Mitten Tree, located near the Information Desk in the Campus Center, will benefit the Amherst Survival Center.

By Voy Fernandes
Collegian Correspondent

As temperatures reach well below 40 degrees and you are sitting cozily in front of the fireplace, keep in mind of those that are not as fortunate as the rest of us.

The University Store, located in the Campus Center, has been conducting a hats, mittens and socks drive for the month of October. The clothing will be donated to the Amherst Survival Center.

The Mitten Tree is a part of a series of community service events introduced at the University Store.

The Mitten Tree is located in the front of the information desk for people interested in donating hats, mittens and socks for homeless people. During the winter, concern for the homeless grows. Those who make donations will be given a place on the wall of mittens, in front of the Information Desk.

"We are part of the community and we want to take part in the community," said Bercia Zanlewski, an employee of the University Store and a participant of the University Store's charity evenis.

The Amherst Survival Center, located in North Amherst, is a non–profit organization, which caters to homeless people.

According to Michael Tavatorchia of the Amherst Survival, although the homeless may not be as apparent in Amherst as they are in other cities, it doesn't mean that they don't exist.

The Survival Center houses a variety of programs that tend to the needs of the homeless. For instance, they provide free clothing, housewares and small appliances (as they are available), as well as other items donated by the general public. Showers are also available for homeless people.

Although the Center does not

Turn to HOMELESS, page 3

Dow Jones soars, sets billion-share trading record

By Bruce Meyerson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market roared back yesterday from its worst drop since the 1987 crash, posting its biggest point gain ever for a single day and smashing the volume record with more than 1.1 billion shares traded.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 337.17 points — 4.7 percent — to 7,498.32. The previous biggest point gain, 257.36 points, came Sept. 2. The Nasdaq stock market's index also rose more than 4 percent yesterday, beating its one-day record gain set in July.

After three days of heavy losses, including Monday's record 554-point drop, investors returned to the stock market on the 68th anniversary of the Great Crash of 1929 with a hunger for enduring big-name companies.

International Business Machines Corp. led the rebound, contributing the most of any Dow stock to its rise. The company gave the market a dose of inspiration after about an hour of trading by announcing it would buy up to $3.5 billion worth of its own stock. The move pushed its stock up $7.43 3/4 to $97.50 at late afternoon. Boeing and General Electric were also among the Dow's strongest components.

As soon as the closing bells started ringing through the cavernous New York Stock Exchange, traders erupted into cheers and threw trading tickets into the air.

It was their second celebration in an hour. Traders chanted "Go, Go, Go" as volume neared 1 billion shares and broke into cheers once the milestone was reached at about 3 p.m. The previous record had been set Monday at 685.5 million shares.

Yesterday's numbers dwarf those of Oct. 28, 1929, when the Crash touched off the Depression. The Dow fell 38.33 points that day, but that was nearly 13 percent of the average's value. It closed at 260.64.

At one point during early trading today, the Dow had been down as much as 178 points, putting it below 7,000 for the first time since May. As the bargain hunters rushed in, things got so busy in some areas that one trading supervisor yelled, "Now everybody just calm down!"

The technology-laden Nasdaq stock market, which was down more than 4 percent at one point this morning, was up 65.25 at 1,600.34 — an increase of 4.25 percent.

Turn to RECORD, page 3

raid

continued from page 1

shortcomings which contributed directly to the grave results of the operation," the report said.

Not all the families of the dead soldiers were convinced. "The intelligence question remains open, even after the report," said Shlomo Ilya, the uncle of Sgt. Maj. Itamar Ilya, whose body is being held in Lebanon.

In the raid, the naval commandos landed on the Lebanese shore around midnight, moved through orchards and were crossing a road when two explosions went off, killing several soldiers. A few minutes later, a demolitions charge on Ilya's back went off, killing several more troops.

According to testimony from the commandos and Lebanese sources, the commandos then were attacked by gunfire from Lebanese guerrillas and soldiers.

Although the panel said intelligence preparation for the operation was "thorough and sufficient," it said the planners of the operation had not even considered the possibility that bombs might have been planted in the area.

Nevertheless, the committee said, that did not appear to directly affect the planning of the operation.

The report said the panel found "several shortcomings in the area of intelligence," which it did not disclose, but said there was no direct relation between the shortcomings and the failure of the raid.

KEN MC DONALD/ COLLEGIAN

I'll be watching you...

Kim Gibney, a senior sociology major, looks in a mirror as she checks out some new hats at a sweater sale in the Campus Center yesterday.

Clinton

continued from page 1

cannot have our relationship with China held hostage to any single issue... This is not a one-issue summit," she said.

"I find it encouraging that China has decided to invite three prominent American religious leaders to China" to talk about human rights, Albright told reporters. She referred to representatives of Catholic, Evangelical and Jewish groups.

But she voiced disappointment Beijing hasn't freed dissidents ahead of the summit. "We would like them to take some action."

Jiang, who speaks halting English, and Clinton, who is fluent in the ways of woolng world leaders, were to meet for about an hour in the White House residence yesterday evening without other officials present.

The meeting was to be more social than an attempt to address disputes about human rights, trade and arms sales, administration officials said Monday. The gregarious Clinton has used similar one-on-one problem-solving tactics with leaders such as Russian President Boris Yeltsin and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, a favorite dining partner.

"With Kohl, Clinton can belly up to the bar," said Jonathan Pollack, an Asia expert at Rand Corp., a Santa Monica, Calif., think tank. But with Jiang and Clinton, he added, "There's not a sense that these two leaders are confident enough to lower their guard and speak to each other candidly."

At his first meeting with Jiang at the 1993 Asia Pacific Economic Conference, Clinton refused to even smile for photographs. This time, the administration wants a public display of closer ties during the first Chinese state visit in 12 years. It's also the first summit since the 1989 Tiananmen Square massacre of prodemocracy demonstrators, something the administration says can no longer solely define the U.S.-China relationship.

Jiang appears intent on showing a warmer face to America too, as he visits five cities outside the nation's capital during an eight-day U.S. tour.

Today, Jiang donned a Colonial era three-cornered hat and posed for pictures, then toured the restored Governor's Palace in Colonial Williamsburg, Va., a cradle of American-style democracy. Interpreters portraying Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry gave them a tour.

About a dozen protestors, kept 250 yards from the palace, held signs reading "Free Tibet" and "Human Rights Now."

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
Oct. 24
A two vehicle accident occurred on Governors Drive.
A two vehicle accident occurred on Massachusetts Avenue.

Alarm — Fire
Oct. 27
A fire occurred in the trash room in Cashin Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
Oct. 26
A vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive was broken into.

Disturbance
Oct. 24
Two individuals were reported yelling in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.
Oct. 25
An individual from Gorman Residence Hall reported an assault on Butterfield Terrace.
Stephen A. Smith, 21, of 14 Foster St., Avon and Jonathan D. Rosario, 19, of 34 Edson St., Brockton, and Timothy P. Sawyer, 20, of 102 Waldeck Rd., Milton were arrested in Moore Residence Hall for disorderly conduct.

Drug Law Offenses
Oct. 23
An odor or marijuana was reported in Kennedy Residence Hall.

Family Offenses, Domestics
Oct. 25
Adam K. Wilchfort, 22, of 213 Juniper Cir., Lawrence, NY, was arrested in Dickinson Residence Hall for disturbing the peace, assault and threat to commit a crime.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 25
A small leaf fire on Sylvan Drive was extinguished by Environmental Health and Safety.
Environmental Health and Safety was called to check on alarm sounding in Conte Building.

Larceny
Oct. 23
An individual from Crampton Residence Hall reported bicycle parts stolen.
An individual reported his wallet stolen from a locker in Curry Hicks.
Oct. 24
A display telephone was stolen from Boyden Gym. Estimated value $480.
Oct. 26
Individuals were attempting to steal exit signs in Patterson Residence Hall.
A dealer license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
Oct. 27
A display telephone was stolen from the School of Management. Estimated value $450.

Liquor Law Violations
Oct. 24
Michael A. Rutman, 19, of 236 Adams Rd., Oakham, was arrested on University Drive for possession of liquor and possession of false registered motor vehicle documents.
Oct. 25
James A. Beaulieu, 19, of 3 Hastings Ln., Nashua NH, was arrested on University Drive for possession of liquor.
Edmund Torraca, 19, of 206 Holbrook Rd., Holbrook, NY, was arrested on University Drive for possession and transport of alcohol.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 24
There was a report of two intoxicated males kicking side mirrors of vehicles in parking lot 11 on University Drive.

Traffic Stop
Oct. 25
Matthew E. McGrail, 19, of 93 Almont St., Winthrop, was arrested on University Drive for possession and transport of liquor.
Oct. 26
Keith J. Goldsmith, 22, of 165H Brittany Manor Dr., Amherst, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license and unsafe operation of a motor vehicle (speeding).

Vandalism
Oct. 23
Graffiti was reported in Bartlett Hall.
Oct. 24
Graffiti was written in the bathroom of Bartlett Hall.

Correction

It was reported in yesterday's Daily Collegian in an article entitled, "GEO action against administration; bargaining for a new contract," that the current teaching assistant (TA) salary at the University of Massachusetts is $6,990 per year. The minimum salary for TA's is $6,940; salaries fluctuate due to the individual TA's contract with the University. The Collegian regrets the error.

Looking to beef up your resumé?
Want to have your name in the paper?

The Collegian is always looking for new and enthusiastic writers to cover a variety of issues concerning the University of Massachusetts. Call 545–3500 or stop by the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement for more information.

ALL STUDENTS!!

Campus Career Network — Graduate & Professional Schools — Campus Career Network

Over 100 schools including:

Albany Law School
Assumption College
Boston University
Clark University
Columbia University
Drew University
Harvard University
University of Maryland
New School for Social Research
New York University
National College of Chiropractic
Tufts University

Wednesday, October 29, 1997
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts / Amherst
10:00 am to 3:00 pm

Information & Literature on Admission, Financial Aid, and Housing

Coordinated by the Campus Career Network, University of Massachusetts / Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges

Author of GLBT comic strip to visit UMass today

By Katie Thoennes
Collegian Correspondent

Laughter, sex, skin and politics — these are the things that keep University of Massachusetts students interested in comic artist Alison Bechdel.

Bechdel is the author of the comic strip Dykes to Watch Out For. While the strip is unknown to some, it has a large following within the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered (GLBT) community. With Bechdel's universal appeal, the comic is rapidly gaining attention across the board.

The creator of seven books, the 37-year-old Bechdel is coming to UMass today to elaborate on Dykes to Watch Out For. She is speaking and presenting a slide show about exactly how this comic strip came into existence.

Dykes to Watch Out For is syndicated in many small papers and journals. While her audience is getting larger, the elements of the comic strip stay the same. The strip is a medley of many characters, who are smart, diverse and hilarious women who all happen to be lesbians.

Bechdel said that she has always drawn cartoons. She began writing comic strips about lesbians only after she came out as a lesbian herself. Since her first book, which was published through Firebrand Books in 1986, Bechdel has provided education as well as humor. The comic strip is "some people's first exposure to lesbian culture, which I find hilarious," she said.

Bechdel's humor has helped to further the acceptance of GLBT people in many different ways. On almost any comic page, the characters are almost universally white, male and straight. Yet, Bechdel's characters are anything but that.

Multiculturalism and diversity are important aspects of Dykes to Watch Out For. While Bechdel said many of the characters are extensions of [her]self, they are all very different.

Bechdel is one of the syndicated cartoonists who includes sex in the comic strips; lesbian sex on top of that. Bechdel said that due to the fact that the comic only reached GLBT subculture at first, the sex and politics were acceptable.

Though Dykes to Watch Out For is continually well received, it seems that several people have a similar problem.

"People want to see themselves in the strip," Bechdel said. Though the characters span many races, backgrounds and religions, the audience always wants something more. "Christian lesbians are just one example of audience requests," Bechdel said. Along with army lesbians and Jewish lesbians, these special requests are a steady line of feedback which Bechdel receives.

While Bechdel only holds speaking arrangements three or four times a year, she is a UMass regular. On her return to UMass, she will be speaking two times. In her first engagement, Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Hampden Southside room, she will be giving an overview of Dykes to Watch Out For. The second talk is part of the Brown Bag Lunch Series. It is at 12:30 p.m. on Thursday in the Campus Center room 101. She will be discussing "Assimilation and Its Discontents."

MARIAH MACBOSTIE/ COLLEGIAN

Climbing to new heights

Last weekend a group of UMass students travelled on a nature photo expedition to the White Mountains of New Hampshire. Here, they are shown on the summit of Mt. Pemigawasset.

record

continued from page 1

Besides the IBM buyback, traders got other good news this morning — a drop in consumer confidence and only a modest rise in wages and benefits, both of which reinforced expectations that the Federal Reserve wouldn't raise short-term interest rates anytime soon.

There was no frenzy as prices dropped in the first hour — just the New York Stock Exchange's normal din — but traders who had arrived at work with grim faces yelled with joy as the prices went upward. "I'm smiling because I still have a job," joked Michael Galluchi, who works for the trading firm LaBranche & Co.

During a visit to Chicago, President Clinton declined to comment about today's gyrations, except to try to reassure investors.

"Our economy is as strong and vibrant today as it has been in a generation," he said. "We have to feel confident and continue our economic strategy."

The Dow fell 554.26 to 7,161.15 on Monday, surpassing the 508-point Black Monday crash of Oct. 19, 1987, as its biggest point drop ever and prompting U.S. stock markets to shut down for the first time since the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

students

continued from page 1

professors already... and we've never been against students collecting their own information," said Jenny Spencer, Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP) faculty union president.

Those opposed to only the global questions being released for student information fell to 26.6 percent, with 46 percent in approval.

In order to implement the CATE guide, it must be written into the faculty contracts that evaluations will become public information. Contracts are up for renewal this June and negotiations are scheduled to start sometime next semester.

The proposal will be presented by the Administration to the faculty union at that time.

"I feel students should have access to appropriate information to help them make good choices, if [the CATE guide] is well done. That's the big issue here. It needs to be fair to the faculty," said Mary Deane Sorcinelli, Director of the Teaching Development Center.

"It took two years of discussions with the administration to reach an agreement with them. Now we're just waiting for negotiations," Kenen said.

SCERA is looking into making the guide available on the World Wide Web, which will cut down on costs. Schools which the UMass CATE guide may be modeled after include the University of Colorado Boulder and the University of Florida.

If the CATE guide is included in the faculty contracts, it could be made available for the first time during the fall semester, 1999.

Bryan C. Harvey, Associate Provost for Academic Planning and Assessment and John Cunningham, faculty advisor to the Provost, could not be reached for comment.

scholarships

continued from page 1

considers a student's Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores, the difficulty of their course work, the activities that they participated in and their socio-economic background in making application decisions.

"There is a whole sliding scale of factors where a student whose G.P.A. average is below 3.0 could be accepted to the University," Green said.

In general, though, Green agreed that admission to UMass Amherst is becoming more competitive, and noted that the average G.P.A. of this fall's incoming class was 3.1— higher than in previous years.

In addition, the University has made a transfer compact with the state's community colleges guaranteeing community college graduates who earn their associates degree with a 2.5 G.P.A. average admission to the University.

tour

continued from page 1

the William Smith Clark Memorial. This silhouetted memorial is commonly known as "the drum circle" but is actually a recognition of the founder of our university. Clark is also well known in Japan for founding Hokkaido University. The memorial on top of the hill is the silhouette of both schools. When standing in the center of this metal circle and looking to the west (toward Van Meter) one can see the outline of UMass and to the east one can see the outline of Hokkaido University.

On Stockbridge Road the tour learned that the 1927 that is in the cement in the front of the Franklin Dining Hall is part of a tradition that was carried on by Massachusetts Agricultural College (which is now UMass). Classes, upon graduation, donated a block with their year of graduation to a Memory lane that used to run around the campus pond. Freshmen were not allowed to step on the numbers and had to hop over them. The class of 1927 decided to put their plaque out by Stockbridge for fun. The class of 1928 also altered tradition by placing their plaque on the steps of Draper Hall, the old dining hall.

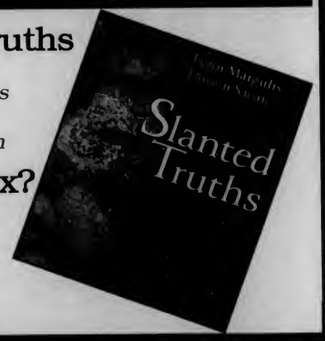
The tour continued down to the old chapel where the tour guides warned not to be surprised to hear the chapel bells ring on Halloween even though no one will be up there. The library was the final destination for the group and there the guides wrapped up the tour.

"We did this because we wanted other people to hear these stories and to make sure that the history gets passed on," Naman said.

homeless

continued from page 1

provide in-house shelter, they can refer people who are in need to programs like the Grove Street Inn and the Cot Program. These services are available to homeless people as well as to low-income families.



"As further cuts are made to public assistance programs we expect to see a greater demand in our community for our services," Tavatorchis said.

Last fiscal year, the Amherst Survival Center received visits from 15,761 homeless, collected and distributed 170,167 pounds of food and 260,299 pounds of clothing, prepared 4,416 hot lunches and had over 1,000 volunteers contributing 12,000 hours to the Survival Center.

The Survival Center is open Mondays through Fridays (not Wednesdays) to the public. For more information about hours of operation, volunteer services or donations call 549- 5960.

A CELEBRATION OF NEW BOOKS

Slanted Truths
Lynn Margulis and Dorian Sagan

What is Sex?
Lynn Margulis and Dorian Sagan

On Thursday October 30, 1997
from 12p.m. - 2p.m.come and meet authors
Umass Professor Lynn Margulis, Dorian Sagan, and Special Guests
Please Come!
at the
The University Store Campus Center

For more information call the University Store @ 545-2619
Hours: Monday - Friday 9-5
Saturday 11 - 4
We accept the UCARD

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES
Presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY'S
HALLOWEEN SPECTACULAR

PSYCHIC FAIR

THE ULTIMATE PSYCHIC FAIR
TAROT CARD READER
PALM READER
The Complete
PERSONAL NUMEROLOGY

Past, Present & Future All Under One Roof!

FRIDAY OCTOBER 31, 1997
7:00 PM ROOM 163 CAMPUS CENTER
MOVIE: "MEN IN BLACK"
FEATURING: TOMMY LEE JONES, WILL SMITH, LINDA FIORENTINO AND VINCENT D'ONOFRIO

STUDENT OPENERS: STEVE BRYKMAN AND BOUNDARIES

SHOWTIMES FOR M.I.B. ARE
9PM & 11PM IN THE
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
"MEN IN BLACK" ALSO SHOWING
SUNDAY NOV. 2
IN THE STUDENT UNION
BALLROOM
AT 8PM AND 10PM

This series is made possible by a grant from Umass Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and: DAILY COLLEGIAN http://www.umass.edu.campact/events/eof.html
phone # 545-3500

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

A call for action

The responses to last Wednesday's referenda should inspire action. When the student body expresses its opinions through a vote, what happens? SGA has adopted (or will adopt) all of these responses as official policy, but most of the questions deal with issues that SGA doesn't have a final say in — if any say at all. It is most important for the University's administration and Board of Trustees to give student opinions a strong say in their decision making processes.

For example, student disapproval of the guidelines on the picketing code was clear. University by–laws require that student input be given when such policy decisions are made. From the voting results on this and other matters, we doubt whether the University's governing bodies are paying as much attention to student opinion as they should.

Part of the University's fundraising drive, Campaign UMass, involves a push to increase the donations of alumni beginning with their first year after graduation. How does the University expect to gain the support and trust of its future alumni by disregarding their opinions while they are here?

But it isn't only for crass economic reasons that the University's governing bodies should defer to student opinion. The integrity of the University is nullified by a failure to do so.

Our mission as a public university is to produce citizens who, by thinking for themselves, will become active and well–educated participants in our democratic society. When students learn that their state government doesn't care what they think at the university, they'll know the same is true outside.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

A burning issue

focus on the Environment

Jason Davis

Here are some facts. Average global temperatures for the last 10 years have been the highest for any decade on record. Atmospheric carbon dioxide concentration, the primary culprit in the greenhouse effect and a remarkably accurate mirror of global climate through geologic time, has been building rapidly since the Industrial Revolution. If global temperature continues to rise with carbon dioxide levels, the earth's climate will undergo serious and possibly catastrophic disruptions.

Despite the almost universally agreed upon sentiment that the potential consequences of climate change are so troubling that immediate action should be taken to decrease greenhouse gas emissions, our eternally cautious president recently concluded that nothing has to be done about global warming until his term is up. He even gave poor Al Gore a break — it's anything goes until 2008, at which point someone else will be responsible for the superficial plan of very gradually reducing carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels.

Did someone once call these guys environmentalists? This ineffectual piece of fluff is what they will be bringing to Kyoto, Japan, where international negotiations on reducing greenhouse gases will take place in December. Needless to say, Clinton's proposals have been widely criticized. Carl Pope, of the Sierra Club, likened them to "fighting a five– alarm blaze with a garden hose."

European leaders have been similarly blunt. "Something much more substantial will need to come out of the White House if the United States is to face up to its global responsibilities," said Peter Jorgensen, a spokesman for the European Commission.

The rest of the world has reason to be concerned. At present, the U.S. is the largest single contributor to global warming. With only 4 percent of the world's population, we manage to crank out 22 percent of global carbon dioxide emissions.

America, with its corporate–governmental crybabies, also has an entrenched addiction to burning fossil fuels. Like any addiction, there is a tendency to cling desperately to it even as it kills you.

Any effective strategy for preventing, or at the very least lessening climate changes, must have as its main goal a significant reduction in the rate fossil fuels are burned. Simple as that.

Achieving this goal, however, turns out to be not as simple. The gargantuan oil, coal, electric and automobile industries have bought their way into politics and are presently setting the fossil–fuel–burning agenda for years to come. Accordingly, our government is all too willing to ignore the threat of ecological catastrophe so long as the dollars keep rolling in.

Consumers aren't helping things either. It has been widely recognized that a higher gas tax is necessary to reflect the true social cost of gasoline combustion, to foster energy conservation and the development of alternative fuels, and to ultimately curb the effects of climate change. Of course, to institute taxes of any kind, and especially gas taxes, is to commit political hara–kiri. A recent New York Times survey concluded that while a vast majority of Americans feel that global warming is a legitimate threat and that the government should take strong measures to curtail it, all but a few are violently opposed to raising gasoline prices. This attitude will have to change if we are to make any progress.

Another problem is the wildly inaccurate messages we receive about climate change. For instance, you can still read about the "debate" which is going on over the very existence of global warming and if anything should be done about it. The U.S. is unique in the sense that it is the lone industrialized country in the world where this question is still being asked, while the only debates in other nations have to do with how fast and how severe climate change will be.

In reality, there is no debate in America either. What you have are scientific studies, which nearly unanimously conclude that global warming is happening now, and a $13 million corporate misinformation campaign, cooked up to convince us that climate change is nothing but a myth and would be too expensive to do anything about now.

The mainstream media has done their part to stall action on global warming with their unyielding attempt to foster a "balance" between opposing viewpoints. In this case, that means giving equal weight to the arguments of world– renowned climatologists and to spokespeople for Exxon, as if whatever scientific whores the corporations can buy off represent sources of legitimate, unbiased testimony.

It is long overdue that we begin questioning, on a worldwide scale, the embarrassingly transparent motives of gluttonous money hustlers who demand that nothing stand in the way of their profits. Their behavior, their willingness to threaten the lives of billions of people in order to make a buck is shocking, even in this age of corruption and complacency. In the end, it comes down to a question of whether or not the human race is enlightened enough to put a stop to our slow, sure suicide. If we are not, any decisions about our future will surely be made for us, not by us.

Jason Davis is a Collegian columnist.

Rockin' the vote

It's kind of sad, but people really don't feel the urge to vote. Here at the University of Massachusetts, a paltry 15 percent of the student population turned out to vote in the recent Student Government Association (SGA) elections.

You'd think, in this democratic country of ours, people would be flocking to the poll booths, eager to voice their opinion.

A friend told me he knew it was important to vote, but he never felt like his vote counted for anything because it was just one vote among millions.

What if there are millions of people in this country who had the same thought and that's why they weren't voting?

So in a rare moment of brilliance, I came up with an idea to reform the way we elect our leaders.

Now, as a standard disclaimer, let me say that my knowledge of politics is limited to high school social studies. I once registered for a political science class here, but the professor scared me half to death and I had to drop the class.

So, in sum, I have little knowledge of politics — but that's okay. Few people in Washington actually know what's going on there anyway.

But back to my ideas for election reform. First, we'd have to do away with the electoral college. I don't know what the electoral college is about, but I got a sneaking suspicion that the founders of our country didn't trust us to vote in any honest politicians, so they stuck us with the mysterious electoral college.

I mean, we voters would do the right thing without the electoral college — we still haven't voted Ross Perot into office now, have we?

So scrap the electoral college. Now we're on our own.

People need an incentive to vote. Short of giving everyone a shiny gold star for filling out a ballot, I think we should have a point system to reward those who take time away from their tennis game or mah jong club to vote.

Under my proposed system, five points would equal one additional vote. So, if you voted in a minor election, say the school board election, you would earn five points.

A mayoral election would add 20 points to your account. Voting for a state representative would get you 30 points and voicing your support for a gubernatorial candidate would add 40 points. Voting for the United States Senate would add 50 points to your total.

So what do all these points mean?

Under my proposal, you would cash in all your points during a presidential election. So if you have accumulated 100 points over four years, you get 20 extra votes. Sounds good, huh? The more you vote, the more voice you get in the actual election.

And just to keep faith with the founders, we'd still have a check on bad decisions. Before casting ballots for the president, voters would need to submit to a 10 minute oral examination. This would be to prevent stellar candidates like David Duke or Newt Gingrich from taking office.

The oral exam would consist of asking voters about three pertinent issues in the current presidential campaign. You wouldn't have to reveal your opinion if you didn't want to — you just need to show you have half of a clue about what's going on.

This way, we can be sure people have really thought about who they are voting for and why. The exam would eliminate decisions made on the basis of hair, youth or fashion sense.

After taking your exam, you would be ushered to the Official Election Bank, where you would cash–in your votes. It's kind of silly idea, I know, and I'm sure there are a dozen political experts out there who would come out and tell me exactly how impractical and illogical my proposal is.

I concede them their point.

As a political pundit, I lack the knowledge to serve as an expert on "Geraldo," but I really think my idea has a semblance of merit, since under my proposal, your vote would be more than a drop in the ocean.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Seema Gangatirkar

Saying thanks

You can love them. You can loathe them. Either way, you've got to respect them. Professors (and even teaching assistants, grad students running a class, whatever) are there to help. While some may have lost their inspiration and going to their classes becomes about as routine and boring as a medical checkup, there are those who make going to class actually something you can look forward to.

I have tended to find that the most inspired teachers are those who base themselves in the humanities and the liberal arts. Then again, I haven't had any taste of business–based classes and the only science ones I've been in were for Gen– Eds. So pardon me if I like to read literature and poetry, and study music and the general history and thoughts of mankind over time. I wasn't born a calculator, but instead a word processor.

Joshua Boyd

What I'm writing for is to personally thank certain professors whose classes and company I've had the pleasure to be in over four and a half years of college.

To Bill Verts: Yes, COINS 105 is always a very big class. And there is no reason why you'd remember me from the spring '94 semester, but I was there and enjoying your class that brought me closer to the techno–jargon and the general inner workings of the concepts surrounding The Computer. Thank you for turning me into an e–mail and Netscape junkie.

To Liz Petroff: You always led me in the right direction and put yourself out to help me and thousands of others over the years. Whenever other CAS majors and I talk, we all praise you for being a guardian angel of sorts in our higher education. When I needed a reference for my National Student Exchange, I asked on a Friday, and you had it ready on a Monday, even on such short notice. That was just one of those times that I thank you for, not to mention the fall '94 spiritual autobiography class I took.

To David Lenson: What other professor would stroll into a dark classroom, 9:30 a.m., with wrap–around sunglasses and a leather jacket and sit down and talk with a class about how great 19th–century writers of sex, drugs and opera were? Won't forget "Decadence In Europe" from spring '95 anytime soon.

To William Hanley, Michael Dessen, and James Garrison: Ah, you three gentlemen, who have attained this English major to sneak under the barbed wire of the Music Department and study the fundamentals of theory and tonal harmony, deserve many thanks from a big music lover. I'm serious when I say I'd be missing a whole lot in music if it weren't for you guys.

To Joe Pernice: I can say I knew you when you were teaching creative writing classes at UMass before you went and signed a contract with Sub Pop Records for your band Scud Mountain Boys. Your charisma really moved that class. Those two and a half hours a week when I could listen to some great writings by my classmates and get my own stuff off my chest helped me through a rough emotional period involving depression in spring '95.

To Kirby Farrell: You found the most interesting ways to insert your "screw the system" ethics into a deceptively innocent course on the modern novel, and therefore incited active discussions, something one needs at 5 p.m. I'll never look at Disney's Beauty And The Beast as anything but social brainwashing again.

Also, I was out at Western Washington University for my junior year where I was lucky enough to be in Ning Yu's American literature classes (I took two of them with him), Jim Bertolino's class on creative non–fiction writing (I learned a lot about slugs, tool), and Michiko Yusa's class on Japanese literature and culture (thank you, Professor Yusa, for introducing me to Matsuo Basho, the haiku master). And of course, Kevin Bressler taught me all I know about the ways of the recording studio.

Anyone else whose names I have left out, I'm sure I will remember you all and you should be satisfied that a person out there has a thought in his head which you have seeded and he has let grow into one of his own.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Write for a Point/Counterpoint!

The Collegian Editorial page will be running a point/counterpoint feature on the proposed Honors College. Articles must be well–written and researched. The deadline for submission is Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 5 p.m. Anyone who is interested should submit material by e–mail (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices in the box of Ed/Op editor Dan Bosen. Editorials must be 500–700 words long and include your name and phone number.

Letters to the Editor

No happy Halloween

To the Editor:

On Friday morning, Oct. 24, many young children woke up to find that all down the lane pumpkins, Halloween decorations and a scarecrow were missing.

That weekend, we saw that many pumpkins were smashed on the yard of the Phi Mu Delta fraternity. Looking closer we realized that a shirt lying around was the shirt of the missing scarecrow.

We can not prove that they stole our pumpkins, but we would like whoever took our stuff to know that we don't have any pumpkins for Halloween.

Will Oldershaw, age 11
Catherine Oldershaw, age 7
Amherst

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003, or by e–mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu. Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor
Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

G. Love's latest an Easy pleasure

IT / FREAKS / MASTERS OF THE UNIVERSE
Pulp
Velvel

Hailing from Sheffield, England, Pulp is the longest overnight sensation in the history of contemporary British pop history. Whereas rivals Suede and Oasis were anointed "The next big thing" prior to ever having released a full album, Pulp languished in obscurity for nearly 15 years before the wild success of 1995's brilliant Different Class, which culminated in the band winning England's prestigious Mercury Music Prize (equivalent to a Grammy) for album of the year.

Capitalizing on this newly etched popularity, Velvel Records has re–issued Pulp's first two albums, 1983's It and 1986's Freaks, as well as Masters of the Universe — which collects a number of their early singles recorded for Fire Records. All three of which were difficult to obtain Stateside.

It illustrates a markedly dissimilar Pulp than what many fans are familiar with. Jarvis Cocker's songcraft is still in its infancy and looking back in retrospect, his lyrics are of little consequence and often nonsensical. The absence of keyboards, now a Pulp trademark, help to create a sound which precariously borders on folk — think of David Bowie's early songs from the mid–'60s.

Freaks, is easily their darkest work, devoid of Cocker's whimsical trappings that delineate Pulp's current incarnation. The songwriting, while on the whole stronger than It, still comes across as second generation mimicry of Joy Division or The Smiths; it's hardly innovative.

Another minuscule step forward, Masters of the Universe is where Cocker's quirky, enigmatic persona begins to take center stage.

While none of these albums can be considered essential, they are nonetheless important because they each trace the long, hard road of Pulp's progression. The only trouble is that nothing here gives even the slightest indication of what was to come. The grandly theatrical, synth–spiked pop flourishes the define the Pulp sound in the '90s are nowhere to be heard here. It/ C–, Freaks/ C, Masters of the Universe/ C (Marty Keane)

YEAH, IT'S THAT EASY
G. Love & Special Sauce
OKeh/Epic

Following a two–year studio break, the eclectic sounds of G. Love and Special Sauce return for their third album Yeah, It's That Easy (OKeh/Epic). Backed by the "Special Sauce" of acoustic bassist Jim Prescot and drummer Jeffrey Clemens, the unclassifiable frontman G. Love offers up more of the same mix.

Unlike the trio's last album, Coast to Coast Motel, their latest offering lacks a bulk of raucous jams. With the exception of the tracks "1–76" and "You Shall See," G. Love seems to have mellowed with age. This may be due to the fact that members of his three other bands (the All Fellas Band, the Philly Cartel, and the King's Court) all appear on Yeah, It's That Easy along with Special Sauce.

COURTESY ALISTER INDGE

Reissues of first three Pulp releases don't match their present day brilliance.

Written as a musical tour of his native Philadelphia (complete with a chorus which reads like a '76ers All–Star timeline), "1–76" rocks true to the trio's part rap, part blues part folk combo. "You Shall See" and the album's first radio track "Stepping Stones" suffice in up–tempo department.

The tracks billed in the liner notes as "mellow 70's soul tunes" ("Take You There" and "Willow Tree")

Turn to TRAX, page 6

There's nothing good on TV anymore

Tube Notes with Alex Iglesias

There was a time, not very long ago, when you could blurt out over a hundred of your favorite prime time characters — not to mention regurgitating every line of every episode. You would pre–plan your schedule weeks in advance, just to make sure you wouldn't dare miss "Dynasty," "Knots Landing," or "Hill Street Blues." Or maybe you even had a Saturday engagement with "Pee Wee Herman's Playhouse."

It was television cult at its best — eyes glued to the tube. All of your focus was on this technological god.

Take a phone call from a close friend.

"Hi buddy," you say. "I'm in the middle of Miami Vice.' I'll talk to you after the show. I'll bet you Tubs dies in this episode. See ya, bye."

Television was a family event for the most part — one living room, one TV. It was the after dinner double–dessert. It was simple, hearty and communal. Shows were of the ubiquitous kind. Let us face it, you had ABC, CBS and NBC — why would you want anything more? We said we liked our shows. We don't need that cable thing. It costs too much money. How could we fall into the obnoxious over– programming of cable networks, and give up "MacGyver" and "Remington Steel" or how about our patriotic pride and joy "Great American Hero?"

Back in the good old days, we were sure not to miss the season finales of "Cheers" or "Family Ties."

Then it was summer time. Re–run season began and wouldn't end for quite some time. Why? Because your favorite shows were gone for good. New pilots were quickly arriving on the super–power networks, which would soon begin their unprecedented downfall of quality programming. Who was left? "The Cosby Show." Oh, oh... it was their last season also. What happened?

"There is nothing good on TV."

You would come home and beg your parents to subscribe to cable. Everyone had it. They have movies, comedy, and MTV (when they played music)!

"I'll never pay for that devilish programming!" your pop said. Of course not, there were plenty of quality shows left on the public networks. But there weren't, so you finally got cable — the new religion of the American television viewer. The new brash, and eclectic viewing service which had "Playboy," "HBO," "ESPN" and the Home Shopping Network had taken the land by storm.

Finally, you noticed that "Beverly Hills, 90210" and "Melrose Place" just wasn't cutting it. So you tuned all of your attention to cable. You watched "Beavis and Butthead" come about and fade quickly after their originality blew the big one. You tuned to the movie channels and then wondered why you were able to write the scripts from memory for the years 10 best movies. I believe Top Gun has been shown about 50 plus times within the past week on one of those cable channels.

"There is nothing good on TV."

The art of channel surfing began. Click... Click... Click, times 200 plus channels. How can you watch over 200 channels? I'll tell you how. It's called Direct TV or Satellite TV, for God's sake I'm surprised we don't have some type of intersteller television programming. Yet, there is nothing on. Why is there 10 different channels for HBO with one through five playing Ghost? Maybe it's for those everyday viewers who have five televisions and want to watch it in Dolby–surround sound.

So what is your favorite show? "Uh, the one with that brown–haired guy in it. Ya know. What's it called?" Have you actually seen every episode of your favorite show? "South Park" doesn't count either. Do you know when "South Park" began? Maybe what we all need are those multi–screened Magnavox TVs so we can watch our shows. Then again...

"There is nothing good on TV."

Alex Iglesias is a Collegian staff member.

Got a tip?
If you are aware of a developing news story, call 545-1762 and speak with Jonathan Liberty, News Editor. At the Collegian, we take pride in being there first and providing the best coverage in the area. Remember... that's 545-1762.

amc Theatres
$2.50 (Tue.-Thu. Late Shows Only)
• Special Engagements, No Passes or Coupons
Silence Is Golden - No child under 6 on any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.

MT. FARMS 4 • 584-9153
MT. FARMS MALL
Gattaca (PG-13)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
Playing God (R)
Today at 8:20
The Full Monty (R)
Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:30
I know What You Did Last Summer (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Rocketman (PG)
Today at 5:50 ($2.50)

HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550
HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R)
Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
The Peacemaker (R)
Today at 8:20
A Life Less Ordinary (R)
Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
In and Out (PG-13)
Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R)
Today at 5:10 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13)
Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:30
L.A. Confidential (R)
Today at 5:10 ($2.50)

STA Travel offers student discounts on domestic travel, too.
800-777-0112
www.sta-travel.com
STA Travel, the world's largest student travel organization.
STA TRAVEL We've been there

Six Going on Seven release mediocre

Okay, while I still have your attention, here are some upcoming concert events. A new club in Springfield called Daddy-O's opened up and have a slew of shows coming up; on Nov. 1, Brand New Unit, Pezz, Jon Cougar Concentration Camp and Pinhead Circus; on Nov. 7, East Coast Panic, Sweet 16, Yum Yum Tree and Kitty Badass, on Nov. 13 Aus Rotten, Broken and Stratford Mercenaries take the stage. The Eagles Club, also in Springfield, are having a show on Oct. 30 with Mens Recovery Project, Know Nothing and Ethnic featuring members of Halfman and Scapegrace.

Adam Dlugacz

In local shows on Friday, there is a Halloween show in the basement of Van Meter with Hallraker, Just About Done, The Ambsace Engine and a Misfits cover band. There is also an Animal Rights Benefit show coming up in Van Meter with Piebald, Hallraker, Cave In, Catch Thirteen and I think Just About Done.

Check out the following acts at Pearl Street, on Nov. 6: EYEHATEGOD, Today Is The Day, Overcast and Gandiva and on then, don't miss Nov. 15 — the concert event of the semester The Misfits. Sick Of It All and H2O.

SIX GOING ON SEVEN
Self Made Mess
Some Records

In hardcore it is difficult to be completely original and stay within the parameters of the genre, and while Six Going On Seven are an emo band the same limits apply. However when a band does borrow from their influence one of their goals should be to incorporate enough of their own sound so that the listener is provided with a new experience. Six Going On Seven does not do that.

Six Going On Seven's vocalist Joe English sounds like the singer from Chamberlin, the bass lines sound like Karate, and the music sounds like a cross between Promise Ring and Chamberlin or Falling Foward. While those are great bands and the combination may sound like a dream come true to many, when a band sounds this contrived it is easy to question their intentions.

As for the songs themselves, let's ignore the obvious influences for a moment, Six Going On Seven have a good sound going on. When the band cuts loose on tracks like "Sexy Like The Titanic," "Getaway Car" or "Sincerely" they rock with the emotion really coming through in the vocals. It is also during those songs where it is hard not to recall a more driving Chamberlin. On songs like "Endurance" the band falls into a groove and ends up sounding like a flat Karate. The lyrics deal with relationships and are wonderfully easy to relate to, a nice change from the abstract lyrics that tend to dominate this genre.

Six Going On Seven are off to a good start. They are a tight band who can play their instruments, they have a good vision of the sound they are striving for, and when they really rock out they can hold their own with even the best emo bands. They could be a band who could make some noise. On the other hand if they fail to develop their own sound and continue to blatantly borrow from others they will just be another band making frequent appearances in the used CD's bin. B–

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist

■ trax

continued from page 5

seem to blur into some of the album's other more laid back tunes.

Yeah, It's That Easy is much more relaxed than the band's previous two albums, but after a few listens it grows on you. B (Chris Stamm)

THE DURAN DURAN TRIBUTE ALBUM
Duran Duran
Mojo

The latest tribute album to arrive is in homage to one of the best bands to actually make it out of the '80s alive. The Duran Duran Tribute Album (Mojo) is a rollercoaster ride that features not one, but two versions of "Girls On Film" — what could be more pleasing than that? Unfortunately, not much. Don't get your hopes up too high because, although the album features two run-throughs, only one of them is worth listening to.

Once anyone hears the horrendous mockery that the Wesley Willis Fiasco has made of this cult classic, you'll welcome with open arms the tasteful rendition done by Bjorn Again, the ABBA tribute band.

Also, the beautiful and strikingly uncharacteristic sound of the Deftones' cover of "The Chauffeur" is speechless for all the right reasons while GOB's rapid take on "A View to Kill" makes one's head spin for all the wrong reasons.

Goldfinger takes a fierce stab at "Rio," while Reel Big Fish let loose on a humorous and quirky rendition of "Hungry Like the Wolf" and Eve's Plum does "Save a Prayer" exquisitely. Also, Buck-O-Nine does an adequate job with "Hold Back the Rain" — which is more than can be said for the remainder of the songs on the album.

So, even if you never had a Simon LeBon poster, or if you never dreamed of becoming the sixth member of Duran Duran, this tribute album is worth a listen for anyone who's ever admitted to liking the music of their childhood. C+ (Alexandria Lipka)

COURTESY NEAL PRESTON

The "Bitch" is back

Meredith Brooks will play a show this evening at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. This little shindig kicks it at 10 p.m. and more information can be obtained by calling 1–800–The Tick or 584–0610.

DAISY
Dog's Eye View
Columbia

Here's a bit of advice for those of you planning on seeing the Counting Crows when they come to the Mullins Center this Saturday — don't worry about showing up early to see Dog's Eye View.

Judging from their latest release, Daisy (Columbia), they are an act you can afford to miss. Daisy offers little to the listener and sounds as if it were produced by Velveeta. There are no catchy hooks, no clever lyrics and no sense of originality. What Dog's Eye View does offer up is a derivative cookie-cutter brand of music.

From listening to the opening track "The Trouble with Love," one might think that he or she is hearing a Sublime song that quickly turns into a Hootie & The Blowfish cover. Dog's Eye View continues along with their blend of lame commercial rock with tracks like "Last Letter Home" and "Goodbye to Grace."

Vocalist/guitarist Peter Stuart's songwriting skills avoid exploring any sort of musical extremities and as a result, the only decent moments on Daisy come off sounding mediocre at best. But even those occurrences are few and far between. Waiting for Daisy to be entertaining gets frustrating quickly because it just doesn't ever happen.

Undoubtedly riding the wave of their overplayed single off their previous album, Happy Nowhere, Dog's Eye View are a band that will be easily lost in the world of alternative, mainstream rock. Thank God for that. D (Kevin Monahan)

Visit our Website at www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUM PRESENTS:
the 7th annual SPORT MANAGEMENT CAREER DAY PANEL
10/29/97
3-5pm
rm. 904
campus center
Greg Bouris, BS '83, Director of PR & Communications, New York Sportschannel
Jon Guppy, MS '92, Director of Business Development, API Soccer
Joe Fitzgerald, BS '90, Licensing Administrator, MLB Properties
SuzanneWalmsley MS '93, Assistant Director of Atheletics, Wellesley College
Sponsored by Campus Career Network, Sport Management Program and the University of Massachusetts ATumni Association

Electrolysis
Disposable Sterile Needles
Student Discount
Free Parking
On Bus Line from Campus
John V. Ryan, R.E.
664 Main Street
253-9534

Movies Music Theater Comics Books Television Soaps The Dormroom Gourmet
You'll find them all in Collegian Arts.

CHEAP TICKETS INC.®
America's Travel Store...Since 1986
RESERVATIONS: Open 7 Days a Week Mon.-Fri. to Midnight Sat.-Sun. to 10:00 PM
Scheduled Major Carriers NO CHARTERS!

DOMESTIC		DOMESTIC
Albuquerque, NM	$329 rt	San Francisco, CA	$329 rt
Atlanta, GA	$149 rt	San Jose, CA	$329 rt
Baltimore, MD	$143 rt	Sarasota, FL	$159 rt
Colorado Springs, CO	$329 rt	Seattle, WA	$329 rt
Daytona Beach, FL	$159 rt	Tampa, FL	$159 rt
Ft. Louderdale, FL	$149 rt	Washington Dulles, DC	$143 rt
Ft. Myers, FL	$159 rt	Washington Natl, DC	$143 rt
Jacksonville, FL	$159 rt	West Palm Beach, FL	$149 rt
Los Angeles, CA	$329 rt
Miami, FL	$159 rt
Newark, NJ	$117 rt
Norfolk, VA	$143 rt
Ontario, CA	$329 rt
Orange County, CA	$329 rt
Orlando, FL	$159 rt
Phoenix, AZ	$329 rt
Salt Lake City, UT	$329 rt
San Diego, CA	$329 rt

HAWAII
Honolulu, HI	$615 rt
Kona, HI	$705 rt
Lihue, HI	$705 rt
Lanai City, HI	$705 rt
Maui, HI	$705 rt

CALL OR VISIT OUR NEW INTERACTIVE WEBSITE AT WWW.CHEAPTICKETS.COM FOR SPRING BREAK FARES!
RESERVATIONS: 1-800-247-7587
All fares are subject to applicable fees and departure taxes. Fares does not include taxes.
Introducing our NEW INTERACTIVE website at:http://www.cheaptickets.com

Yearbook Staff Prepares for Record Turnout

By Arnold Layne
Index Archives

Amherst- For the 129th year in a row, the UMass Yearbook Club begins production on the University's prestigious Index, this year however, will be designed and published not only as the 129th yearbook by the Index, but also the first to present the yearbook as a tour guide to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

> "The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." -Sean Marien

Asked on whether or not graduation seniors will be part of the yearbook, Managing Editor Loretta Kwan said "This year's book will not only include (Seniors), but will also include useful information on places to eat, places to go out to and also places to go when you're not feeling too well. There are a lot of places in this book. It's great!"

"Seniors will have to call the DaVor number to get in the yearbook. And quick." replied Editor-in-chief Jill Aordkian when asked how seniors will get in the book. "Last year we couldn't get all the Seniors in the book because they didn't get their photo taken soon enough."

This year the Index will be extending it's Senior Photo Shoot to allow for thousands of Seniors to get their photo in the book. Director of Marketing Sean Marien added "Seniors should call the number immediately. The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." The number to call for appointments is 1-800-836-05f58, and Seniors are encouraged to call as soon as possible during normal business hours.

"You have to call, you can't get around that." Photo Editor Aaron Eccles reply to if there was another way for Seniors to get in the book. "If you don't call, you can't get in, you just can't! There's no way."

"There's no need to worry, every students who gets their photo taken is put in the book, well except that once but....." said Kwan on the likeliness of not getting in the book. "Just call the number and show up. That's it."

A new feature of the 1998 Index is the addition of the Grad Edition. "The Grad Edition is the best thing this campus has seen since the invention of the disposable lighter" Copy Editor Sean Maguire commented. The Grad Edition comes with the purchase of each yearbook. The Grad Edition will be available to Seniors before commencement, which gives graduates the opportunity to give parting comments to their friends in school.

President Clinton and Chancellor Scott were contacted about the Grad Edition, however both were unavailable for comment.

Get your Senior Photo Taken Now!
Call 1-800-836-0558
To Make an Appointment Today
There will be $5 sitting fee
This will be your only chance to get in this year's book

■ tennis

continued from page 10

Lebovitz has made an impact on this UMass squad like no other freshman, acting like a veteran on the collegiate level. With this win in singles play, her fall record improves to an extremely impressive mark of 8–3.

The Lebovitz win was followed by two more UMass victories, coming from Steele and Wegner. The senior co- captain won her match in three sets, prevailing over Ali Brown, 6–2, 5–7, 6–4. The fall singles action was wrapped up with a win out of Wegner. Hailing from Andover, Wegner overcame Marianne Miller, 6–2, 7–5.

In doubles play, the Minutewomen took just one out of three matches, and that win came out of the team of senior co–captain Lana Gorodetskaya and sophomore Gillian Kane.

They overcame the Red Raiders' duo of Brown/Cyan Brakhage, 8–4. UMass closes out its fall season with a 6–5 record, and some great preparation for the winter season. The Minutewomen open up their winter season on January 30 in Ithaca N.Y. at the Cornell Invitational.

JORMA KANGASNIEMI/COLLEGIAN

Senior Marie Christine Caron topped her successful fall season by winning her match against Colgate, helping UMass to a 4–3 victory.

■ football

continued from page 10

gory alongside powerhouses like Cincinnati and Ole Miss. For Rick Neuheisel, that's slumming.

(Neuheisel is the coolest dressed coach in football though, no joke. Fleece vest under a white Nike turtleneck? Smashing baby. Oh yeah.)

6. Kansas — I once read a Penthouse when I was little (but that's another story). Anyway, they listed Kansas as the worst team in America for like 1988. After a brief upswing, they've been nothing but "smut–errific" lately.

7. Tennessee — Yeah, Peyton Manning's final romp through the SEC was a good one, but when Steve Spurrier said that you couldn't spell Citrus Bowl without the letters "UT", he was right again. They may love him in Knoxville, but he never beat Florida.

But then it looks like it might be Florida going Citrus this year.

(Excuse me, Steve. Is that a Nike in your mouth?).

8. Washington — If the Huskies could have beaten Nebraska, the Rose Bowl would have decided the national title.

9. Illinois — Everyone knew they were struggling, but seeing the Illini go 0–7 is shocking (where are you when they need you, Johnny Johnson?).

10. Indiana — Imagine if Bobby Knight coached the football team? You think Neil Reed and Andrae Patterson had it tough?

"Uh, I didn't miss that blitz, coach. It was Jenkins, I swear."

Booty Schwag of the Year Award...

Today, we bury an old friend.

You know, at first it was cute. It was like, "Oh, hey look. Luke picked the wrong team to win. Oh, hey look. Luke has a losing record."

It's just not cute anymore.

This week's Booty Schwag will be given in a sort of ceremonious round–about way, because today we bury the "Friends of the Program Inside Tip Pick of the Week."

Four straight losses (two by Clemson). A string of fans disagreeing with my picks, and being right. If it would have ran this week, my record would have listed me at 2–5. To put it in laymen's terms (because hey, let's face it, aren't we all laymen?), I'd have to make up a bowl to go to. And it would be a real crappy one, like the "Rid–X Roach Control Classic," to be played against Texas–El Paso (UTEP to all the non–believers).

I'm sure the beautiful city of Akron would make the world–famous Rubber Bowl available for the contest (yes, its called the Rubber Bowl, and I just heard that filthy joke you cracked. Have some manners, chief).

Even the Independence Bowl won't return my calls, but I think I overheard their P.R. guy in the back yelling "Uhh, is Kansas booked yet?"

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

■ Hurlbrink

continued from page 10

applause contrasted the tepid response to his pregame introduction.

He actually heard a few boos.

Camby, on the other hand, was hailed as though he had never left.

He is somewhat of a local product, coming from nearby Hartford, shunning rival UConn (among other schools) and the backwoods of Storrs, Conn. for the greener pastures of Amherst.

The best part of coming back to Western Mass., he said, was that he got to play in front of his mom who doesn't get up to Toronto much.

For two of his three seasons in the Valley, he was UMass basketball. He was a rare talent — a unique combination of size, speed and gracefulness. He was able to fulfill his potential in his junior year and led his team (and it was his team) to the Final Four. He was the consensus Player of the Year, and life was good.

He was the NBA's second overall draft pick in 1996, and life was better.

But, much like his former mentor, Camby's image is far from being Windex clean. He was accused of taking gifts and money from a Connecticut–based agent during his junior year at UMass, and rumors abound of liaisons with hookers and other such shady dealings.

Life wasn't so great anymore.

The university and the NCAA launched separate investigations. They both found substantial evidence that Camby had in fact been illegally in contact with an agent before he left school. The NCAA decided not to recognize the Minutemen's participation in the 1996 NCAA Tourney, and they ordered UMass to pay back the $151,000 of tournament revenue it received.

As if single–handedly stamping an asterisk on the best season in UMass basketball history wasn't enough, over the summer, Camby was pulled over by police and found to be in possession of marijuana.

Despite Camby's plethora of bad judgment calls and mistakes, he was the fan favorite. While Calipari — a man who built UMass basketball from ashes and brought Camby to Amherst — was treated as if he used to coach at Boston College.

Why?

Yeah, Camby "donated" the lost tournament money to the school. Sure, he's involved in the community. But Coach Cal, an icon, did so much himself for the UMass community by creating the basketball dynasty that most of New England still enjoys.

For Calipari to be treated so poorly, and Camby so well, by the people they both still consider home fans seems wrong.

Both men began their success story on a basketball floor at UMass, and they've moved on to bigger and better things. The paths they've chosen may not have been the straightest, but neither should be judged more crooked than the other.

Cut Coach Cal some slack.

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

The Collegian's annual UMass hockey/ Hockey East preview will be hitting the newsstands tomorrow, October 30. Don't miss out on your chance to be part of the action. Grab a copy while they're still around.

Collegian Sports
Keep your eye on the ball.

KAI CHI 10¢ WINGS
WEDNESDAY NIGHTS
8:30 - CLOSE

College Pro Computers
206 Russell St. (Rte 9) Hadley • (413) 584-8857
http://www.javanet.com/~cpc-usa

•AMD K5 166 MHz	•PENTIUM 200 MMX
16 MB RAM	2.1 GB Hard Drive
1.7 GB Hard Drive	32 MB RAM
20x CD-ROM	20x CD-ROM
Soundcard/Speakers	Soundcard/Speakers
2 MB Video RAM	2 MB Video RAM
Keyboard/Mouse	33.6 Modem
Windows 95	Keyboard/Mouse
14" SVGA Monitor	Windows 95
$995	15" SVGA Monitor
	$1,399

•PENTIUM 90
16 MB RAM
820 MB Hard Drive
IBM 8513 Color Monitor
(need executive system)
$595

Scholastic Flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON
beginning Nov. 1

	One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON	$162	$295
PARIS	$218	$399
ROME	$274	$473
MADRID	$226	$415

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub")
Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30
Sat 12:00-7:30
Closed Tuesday

U-SAVE
AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
178 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

$1 Also Come See Dollar Daze at Jackson's Flea Market All sorts of deals for a dollar $1

Lift your spirits
REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
109 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Don't Miss The ACTION
3-on-3 Basketball (M/W/C).....11/3
Holiday Basketball (M/W/C).....11/3
Spring Basketball (M/W/C).....11/19
Spring Ice Hockey (M/W).....12/8
MANDATORY CLINICS FOR SPRING BASKETBALL OFFICIALS ARE SCHEDULED IN TWO PARTS. A PART #1 CLINIC FOR RETURNING OFFICIALS ONLY IS SCHEDULED FOR DECEMBER 3RD AT 6 P.M. CALL FOR CLINIC LOCATION.
For entry forms and info 545-2693 or 545-0022
ON THE WEB: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

• CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS •
DESIGNER CLOTHING
for WOMEN, MEN & CHILDREN
BED and BATH LINENS, HANDBAGS, JEWELRY, STATIONERY and GIFTS
50% to 80% OFF Original Department Store PRICES
FEATURING:
Manufacturers', discontinued and slightly irregular lines from Major Department Stores.
THE STOCK ROOM
Rte. 9 Next to McDonald's 381 Russell St. Hadley
413-584-4488
Mon-Sat 10:00-6:00 Closed Sundays
• DKNY • LAUNDRY • RALPH LAUREN • JONES NY • GIAN BERNINI • AND MORE!
CAROLE LITTLE • VALERIE STEVENS • LIZ CLAIBORNE • GUESS

La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
. . . hand made cooking . . . seasonal menu
. . . superb margaritas
. . . extraordinary tequila list
. . . warm hospitality!
Please join us!
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
7 OLD SOUTH STREET
NORTHAMPTON
413 • 586 • 0400

HALLOWEEN PARTY
The Best party place is having it's second HALLOWEEN BASH
•From 8:00 to 1:00
•Prices to die for!
•Different DJ everynight
•Best music in town
• Appetizers 75¢ OFF
Wednesday
DJ YU is back with music for you
Thursday
Request night with DJ SES
Friday Party
A creepy Night for all friends alive!
Saturday
Celebrate Day of the Dead with us
DAILY BUFFET FROM 5:00 TO 8:00
DOOR CLOSES AT MIDNIGHT
PRUDDY'S
Tropical Bar and Club

CONGRATULATIONS!
BIOCHEMISTRY & MOLECULAR BIOLOGY DEANS LIST STUDENTS
The Department of Biochemistry & Molecular Biology wishes to acknowledge the following students who were named to the Deans List - Spring 1997.
There were 259 honorees in Arts and Sciences - Natural Sciences and Mathematics -32 from Biochemistry and Molecular Biology!

* BANSAL, Ruby	99	* KUROWSKI, Brad G.	99
BURKE, Tara A.	00	* LANDON, Bridget B.	99
* DRUBIN, David A.	97	MCLAUGHLIN, Joseph S.	00
ESTAVILLO, Athena C.	00	* NIEMITZ, Emily	98
EZEDI, Ikemefuna I.	97	OKUDA, Hajime	00
* GALONEK, Heidi L.	98	OLMEZ, Inal	98
GAO, Connie Ying	98	ROTHENBERGER, Kyle L.	97
* GROVER, Meera	99	* SCOTT, Brian P.	00
* HAMILTON, Brandon G.	00	* SHANEHSAZ, Piam	00
HEWITSON, Jennifer L.	98	* ST LAURENT, Kyle A.	00
JENSEN, Curtis W.	98	STRASSNER, Stephen M.	98
JIN, Song	98	* STUPINA, Vera A.	97
* KAPOOR, Bonu	00	VO, Mieu D.	99
* KOO, Sumin	99	* WARNER, Beth M.	98
* KOSINSKI, Melissa S.	00	WEITZE, Scott A.	98
* KRISTEK, Hannah C.	98	* YU, Wenshua	99

* Indicates Honors

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

84 Jeep CJ7 4x4, hardtop, 132,000+ miles, automatic. Need to sell fast. Needs some work. $925 or make an offer. Call Luis @ 549-5514

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Call The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Toyota Corolla 1992 AC, Sharp, Clean, Drives Like Sharp! $5700. Call 549-7166

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795

85 Mazda RX7 Good shape. $1000 or Best Offer. 549-5172

EMPLOYMENT

CHILDREN'S HEALTH RESEARCH
Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate in a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work Monday through Thursday evenings. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available for Part Time employees. Free transportation is provided from the PVTA busline. For further information or to arrange a personal interview, Call: 413-587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

EMPLOYMENT

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED

for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst

Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0
COLLEGE NEWS SERVICE

Jobs for the Environment
Campaign with MassPirg to reduce pesticide use. Flexible schedule. $50-$75/day. Call Terry @ 256-6434

Personal Administrator with good typing, organizational, and PR skills. Contact 549-3613

EMPLOYMENT

Personal Care Attendent for weekend morning. $7.85/hour. Call 546-0666

Posterer Wanted $6/hr. 259-1227

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

ENTERTAINMENT

Fraternities/Sororities: Do you have a DJ for your date party, formal or house party? Give me a call for more details. 253-6593. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim)

DJ For Hire: Professional DJ spinning all types of music for your next party or function. Call for more details. 253-6593. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim)

This space could be your's ! Call 545-3500.

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

Mongoose Bike For Sale Large. $240 or B/O. Call 549-6926

Elton John 4 excellent seats. 11/5. (516)867-7392

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352

COMPUTERS!
New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

God bless you, Angel on this your 20th Birthday and always, Love Your Family, BASIC

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95

ROOM FOR RENT

Available Jan 1 Uptown, cheap rent. Call 256-3442. Don't Miss Out! Harlow Properties

Housemate Wanted $220-270/month. 548-7972

ROOMMATE WANTED

Prefer female non-smoking grad student. Nice house with yard. Available Jan 98. 323-9268

Bedroom for rent on Ingate Farms. Large ranch. Scenic hiking. South Amherst. $350. 256-5483

Female Roommates Wanted Boulders Apts, Amherst. On busline. 259-2995

SERVICES

Acupuncture and Herbal Care Special prices. 549-6542. Licensed Acupuncturist (MA #278) National Board Certified

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH
CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!!
Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK
Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN

TRAVEL

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505

It once was LOST, but now it is FOUND. Thanks to the Collegian Classifieds.

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Come and visit our friendly box today!

 located on the concourse*

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not appropriate. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 29

Dance — Israeli folk dancing at 8:30 p.m. in Grayson. Learn new dances or request old ones. No experience necessary. Sponsored by Hillel.

Film — With Intent to Harm at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Part of the prison awareness week and sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911–915. All are welcome. Bring your own work, someone else's or just come and listen. For more information, call Tim at 546– 0879 or Chanel at 546-6301.

Support Group — The Health Education Division at University Health Services sponsors a Tobacco Cessation Support Group from 7–8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 801. Come get peer support, professional counseling, proven quit tips and advice. Just drop by or call 577–5181 for more information.

THURSDAY, OCT. 30

Book Reading — James Salter, author of the new memoir Burning the Days, reads at 8 p.m. at Memorial Hall.

Lecture — "Anti–Semitism Today: From the Subtle to the Extreme" one credit course given by LAUREN Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director, Anti–Defamation League from 7–9 p.m. at the Hillel House. The public is invited to sit in on this lecture.

Open House — UVC–TV 19 is holding an open house between 3–5 p.m. in the Student Union, room 216, behind the Hatch. There will be information sessions, tours, and refreshments offered to all those who attend.

Prison Awareness Week Events — Rally against the Criminal Injustice System at noon on the Student Union Steps. Planning/informational meeting for the American Prisons On Trial Conference (Feb. 22–26) at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Discussion on censorship in America at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Speaker — Alison Bechdel, creator of the comic strip, Dykes to Watch Out For, will speak on "Assimilation and Its Discontents: Chronicling Fin–de–Siècle Queer Culture" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. Part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and co-sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies, the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters, Pride Alliance, Hampshire College Cultural Studies Program and Words and Pictures Museum. For more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Study Abroad Fair — Find out opportunities to study abroad with UMass Amherst International Program from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Campus Center Concourse.

FRIDAY, OCT. 31

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Symposium — "Seeing is Believing: Images of Lesbian, Gays, and Bisexuals on Television" beginning at 2 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C. Co–sponsored by The Stonewall Center, the GLB GSO and the Media Education Foundation. for more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

Contest — Spectrum Fine Art and Literary Magazine is now holding a cover contest. The winner will be their artwork printed on the 97/98 issue. The final deadline is Dec. 2 at 5 p.m. Pick up an entry form in the Student Union, room 406E or just bring the artwork by.

Entertainment — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production of Botho Strauss's Big and Little on Thursday, Oct. 30, Friday, Oct. 31 and Saturday, Nov. 1 at 8 p.m. in Kirby Theater, Amherst College. Admission is free; reservations are suggested and can be made by calling the box office at 542–2277 between 1–4:30 p.m. weekdays and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Final Exam Schedule — The Fall '97 Final Examination Schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 17. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's office (213 Whitmore). It will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1 at http://www–ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Notice — The women's basketball team is looking for managers for the upcoming season. Reliability and a significant time commitment are required. If interested, please call Scott Foulis at 545–2726.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

Daily Listings sponsored by:

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
14	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN SI
25	Headline News
26	UCTV
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

545-3500

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 29, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wishbone (In Stereo)		Metropolitan Opera Presents "Fedora"			Hating Pot (R) (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	6	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Murphy Brown	Public Eye (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Full House	BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sister, Sister	Smart Guy	Wayans Bros.	Steve Harvey	News		Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHOH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Harvest"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		9	Married... With	Cheers	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Sentinel "Vendetta" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News Greca Under	Vibe
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Harvest"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five (In Stereo)		News	Law & Order "Harvest"	News	Tonight Show
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Working	Law & Order "Harvest"	News	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	10	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Metropolitan Opera Presents "Fedora"				Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WGGB	16	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Drew Carey	Ellen	Primetime Live	News	Nightline
WSBK	61		Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	Sentinel "Vendetta" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	M*A*S*H	Reel TV
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach "Retrospective"		★★½ "The Devil's Brigade" (1968, Drama) William Holden, Cliff Robertson.						★★★½ "The Dirty Dozen" (1967)
A&E	51		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "The Troubles"		Biography: Oliver North		American Justice (R)		20th Century		Law & Order "Night and Fog"
CNN	53	27	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus. Moneyline
COM	55	26	Comic Cabana	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Cutie" (1998, Comedy) Medaline Kahn, Eileen Brennan.				South Park (R)	South Park (R)	Daily Show Stein's Money
DISC	70		Wings "Eagle Over Lebanon"		Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery "Gator" (R)		Discover Magazine (R)		Intrigue in Istenbol (R)		Justice Files "Have Faith" (R)
ESPN	51		Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling	Ebonite Challenge. (Live)		Golf Wonderful World of Golf			Boopers	Sportscenter
LIFE	69		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait (In Stereo)		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★½ "Stalked" (1995, Suspense) Meryam D'Abo, Jay Underwood.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	67		MTV Live	Viewers	Real World	Road Rules	Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Ali-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Real World	Austin Stories	Oddville, MTV Loveline (R)
NICK	68		Figure It Out	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Wonder Years	Bewitched	Love Lucy	Odd Couple	Taxi Newhart
SCIFI	66		Twilight Zone		Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Sequoia 2052 "Reunion"		★★½ "Vampire at Midnight" (1988, Horror) Jason Williams.				Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	69	28	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Wondr-Weathr	Sea Tek II	Castle Ghosts of Ireland (R)		Castle Ghosts of Scotland (R)		Wondr-Weathr Sea Tek II (R)
TNT	62		Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		★★★½ "The Shawshank Redemption" (1994, Drama) Tim Robbins, Morgan Freeman.						★★½ "Rope" (1997)
USA	63		Baywatch "Rubber Ducky"		Highlander: The Series		Welker, Teres Ranger		"Rocks" (1997, Horror) Timothy Busfield, (In Stereo)				Silk Stalkings (R) (In Stereo)
HBO	65		(5:30) ★★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996) PG-13'		★½ "Armed and Dangerous" (1986) John Candy				★★½ "Eraser" (1996, Adventure) Arnold Schwarzenegger R				"Exception to the Rule" (1997)
MAX	64		(5:00) "RSVP" ★★ "Mr. Write" (1994) Paul Reiser. PG-13'				"It Ain't Love" (1997, Documentary) (In Stereo) NR				"Amityville Dollhouse" (1997) Robin Thomas. R'		"Highlander"
SHOW	60		"The Defenders: Payback" (1997, Drama) E.G. Marshall				★★ "Sunset Park" (1996) Rosa Perlman. R'		Extras		Dead Man's Fast Track (R) (In Stereo)		"Dead Man"

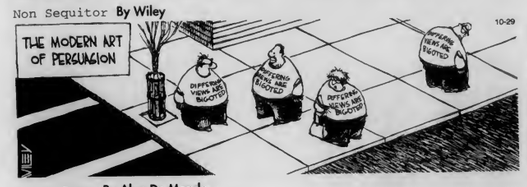
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

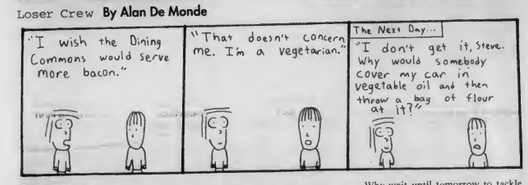
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

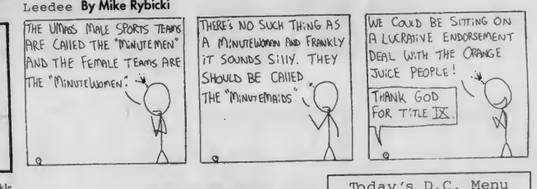


Mallard Fillmore By Bruce Tinsley

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen



Non Sequitor By Wiley



Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Loser Crew By Alan De Monde

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may find yourself playing a stranger sort of hide–and–seek today with someone who claims to have your best interest at heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Expect the unexpected today, at least until you feel you're more firmly on your feet. Some recent changes have left you feeling unprepared.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — A grand introduction is not necessary today: you'll be noticed upon entry even by doing very little. Others have been waiting for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — A mysterious message may come your way today. Focus on the contents in a new way, and you'll realize something that has eluded you in recent days.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — An agreement may be difficult to forge today, but with persistence and a little creativity you can get the job done.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may need to make a small sacrifice today in order to ensure that someone close to you gets what he or she really wants.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You will have the chance to explore a new venue today, and to prove that you can be creative, think on your feet, and deliver the goods.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — A little clever exchange is likely to get you just what you want today. He or she on the other end will consider the deal a fair one as well.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Why wait until tomorrow to tackle what is challenging you right now? It is an old adage, but today it is more than appropriate for you.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You will discover today just how you fit into the grand scheme of things. You may have been endowed with more authority than you had thought.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You may be emerging from a period of uncertainty or anxiety at this time. Today, you'll have a chance to increase your confidence twofold.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You may not be able to identify the source of coming danger, but you must prepare for all eventualities. Readiness is everything!

Quote of the Day

"A classic is something that everyone wants to have read but nobody wants to read."

–Mark Twain

Close to Home By John McPherson

The fake rubber leg that Diane kept in her purse livened up many a first date.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Spicy Black Bean Burger
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Chicken Breast Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Meatball Grinder
Rotini/Tomato Sauce
Red Beans

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Baked Ziti
Caponata w/ Pocket Bread
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

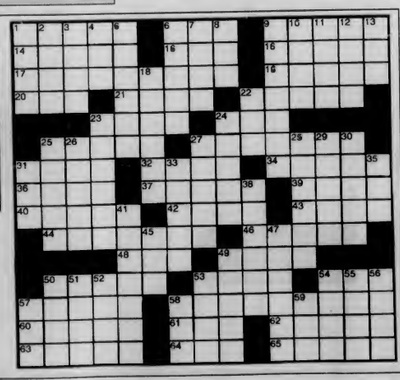
DINNER
Roast Top Round Beef
Baked Ziti

Berkshire
LUNCH
Macaroni and Cheese
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Tri Bean Casserole

DINNER
Roast Top Round Beef
Smoked Turkey Tostado
Caponata w/ Pocket Bread
Baked Ziti

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Seema Gangotirkar
Photo Technician	Ken McDonald
Copy Editor	Lorraine Kennedy
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Mark McGrath



ACROSS
1 Eucalyptus eater
6 Singer Rawls
9 — male (top dog)
14 Muslim's religion
15 Sort
16 More certain
17 Park feature
19 Vise
20 — Antonio
21 Boast
22 Band instruments
23 They're blue
24 Luau souvenir
25 Loamy soil
27 Was fizzy
31 Limo users, often
32 Horse's gait
34 Pianist Blake
36 Leave out
37 Strength
39 Type of garden
40 — and dined
42 Net
43 Patella locale
44 Norwich —
46 Heeds
48 Psyche parts
49 Drove (a nail) obliquely
50 Greek letter
53 Ascend
54 Sandra —
57 Like a tablet
58 Astronomer's measure
60 Proprietor
61 Enclose, to a poet
62 Cowboy's rope
63 Faint
64 Apiece
65 Discharges

DOWN
1 Affectionate gesture
2 Safety agcy.
3 Cranston or Greenspan
4 Boy
5 One-celled swimmers
6 Italian coins
7 Designer Cassini
8 Luau instrument
9 Attribute to a specific cause
10 Dilly
11 Baby buggy: Brit.
12 Alters in a way
13 Sculptor Jean
18 Romantic meetings
22 Society gal
23 Medieval entertainer
24 Ancient instruments
25 Quota
26 Hazard a guess
27 Goof
28 Moved furtively
29 Black
30 Cuts into cubes
31 Promise
33 Hoarfrosts
35 — out: use thriftily
38 Rushing sound
41 Like many fabrics
45 B.C.'s neighbor
47 Ladybug, e.g.
49 Zoo denizen
50 Green-fleshed fruit
51 Beattie and Reinking
52 Chirp
53 Ready for picking
54 Lucy's guy
55 Direction
56 God of love
57 Base
58 Prune (branches)
59 Sweet potato

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

T	O	A	D		A	M	A	H		P	E	R	U
O	K	L	A		D	R	A	C	C		T	I	B	I	S
P	A	L	M		W	A	F	E	R		A	B	L	E
A	P	O		J	A	B	S		R	I	N	S	E	D
Z	I	T	H	E	R	S		B	O	N	O
			A	R	F		F	O	R	E	S	E	E	N
C	L	A	C	K	S		L	O	S	S		P	R	I	E
D	U	S	K		S	U	I	T		T	I	L	E
E	N	S		C	E	L	T		B	R	A	C	E	D
F	A	N	F	A	R	E	S		Y	O	U
			A	P	E	D		S	W	A	T	T	E	R
A	M	B	I	T		S	H	O	O		W	E	E
C	H	A	R	I	O	T	E	E	R		B	E	R	N
M	I	R	E		N	A	M	E	D		B	R	I	E
E	M	I	R		G	R	I	N		S	P	E	W

10-29-97 © 1997, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

UM Field Hockey celebrates Senior Day

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It will not be the last game they will play on the turf at Richard F. Garber Field, but tomorrow's game between the Massachusetts and Dartmouth field hockey teams will mark the final regular season home appearance for four Minutewoman seniors. Amy Ott, Sharon Hughes and co– captains Jen Gutzman and Courtney MacLean will be honored before the 2 p.m. game against the Big Green.

But the Minutewomen (9–8, 3–0 Atlantic 10) are guaranteed a return trip to Garber Field for the A–10 tournament, Nov. 7–9. With a perfect conference record thus far, UMass has assured itself one of the top two positions in the tourney, and Friday's game at West Chester will determine the top seed.

First, though, UMass must concentrate on its last non– league foe. Dartmouth (8–5, 3–2 Ivy League) is led by a trio of underclassmen in Lauren and Kristen Scopaz, and Kristen Leadbeater. Lauren Scopaz, a forward, leads the team in with 17 points (5 goals, 7 assists), and the other Scopaz. Kristen, a midfielder, follows with 15 points (6–3), while Leadbeater has garnered 12 points (6 goals).

Junior midfielder Weze Shorts also adds power to the Big Green line–up with six goals and three assists for 15 points.

Both Dartmouth and UMass are coming off of weekend losses — Dartmouth's 3–1 decision to Cornell, and the Minutewomen's 2–1 defeat at the hands of Connecticut.

UMass, though, has been on an upswing of late, with four straight wins heading into the UConn game. That four game stretch also included three wins over then–Top 10 programs.

* * *

Amy Ott: Ott has been a mainstay in the UMass defense for three seasons, after playing her freshman campaign at forward. An All–America candidate, Ott has played a key role on the Minutewomen's offensive and defensive penalty corner batteries. She was named to both the Atlantic 10 All– Conference and All–Tournament teams last year.

Sharon Hughes: A solid defensive player at center back, Hughes has helped UMass' transition game in the middle of the field. As a junior, Hughes scored two goals, both game winners, including one in OT against Northeastern. Hughes also contributes to both sides of the UMass penalty corner.

Jen Gutzman: The co–captain has been a strong part of the UMass defense, playing back on the left side. With only one career goal to her credit, Gutzman has led by example with her consistent dedication on the field, and is an invaluable part of the defensive corner battery.

Courtney MacLean: Although MacLean, a co–captain, has been beset with an injury for the last month, she helped spark the Minutewomen's success in the early season with her play at forward. MacLean had three multiple–goal games in her junior campaign.

THANG VO/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Patty Robinson and her teammates will bid UMass' four seniors goodbye — for the time being — at Senior Day today at 2 p.m. on Garber Field.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Jen Gutzman

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Sharon Hughes

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Courtney MacLean

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Amy Ott

Calipari & Camby come home to mixed reception

Fred Hurlbrink, Jr.

SPRINGFIELD — After the game, New Jersey Nets coach John Calipari was reflecting on his return to Western Mass., the rustic setting where he laid the foundation for the fame his promising career has already brought him.

He seemed genuinely glad to be back, still comfortable in the environs that were so good to him in the not–so distant past.

He said — with apologies to New Jersey — that New England still feels like home, and before he left his new home for the trip to Springfield, his oldest daughter wondered if the Caliparis could move back to Shutesbury (a stone's throw from the Mullins Center) where everything began.

Make no mistake, this rural cow–town is where John Calipari, a young intense coach, became Coach Cal — an icon of modern day basketball.

The 38–year–old has garnered attention ever since he took over a failing UMass basketball program in 1988. Though his style (in fashion and coaching) has taken much of the focus, it has never taken away from what he has been able to accomplish, and it has only added to the luster.

His constant bullish marches up and down the sidelines throughout the course of a basketball game are a Cal trademark (not yet registered) as is his "Refuse to Lose" attitude — and logo.

He is concise and honest, and can always be counted on for, at least, an interesting press conference.

Last season's incident involving Nets beat writer Dan Garcia — in which Cal called the reporter a Mexican idiot — was not the first time a post–game press conference turned ugly on the fiery and volatile coach.

That was nothing.

The incident that will forever live in infamy in the minds of UMass (and Calipari) fans is when Temple coach John Chaney was so irate after a very physical game between the two schools that he stormed into the green room and tried to start a fist fight with the "Italian Stallion."

Despite the controversy, Calipari is widely known as an intense motivator and a great basketball mind, and he has managed to avoid any negative labels being stuck to him.

Or has he?

That's how it seemed before Monday night's Hall of Fame Game at the Springfield Civic Center.

Calipari brought his Nets to town to take on the Toronto Raptors and former UMass star center Marcus Camby in an NBA exhibition battle of... well, less–than titans.

Both figures were enormously popular during their stay in the Pioneer Valley, and left tremendous impacts on the basketball program at UMass.

Both left Amherst before their time.

Calipari bolted for his dream of coaching an NBA team (I believe he gets paid pretty well, too) and Camby bolted for the glamour of being an NBA lottery pick (pretty sure he's financially secure as well).

The loudest cheers Cal heard came roaring from the fairly sparse crowd in response to a technical foul assessed to the savior of UMass basketball late in the first quarter. The raucous

Turn to HURLBRINK, page 7

Not a long trip from IU to ND for '97 clunkers

From South Bend to Lawrence (the one in Kansas, thank you), college football has seen its share of clunkers this season. Maybe not Schwag–esque, but nonetheless crappy years that have left fans wondering, "Hey, what the hell happened to our school?"

It's okay, buddy. I know.

So, with all the originality of the Nebraska wishbone (Hmm... should we run left or right?), I put together a little ranking of 1997's biggest disappointments.

Luke Meredith on College Football

May you find them slightly unsettling.

Luke's 2nd Annual Top 10 "Clunkers"

1. Notre Dame — People were genuinely excited about this season. Twenty thousand new seats in the stadium, a new coach and the belief that Ron Powlus might actually win them some games.

Ouch, babe. Ouch. (Hey, if the Fighting Irish don't go to a bowl game, does Lou Holtz get his job back?)

2. Texas — After they beat undefeated Nebraska to win the Big 12 last year, it was widely assumed Texas football was back.

Now its just back in the "gutt–ahh." They lost to UCLA 66–3, Oklahoma St. by a bunch (and I don't care who's there because Barry Sanders graduated) and are now 3–4.

3. Syracuse — N.C. State? At home?

Now that we've established that the Wolfpack are not the surprise hit of college football this season, that loss early in the year looms tough.

(Still love Donovan McNabb, though. Kid put the pimp in "Pimp Daddy".)

4. Miami, Fla. — You used to be able to say "Miami" without the Fla. after it. Not anymore. I admire what you tried to do down there, Butch Davis, but the program is in shambles.

(Remember when we were little and all the tough kids wore Miami stuff? You'd probably get your ass kicked if you wore that stuff on the playground these days?)

5. Colorado — After a decade of being in Top 15, the Buffs now reside in the "Others Receiving Votes" category.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

UM tennis finishes fall by beating Red Raiders

Caron and Lebovitz lead 1997 season

By Justin Rudd
Collegian Staff

A winning season — that is one of the many things the Massachusetts women's tennis team has gained out of their fall season. This past Saturday, UMass faced Colgate in their final match in the fall of 1997, winning 4–3.

Going into this matchup, the Minutewomen held a respectable record of 5–5, while the Red Raiders came to UMass carrying an 8–1 mark on their season. Along with their record, Colgate brought along their Patriot League Championships title.

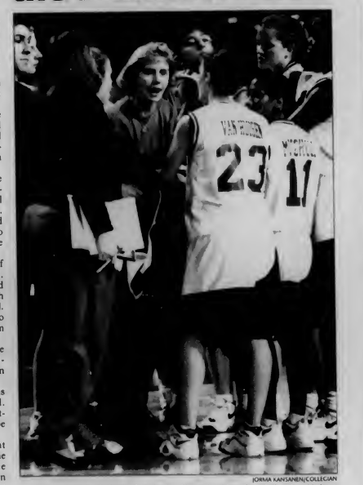
Massachusetts	4
Colgate	3

Before Saturday's match–up, UMass was 2–2 all time versus the Red Raiders, most recently winning 4–1 decision in Hamilton, N.Y. last spring at the Colgate Invitational.

There was a lot at stake in this match; Colgate has a powerful squad, not to mention the result could mean the Minutewomen having a winning or losing season.

Through solid play and unrivaled mental attitude, the Minutewomen prevailed over Colgate. UMass rallied to defeat the Red Raiders, and despite falling behind early, the "never give up" attitude of the Minutewomen is what led them to an inspiring come–from–behind victory.

UMass dropped the doubles point to Colgate, putting the Minutewomen behind the eight ball early in the match, and then, the Minutewomen fought back to win four singles matches, securing the win.



In singles action, coach Judy Dixon received great performances from seniors Marie–Christine Caron, and co–captain Caroline Steele, and freshmen Robyn Lebovitz and Emily Wegner both defeated their opponents contributing to the UMass win as well.

Quebec native Marie–Christine Caron led off singles play on a positive note, getting the win in the No. 1 spot. This victory was more than just an ordinary one for Caron, because the Canadian senior defeated previously unbeaten Amy Wachenheim of Colgate, 2–6, 7–6, 7–5.

After losing in the No. 2 and 3 spots, freshman headliner Robyn Lebovitz brought the Minutewomen back into it prevailing in the No. 4 position. The Georgia native placed another win to her personal record when she defeated Red Raider Leslie Frank, 6–2, 6–1.

Turn to TENNIS, page 7

Media for the Minutewomen

JOANNA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Coach Joanie O'Brien (center) will be looking for Kelly Van Huisen (23) to top her outstanding rookie year this season for the Minutewomen.

With a week of practice behind her, Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien introduced her team to the local media at yesterday's Media Day program in the William D. Mullins Center.

"I feel very good about what we can do as a team," O'Brien said. "I call it guarded optiâlmism."

The 1997–98 edition of the Minutewomen features a strong guard line–up with senior Sabriya Mitchell returning for another year, and sophomore Kelly Van Huisen back after a strong freshman campaign.

In the frontcourt, UMass lost the services of Crystal Carroll to graduation, but the team does have several experienced players to fill that void. Yolanda Rayside, Kara Tudman and Lucia Madajova will all add depth to the Minutewomen's game in the paint.

"We have 11 players and four of them are new this year," O'Brien said. "Last year, you knew Crystal would be the go– to player and Beth [Kuzmeski] would contribute as well. This year, everyone's going to have to contribute and make this team stronger."

UMass' schedule will provide the Minutewomen with constant challenges, as the team tries to make a run at an Atlantic 10 title.

"The Atlantic 10 is as even as it has ever been this year," O'Brien said. "The level of competition is even pretty much all around, so we should be able to make some noise there."

UMass will play Connecticut at home, Ohio State and Maine on the road and a full slate of conference opponents. The Minutewomen open their schedule on Monday, Nov. 10 in an exhibition game against Rossianka.

— Casey Kane

Who's more Crispy? Our NHL guru or the former coach of Tampa Bay?

Jorma Kansanen on The NHL

Forget about it, kids... I didn't watch a minute of the NHL in the last week, so that column will hereby be declared "dead space."

Yeah, right.

Let's get on with the NHL action, baby.

• Terry Crisp got fired from his head coaching position of the Tampa Bay Lightning last weekend.

Which prompts me to say: if a tree falls in the forest, and no one's around to hear the crash, does it make a sound?

The Lightning is the badder team (can I say that?), or the much worse of the two teams that reside on the Florida peninsula, and for good reason. After a nice season two years ago, where Tampa Bay actually did make the playoffs, the 'Ning have done nothing since to legitimize that success.

"Aah, come on, Jorma," you say, in a calm and pleading tone. "They're a expansion franchise, they're not supposed to be good."

All I have to say is one word — the Florida Marlins (you know, the champion of that other sport); or how about another — the Florida Panthers (you know, the Stanley Cup finalist two seasons ago). Well, actually, that's three words.

I guess that just shows how much I've gotne to my English classes lately.

GM Phil Esposito (you know, the guy on all those bumper stickers that say "God saves... and Esposito scores on the rebound?") has not been too kind to his veteran coach this season, and he's received as many votes of confidence from him as Joe Kennedy did from his family in his short run for the governorship (um, that's not a lot, people).

Why fire Crispy now then? If he's so bad a coach, why not do it at the start of the season? Why wait?

One reason is that Espo might have took too many pucks to the head during his helmet–less days for the Bruins, and he can be officially declared a little "slow" now — or, Espo wanted to give Crispy a chance to start the season off right, and if the team was doing well so far, he would keep him behind the bench.

Well, the Good Ship Lightning has not done so well, and with a 2–8–2 record going into last night's action, the axe had to come down.

I don't know, but I think the loss of Chris Gratton is a big factor in Tampa Bay's lack of success. Gratton is a quality two–way player, that supplies a lot of grit and determination on the ice, and is a good guy to have in the locker room.

When Espo didn't go into his pocket and give Gratton the money he deserved over the summer, the only thing he allowed himself to do with that bright maneuver was make Philadelphia a stronger team, and deal him to the Flyers.

Now, the 'Ning have ex–Legion of Doom–er (who was only a cog in the wheel, and not the wheel itself), and oft– injured, Mikael Renberg on their squad, and Philly has even more quality than before. I'm sure the rest of the league said a hearty thanks to Espo on that one.

When a team gets rid of a quality player like Gratton, and doesn't get an equal player of value, than things like this happen. Then, the players on the team start to get mad because the team isn't playing well, and then the fans get mad because the team isn't playing well, and ultimately, upper management gets mad because the team isn't playing well because upper management doesn't give the team good enough players for the team to play well.

Then, the coach gets fired. Go figure.

Frankly, my dearies, I just don't give a damn about this franchise, and it's going nowhere — fast.

The, I guess you could call it "dead space," then.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 41 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 30, 1997

The slipgate into another dimension

It's more than a computer game — it's an addiction. Check out our previews of Quake II (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Minutewomen club Big Green

Amy Ott and the Massachusetts field hockey team celebrated Senior Day with a 3–1 win over Dartmouth. (see Sports, page 16)

WORLD

Canadian Judge bars prisoners' extradition

TORONTO (AP) — An Ontario judge is refusing to hand three Canadians over to U.S. authorities in a high–profile fraud case because he believes a U.S. prosecutor implied the threat of homosexual rape against the men.

In an interview on Canadian television, assistant U.S. attorney Gordon Zubrod said those who resisted extradition would face a long, hard prison term as "the boyfriend of a very bad man." Judge Bruce Hawkins said Tuesday there was no lack of evidence to justify sending the three men to Pennsylvania.

But, Hawkins ruled, "no right–thinking Canadian would endorse the use of a threat of homosexual rape as a means of persuading Canadian residents to abandon their rights to a full extradition hearing."

Harry Cobb, Allen Grossman and James Tsioubris were among more than 40 people and several companies charged in 1994 and 1995 with taking part in a cross–border telemarketing scam.

NATION

Attorneys settle on juror pool for Nichols

DENVER (AP) — The pool of prospective jurors was completed yesterday for the Oklahoma City bombing trial of Terry Nichols. U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch settled on 71 people as qualified jurors, and the final selection of 12 jurors and six alternates is planned for today. Trial is to begin Monday with opening statements.

Defense attorney Michael Tigar said Nichols, who took notes and chatted with his lawyers throughout jury selection, "would probably rather be working on a blueberry farm somewhere." "We're ready," prosecutor Larry Mackey said as he left the courthouse.

Prosecutor Patrick Ryan said Nichols' trial probably will take longer than the 2 1/2 months it took to convict and sentence Timothy McVeigh because the defense's case will last longer. He said much of the prosecution's evidence will be the same.

Nichols is accused of helping McVeigh acquire components and build the bomb that blew up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building on April 19, 1995, killing 168 people and injuring more than 500. McVeigh was convicted of identical murder and conspiracy charges in June and sentenced to die. His appeal is pending.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 39	HIGH: 55 LOW: 42	HIGH: 57 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics .....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 14
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Assault and battery on campus investigated by UMass police

The University of Massachusetts Police are investigating a report of an alleged assault and battery on Monday Oct. 27 around the area of Chancellor Drive and Thatcher Way.

According to a press release issued by public safety the victim, who was walking alone, reported that she was "momentarily grabbed from behind, around the neck, before being released."

The assailant did not speak to the victim and immediately fled the scene. The victim was not injured in the incident and described the perpetrator as "a male, over 5'5" tall," the press release stated.

The incident occurred between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m., and police are asking for anyone who has information which could assist in the investigation to contact UMass police at 545–0893.

Public Safety officials want students to be aware to exercise caution walking on campus at night.

"Individuals should stay in well lit areas and always walk in groups," said UMass police Chief John Luippold.

If students have no one to walk with at night, "they should be utilizing the PVTA system and the campus escort service," Luippold added.

Students who witness any suspicious activity on the walkways of Chancellor Drive and Thatcher Way, or any place on campus should report it immediately to public safety at 545–2121.

"If someone is witnessed loitering in a specific area, get to a safe place and call us. Don't hang around in the area. If possible try to get a description of the individual," Luippold said.

—Leigh Faulkner

DeLay, other pols criticize summit

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A senior House Republican said yesterday he would boycott a congressional breakfast with Chinese leader Jiang Zemin to protest religious persecution in China. Other critics of U.S.–Chinese policy said they were unimpressed by Jiang's talks with President Clinton.

House Majority Whip Tom DeLay of Texas, the No. 3–ranked Republican in the House, said he was staying away from breakfast today "because of the Chinese government's continued harassment and persecution of Christians and other people of faith." DeLay said it was a "difficult decision" because he believed in engagement and normal trade with China. But he said that the mistreatment of Christians must stop and that a boycott was the "one way I can send that message to the president of China." Jiang is to meet this morning on Capitol Hill with about 45 Senate and House leaders, including Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and their Democratic counterparts, Sen. Tom Daschle and Rep. Dick Gephardt.

He is sure to hear blunt talk about China's human rights record. "I have a message to deliver," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D–Calif.) one of the House's leading critics of China. She didn't elaborate, but said she thought that in the agreement reached with China on limiting nuclear technology transfers to the Persian Gulf region "President Clinton has folded on a matter of gravest con–

Turn to BOYCOTT, page 2

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Out of the darkness

The lights of a passing car and the athletic fields behind the Mullins Center illuminate Commonwealth Avenue Wednesday evening.

SGA swears in officers; convenes delayed session

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Student Trustee Brian Tirrell speaks to newly–elected senators at last night's SGA meeting.

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Despite voter turnout problems earlier in the semester, the newly formed Student Government Association (SGA) undergraduate student senate at the University of Massachusetts convened for the first time last night in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union.

Senators were sworn in by Chief Justice Brian McCarthy after he congratulated them on their job campaigning for the recent election and the election run earlier in the semester that was ruled invalid.

"I applaud you and I think that you should all applaud yourselves," McCarthy said.

Lia Wong, SGA president, spoke to the senate and presented them with her Executive Cabinet who then gave officer reports on their various positions and current projects that they are working on.

"I'm very hopeful we're going to have a great year," Wong said.

In the absence of the senate, the SGA executive leadership has been working on issues such as the Course And Teacher Evaluation (CATE) guide, fees at the university and child care.

"It [childcare] is one of the big problems here on campus and we need to address it right now," Wong said.

Peter Kilbourne facilitated the meeting as speaker of the senate. Binders were passed out to all senators which contained the SGA constitution and information on the workings of the senate. Kilbourne will run a training session for the senators this Saturday on the duties and responsibilities of being a senator.

Every senator is required to be on a committee and committee applications forms were also handed out at the meeting.

"We have a very full senate and have enough people to fill all of the committees. I want these committees to be as productive as they can," Kilbourne said.

Brian Tirrell, student trustee, addressed the senate and informed senators what issues he will be working on this semester.

"Some of the things that I want to work on for you are legal representation at judicial hearings... the alcohol policy, and tuition and fees," Tirrell said.

The position in the executive cabinet of attorney general was vacated on Oct. 2, and last night the new attorney general, Jesse Burchfield, was submitted by Wong, and approved by the senate body. Burchfield was formerly an assistant to the president.

"I would like to work with the judicial advisors program creating a more efficient way of doing business...I've worked with law firms in the private sector and I look forward to working with you," Burchfield said.

Doctors: 'Dangers of pot greatly overexaggerated'

By Samantha Poulten
Collegian Staff

Dr. Lynn Zimmer, Ph.D. and Dr. John P. Morgan, M.D. spoke Tuesday night to University of Massachusetts students at an event sponsored by the Cannabis Reform Coalition. They were there to endorse their new book Marijuana Myths, Marijuana Facts: A Review of the Scientific Evidence.

The doctors said marijuana users are being punished too severely, considering the damage marijuana has been proven to cause has been highly exaggerated.

"While marijuana is not entirely safe, the actual harm and impact on society doesn't warrant a policy of criminalization for people who use it," Zimmer said.

In 1972, a commission appointed by President Richard Nixon put together a report on the effects of marijuana. There was no firm evidence that it was harmful enough to warrant the extreme punishments involved with possession, Zimmer said. Yet, since 1972, police have arrested 10 million people for possession of marijuana. The years 1995 and 1996 broke all the records with 1.3 million arrests.

Zimmer said that the claims from the 1920s through the 1950s are still around today, including claims of "biological toxicity." She said the information given out today about marijuana greatly exaggerates the biological damage the drug actually causes.

"Concern over marijuana use, particularly by adolescents, has led many people to exaggerate or distort marijuana's dangers," Zimmer said. "As citizens and parents, we have the same concerns about drugs as other Americans. Yet we believe strongly that solutions to drug problems need to be based on facts, not fear."

Zimmer said there is no increased potency of marijuana today then in the 1970s. She said that this so–called fact was made up by the government to warrant mandatory drug testing for college students receiving college loans. If a student tested positive under the proposed law, he or she would loose the loans.

"[The fact] was necessary to convince middle age Americans that marijuana is more dangerous now then when they were users," Zimmer said. "In actuality, the general marijuana today is of equal potency."

Dr. Morgan said, "marijuana was made illegal on the basis of no scientific evidence."

He said there is no firm evidence that marijuana damages the lungs more then tobacco, impairs memory, or damages the immune system. Also, there is no evidence about marijuana causing people to lose their drive and

Turn to POT, page 2

GEO protests hiring procedures

By Paul Hayes
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — A grievance filed against the University of Massachusetts Pre–Major Advising Center alleges that the center violated the Graduate Employment Organization's (GEO's) collective bargaining agreement and did not follow proper hiring procedures.

Graduate student and former advisor Muzafar Qazilbash, on whose behalf GEO filed the grievance, alleges that the Pre–Major advising center, under the direction of Dean Elizabeth Petroff, engaged in unfair hiring practices and cost him his job.

According to Qazilbash, the advising center did not post jobs for which it was hiring.

This would be a violation of Section 4, Article c–ii of the collective bargaining agreement between the GEO and the administration, which states that job listings shall be posted in a "central location, easily accessible to graduate students in each department."

Mike D'Amore, the GEO Co–Chair of the Grievance Committee, said that GEO has taken the position that Qazilbash was the victim of the Pre–Major Advising Center's not following proper appointment and reappointment procedures during the summer.

D'Amore said that as part of the grievance process, GEO spent at least a month investigating the matter and holding informal discussions with the relevant administration.

"We are confident we can win this," D'Amore said. "We feel the contract language was very clear, and the violation was very clear."

While the parties involved would not reveal the full details of the grievance, Qazilbash said that there have been other instances where the Pre–Major Advising Center did not follow correct

Turn to GEO, page 2

Mandela gives Gadhafi South Africa's highest honor

By Louis Meixler
Associated Press

ZUWARAH, Libya — Returning to Libya for his second visit in a week, Nelson Mandela presented South Africa's highest award for a foreigner to Moammar Gadhafi yesterday, praising the Libyan ruler as "my dear brother leader."

The meeting, coming so quickly after the last one, prompted speculation that the South African president was trying to mediate an end to the 5–year–old U.N. sanctions against Libya.

Mandela was accompanied by foreign reporters, so his visit gave Gadhafi a platform to heap scorn upon the United States. As with his previous stop in Libya, and earlier visits to Cuba, the trip demonstrated Mandela's willingness to risk U.S. ire in maintaining close relationships with old friends.

Libya and Cuba were among the countries that backed Mandela's African National Congress early in its underground struggle against apartheid in South Africa.

At a brief welcome ceremony with bagpipes, a guard raised a red Scottish tartan–plaid umbrella over Mandela's head yesterday to shield him from the sun. The two leaders linked hands as they walked toward a tent for a five–minute meeting.

Libya used the gathering to lash out at Washington.

"Down, down U.S.A., the enemy of the peoples!" said one banner, in English, at the sports center where the ceremony was held in the seaside town of Zuwarah, 60 miles west of the capital, Tripoli.

The sanctions against Libya were imposed to pressure it into surrendering two Libyan suspects in the 1988 bombing of a Pan American jet over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270 people. The sanctions bar flights to and from Libya and ban arms sales to the North African nation.

Mandela, however, made no direct references to

Turn to MANDELA, page 2

Kwesi to show UM African history

By Humphrey brown III
Collegian Staff

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Ashra Kwesi, lecturer and historian, will give a slide presentation tonight in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Tonight at 7 p.m. in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium, Ashra Kwesi, a lecturer and historian in ancient African history and religion, will give an educational slide presentation lecture based upon his 16 years of study and travel throughout the continent of Africa.

Some of the topics Kwesi will discuss include early African Ethiopian churches, the first world order by the Roman Emperor Constantine to de-spiritualize African people's religious concepts, the desecration of ancient African symbols from the temples of Egypt and much more.

Kwesi's documented production is derived from ancient temples, tombs and papyrus papers in Egypt (Kemet). His lecture has been presented for numerous universities, conferences and study groups both nationally and internationally.

"This is the most powerful slide presentation I have seen," said Dr. Leonard Jeffries, professor at City College in Harlem, N.Y. "Ashra Kwesi has really brought our history to life with his slide presentation."

Kwesi has been a guest speaker for organizations, study groups and universities including The African Heritage Group in Tokyo, Japan, African Study Tour Group in Egypt, the Slave Theater in Brooklyn, N.Y. and the University of California, among others.

Kwesi's research experience goes back to 1981, when he first began his tour of Africa in Egypt. In 1982 and 1983, he did research in Ethiopia, Kenya and the Sudan. He also researched in Ghana in 1987, and in Europe. His overall research and travel experience spans 16 years, making Kwesi a well respected and knowledgeable historian.

Kwesi is also the owner of Kemet Nu Productions, a company which presents African history by means of videotaped productions and pictorial history books.

The African Origin of Civilization, African History of Christianity and African History vs. Biblical Myth are some of the video tape productions Kwesi has produced.

"A griot is an African storyteller who keeps the truth of his people's history alive," said Kwesi.

Tonight's event is free and open to the public.

■ Mandela

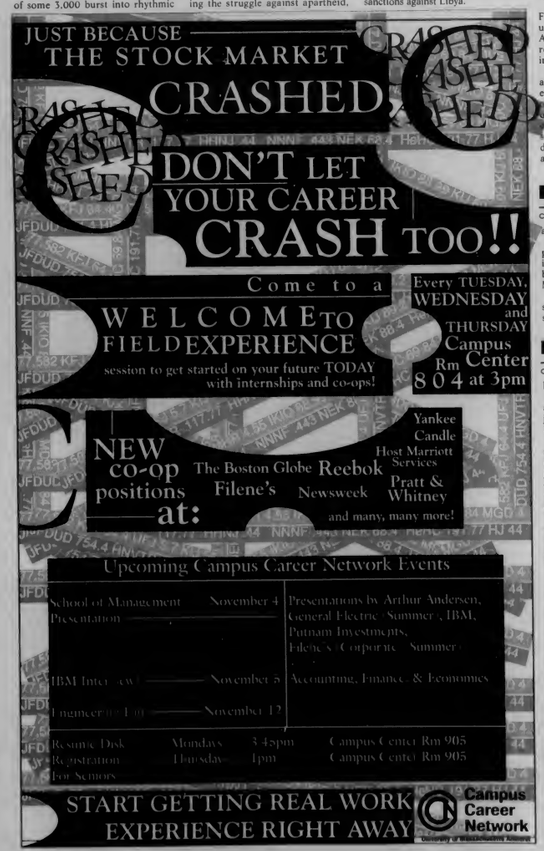
continued from page 1

Lockerbie in his brief remarks and said he was only in Libya to present the award. For his part, Gadhafi remained defiant. "Asking Libya to hand over its citizens to America or Britain is a silly matter that makes us laugh, especially after the price we have had to pay," he told a news conference after the awards ceremony.

The United States and Britain have demanded that the suspects be tried in Scotland or the United States, while Libya has insisted that either Libya or a third country be the site for any proceedings.

At yesterday's ceremony, a crowd of some 3,000 burst into rhythmic applause as Mandela draped a sash across Gadhafi's chest and presented him with South Africa's Order of Good Hope, that country's highest honor for foreigners.

"Increase the struggle!" the crowd chanted.



At one point, Mandela referred to Gadhafi as "my dear brother leader."

Last week, when Mandela brushed aside U.S. objections and made a two-day visit to Libya on his way to a Commonwealth summit in Britain, he received a similar award from Gadhafi.

"South Africa will never forget the support it received from Libya" during the struggle against apartheid, read the official citation on yesterday's award.

Mandela's ANC characterizes the Libyan assistance as moral support, meaning it verbally backed the anti-apartheid effort and allowed ANC exiles refuge. It is unclear if Libya also provided significant amounts of arms or money.

Aside from providing an opportunity for Gadhafi and Mandela to reaffirm their close ties, yesterday's meeting afforded the Libyan leader a platform to take several swipes at the United States. Gadhafi said the United States and its allies were "punishing the whole world" with sanctions against Libya.

Pre-election massacres kill hundreds in Algeria

By Rachid Khiari
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — In a sign of fractures within Algeria's ruling coalition, government-allied parties joined the opposition yesterday in calling for fresh protests against alleged fraud in last week's local elections.

The government, however, sought to keep the focus on what it claimed was progress against a bloody Muslim insurgency.

Thirteen more people died in two attacks this week, authorities said, in the latest violence in a nearly 6-year-old rebellion that has left an estimated 75,000 people dead.

Seven parties, including two in the governing coalition, yesterday called for a march against what they said was massive vote fraud in Oct. 23 local and regional elections. The party loyal to President Liamine Zeroual took nearly half the vote.

Algeria's main Islamic party, the Islamic Salvation Front, was barred from participating in the balloting.

The march represents the first time parties representing a broad political spectrum have banded together to protest against the government.

Thousands of people marched Tuesday against alleged voter fraud, continuing a series of daily protests that began Saturday. The anti-government demonstrations have undermined the credibility of a vote aimed at restoring local governments dissolved during the insurgency.

Zeroual's government concentrated on that conflict yesterday, contending it was gaining the upper hand. Pre-election massacres and bombings killed hundreds of people.

Maj. Gen. Mohamed Lamari, the army chief, said the country was "heading toward normalization," though the violence "will disappear only gradually, according to the citizens' awareness and vigilance."

Rejecting claims by human rights groups of army brutality in the insurgency, Lamari told the monthly publication "El Djeich" that his military acts under republican missions conforming to the Constitution and in respect of human rights."

The extremely violent Muslim insurgency was set off by the government's decision to cancel 1992 legislative elections that the Islamic Salvation Front was poised to win.

The Islamic Salvation Army, the Front's military wing, announced a unilateral truce on Oct. 1, but the Armed Islamic Group has yet to renounce its brutal campaign to install a Muslim-based government.

In some of the latest violence, attackers killed 13 people in western Algeria. Among them, a family of four was stabbed to death overnight Monday near the village of Moulay Larbi, not far from the southwestern capital of Saida, civil defense officials said on condition of anonymity.

LAUREN KUSKY / COLLEGIAN

Heavy metal

Sunlight shines through a metal sculpture in front of the Amherst Police Station on Main Street.

Israel delays rifle sales to U.S. civilian market

By Danna Harman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Responding to pressure from U.S. lawmakers, Israel declared a three-month moratorium yesterday on sales of modified assault weapons to the American civilian market.

Thirty Democratic senators, led by Sen. Dianne Feinstein of California, have been waging a campaign against the import of such weapons.

Israel says it stopped selling assault weapons in the United States after a 1994 ban — and that its modified Uzi and Galil rifles do not fall under the ban's criteria because they are longer than the original models and lack automatic capabilities.

In a letter to President Clinton last month, Feinstein noted that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has said the modified Israeli guns — called the Uzi American and the Galil Sporter — remain capable of firing rapidly.

"They have become the weapon of choice for grievance killers, gangs and those who use them against police," wrote Feinstein. "They are designed to kill large numbers in close combat, and as such have no place on the streets of a civilized society." Last week Clinton announced he would sign a directive suspending pending and future applications to import modified assault weapons and reexamining the existing import criteria.

In a statement announcing the moratorium, the Foreign Ministry made public a letter from Israel's U.S. ambassador Eliyahu Ben-Elissar to Feinstein, saying the move was for "humanitarian reasons ... in light of the special sensitivity of the issue in the U.S."

Feinstein termed the move a "tentative step forward," noting that she had also made similar requests of other countries, including Russia, Bulgaria, Poland, Romania and Egypt.

Arik Shor, the vice president of Israel Military Industries which makes the guns, said his firm's U.S. distributor, Mosberg, would lobby the U.S. government to make sure legislation banning the export of the modified automatic weapons was not passed. IMI could lose several million dollars a year and be forced to close factories if the moratorium was extended, he said.

■ pot

continued from page 1

ambition.

"Our findings are consistent with those of every independent blue-ribbon commission that has examined this issue. While no drug is completely risk free, marijuana has been shown to have an extremely wide margin of safety," Morgan said.

Smoking marijuana can cause damage to the lungs, he said. "But the primary risk is among high-dose, long-term smokers, particularly those who also smoke tobacco," Morgan said.

Short-term memory loss is only effected a few hours after smoking. And marijuana has never been proven to damage the immune system or cause infertility, he said.

Brian Iuhn, founder of the Cannabis Reform Coalition said "This book is the first publication by real doctors where the government propaganda is reviewed. In a way we can understand it, they give the most direct answers to questions raised about marijuana usage."

■ GEO

continued from page 1

hiring procedures.

He said that Dean Petroff filled an advising position without posting the job or doing a formal job search in November of 1996.

He also said that when hiring for summer positions, Petroff directed certain graduate students to apply for a job, paying $10 an hour, while the other applicants including Qazilbash were left thinking the two jobs available both paid $7 an hour.

Qazilbash said that he hopes that as a result of the grievance he will be reinstated as an undergraduate advisor, a job which he believed he would be holding for a two year period.

He said that Petroff had told him he was a very good advisor, and suggested that he should take Academic Administration classes at the School of Education.

"I was told they wanted me for two years because it would be in the students best interest to have continuity, because it normally takes two years for students to figure out their majors," Qazilbash said.

Casey McCarthy, a student advised by Qazilbash, wrote an unsolicited letter to the advising office, which stated that Qazilbash had done a superb job and should be reinstated.

"I couldn't have been happier with him," McCarthy said, "he came across as an interested and caring person."

McCarthy, who hasn't been advised since Qazilbash's dismissal, said that he would rather have a constant advisor, and if it were possible he would appreciate being advised by someone of Qazilbash's caliber for his four years of college.

David Kennedy, a junior pre-engineering major, said that Qazilbash helped to make UMass a smaller place for him, and that in the process of being advised by Qazilbash the two became pretty good friends.

"He's an asset to be missed by the university," McCarthy said.

John Shields, a declared major advisor for the Dean of Arts and Sciences office, was also not hired as a pre-major advisor.

He said that Qazilbash was a fine worker, and was not aware of why he did not currently work at the undergraduate Pre-Major advising center, but gave reasons as to his own discontinued employment.

"I didn't get hired at the undeclared advising center because they didn't have the budget to hire everyone back," Shields said, "I also didn't have as much experience in pre- major advising."

The budget for the Pre-Major Advising Center has shrunk steadily over the years, and the Center is currently employing one quarter of the advisors it had two years ago.

Shields also said that the current pre-major advisors were hired by new director Pamela Marsh-Williams.

Qazilbash said that he was told by Assistant to the Provost John Cunningham to apply for a job with newly hired director of Pre-Major Advising Pamela Marsh-Williams, which led him to believe an illegal, unposted hiring process was taking place.

Qazilbash also said that Cunningham told Petroff to hire advisors who had achieved all but dissertation (ABD) status, meaning that their graduate coursework was completed.

Cunningham refused to comment on either matter.

Shields and Qazilbash both had ABD status, and Shields said that such status was irrelevant to an advisor's ability.

"It may give advisors more time for their job, but it really all depends on the person advising," Shields said.

Repeated efforts to reach Petroff for comment were unsuccessful.

■ boycott

continued from page 1

cern: China's proliferation of weapons of mass destruction."

Pelosi and other members attended a China protest rally in Lafayette Square across from the White House, while others participated in a rally of Taiwan supporters on the Capitol steps. During his visit, Sen. Robert Torricelli (D-N.J.) told the gathering that Jiang "will experience for himself the deep ties of common values and shared goals between the citizens of our democracy and those of Taiwan."

War illness linked to toxic agents

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The mysterious Gulf War illnesses suffered by thousands of U.S. veterans were probably caused by "a variety of toxic agents" encountered in the war against Iraq, a House subcommittee concluded yesterday.

The agents include nerve gases, vaccines, pesticides and insect repellents, smoke from oil well fires, and depleted uranium from spent U.S. anti-tank shells.

In contradiction to the conclusion reached by President Clinton's Advisory Committee on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses, the House panel said it saw "no credible evidence" that wartime stress was a contributor to the illnesses.

The presidential advisory committee is due to present its final report to Clinton tomorrow.

The House panel recommended that the Pentagon be forced to give up its lead role in investigating the matter. It said Congress should create or designate an independent agency to research Gulf War illnesses and their causes.

The Defense Department has steadfastly resisted the idea of removing it from the lead investigative role. Spokesman Kenneth Bacon said the Pentagon acknowledged it made mistakes in its early handling of the matter but has recently made important progress in investigating causes and dealing directly with affected veterans. "We believe that we are responsible for all that happened to veterans during the war — both good and bad," Bacon said Tuesday. "It's our responsibility to follow up on this... and we can best do that if we're running the investigation."

The report by the House Government Reform subcommittee on human resources asserted that the Clinton administration's approach, through the Pentagon, the CIA and the Department of Veterans Affairs, is "irreparably flawed."

"We find those efforts hobbled by institutional inertia that mistakes motion for progress," it said, accusing the administration of "arrogant incuriosity."

The subcommittee said its 20-month investigation found that toxic agents including Iraqi chemical weapons most likely are to blame for the respiratory and other Gulf War illnesses.

The Pentagon, which also is investigating the origins of veterans' illnesses, says it has found no firm evidence of a direct link to chemical weapons.

Earlier this year the Pentagon estimated that as many as 100,000 U.S. troops were exposed to low doses of nerve gases released in the demolition of an Iraqi ammunition depot in March 1991, days after the war had ended. But it said the doses were too small to have caused any sustained health problems.

The House panel released a draft of its investigative report yesterday, which panel members approved and forwarded to the full committee for action tomorrow.

Rep. Dan Burton (R-Ind.) chairman of the committee, welcomed the report and said he agreed that the Defense Department had not pursued the issue forcefully.

"If the departments of Defense and Veterans Affairs cannot do a better job than they have so far on this issue, we need to move this responsibility to an agency that will," Burton said in a statement released by his office.

The draft report accuses the Pentagon and the VA of ignoring veterans when they offered information about the possible causes of their illnesses.

"The presence of a variety of toxic agents in the Gulf War theater strongly suggests exposures have a role in causing, triggering or amplifying subsequent service-connected illnesses," the report concluded.

Clinton prods Jiang on human rights

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a spirited exchange over Beijing's rejection of democracy, President Clinton and his Chinese counterpart sparred yesterday over the Tiananmen Square massacre and the country's human rights policy. Clinton urged "full room for debate, dissent and freedom to worship."

Standing firm, Jiang Zemin said his country believes in "non-interference in each other's internal affairs."

In a remarkable back-and-forth at a White House news conference, Jiang defended the 1989 crackdown against pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square. Calling the protest a "political disturbance," Jiang said the action was necessary to preserve "social and political stability."

A stern Clinton replied: "I think it should be obvious to everyone that we have a very different view of the meaning of the events in Tiananmen Square. I believe that what happened and the aftermath and the continuing reluctance to tolerate political dissent has kept China from politically developing the level of support in the rest of the world that otherwise would have been developed."

Both leaders said they discussed in great detail specific cases of jailed dissidents. "I am the president of the People's Republic of China, not the chief judge of the Supreme Court," Jiang said. He said the cases were working their way through the legal system. Said Clinton: "We believe the policy of the government is on the wrong side of history."

Clinton, who accused President Bush of coddling China in 1992, is sensitive to criticism that he has not been tough enough with Jiang. Hundreds of protesters gathered outside the White House during the news conference.

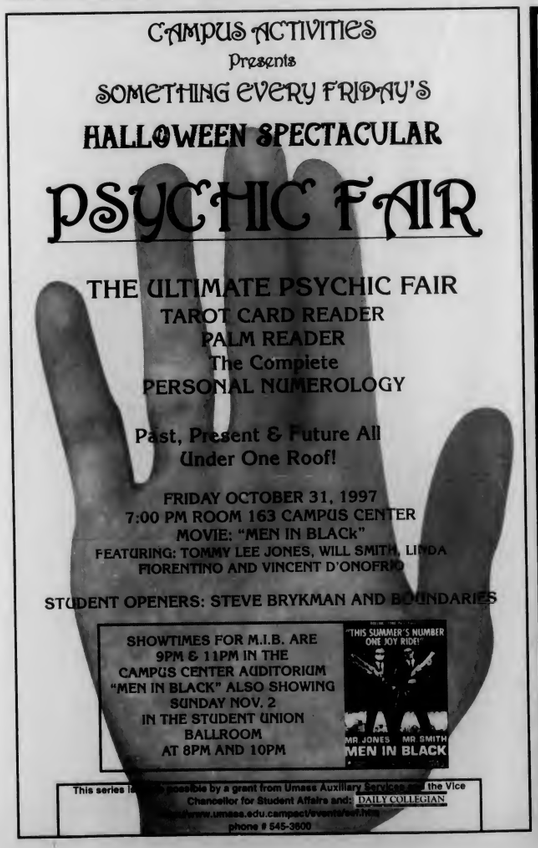
"You shouldn't in any way minimize the steep differences that still remain between us," he said.

Still, he acknowledged that China had made progress on human rights and lifted one of the sanctions imposed after the 1989 massacre: U.S. nuclear firms can now apply to do business with China.

"We have profound disagreements, but that does not mean that this visit should not have occurred or that we don't have a big interest in continuing to work together," Clinton said, struggling with a hoarse voice.

In three hours of talks over two days, the president said he confronted Jiang on human rights "directly and personally." Jiang said he was aware of the protests outside the White House. "Sometimes noises came into my ears," he said. "This is a reflection of democracy."

After the news conference, Clinton whispered to Jiang, "We should stand together" for photographers. The pair shook hands and smiled. "Thank you for your attention," Jiang told reporters. Trade also was a key issue. Clinton urged China to open its markets to U.S. goods. "Just as China can compete freely and fairly in America, so our goods and services should be able to compete freely and fairly in China," Clinton said.



Jiang, speaking in Chinese, said relations between the two nations have reached "a new stage of development."

ALEXANDER KUROMILAS / COLLEGIAN

This oar that?

Two members of the UMass women's crew team, carry their oars at a race this past weekend against UNH.

Yearbook Staff Prepares for Record Turnout

By Arnold Layne
Index Archives

Amherst- For the 129th year in a row, the UMass Yearbook Club begins production on the University's prestigious Index, this year however, will be designed and published not only as the 129th yearbook by the Index, but also the first to present the yearbook as a tour guide to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

> "The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." -Sean Marien

Asked on whether or not graduation seniors will be part of the yearbook, Managing Editor Loretta Kwan said "This year's book will not only include (Seniors), but will also include useful information on places to eat, places to go out to and also places to go when you're not feeling too well. There are a lot of places in this book. It's great!"

"Seniors will have to call the DaVor number to get in the yearbook. And quick." replied Editor-in-chief Jill Aordkian when asked how seniors will get in the book. "Last year we couldn't get all the Seniors in the book because they didn't get their photo taken soon enough."

This year the Index will be extending it's Senior Photo Shoot to allow for thousands of Seniors to get their photo in the book. Director of Marketing Sean Marien added "Seniors should call the number immediately. The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." The number to call for appointments is 1-800-836-05f58, and Seniors are encouraged to call as soon as possible during normal business hours.

"You have to call, you can't get around that." Photo Editor Aaron Eccles reply to if there was another way for Seniors to get in the book. "If you don't call, you can't get in, you just can't! There's no way."

"There's no need to worry, every students who gets their photo taken is put in the book, well except that once but....." said Kwan on the likeliness of not getting in the book. "Just call the number and show up. That's it."

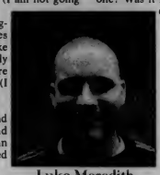
A new feature of the 1998 Index is the addition of the Grad Edition. "The Grad Edition is the best thing this campus has seen since the invention of the disposable lighter" Copy Editor Sean Maguire commented. The Grad Edition comes with the purchase of each yearbook. The Grad Edition will be available to Seniors before commencement, which gives graduates the opportunity to give parting comments to their friends in school.

President Clinton and Chancellor Scott were contacted about the Grad Edition, however both were unavailable for comment.

Get your Senior Photo Taken Now!
Call 1-800-836-0558
To Make an Appointment Today
There will be $5 sitting fee
This will be your only chance to get in this year's book

EDITORIAL / OPINION

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---



Trick or treat

For the first time in a while, the housemates and I are fired up about something (besides girls and all the stress they've been bringing us lately).

Halloween has come, and we all need to figure out what kind of moron we want to look like.

Housemate A wants to be a gangster. (Says he's got a phat suit for it.)

Housemate B is pissed because we're all not going to be people from Gilligan's Island. (I am not going to be the Skipper.)

Luke Meredith

Housemate C wants to be a gangster too, but that plan is on the ropes after his failed attempts to land a fake gun. According to Dave, somebody outlawed fake guns after cops were shooting little kids who had them. (I didn't know that.)

I just want to go trick-or-treating.

Sometimes, when I'm all alone and faint memories of toilet paper and eggs whiz through the cool autumn air, I wonder who the hell invented Halloween.

Was there a Mr. Halloween, who dressed up like Frankenstein and brought candy to poor kids all over the world? Was there a Saint Halloween, patron saint of mini-Snickers and Skittles?

The world needs to know.

I mean, I get Valentine's Day. You find a chick, take her out, whisper sweet nothings into her ear and kick some Marvin Gaye.

Fair enough.

And Thanksgiving. Okay, you had some Pilgrims, you had some Indians. They weren't hanging out. So somebody's like, "Hey, these people keep burning down our houses. Why don't we try to be friends, so they stop trying to burn down our house. I'll make a cake."

Understood.

Labor Day? Hey, it's a day off. No complaints here.

Fourth of July? Of course. We beat them evil English, and we beat 'em good, baby. (Hey King George III — you want some of this? I didn't think so.) Apologies to all Brits. I mean hey, some of my best friends used to be English.

Columbus Day always confused me, but again, it's a day off. New Year's Day? Great U2 song, great day off (the Rose Bowl and a nice hangover).

But Halloween? Who the hell came up with this one? Was it like "Hey, why don't we get the kids to dress up like the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and go around our neighborhood begging for food that's bad for them."

Hmm. Okay.

But I never questioned Halloween as a kid. It was a chance to score free mini-Snickers, and I got to dress up like I was on the Red Sox. I used to do a mean Spike Owen. Or a ghost. (First grade, no costume, bedsheet, long story.)

But these days, trick-or-treating has been replaced by partying in a costume, which I guess was a natural evolution. Five million years of natural selection to breed a species that dresses up like monsters and Red Sox. Good job there.

I'm not sure what I'll be yet. We were all going to be Gilligan's Island people, but Jeff and I nixed the idea because it was stupid. (End of story.) But then I wanted them to go as Housemates A, B and C by painting big letters on their chests.

They said no.

So now I'll probably be a Scottish guy, like in Braveheart. The reason? Because I'm sick of wondering whether we can really be "Gilligan's Island" without a Ginger or a Mary Ann, and because Dave has a blanket that sorta looks like a kilt if you tie it a certain way.

If there is a Mr. Halloween, he's probably laughing in his grave.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Killing in the name of Yesterday Massachusetts embraced the return of state sanctioned murder, a.k.a. the death penalty. It is an issue surrounded in emotionally heated debate on both sides. Whether you agree with me or not, it's essential that we recognize the consequences of capital punishment.

Public opinion and a majority of our legislators support the imposition of capital punishment. With the various flaws in the implementation of the death penalty, I however cannot agree.

Jeffrey R. Yusah

In resurrecting this form of punishment we are not simply destroying murderers and the dregs of society. We are opening this state to the barbaric and archaic nature of vengeance. In every human heart there is the impulse to give death for death, the urge to kill those who kill. But in this light, the state simply becomes the vindicator of emotional responses. The state as an enlightened guide and provider cannot always simply give in to public sentiment. Congresspeople are the representatives of our will, but they are also our leaders and as leaders must see the complete picture aside from the emotions and moral values of their constituents. For example, would it be just to follow segregation laws even if the majority approved? Obviously not, and although these two issues have their apparent differences, they also have the fundamental similarity in being unjust laws.

By saying the death penalty is unjust, I am not implying that it is unconstitutional. In terms of the Eighth Amendment, the Supreme Court has stated that the death penalty is not unconstitutional. I am implying that the imposition of the death penalty is arbitrary and capricious and for that sake cannot in any means be justified.

Understand that bringing back the death penalty doesn't simply kill the sick and depraved of our society, it kills in a racist and classist manner. I mean that in similar cases for similar crimes it has been proven beyond doubt that minorities and those in the lower classes receive the death penalty a considerable percentage more than whites and those in the upper class.

This is not an opinionated statement in any way. It has been substantiated through statistics and history. Ask any Legal Studies major or read any material about the imposition of death in the last 20 years (check Furman v. Georgia). It is an undebatable fact that capital punishment is plagued by discrimination and prejudice. With this alone interwoven into its nature, how can anyone approve of it? Unfortunately, not too many people are familiar with this aspect of the death penalty. In plain terms, supporting the death penalty is supporting racist and classist murder. It's that simple.

The death penalty is an irreconcilable punishment. What if one innocent person is executed? That one person cannot seek justice. He or she cannot reclaim what has been lost. The finality of the death penalty leaves no room for error.

But the system is wrought with errors and imperfections. There is no fee imaginable that could end the suffering of loved ones or the unjustified taking of life. This is not an example drawn out of the air. This state has killed innocent people before. Sacco and Vanzetti were essentially killed for being Italians. So I guess the question is, does the death of hundreds of guilty criminals rationalize the death of just one innocent? If it comes down to a question of morality, then where is the morality in innocent death carried out by the state? It cannot be a question of numbers and ratios when this is recognized.

Many proponents argue that capital punishment is a deterrent, or at least stops that one murderer from killing again. The deterrent factor is something completely open to opinion. I find both sides of the deterrent argument plagued by unsubstantiated factors. Who Is to say what truly stops someone from committing a crime or not? The fear of death scares the hell out of me. But honestly, I think I'd be more afraid of the mental anguish, the loss of liberty and the fear of physical and sexual assault associated with prison — especially when faced with the mandatory sentence of life that Massachusetts has previously had for first degree murder. Most convicts have a tough time going on killing sprees when they're in a maximum security prison for life.

This brings to light the crucial issue of punishment that many proponents hold. In this we forget about the place of rehabilitation, which in principle is just as inherent and important as restitution in our criminal justice system.

As always in a debate about the death penalty the question arises "what if it was your mother, wife, etc. who was raped and killed?" I would clearly have a bloodthrist for those who had violated a loved one. But I would hope that either in my mind or in the reasonable mind of an authority we could come to a level of maturity where murder by anyone in any form will not be condoned. In such a case emotions would obviously guide me, but that does not constitute justice. The state as a purveyor of law cannot simply be at the whim of emotions. They must have the enlightened stance to do what is best for a people even if the people do not believe it to be best.

We must understand that killing in any form justifies further killing. If we claim to stand on the moral high ground, if we claim to be the idealistic leaders of the world, then how can we condone barbarism? In executing a murderer we are not saying that murder is wrong, we are saying that we are their equal, that we are all murderers.

Jeffrey R. Yusah is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

School of Education faculty support reorganization

To the Editor:

Recently, several editorials and commentaries have appeared in student newspapers portraying the School of Education administration as callously singling out for elimination only one academic program, a program that serves students of color. By implication, the faculty of the School of Education are portrayed as indifferent to administrative abuse and the disenfranchisement of faculty and students of color.

We do not believe this is true. The School has recently undergone the reorganization of its graduate programs in each of our three departments. No one program was singled out for elimination. Each department had programs that were eliminated and merged with other programs in order to form academic concentrations large enough to provide adequate resources for faculty and students. While the loss of some programs has been controversial and difficult to accept, the majority of the faculty recognize that the process of reorganization was necessary and conducted in an equitable fashion. No student was deprived of the opportunity to complete his or her educational program, and ALANA students in particular have been, and continue to be, well- served by many programs in the School. At the same time, no faculty member was deprived of the opportunity to participate in doctoral programs, in which they can continue their teaching, research, service activities and work with their students.

Three weeks ago, the faculty of the Department of Teacher Education and Curriculum Studies participated in a survey which asked the faculty if they supported reorganization of academic programs. Seventy-four percent of the faculty who responded to the survey endorsed the Dean's reorganization plan for the School of Education and supported the Chair in moving the department toward this end.

We believe the process was conducted in a fair and equitable manner, and that the majority of the faculty of the School support the current reorganizing plan. We hope that the three dissenting faculty members will join with their colleagues to engage in the constructive work of the Department and School under the new configuration.

The current conflict is painful for us all, and we are concerned for the welfare of the School of Education and the students and faculty involved. We believe that everyone's interests can best be served by moving forward with the plan the Dean has outlined.

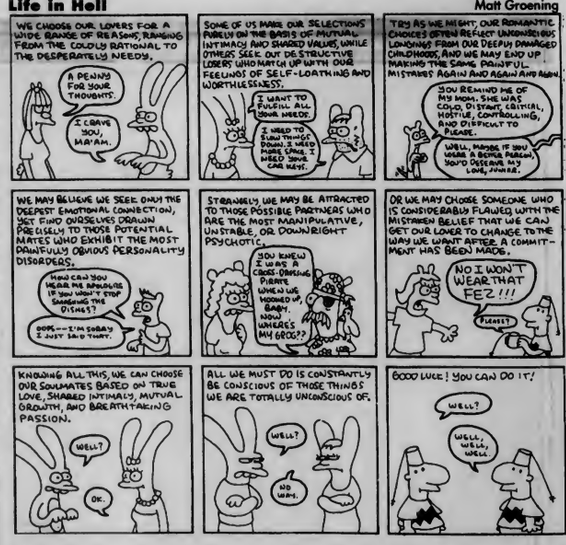
This letter was signed by 22 faculty members of the Department of Teacher Education and Curriculum Studies.

Crazy about prisons

To the Editor:

Last Tuesday, I sat down to eat in Franklin Dining Commons. Sometimes there are little cards on the table to inform students of happenings around the campus. That night, I saw something that made me so sick that I lost my appetite. There was a card for "Prison Awareness Week."

Why in the world would we have such a thing in this country? This is an event that fights for the dregs and degenerates of society who are locked up so that they can't harm people anymore. Who in their right mind would have the nerve to stand up for a murderer or a pedophile that has destroyed people's lives? It is truly sick that this type of program advertises to get people involved. It upsets me that this entire week there will be people protesting for the rights of lowlifes like the two men who killed ten-year-old Jeffery Curley and then sexually molested his corpse with beer bottles. If I had it my way, these people would not only lose their rights, but they would lose their lives as well.



It's called "Prison Awareness Week" — well guess what? I'm already aware of what goes on in prison. Hell, I'm proud of what goes on. It's nice to know we live in a country where the true scum can go to a place where they will get what they deserve. I will never support this type of a program, and I hope that everyone on campus would use common sense and do the same.

Ryan Benharris
Orchard Hill

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003, or by e-mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Life in Hell Matt Groening

Doonesbury BY GARY TRUDEAU

Write for a Point/Counterpoint!

The Collegian Editorial page will be running a point/counterpoint feature on the proposed Honors College. Articles must be well-written and researched. The deadline for submission has been extended to Friday night at 9 p.m.

For more information please call Dan Bodah at 545-1491.

Anyone who is interested should submit material by e-mail (letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu), fax (545-1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices in the box of Ed/Op editor Dan Bodah.

Editorials must be 500-700 words long and include your name and phone number.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor-in-Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became The College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

ARTS & NON-LIVING

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Thursday, October 30, 1997

QUAKED

and never again to see the light of day

THE SUCCESSOR?

After reading about the phenomenon called Quake, you may wonder what its creators are working on now. The answer to that question is Quake II, of course! Since the full release of Quake in the summer of 1996, id Software's programmers have been hard at work on their next first-person action game. The expectations from the public are quite high. However, it seems that id will have another hit on the shelves this Christmas.

For Quake II, id Software has created a brand new software engine. It has more impressive graphics, a better user interface, and is more flexible, among other things. The initial release is designed specifically for Windows 95, with releases for other platforms later on. Therefore, Quake II has the latest PC technology in mind.

A compatibility demo of Quake II was released just over a week ago. Its main purpose was to test Quake II's performance on a variety of machines, but it is also giving gamers a first-hand idea of what Quake II will be like. Hundreds of thousands of copies have been down-

Turn to QUAKE II, page 6

LOO

IN REAL LIFE: JOHN LARKIN

ABANDON HOPE ALL YE WHO ENTER HERE...

Gib everywhere... Blood drips from the ceilings...The sounds of explosions fill the halls... A missile whizzes past my ear... Dear Lord! What is going on here?

"Inetall it. Learn it. Then you die." That is how it all started...

I had just moved into my new room in Crabtree. I didn't really know what to expect from this new group of people into which I had been placed. They all seemed pretty cool, little did I know they were all bloodthirsty psychopaths with a shared illness, Quake. The brotherhood of Quake, as I soon learned, included WarLord, Loo, Elzost, Weoge and Sameon. And now they wanted me to sign up.

What was I to say? The look WarLord had in his eyes as he watched me install the CD made me realize that this wasn't just a game to them. This was more important than school, work, friends, food, or oxygen. This was Quake — the single most addictive game of all time. Now, don't get me wrong, I had heard of Quake before. I knew it was a first-person shoot-em-up-type game. Yawn. Little did I know! I am now just as addicted as the rest of the

Turn to GIBS, page 11

KINGDOK

IN REAL LIFE: NOAH SUR+

ALL THE CARNAGE THAT'S FIT TO PRINT

Many view the Internet as a wealth of information, but to Quake players, it's a whole different story. It's a world of news, modifications, Total Conversions (TC), servers and up to the minute details about one of the most anticipated sequels in gaming history, Quake II. For those fans, and Quake virgins, it's a wealth of information, creativity and community that, when QTest came out over a year ago, was beyond everyone's wildest dreams.

The Internet has changed Quake. The Internet has engulfed Quake through the creative genius of thousands of learning and learned programmers. It has taken the original game to the nth degree and farther. From the roots of a solid first-person shooter to the many different portrayals of the game today, the Internet has been the Slipgate into gaming history.

The Internet has been the platform through which many Quake players from all over the world have brought their yearning for information and their creativity together. The "Quake community" has bred many new designers, artists and programmers that now work at gaming companies designing the games of the future. One of the Quake news old-timers, RedWood (redwood.stompeo.com) feels "they [the Quake community] have spread ideas, which spark other ideas from players, which create modifications, etc. that end up influencing the next iteration of games."

Others in the community feel differently.

"I think that news sources have been both a blessing and a bad thing," Slipgate of quake2.com says. "Constant waiting and waiting public [Internet wise] displays for Quake is what resulted in a premature release of the QTest and of the final game. Quake could have been a lot more cohesive of a real game if id hadn't been pressured to release so early."

XINNAR

IN REAL LIFE: JOSH SYLVESTER

From the birth of Quake on the Internet back when Stomped.com was the major Quake site to the present, there has been no shortage of Quake related sites on the Internet. Today, there are literally millions of Quake sites, devoted to various topics such as news, modifications, screenshots, Total Conversions, gameplay, level editing and the list goes on and on. Hosting these sites are the many local Internet providers all over the world, as well as the bigger Quake hosting sites: www.planetquake.com, www.stompeo.com, and the newest of the hosts — www.brutality.com.

But with this wealth of sites, and Quake players making up the pseudo "Quake community," there has not always been harmony within the "community."

"The Internet Quake community is on the whole a stable entity, however the community is still divided in some respects," Slipgate of quake2.com said. "But the best part

Turn to NEWS, page 9

LAYOUT AND DESIGN BY JOSH SYLVESTER

STYLIZED 'Q' QUAKE FONT, AND IMAGES COPYRIGHT ID SOFTWARE. ALL OTHER IMAGES AND TITLE DESIGN, COPYRIGHT BY ME.

ALSO INSIDE...

FOUR COLOR COMMENTARY P.6 -- MISSION IMPROVABLE P.6 - COUNTING CROWS PREVIEW P.7 -- ORPHEUS CHAMBER ORCHESTRA P.7 -- THE DORMROOM GOURMET P.8 -- NEW WORLD THEATER P.8 -- THE TEMPEST P.8 -- JAZZ/BLUES WEEKLY P.10 - WOOD & STRINGS P.10 - CESARIA EVORA P.11 - TRAX ON/TRAX OFF

MORE OPTIONS FOR QUAKE ADDICTS

Quake: a first person, shoot-em up 3D gaming environment. While playing Quake in single-player mode, it's lonely you vs. hordes of computer-generated enemies and obstacles. When you've exhausted yourself and the game through single-player combat, where has the excitement gone? The answer: multi-player. This addition, widely available in past and recent complex computer/simulation type games, provides the gamer with a new and exciting possibility: can I play against people? Of course! And the Internet is the best place to start.

For play on the Internet, you need to be equipped with the latest of client (or on your computer) side game playing abilities. QuakeWorld, a graphical interface for use in Windows 95 or NT, provides a list of hundreds of servers world-wide that provide Quake games, or are running servers. Quake is also playable on Local Area Networks (LAN). A popular gaming experience prevalent in Ethernet-capable dorms on college campuses.

To extend the enjoyment of multi-player games, modifications to normal game play, such as the addition of goals to be completed or new weaponry, have been created by Quake enthusiasts (better known as Quakers) from around the world. A few of the more popular modifications are highlighted below.

These modifications, known as mods in the gaming community, reshape the very environment and atmosphere of the game itself. Among the more popular of Quake modifications are the following:

Capture the Flag
(QuakeWorld or LAN playable)
www.planetquake.com/threewave/

WARLORD

IN REAL LIFE: DAVID QUIS+

One of the first big-time modifications created for multi-player Quake, Capture the Flag (CTF), has created whole leagues of players dedicated purely toward the advancement of CTF play and CTF tournaments.

The object of this modification is simple: capture and successfully return the enemy's flag to your base. Not so simple. The levels in CTF are designed symmetrically, so that each base is identical, which means the opposition doesn't have a problem figuring out where your flag is. There are two teams, red and blue, each clearly marked by their own unique designations, red being the lightning bolt while blue is represented by the ever-present force of a hammer. Sub-modifications to this original modification, named ThunderWalker CTF and a Star Wars CTF, bring new weapons and items into play, as well as several new levels.

The grappling hook, and the blue base and THE FLAG.

Painkeep
(QuakeWorld or LAN playable)

Turn to ADDICTS, page 9

Batman takes on Gotham City

Since tomorrow is Halloween, what better way to mark the occasion in Four Color Commentary than with a review of the 13–part Batman story, The Long Halloween? (Well, all right, dressing up in a sweaty costume, and gorging yourself on Kit Kats has a slight edge, but just play along okay?) First off though, a smattering of comments and some Halloween comic book potpourri, if you will.

How many of you comparative lit majors here on campus knew there was a class called "Comic Art in North America" in the course catalogue? Probably not many, but it's there and it's definitely a class worth checking out. It's instructed by Christopher Couch, an editor at Northampton's own small press comic company, Kitchen Sink.

FOUR Color Commentary
By Jeff Carter

Kudos to DC for their "Faces" promotion. Every DC comic that shipped this month featured nothing but the face of the starring character on the cover. This made for an eye–catching, colorful display on comic shop shelves when stocked together. It was a simple, yet effective idea that proved you don't need shiny hologram or naughty "variant" covers to attract readers' attention. Best of all, there was no change in cover price.

In Halloween related news, make sure you pick up the Hellboy Jr. Halloween Special from Dark Horse. This hysterical 64–page comic, drawn in several kooky animated styles, features a pint–size version of Mike Mignola's excellent Hellboy character wreaking havoc in three short stories. It's great stuff. Halloween is also celebrated in Slave Labor Graphics' Action Girl Comics #13, Wildstorm Halloween '97, The Kid Death and Fluffy Halloween Special from Event Comics, Chaos Nightmare Theatre #1 and Dark Horse Comics Presents #125.

The 100th anniversary of everyone's favorite blood–sucker, Dracula, is commemorated in the Vampirella/Dracula: Centennial from Harris Comics.

Finally, Marvel will soon be launching its "Strange Tales" imprint. These comics will be horror–related and will not be code–approved. Shipping this week is Man–Thing #1, and it will be followed in the months to come with Werewolf By Night #1, Satana #1 and Blade, Vampire Hunter #1.

Now, onto the review:

• Batman: The Long Halloween #1–13 (DC Comics, $4.95 for issues one and two, $2.95 for #2–12). Writer: Jeph Loeb Artist: Tim Sale.

In this ambitious maxiseries set in the "Year One" era of Batman, Gotham's criminal underworld is terrorized by "Holiday" who commits murders on every major holiday of the year, leaving only a .22 caliber pistol and a trinket associated with the holiday at the crime scene. It's up to Batman, Commisioner Gordon and DA Harvey Dent to solve the mystery and put an end to the killing so they can bring Carmine "The Roman" Falcone and the rest of the Gotham mob down legally. Already, this series has drawn comparisons to other Bat–opuses like Frank Miller's revolutionary Dark Knight Returns, and Alan Moore's brilliant Killing Joke. These comparisons are simply unfair. Any story, much less another Batman–epic, would have trouble living up to the Dark Knight Returns. This book almost single–handedly changed how modern comic books are written and viewed (some would say for the worse). Ironically, The Long Halloween is prevented from achieving legendary status by the same "gimmick" it used as its selling point. Stretching the story over an entire year and trying to work in members of Batman's freakish Rogues Gallery oftentimes resulted in issues with sparse dialogue that could be read in 10 minutes, and contrived situations with the colorful villains that detracted from the "Holiday"/ Mafia mystery. Still, the good things about the series far outweighed the bad. We saw perhaps the best characterizations (in both art and scripting) of Batman, Harvey Dent and the Batman villains done in a long time, particularly the Joker and a very seductive Catwoman. We saw a dark, towering, intimidating Batman who hasn't been rendered quite this way since The Dark Knight Returns. Tim Sale did a masterful job, capturing the dark mood of this series with his twisted, haunting linework. His stark, black and white sequences marking every "Holiday" murder are among the best ever done in comics, and gave the story a classic "movie mystery" feel. The insights into the relationships between Dent, his wife and Bruce Wayne were fascinating, and they served to make Two–Face a more emotionally resonant character. Of course, the biggest challenge for Loeb was to make the identity of "Holiday" an effective mystery to the final issue, and he did. There were several key suspects and many interesting twists leading up to a shocking and satisfying conclusion in #13. Essentially, what Loeb and Sale set out to do here was write a moody, mysterious, cinematic backstory on the role organized crime played in the transformation of Harvey Dent into the deranged Two–Face, and how that affected the relationships among Batman, Bruce Wayne, Commisioner Gordon and other Gotham City characters. They certainly succeeded, and added even more to the rich history of Batman. Final Grade for the entire Batman: The Long Halloween: A–

Jeff Carter is a UMass student. His e–mail address is Scribe1974@aol.com. His column runs Thursdays.

The Arts & Living desk is always looking for new writers to cover books, music, arts and more. If you're interested, come and talk to Seema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor or call 545–1491.

MISSION: IMPROVable a treat

By Eric Petersen
Collegian Correspondent

If you want to waste a Saturday night watching a trite comedy show with the same old cookie–cutter skits that insult your intelligence — stay home and watch "Saturday Night Live" on TV.

If you want funny, be down at the Campus Center Basement every Saturday for MISSION:IMPROVable. Make sure you get there well before their start time of 8 p.m., though, or you'll be standing in the back of a packed room. MISSION:IMPROVable audiences average well over 200 strong, including nearly 75 regulars.

You read that right: regulars. MISSION:IMPROVable performances are all spontaneously improvised using the often wacky suggestions of audience members. Their performances are a series of short form games and skits that use the audience's input as focal points. Since no one can guess what the audience will say next, the shows are always fresh and always different, and that's what keeps the regulars coming back again and again.

Take for example the game called "A Priest and a Rabbi." This game is based on the common joke beginning in which a priest, a rabbi and a third person all walk into a bar. However, in this case, the audience supplies the third person, and it's up to the cast to instantly produce the punchlines. The audience tries to stump the cast with impossibly strange suggestions, but it's not that easy. In fact, cast members had to step up quick in order to get their jokes heard at all.

Another game they played was called "Shorten It." In this game, three characters acted out a one minute scene outlined around audience suggestions. When the scene was complete, the "director," sophomore Jason Reis, insisted they repeat the entire scene in 30 seconds without eliminating anything. That actors did so easily, but Reis wasn't satisfied; that's when things start to get intense. Under Reis's direction, they reduced the scene to 15, 10 and finally five seconds flat with hilarious results.

When they reached 10 seconds, some smart–aleck in the audience yelled out, "Do it backwards!" To everyone's amazement, perhaps even their own, they did it.

"It's fun to watch how each of [the performers] change," said Andrea Marbletone, one of the troupe's dedicated followers. "[I like] to see how their [reoccurring] characters grow, how they add more to them."

The shows generally run about an hour and a half. They are backed up by DJ Harrison King and guitarist "Tony" Westcott, who is known for his song "I Like 'Em Dead."

Some of the other games are "What you should have said," in which actors are continually forced to replace the lines they just said with different ones in mid–scene, and "Oscar Winning Moment," where actors can, at any time in the scene, be forced to give an impromptu monologue of Oscar–winning caliber on the most improbable subjects. They have nearly 50 more games and skits in their repertoire, including "3 Male Nuns" and "Emotional Roller Coaster."

You would think the demand to be instantly funny would be nerve–wracking to the cast, but it doesn't appear to phase them.

"The trick is, we don't try to be funny," said senior Ryan Keisler, one of the troupe's oldest members. "We know we can be funny. We just go out there and do our thing." Reis agrees with that statement.

"I just love working with the audience," Reis said.

The group is much more concerned with keeping the energy up and the audience participating.

"The audience makes the show," said senior Aaron Krebs, the troupe's director, to the emphatic nods of the entire cast.

Krebs attributed the troupe's growing success to the group's energy and talent.

"I've been in nine different impro–

Turn to IMPROV, page 12

COURTESY MISSION:IMPROVABLE

Mission:Improvable cracks up the Campus Center every Saturday night at 8 p.m.

COUNTING CROWS
this saturday!
plus special guest
dog's eye view
recovering the satellites
saturday november 1
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE, THRU TICKETMASTER OUTLETS:
(NRM MUSIC • RECORD TOWN • FILENE'S) & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500 • (203) 525-4500.
FOR MORE INFO CALL (413) 545-0505. EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT GROUP
AN OGDEN ENTERTAINMENT COMPANY VISIT US AT WWW.METROENT.COM

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Take It Off- Take It All Off- On The GIANT SCREEN
The Last Weekend to See It In Northampton
Daily 7:00 & 9:15 (Please arriv early!)
Out Of Shape. Out Of Work. Out Of Luck.
Meet America's Newest Sex Symbols.
THE FULL MONTY
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Center 584 8435

CNAs
EXPLORE OUR REWARDS!
* $500 SIGN-ON BONUS! *
$10 PER DIEM RATE ON WEEKENDS
Sunrise Healthcare Corporation, a national leader in quality transitional, long-term and subacute healthcare services, has opportunities available for dedicated and caring CNAs.
ELAINE HEALTH AND REHAB CENTER
NURSING STUDENTS WELCOME!
CNA TRAINING CLASS
STARTING DECEMBER 3rd
EVENING AND WEEKEND ORIENTATION IS AVAILABLE
Full-time, part-time, mother's hours and per diem opportunities are available during all shifts.
Interested candidates, please apply in person or contact: Kathy Graves, Staff Coordinator, Elaine Health and Rehab, 20 North Maple Street, Hadley, MA 01035. Phone (413) 584-5057

Paula Cole
Live in concert with special guest
JEN TRYNIN
DECEMBER 9 • 8:00 PM
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Mt. Holyoke College - S. Hadley, MA
General Admission. All Ages. Advance tickets available at B-Side Records in Northampton, For The Record in Amherst, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass., and all Strawberries Record Stores. To Charge by phone call ProTix at (800) 477-6949 or (413) 732-0202.
ON SALE FRI. OCT. 31 AT 10 AM
Presented by MassConcerts & The Iroquois at Mt. Holyoke www.webtrax.com/massconcerts

Counting Crows to invade Mullins

COURTESY DENNIS KEELEY

The Counting Crows will kick off the Mullins Center's packed November on Saturday evening.

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

Saturday marks the beginning of the Mullins Center's busiest concert month ever. This November will see the University of Massachusetts' on–campus arena play host to some of rock's rising stars (Live, 311 and Sugar Ray) as well as the man who just broke the record for the best–selling single in music history, Elton John.

Torchbearers of the newly coined genre known as "adult alternative," the Counting Crows invade the home of UMass Basketball in a return trip to the Pioneer Valley (they played Pearl Street in early 1994) for a show with Dog's Eye View this Saturday evening (Nov. 1) at the Mullins Center.

A full year after its release, the Crows are still touring in support of the critically–acclaimed Recovering the Satellites. Featuring the singles "A Long December" and "Angels of the Silences," it's an album with a breadth of emotional immediacy rarely seen in today's world of manufactured, cookie–cutter rock. Their songs are like a good wine, always fermenting and growing better with time.

Of all the post–Nirvana bands, Counting Crows count themselves among a small handful of acts that have been able to endure the backlash of becoming suddenly huge. After the runaway success of their debut August and Everything After, and the accompanying clips "Mr. Jones" et al., many pondered their fate. After taking some time off to regroup, Recovering the Satellites resonates with both maturity and inventiveness. How'd they survive? The reason is quite simple — the strength and dedication to their songcraft.

Checking in via telephone from his home in San Francisco during a brief respite from the road, keyboardist/accordianist/vocalist Charlie Gillingham waxes prophetically on their success.

He says, "To be honest, the road really does suit me, except for the fact that a week ago seems like a year ago. I've lost out on a lot and lost touch with a lot of good friends, but I wouldn't trade these last few years for anything.

Having graduated from playing theaters and clubs to the much larger venues such as the larger sheds and arenas they played this summer with Jakob Dylan's band The Wallflowers), Gillingham says, "Was something we viewed with trepidation at first, but we love it now that we've learned how to use it."

Indeed, with a show that now features a mid–set acoustic segment as well as the excellent "Raining In Baltimore" in their regular setlist, the move to bigger rooms has "Been a huge positive as far as what we've been able to do live," Gillingham believes.

Along for the ride this time is Dog's Eye View, a band familiar to many from their hit "Everything Falls Apart." According to guitarist/songwriter Peter Stuart, the success of the single is something he still considers "Quite a lark" and totally unexpected.

The two acts are quite familiar to each other, as Dog's Eye View opened several shows for the Counting Crows back in '94 and stayed on for the tour's duration as their guitar tech. Both groups are quite comfortable with each other and according to Stuart, he's "close friends" with Counting Crows singer Adam Duritz, who contributes some guest vocals to DEV's latest Columbia release, Daisy.

Their curious moniker is taken

Turn to CROWS page 12

Chamber orchestra to play Concert Hall

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

Orpheus, one of the world's foremost chamber orchestras, will bring their sumptuous sound to the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall on the University of Massachusetts campus this Saturday at 8 p.m.

Although the orchestra members perform without a conductor, they play as one, in a common union with amazing exactness of attack, sound quality, harmony, conceptual unity of tempi and meaningful interpretation.

Joining the orchestra for their Amherst performance is mezzo–soprano Milagro Vargas to perform the Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson by Aaron Copland.

Also included on the program will be Mozart's Symphony No. 14 in A major, K. 114, Grieg's Two Elegiac Melodies, Op. 34 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 in C major, Op. 21.

Founded in 1972 by cellist Julian Fifer and a group of fellow musicians who aspired to perform chamber orchestral repertoire as chamber music, Orpheus was developed as a self–governing organization.

Central to the distinction of Orpheus is their unusual process of sharing and rotating leadership roles. For every work, the members of the orchestra determine the concertmaster and the principal players for each section.

Vargas has stirred audiences throughout the United States and Europe with her distinctive voice and stage presence. Widely praised for the power of her interpretations, Ms. Vargas can be heard in opera, orchestral, concert, chamber music and recital settings.

Aaron Copland became entranced with Emily Dickinson's poem, "The Chariot," — transfixed by her metaphor of death and immortality stopping by in a carriage to transport the poet gently into eternity.

He visited Dickinson's home in Amherst and stood at the window in the upper bedroom, where she had cloistered herself to look out upon her garden and a nearby street corner. He was amazed that she had written some 800 poems from the confines of that room.

Soon, he was searching for more Dickinson poems, steadily setting a dozen of them over the next year. The 12 pensive, sometimes playful, sometimes plaintive poems Copland selected depict the themes of life, death and nature that are dominant subjects in Dickinson's work.

Orpheus has recorded extensively for Deutsche Gramophone. Included in the catalogue of over 40 recordings are several Haydn symphonies and Mozart serenades, the complete Mozart wind concertos with Orpheus members as soloists, romantic works by Dvorak, Grieg and Tchaikovsky and a number of 20th century classics by Bartok, Prokofiev, Copland and Stravinsky.

During the 1997–98 season Orpheus will also perform in Paris, London, Rome, Prague, Amsterdam, Frankfurt, Vienna, Hong Kong, Boston, New York and San Francisco.

Tickets for Orpheus are $30, $25, and $15, ages 17 and under are $8 and Five College students are $5. For tickets and more information call (413) 545–2511 or (800) 99–UMAS.

COURTESY FRANK WARD

The play is it

Amherst College will present a production of Big and Little this weekend at the Kirby Theater. The play opens tonight and runs through Nov. 1. Admission to the 8 p.m. performance is free, though reservations are suggested. Call 542–2277 for more information.

How does the world begin to heal from a genocide?
One by One
Descendants of the Third Reich and the Holocaust in Dialogue
Tuesday, November 4, 7:30pm
Campus Center Room 174
University of Massachusetts
Free and open to the public. Wheelchair accessible.
Sponsored by the Office of Jewish Affairs.
For more information cal 545-9642

A Halloween pumpkin recipe

The Dorm Room Gourmet

To me, celebrating Halloween is not complete without a meal based on its very symbol: the pumpkin. It is one of the most complex and distinctly flavorful members of the squash family and lends itself to a myriad of uses beyond the old pumpkin pie.

The first thing to know about eating pumpkins is that only the little ones are good for eating. These are called sweet pumpkins and should be about the size of cantaloupe. The big ones get tough and fibrous and are best left for scary Jack-o'-lanterns and toasted seeds.

To cook pumpkin dormroom style, remove the guts, chop the flesh into one and a half inch cubes, put it in a tightly covered microwave safe container and nuke (two cups worth take about 8 minutes on a full blast). When soft, allow to cool a little and remove the skin. Then you can mash it, add a little butter, nutmeg, salt and pepper and serve it.

The second thing to know about cooking with pumpkin is that it also comes all cleaned, par-cooked and mashed up for you in a can (make sure to get the vegetable version and not the pie filling). Not only does this make for quicker, easier cooking, it also allows you to use it all year round. And unlike most canned vegetables, the taste, texture and overall quality of this product is suprisingly good.

This week's recipe combines westernized ideas of the flavors of India with pumpkin, mushrooms, shrimp to create a delicious curry-style entreé. Happy Halloween!

And once again, whenever and whatever you're cooking, think safety (and flavor) first. Always have a fire extinguisher close by and be sure to provide for proper ventilation. Rock and Boil!

A Smashing Pumpkin & Shrimp Curry

Ingredients:

- 1Tbs. olive oil
- 1Tbs. butter
- 1 onion, finely diced
- 1 Tbs. minced garlic (fresh or prepared)
- 1 Tbs. minced ginger root (fresh or prepared)
- 1 cup sliced button mushrooms
- 1 Tbs. curry powder
- 1 tsp. chili powder (or to taste)
- 1 tsp. paprika
- 1 tsp. allspice
- 1/2 tsp. ground nutmeg
- 1 tsp. cayenne (or to taste)
- salt and pepper to taste
- 3 Tbs. lemon juice
- 1 can chicken broth
- 2 tsp. brown sugar and honey
- 1 lb. large shrimp, shelled and deveined
- 1/3 cup yogurt
- 1/2 bunch cilantro, chopped

1) Preheat a large, deep skillet over medium high heat. When it's hot, add first the olive oil and then the butter (this keeps the butter from getting too brown).

2) Add the onions to the skillet and cook until soft (about 5 minutes). Then add the mushrooms and cook for about 5 more minutes. Next add the ginger and garlic, cooking for 3–4 more minutes.

3) Combine the spices (including salt and pepper) in a bowl and reserve 2 tsp. for later. Add the spice mix to the skillet (this allows the spices to toast in the oil and releases their full flavor). Cook this mixture out for 1 minute more, constantly stirring to prevent burning.

4) Add the lemon juice and stir well, scraping the bottom of the pan to deglaze and get all the flavor possible out of the pan and into the dish.

5) Add the pumpkin, the broth and the sugar. Stir to incorporate and bring to a slow simmer.

6) Cook the mixture uncovered for about 15 minutes to release and blend all the flavors and to slightly thicken (cook longer to thicken more, add a little more stock or water to thin out). Season to taste with salt and pepper.

7) Right before service, stir in the shrimp, cover the pan and remove from heat. Allow to stand for 3–4 minutes (this allows the shrimp to cook gently, preserving their taste and texture). Uncover the pan, swirl in the yogurt and serve on top of a bed of rice. Garnish with chopped cilantro, a pinch of the reserved spice mix and an extra squeeze of lemon juice.

8) A note: If you have been checking out this column regularly, you might recognize the similarities between this and another of my Indian inspired dishes. This was done to exemplify the flexibility inherent in different styles of cooking. Once you understand the basic techniques, you can mix and match ingredients to suit your own taste. I hope you are trying and enjoying them all!

Louis Davis is a Collegian columnist. You can e-mail him with any culinary questions, or with any comments about this column at LouieXO@aol.com. His column runs on Thursdays.

Curtain Theater hosts the Tempest

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Staff

You can feel those pre-show jitters looming about the campus again. All the kinks have been worked out, the lighting is fixed and stage has been polished.

What's all the preparation for?

For this special 25th Anniversary year, the University of Massachusetts Theater Department presents a classic tale about "young loves, old wrongs and brave new worlds." You probably know the show as The Tempest. The Shakespearean drama is one of many shows planned for the Theater Department's 1996/97 season.

It is always uncommon to see a father–daughter relationship in the world of theater; theater usually strived to put emphasis on father–son themes. Always original, the Bard went against convention and came up with The Tempest.

Richard Trousdell has taken on the task of directing this ageless story.

Trousdell, who is also the Theater Department Chair, has been with the department since 1978 and has directed numerous shows over the years. One of his largest lessons learned throughout the years has been the "importance of being earnest" while directing shows.

"I always loved this play. It's about coming to terms with the past, but looking into the unknown future," Trousdell said in a recent interview.

The Tempest isn't a one man show though. The production stars Five College students — with the exception of local story teller/actor, Tom McCabe. McCabe, a longtime department veteran, takes on the lead role of Prospero.

The show is a mix of young and old, experienced and wildy ambitious — yet they all play a very important role in the lesson to be taught.

"[The play] is also passing the torch onto a younger people," Trousdell said.

The Tempest begins Oct. 30–Nov. 1 and Nov. 4–Nov. 8. There are also two matinees on Saturday at 2 p.m., Nov. 1 and Nov. 8. All shows are at the Curtain Theater, UMass. Tickets cost $4 for students and seniors, $7 for general public and are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or call (800) 999-UMASS.

COURTESY/UMASS THEATER DEPARTMENT

The Tempest opens tonight at the Curtain Theater.

New WORLD Theater awarded 1997 Inroads grant for 'Arranged Marriage'

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

New WORLD Theater, a program of the Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts Amherst was recently awarded a 1997 Inroads grant in the amount of $20,000 from Arts International, a division of the Institute of International Education based in New York City.

New WORLD Theater is one of 10 U.S. arts organizations funded by the Inroads program. Designed to improve and expand planning opportunities for international collaborations undertaken by U.S. artists and organizations, grants support U.S.–based collaborative planning residencies of leading performing artists from Africa and the Middle East, Latin American and the Caribbean and Asia and the Pacific Islands with U.S.–based performing artists.

New WORLD theater's collaboration, which garnered Arts International Inroads program support is a project titled, "Arranged marriage," scheduled to be part of New WORLD's playlab theater series, "New Works For A New World" during the summer of 1998.

The planning residency will focus on a collaboration between U.S.–based writer Chitra Diva Karuni and Indian choreographer and performer Aparna Sindhoor, and her accompanists, vocalist Sukanya Prabhakar and musician/composer G.S. Ramanujan. The artists will adapt stories from Divakaruni's highly acclaimed collection of fiction, Arranged Marriage for the stage.

Each story in Arranged Marriage deals with the impact of the traditional cultural practice of arranged marriages on the lives of various women of Indian heritage. While Ms. Divakaruni is a noted ficiton writer, Aparna Sindhoor is an accomplished Bharatanatyam trained choreographer and performer who has performed both traditional and contemporary theater work.

Inroads grants are aimed at supporting the in–depth exploration and development that needs to take place between U.S. artists and organizations and artist from around the world prior to the formal commissioning of new work.

New WORLD theater was founded in 1979, and brings to central focus theater work that traditionally has remained at the periphery: its primary mission is the presentation and production of works by playwrights of color. New Works For A New World was created to nurture new works by playwrights of color.

For additional information, contact Mark Buszak, Associate Director of Multicultural Programs at the Fine Arts Center.

Write for the Collegian–It's good for you

UPC Presents...
An Evening of Culture
UPC

Odadaa is an exceptional group of musicians and dancers from Ghana that capture the culture of Africa through dance and music.

Monday, November 3rd
Bowker Auditorium
Doors Open at 7:30

Tickets $7.50 for UMass students with valid ID
$10.50 for 5 college students with valid ID
$15.00 for all others

ODADAAA

Flag Night
USE
18+...
21+ No Cover...
Drink Specials...
Absolute Mayhem... coming this way
November 7th...
Pearl Street

RUSSELL'S
LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Keystone Light" 30-pk $9.99
Celebrate "Halloween"!
Bud 16 oz cans $14.49 case
Michael Shea's "Irish Amber" $6.99 12-pk.
J.W. Dundee "Honey Brown" $6.99 12-pk.
Michael Shea's "Black & Tan" $6.99 12-pk.
"Fantastic Pricing!"
Glenlivet "single Malt" $20.99 750 ml
Cider Jack $4.39 6-pk all flavors
Popov 80° Vodka $10.99 1.75 liter
Check Out Russell's Indoor Specials!
"MICRO MADNESS CONTINUES"
Catamount New Amsterdam
ALL FLAVORS!
Harpoon Petes
Mix & Match "TWO" 6-pks... $9.99 Wow!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

■ Quake II

continued from page 5

SCREENSHOT PCGAMER

A shot form the lenghty Paul Steed opening cinematic.

around the world. First impressions are that the forthcoming full release will blow Quake out of the water.

The most noticeable difference between the two is the environment. Quake II's graphical world is much more realistic, with a brighter and less grainy look than Quake. It is somewhat reminiscent of Quake competitor Duke Nukem 3D, except with many more improvements. The game supports graphical enhancements through software, so the game looks beautiful on even the most common video cards. The game's textures are extremely smooth, and transparent windows and water are built into the engine as well.

The actual player is also much different in Quake II. New weapons, the ability to crouch and crawl and the ability to climb are all improvements over Quake. The player model is much leaner, and you have the option of playing as a female character as well. Left-handers can even reverse the look of the weapon to make it accurate for themselves.

Finally, the enemies in Quake II are nastier than their predecessors. You fight against creatures that are half man, half machine. They have sophisticated artificial intelligence so that they can avoid your attacks by ducking and running. It is not enough to run away from your enemies, because they will not just walk around in one area. They are capable of hunting you down by tracking noises you make, and will not quit.

Another demo is supposed to be available before the full release of Quake II. It is expected to be more refined than the compatibility demo, and could possibly provide multiplayer support. As multiplayer is the most popular way to play Quake, this will likely be a popular download. You can check on the progress of Quake II at www.idsoftware.com. They currently provide links to the first demo and other information sources on the Internet. The Quake II multiplayer setup will provide gamers advancements such as QuakeWorld and Capture The Flag, and an online gaming add-on will be available to provide other options that don't make it into the shipping version.

SCREENSHOT QUAKE2.COM

High definition architecture, holographic images, and smart enemiesin the upcoming Quake II.

The staff at id say the full version of Quake II will be released "when it's done." The popular consensus is that the game will be available before this Christmas. It will probably be one of the top sellers regardless of its release date. I am looking forward to having Quake II under my Christmas tree this year. After experiencing the demo, perhaps you will, too!

John Larkin is a UMass student.

SCREENSHOT COURTEST ID

Just one of the reasons Quake II will rock.

■ news

continued from page 5

of quake2.com said. "But the best part is that there are people in the community willing to bridge all the community gaps to help everyone."

In many aspects, the community is stable, but as any large group of people gathered, there are differences.

"I think the Internet is the meeting place for the Quake players we call the community. I think there is a silent majority of players out there who don't habituate the net, but the active Quake community is Internet-based," said Blue of Blue's News. This particular web site, www.bluesnews.com, is another of the "big guns" of the Quake–based new sites. It's that active part of the community that has influenced and changed Quake.

"I'd say [the community has affected the development of Quake] strongly. I can remember changes being made to Quake before its release based on exchanges id programmer John Cash had with members of a mailing list for potential Quake server operators," Blue said. "id has always understood the value of listening to the audience for their games and has always been quite responsive."

The community's response to Quake and the development of Quake II has always been positive. RedwOOd responds to a similar topic with: "I believe a great degree [of community influence in the development of Quake II] as far as gameplay issues are involved because the Internet community is going to be much more vocal than those playing the game at home by themselves."

From the release of the first Quake II screenshots to the present Q2test, the Internet community has been hanging on id's every word, waiting for another juicy tidbit about one of the most anticipated games this decade. Following the crowd, and almost leading the way, have been the news sites, relaying the information, decoding the programming jargon, and serving it out, with tantalizing screenshots, on a golden platter. From news sites, IRC and .plan files the most devoted followers glean the information, and relay it back to the news sites, for the rest of the world to see.

From the genius of deomner & hank comes Quakefinger, one of the closest approximations to actually talking to the programmers themselves. Quakefinger consists of an archive of .plan files, basically Internet-ready diaries. In these diaries, the programmers share their secrets, programming secrets with the community, as well as rants about their day, music and more.

Through the .plan files, the community keeps up to date on exactly where the programmers of Quake II, and similar upcoming games (Sin, Unreal, Dakinata) stand.

In the end, the Internet has promoted Quake to a degree that no one ever imagined.

"Without news sites it would be a lot like it had been with DOOM. An occasionally updated FAQ, no real help for newcomers, small LAN parties since they can't notify large audiences of their presence, difficulty in establishing a name for yourself since everything had to be released on ftp sites among tons of other files and might never get noticed, etc.," Slipgate said. "I think news sites were a positive step [in the outcome of Quake]."

From its release last year, Quake and the "Quake community" have grown exponentially, and it couldn't have happened without the Internet.

Now for Quake II.

Josh Sylvester is a Collegian staff member.

■ addicts

continued from page 5

SCREENSHOT ELZOST

One of the more humorous aspects of PainKeep, the can of pork and beans. Watch out they make you fart!

www.planetquake.com/skins/painkeep/

To most, deathmatch play, or multi-player Quake, is nothing more than finding other people or your friends online and killing them. But who said there isn't any strategy involved? PainKeep is an overhaul of standard deathmatch play, with the addition of new weapons, items, models, artwork, and special effects enhancements.

With these new additions available from PainKeep, a chaotic blend of tactical skill and logic raise the level of deathmatch play to a new standard. Among these additions are weapon replacements, such as explosive rounds for the shotguns, an airfist for re-directing projectiles meant for you, ricocheting nails, and a chain lighting gun that can create some crispy critters. New items include a gravity well (artificial black hole), autosentry (gun turret), Gas & Go baked beans (100 percent health and some gaseous anomalies), and bear traps (ouch!).

SCREENSHOT ELZOST

Two more of the weapon modifications to PainKeep, the ricocheting nail gun, and floating in midair, a bear trap.

SCREENSHOT PAINKEEP

The Gravity Well, a very stragic weapon. Throw it and run.

Included with this mod are 21 new levels, posing excellent design standards and organization around multi-player environments.

Rocket Arena
(QuakeWorld playable only) www.planetquake.com/servers/arena/

True multi-player: free-for-all or one-on-one? Rocket arena eliminates the need for choice and forces the issue by pitting player vs. player in this fantastic modification.

Players join the game, and are immediately thrown into a spectator area, if there are more than two players active on the server. You can watch, listen and comment on the gladiator-style fights happening below and around you and other spectators. How and when do you get a chance? The server puts all active players into a queue, much as a printer does, moves down an assembly line, letting everyone get their chance. Keep in mind only two players combat each other at one time, while other players look on in awe and sometimes frustration. This one-on-one combat situation attracts the most elite single-player and multi-player Quakers, and represents the cleanest and most polite form of online destruction.

SCREENSHOT TEAMFORTRESS.COM

The view from inside one of the many TeamFortress bases.

TeamFortress
(QuakeWorld or LAN playable)
www.planetquake.com/teamfortress/

Among extensive large-scale Quake modifications are those mods which attempt to re-evaluate game play at a player level. The traditional Quake soldier abandoned, different classes of players, such as players in TeamFortress, redefine how the game functions according to normal deathmatch rules.

These different player classes manifest themselves in the form of a Scout, Sniper, Soldier, DemoMan, Medic, HeavyWeaponsGuy, Pyro, Spy and Engineer. Each class of player has specialties that the others lack, such as the Engineer retaining repair capabilities, while the DemoMan packs an explosive punch. Speeds, armor levels, weapons and some special movements (like feigning death or repairing items) all vary per player class.

These modifications represent a fraction of a percent available to the Quake player. Additional resources for Quake single and multi-player modifications can be found on www.planetquake.com, www.bluesnews.com, or www.stomped.com.

David Quist is a Collegian staff member.

Cahillane Auto Rentals
Rt 9 @ Howard Johnson's in Amherst
48 Damon Rd, Northampton
Amherst 549.8099 Northampton 584.8099
on the Web @ http://www.cahillane.com
Now Featuring the ultimate 4-WD Jeep, Grand Cherokee & Dodge Caravan
LEASING RENTALS

LET'S PLAY VIDEO
Movie, Game, and System Rentals
All Movies $.99 / day!!
The best of the new releases!
PSX / Saturn / N64 / Genesis / SNES
Buy-Sell-Trade Games & Systems
9 East Pleasant (Near "The Pub") Call us at 549-4505
Hrs: Sun, Mon, Wed, Thur, Fri 2:00-7:30 Sat 12:00-7:30 Closed Tuesday

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
922 Campus Center
545-1995 Call Today!

CAROLE LITTLE · VALERIE STEVENS · LIZ CLAIBORNE · GUESS
DESIGNER CLOTHING
for WOMEN, MEN & CHILDREN
BED and BATH LINENS.
HANDBAGS. JEWELRY.
STATIONERY and GIFTS
50% to 80% OFF Original Department Store PRICES
FEATURING:
Overstocked, discontinued and slightly irregular items from Major Department Stores.
THE STOCK ROOM
Rte. 9 Next to McDonald's 381 Russell St. Hadley
413-584-4888
Mon-Sat 10:00-6:00 Closed Sundays
DKNY · LAUNDRY · RALPH LAUREN · JONES NY · GIAN BERNINI · AND MORE!
CAROLE LITTLE · VALERIE STEVENS · LIZ CLAIBORNE · GUESS

Hampden Snack Bar
(next to Antonio's)
Top of the Horseshoe - Southwest
NO TRICK, OUR TREAT!
ON HALLOWEEN, SAT, & SUN.
10/31-11/2
Come in and order any grinder or sandwich from the grill, and get a 12 oz. fountain soda FREE!
Also, let us top off your cup of yogurt with a FREE topping.
MUST PRESENT THIS AD FOR ITEMS MENTIONED

PANDA EAST
CHINESE RESTAURANT & SUSHI BAR
Best! 1997
"We bring Chinatown to you"
BEST CHINESE RESTAURANT IN THE VALLEY SINCE 1987
LUNCH SPECIALS
STARTING AT $3.95
7 DAYS A WEEK
FULL MENU
FOR SUSHI, SASHIMI AND TERIYAKI IS AVAILABLE
TELEPHONE: (413) 256-8923 / 256-8924 FAX: 253-1173
103 North Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Delivery Express: 549-0077

danceyo'assoff productions
no jeans no sneakers no joke
Halloween
Thursday Oct. 30, 1997
Carnival 9-2
$8 w/costume
R&B hip-hop REGGAE house SOCA
with THE SOUL TY DANCERS
$$$PRIZES FASHION PRIZES DINNER PRIZES
ADVANCE TIX INFO 413.549.1846
18+ with ID
METRO
SHOWCASE DJ SD FROM NYC
492 PLEASANT ST. NORTHAMPTON, MA EX. 18 OFF I-91 413.582.9898

Celebrating the blues, Memphis Minnie's latest

It's blues week here at "I/B Weekly." I've been depriving most of you blues fans of the low-down grooves in the past few weeks for lack of anything in my folder to review. Never mind that, though. What you should put your mind on is a trip down to the record stores (for those of you with money to spend; many of us cannot afford that luxury) and check out some of the recent blues re-issues by the labels DCC and Columbia/Legacy.

The latter's newest blues campaign is marketing blues aimed at a "new generation," going for the younger music lovers in the world in a time when most blues giants are long gone to the small smoky bar in the sky. Legacy, those re-issue specialists associated with Sony who have made their name in blues as well as jazz and rock back catalogs, have released some of the more well-known recordings of Robert Johnson, Muddy Waters, Johnny Winter and Memphis Minnie in their new "Blues For The Next Generation" series.

While the first two are quite famous even to the rustiest music historian via covers of their songs by Eric Clapton, The Rolling Stones, and Led Zeppelin, Memphis Minnie and Johnny Winter are less likely to ring bells.

Memphis Minnie's volume, subtitled Queen Of The Blues, kicks off with one of her earliest recordings with her first husband, Joe McCoy, on vocals: "When The Levee Breaks." Yes, Ledheads, Plant, Page et al, used the harmonic progression and lyrics to this to close off their biggest- selling fourth album with the loud boom of John Bonham's echoing drums. The disc carries on chronologically into the '30s with Minnie McCoy's own rough growl or sweet authoritative vocals praising Joe Louis in two songs, playing short but effective solos, as well as shuffling, mildly rocking chord play. "Bad Outside Friends," about phony people, and "When You Love Me," with its snare drum moving things along, just plain rock.

Ah, but the real blues-rock can be found in the maniacally upbeat howls and fast-finger guitar craft of Johnny Winter. One of the few blues masters who is still alive, this man, (named after his physical appearance, that of an albino), takes his blues with overdrive, as shown on his "Blues For The Next Generation" release, White Hot Blues. Culled from albums between 1969 and 1979, this 16-track collection, presents Muddy's "Rollin' And Tumblin'" in one of its most frighteningly forceful manifestations, as well as the otherworldly slide work on "New York, New York," written by Bob Dylan's former bassist Rob Stoner. Dylan's presence is also shown in Winter's churning version of "Highway 61 Revisited." This is a must for blues-based electric guitarists.

DCC's contribution to blues re-issues most recently is in the release of Blues Hoot, featuring first Lightnin' Hopkins playing songs like "Big Car Blues" (with a slick jive-talkin' introduction) and "Ball Of Twine," all in that bad, laid-back nature that was so Lightnin' Hopkins. After Hopkins solo, he is joined by Sonny Terry, Brownie McGhee and Big Joe Williams for "Blues For Gamblers," in which all four men trade verses over a low-down acoustic groove, and the upbeat gospel blues, "Right On That Shore."

The last seven tracks are from just Terry and McGhee playing their folk-based blues with almost vocal harmonica phrases and laid-back guitar laying down the rhythm over which the two men shout and croon blues like "Down By The Riverside," "I'm A Stranger Here" and "Trouble In Mind," the latter two of which were unreleased until now.

Also recent from DCC is the re-issue of their compilation The Real Blues Brothers, with songs from the artists of Blues Hoot as well as Memphis Slim, Jimmy Reed, Pee Wee Crayton and a good number of unique tunes from John Lee Hooker, all offering up a great introduction to the blues.

Blues is also still being played now. A good recent example of a contemporary blues disc is Tinsley Ellis' Fire It Up (Alligator). On some tunes, like "Digging My Own Grave," "Soulful" and Magic Sam's "Look What You Done," he gives a rocking nod to Mr. Winter. He also takes his climactic guitar style on slower, darker blues tunes like "Are You Sorry?" and the excellent closer, "Everyday." One of the more original talents in modern blues you'll find today, Mr. Ellis can still make you wish for a few less cliches in his lyrics.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY AMERICAN FAMOUS TALENT CORP

Johnny Winter shows off his guitar talent on a new album.

Steve Earle lacks punch; Fahey shows off dark side

Why is it that Steve Earle suddenly decides he can just wing his way, without effort, through a new album? Take a listen to El Corazon (Warner Bros.), like maybe at a listening station at a music store. He just found some of the most boring three-chord music and more uninteresting lyrics than his past albums like I Feel Fine and Guitar Town. The acclaims of I Feel Fine must have given Earle the feeling that he would sell on name alone. He just might. But he would most likely be leaving many fans upset.

Tom Petty, Townes Van Zandt, and general alternative rock all reign more influence over Earle than he does in himself. "Taneytown" is completely Petty's Wildflowers. "NYC" and "Here I Am" basically follow current power pop standards. I wish that if Earle were to play electric guitar, it'd be nice if he could make it interesting. When he picks up his acoustic guitar, once again he gets lost in the influence of Townes Van Zandt — don't get me wrong, Van Zandt is a powerful influence — and churns out below-average schlock-country/folk like "Fort Worth Blues" and "Somewhere Out There." This El Corazon is missing a few beats.

Not that everything that's simple is going to be necessarily bad. A lot of the songs on Robert Earl Keen's latest album, Picnic (which is on the new Arista Austin label) are quite easy acoustic tunes. However, they have a more sincere feel than Earle's latest. He doesn't hide his (possibly) limited abilities in clouds of distortion like Earle does on El Corazon. He's not ashamed to write catchy lyrics and pop hooks. Nor is he ashamed to not have the greatest singing voice. It's not hard to listen to, but it's just an everyman's voice. He's on key, so don't worry about it.

"Undone," the opener runs down like an old Broadside folk tune; "Shades Of Gray" satirizes old "bad man ballads." Other enjoyable tunes on the album are "The Coming Home of The Father & Son" and "Running With The Night." For a little help from his friends, he also called in Cowboy Junkies' velvet-voiced singer Margo Timmins for harmony vocals as well as a duet on "Then Came Lo Mein." Sugar Hill singer-songwriter Tim O'Brien chimes in on a few songs with mandolin and guitar. Good start for Arista Austin.

For true imagination, if not complete oddity, you should take some time out to hear the album The Epiphany of Glenn Jones (Thirsty Ear) which marks the teamwork of the Cambridge, Mass., soundscape group Cul de Sac with veteran acoustic guitarist John Fahey, who has also been known to dabble in trippy soundscapes with his acoustic guitarist. This album features a lot of Fahey on slide and dobro over soundscapes that sometimes leave Fahey behind and carry the listener through the wide-open plains of electronic audio.

"The New Red Pony" is one great example of the basic concept of Glenn Jones (the name of the multi- instrumentalist leader of Cul-de-Sac). A very grainy amplified acoustic plays a repeated figure over angry percussion, which works into a soundscape before Fahey comes waltzing back in at the end with classical-sounding arpeggios. Welcome to the dark side of American acoustic music.

Durham, N.C.'s acoustic label Sugar Hill is always a busy label in putting out fine quality modern bluegrass and other American Acoustic material. Kenny Smith, guitarist of the Lonesome River Band, has released his solo debut Studebaker, with fine high-pitched singing and guitar playing that is so fluid that you find yourself in the middle of a solo without realizing that the solo started. Smith draws in help also, as Union Station's mandolinist Adam Steffey and bassist Barry Bales show up as well as Don Rigsby (vocals),

Turn to STRINGS, page 11

8 BILLARDS 9
10A Belchertown Road Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284
Friday Night
Crawdads
Scraggy Neck Rd.
LIVE BANDS!
LIVE Music!

Read us on the web... we're where it's at! www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.- Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m.
Tel: 549-2692
THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE
$hop Scott's & $ave Lot$!

Coors Light	30 packs	$15.49 + dep.
Guinness Stout	6 packs	$6.19 + dep.
Pete's Wicked	6 packs	$4.99 + dep.
Molson Ice/ Golden	18 packs	$9.99 + dep.
Bud Dry	30 packs	$10.99 + dep.
Bud, Bud Light & Ice	1/2 kegs	$39.99 + dep.

• Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials •

Southern Comfort	$16.49/1.75L
Jack Daniels	$13.99/750ml
Skyy Vodka	$19.49/1.75L
Segrams Lime Twisted Gin	$13.49/1.75L
99 Bananas Liqueur	$5.99 /750ml
Gallo White Zinfandel	$3.49/6-packs
Cider Jack	$4.99/750ml
Kapali Coffee Liqueur	$7.99/750ml

• Quantity discounts always available •
UMass
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We want to be your favorite Liquor store
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Spirit Haus
YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Jagermeister $14.99/750 ml
Llords $7.99/1.75 lt
Kahlua $8.99/750 ml
Boones 5 for $9.99/750 ml
MICRO BREWS
Brooklyn Brewery $4.99/six
Wachusett Brewing Co. $9.99
Mill City $4.99/six
Magic Hat $5.99/six
BEER SPECIALS
Bud Dry $10.99
Icehouse+Red Dog $6.99
Bass Ale $11.99
Busch+Busch Light $9.99
Sam Adams Ale+Lager $80.00
Micro Kegs In Stock
DISCOVER, VISA, MASTERCARD ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
RT. 9 EAST / 338 COLLEGE ST. (413)253-5364 / TAKE I-91 TO EXIT 19 / RT. 9 east
Full Redemption Center

HALLOWEEN COSTUME BASH
FOOD LIQUORS TILL I AM
EVIL DRINK SPECIALS
WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Friday at 10 pm
Prizes for
• Ugliest
• Sexiest
• Scariest
• Stupidest
• Most Elaborate Costume
All Major Credit Cards Accepted
Required $2 Cover Free with Costume
41 Boltwood Walk 253-4040 Amherst MA

A CELEBRATION OF NEW BOOKS
Slanted Truths
Lynn Margulis and Dorian Sagan
What is Sex?
Lynn Margulis and Dorian Sagan
Meet the Authors!
UMass Professor Lynn Margulis, Dorian Sagan, and Special Guests
Thursday October 30, 1997 from 12p.m. - 2p.m. at the University Store Campus Center
University Store
For more information call the University Store @ 545-2619
Hours: Monday - Friday 9-5 Saturday 11 - 4
We accpet the UCARD

COURTESY JIM HARRINGTON

Greg Brown of Slant 6 Mind puts out an interesting blues offering this time around.

■ strings

continued from page 10

Ronnie Bowman (vocals) and Sammy Shelor (banjo) from the I..R.B.. Smith sometimes plays "alone," dubbing solo runs over his own accompaniment. When he does play with others, he works his smooth guitar in without effort, even when it is a vocal track by others than himself.

As I bow out for another couple of weeks, I have one name that you should remember and pursue the music of: Greg Brown. His 13th album for Minnesota's Red House Records, Slant 6 Mind, is some of the most bluesy, baddest, interesting material this writer has heard in quite some time. Imagine Tom Waits as a country/blues singer, which shouldn't be too hard if you've ever heard Waits' "Yesterday Is Here" — Brown's stuff follows that sort of dark Western edge quite successfully without copying lazily.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Cesaria Evora mesmerizes Mt. Holyoke on Sunday

By Voy Fernandes
Collegian Correspondent

CESÁRIA ÉVORA
Chapin Auditorium
Oct. 26

SOUTH HADLEY — Once again Cesária Évora's melodious voice is showered over her fervently awaiting crowd of listeners. The Cape Verdean folklore songstress came on stage to perform some of her more amorous songs about the forgotten islands of Cape Verde. Performing at Mount Holyoke college to a full-house, Évora appeared to a standing ovation by her fans which was comprised mostly of non-Cape Verdeans as well as Cape Verdeans.

After the introduction of her six band members, she came out singing "Sangue de Berona," which the crowd reacted to with synchronized clapping. The stirred crowd was mesmerized by her voice as she sung other familiar songs off of her latest album Cubo Verde, like "Ess Pais" and "Partida." Évora progressed the concert with her multi- talented band to some old favorites like "Miss Perfumado," "Bia Lulutcha"and "Sodade."

During an interview, she was asked how did she feel about the new wave of music coming out of Cape Verde. Évora responded "Morna and coladera is as old as [my] great-grandparents."

Born in the city of Mindelo, São Vicente, Évora started singing at the age of 16 in Mindelo. She attained international superstardom thru her manager, Joe DaSilva, who discovered and is promoting this phenomenal songbird.

She is currently touring the United States, beginning her international tour in Europe last August and continuing until on Dec. 15 of this year.

The poem, Nos Cize, was written and read by Carlos as a gesture of gratitude. "Cize" is a nickname for Évora.

The Cape Verdean Student Alliance members also presented her with flowers and a plaque of appreciation for her contributions to the Cape Verdean diaspora.

"She is the musical ambassador of Cape Verden" said Sidonio Ferreira, a member of CVSA.

Nos Cize

Na cada palco que bo bai
Qu'esse bo natureza singular
E media se bo ta
Na quintal de bo casa

Nos e flor de bo jardim
Que bo ta rega
Qu'esse bo voz melodioso
Na som de nos morna

Bo e sol
Que ta raia
Na som de nos coladera

No ta pdib oh cize
Pa bo continua ta rega
Bo jardim cabo verde
Pa tud banda que bo bai

Qu'esse bo voz magica
Que ta da nos vida e calor
E ta faze mundo intero
Delira de prazer
On each stage you perform being the person you are — feels as if you still were singing in your own backyard

Our Cize

We are flowers in a garden irrigated by your presence and by your honeyed voice sweetened by our morna.

You are, Cize, our sun that keeps on shining
in the strains of our coladera

We beg you oh cize
to go on irrigating
Your garden, Cape Verde
— everywhere you go

With your voice of magic giving us life and warmth
— you light up the world with your joy and your grace,

— Poem written by Carlos Almeida
(English translation by Francisco Fagundes)

This is the bus and you are reading the paper so why don't you catch the bus on-line at:
WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLEGIAN

■ gib

continued from page 5

SCREENSHOT BY JOSH

The remains (giblets) of an enemy fly through the air. Watch out for those with rocket launchers.

the crew. As of this writing, I have just been playing Quake against 'bots for the past 45 minutes (time I could have spent writing this article, which is past due!).

Many a weekend has been spent in one of the many flavors of Quake; Navy Seals, Painkeep, Future vs. Fantasy, DAIL, or Capture the Flag. The sound of death echoing through the halls is commonplace. The mixture of loud music, screams of pain, and explosions is the sweet melody of the night here in *Quake*tree... errr Crabtree, that is. (Sometimes it is easy to forget).

I happen to think it creates healthy friendships. If you can kill your friends any time you get mad at them, it is unnecessary to get into arguments. Murder is oh so much simpler of course.

You know what I think it is about Quake? I think it is the fact that if I have had a bad day of classes, work, or getting snubbed by girls (not that THAT ever happens, mind you!), I can come home and kill for hours on end. It is a large catharsis to be able to release my fury on a bunch of monsters (or floor-mates) with whatever weapons I so choose. Axe? Got it right here, Rocket launcher? A must. Grenade launcher? Don't leave home without it. So if you are like me, and I know I am, sometimes you need to release a little tension. And lately, I have found no better way than a little Quake.

Now, Quake II is soon to be released. The sense of anticipation is palpable among my cohorts. You can sense them getting ready to embrace the blood-fury again when that new CD is unveiled and its contents installed. The playing field will once again be leveled and new warriors may take up arms. The rebirth of Quake is soon upon us. May the blood flow deep and the screams echo long.

Noah Burt is a UMass student.

PHISH TICKETS
GREAT SEATS AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES!!
• HARTFORD, NOV 26
• WORCESTER, NOV 28-30
CITY TICKET: 1-800-865-8070

Marshall Steinbeck
Complete Auto Collision & Painting Service
(413) 256-8157
53 So. Prospect St. Amherst, Mass. 01002
STATE REG. RS #1212 MA LIC. #1398

SPORTS CHANNEL, ESPN, ESPN2, NESN
Under New Management
Seven O's
Sunderland's Sports Bar for Live Music
HALLOWEEN COSTUME PARTY
October 31
-Prizes for Best Costumes
•Scariest •Funiest
•Best Couple
•Best Costume Overall
Live Music by the "John Sullivan Band"
Plus Crown royal Prize Give-aways
Drink Specials
Crown Royal & Coke $2.00
Corona $2.00
Mich light pitchers $4.00
Never a Cover • SEVEN O'S • 665-8788
Route 116 IN SUNDERLAND (5 miles N of UMass exit)

We deliver ideas.
Delivering ideas, concepts and solutions for issues of national importance, MITRE serves as a high-level resource for the Department of Defense and the Federal Aviation Administration. We played a key role in developing the Airborne Warning and Control System and the world's only intelligence intranet. Today, we're pursuing hundreds of projects, including a common command and control architecture, a collaborative virtual workspace and the air traffic control system of the 21st century.
Our product is mindpower. Our strength comes from the diversity of our approaches, the variety of our backgrounds and the differences that spark creative solutions. We invite you to explore the possibility of joining our innovative team in a systems engineering or information technology role.
To learn more about our organization and specific opportunities available at our locations, in Bedford, MA, McLean, VA and Eatontown, NJ, please see your career services office for more information on when we will be on campus. If you are unable to attend, visit our website or send/fax/e-mail your resume to: The MITRE Corporation, P.O. Box 857, Dept: UM/97, Bedford, MA 01730. Fax: (617) 271-3402. E-mail: jobs@mitre.org.
Applicants may have to meet eligibility requirements to ensure protection of classified or other regulated information, and may be subject to a security clearance.
The MITRE Corporation is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and is committed to diversity in our workplace.
MITRE representatives will be on campus November 3rd & 4th
MITRE
Solutions That Make A Difference
www.mitre.org

Pioneering trip–hoppers Portishead show that beauty exists in gloom

PORTISHEAD
Portishead
Go! Beat/London

Supposedly (as music legend has it), Beth Gibbons and Geoff Barrow twice recorded and then scrapped the long overdue follow-up to their groundbreaking 1994 debut.

Of course that's all debatable, but what isn't are the results of Portishead's laborious 2–plus years in the studio. In the three years that have past since Dummy, the domain of electronic music has changed immeasurably. Impossible as it may seem for a work only a few years old, it has spawned a host of wannabes — none of whom can nail down Gibbons' anguished vocal delivery she brilliantly infused on the semi- hit "Sour Times (Nobody Loves Me)."

The self–titled Portishead (Go! Beat/London) is a vanquishing testament to Gibbons and Barrow's collective songwriting genius; it's an arresting work of atmospheric beauty that plays like a film score noir of the highest order. While there may not be anything as instantly gripping as "Sour Times," the new album breaks new ground in terms of Gibbons' improved vocal variance, such as on "All Mine." It also excurses to deeper depths of emotional depravity.

Portishead, while seemingly quite similar in terms of its overall sonic presence, is startlingly dissimilar from Dummy in several respects. Instead of relying on eerie samples and conjured up loops, Gibbons and Barrow have taken a more organic approach, using a dizzying array of instrumentation that helps to pervay the album's cinematic quality.

Feel–good music this is not; but then again, misery has rarely sounded so convincing. A (Marty Keane)

TRYSOME EATONE
Love Spit Love
Maverick/Warner Bros.

Trysome Eatone (Maverick/Warner Bros.) is a typical Love Spit Love affair, featuring songs that you are going to want to listen to on rainy days while contemplating failed relationships. Of course the songs are made better by Richard Butler's ironic sense of humor and Morrissey–esque view of love and life. Unlike most contemporary song writers, Richard Butler doesn't simply write song lyrics but tells stories and although that eliminates catchy choruses, it provides the listener with something to think about.

Musically Trysome Eatone is still the dreamy Britpop that bands like the Stone Roses and Butler's former band, the Psychedelic Furs, made popular. Songs like "Believe" and "Well Well Well" see a sharper, more driving edge to the songs — atypical of Butler's former projects. However it is on songs like "Fall On Tears" when the band is at their dreamiest and saddest — and is what makes the album and Butler shine.

While this is nothing new, if you like Richard Butler or the Psychedelic Furs, you'll like this album. B (Adam Dlugacz)

THE DREAM ANTHOLOGY: 1966–1968
David Bowie
Decca/Polygram

David Bowie has worn many hats over the progression of his career (now well into its fourth decade), but never this. Before Ziggy Stardust came down from outer space with the Spiders From Mars and prior to becoming a lounge Philadelphia soul crooner, David Bowie was a confused folkie. Yes, the same man who collaborated with Mr. Ambient, Brian Eno, once gently strummed an acoustic guitar in a vein attempt to "find himself" like so many in the '60s. Talk about Ch-ch-ch-ch-anges.

Over a sprawling 27 tracks, The Dream Anthology: 1966– 1968 (Decca/Polygram) collects every track Bowie recorded on England's Dream label in the mid–'60s, including three bonus cuts from the original "Love You Till Tuesday" soundtrack that have never been released on compact disc.

Although the vast majority of his Dream material is subpar and derivative of early Stones and Dylan, it does provide ample evidence of Bowie struggling to unlock his obviously hidden endowment — and the chronological running order of the collection helps to flesh that notion out even clearer.

Almost etherial in nature with Bowie's heartfelt voice cracking over a Hammond organ, "The London Boys" highlights his earliest recorded material. But it's the album's final track that is the most profound.

"Space Oddity," for all intents and purposes, served as the world's first introduction to David Bowie and is really the only song on The Dream Anthology that points to his future path as an artist. It's both beautiful and sophisticated while at the same time clandestine through his cryptic lyrics: "Ground control to Major Tom...put your helmet on."

While the vast majority of The Dream Anthology: 1966–1968 reveals precious little insight into the complex mind of rock's most paradoxical and befuddling characters (no matter the incarnation), it is still a formidable historical document in its own right, if only for the utterly devoted Bowiephile. B– (M.K.)

INDOOR LIVING
Superchunk
Merge

In the increasingly commercial realm of alternative rock, North Carolina's Superchunk remain a staunchly independent guitar band. When their label, Matador, signed a distribution deal with Atlantic a few years back, they refused to be a part of it and fled to their own privately owned label, Merge.

On their 8th full–length, Indoor Living (Merge), Superchunk have created their most accessible, as well as most experimental album of their career. Knowing that there is only so much ground a band can grave over on the overpopulated pastures of guitar–based alternative rock, Superchunk have done the smart thing, they've expanded it: songs like "Every Single Instinct" and the first single "Watery Hands" epitomize how.

By adding the sounds of a $122,000 vintage pipe organ (they don't expect to take it with them on tour) and piano, Superchunk have successfully incorporated a more adventurous style into their tried–and–true formula, without losing their knack for catchy, smart pop hooks and punkish vigor. B+ (M.K.)

COURTESY LAURENCE PASSERA

Portishead's latest release is an emotionally stirring album.

LEE FELDMAN
Living It All Wrong
Pure

Newcomer Lee Feldman definitely has talent. His piano playing on his debut album Living It All Wrong (Pure), is very nice and flows very easily, but his voice, which seems to be lacking in tone and finds no connection between words, creates a sort of dam with every word having to abruptly stop, leaving the listener with a rather ambiguous reaction.

In fact, his voice is similar to that of Lou Reed's from '70s tunes like "Satellite Of Love" and "Sally Can't Dance." So, maybe if you like Reed, you might find something in Feldman. However, Feldman seems to lack the multi-faceted personality of Reed, as many of his songs seem too innocent and turn out almost naively bittersweet in tone. Despite all the factors, "Always Til Always" is a fine song with nice polyrhythms and piano riffing as well as "Way Over The Hill" with its good bass performance by Randy Landau, who may be more known from his work with Loudon Wainwright III. Feldman's onto something, at least. C+ (Joshua Boyd)

Trax On Trax Off

■ improv

continued from page 6

visational troupes, but I've never worked with this level of talent before," Krebs said.

Krebs said each member has had off days, but each one also has shining moments.

No one person regularly takes the lead, however.

"We're all together; there are no stars," emphasized junior Kevin D'Ambrosio.

"There is no 'I' in 'Improv'," Reis said. "Oh, wait a minute..."

Besides their weekly shows in the Campus Center, MISSION:IMPROVable rent themselves out for special engagements. They perform shows for parties, performance workshops on "Improvisation for Public Speaking" for local companies, and they hold monthly workshops, free to students, on the techniques of improvised humor.

MISSION:IMPROVable performances are an absolute must see. It's a brand of fresh, innovative humor like you've never seen before. Be prepared to take an active role, too, because, as senior Laurie Haines said at the beginning of the show, they'll need your input.

"The audience makes the show," Haines said, "so if the show sucks — it's your fault. If you don't play with us, then we're just up here playing with ourselves, and that's a different kind of show."

WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME THAT YOU VISITED THE COLLEGIAN ON-LINE. THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO BETTER PLACE TO GET LOCAL AND NATIONAL NEWS. SO GO TO: WWW.UMASS.EDU/RSO/COLEGIAN NOW!

■ Crows

continued from page 7

from Stuart's time spent in Chicago, after attending college at Northwestern University in nearby Evanston.

Stuart says, "Since my apartment was in the basement of a building, all I could see out of my window was this fire hydrant. Knowing the connection of fire hydrants and dogs, I decided that my perception of the world from my apartment amounted to a dog's eye view."

Much like his friends in Counting Crows, Stuart describes Dog's Eye View's live style as "Documenting what we are in the studio, only with more spontaneity."

Counting Crows and Dog's Eye View will perform at the William D. Mullins Center this Saturday, November 1. Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $25 for the general public and $20.50 for UMass students. They can be purchased at the Mullins Center box office (open M–F from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and by calling Ticketmaster at (413) 733–2500 or (203) 525–4500.

COURTESY CHRISTY BUSH

Dog's Eye View opens for Counting Crows this weekend.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Let's get it on...

Steve MacKinnon and the Massachusetts hockey team kick off the home schedule on Sunday against Boston College. Check tomorrow's Hockey Preview issue for the scoop.

■ NBA

continued from page 16

Antoine Walker is an All–Star, or at least he will be. All of sports is in love with stats and that's what Walker's all about. He fills the box scores night in and night out, and with a few decent players by his side, he might actually see the win column on a more consistent basis. Ron Mercer and Chauncey Billups will have solid seasons and get plenty of playing time, but look for Edney to step into the spotlight.

The playoffs? Well, not the way the East is stacking up. Barring a minor miracle, the C's will be eating some home cookin' come June time because the East is flatout loaded. When teams like Cleveland and Indiana aren't making the field of eight in the playoffs, that should tell you that it's going to be a catfight.

Some early season injuries could factor into the playoff picture. With Alonzo Mourning opting for surgery on his left knee, Miami, who gave the Bulls a run for their money last year, will be living with Isaac Austin in the middle for a while. Um, trouble. Yeah, he's defending his prestigious Sixth Man crown this year, but gimme a break, he ain't no Zo.

John Stockton had a very similar injury and will miss a big chunk of the season, much to the dismay of Karl Malone. He hears "you're nothing without Stockton" all the time. Guess we'll find out, huh? I bet Howard Eisley didn't think he'd be starting a game for the Utah Jazz any time soon. Well, he is. That could be scary.

The season starts tomorrow so I suppose I'm due for some bold predictions. All right, I'm game. Bulls in the East, Sonics in the West, and a changing of the guard, Seattle in seven. That should be enough for y'all to feast on for now.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

■ NFL

continued from page 16

Comeback may be a quality quarterback in the NFL, but he showed no class by going after Jim Kelly in San Diego. Have fun on the sidelines Sunday watching Paul Justin get destroyed by Tampa Bay.

Mike Ditka had another outburst this week. Nothing new in that department. He's not even worth these three lines, but I had to mention it anyway.

The Bears–Dolphins game was postponed from Sunday night to Monday night. Who cares? All of the real football fans were watching the Patriots/Packers game anyway. I feel bad for all of the fans in Miami and Chicago who were actually forced to watch this game. It must have been as pleasant as a root canal.

Denver did their best imitation of the Houston Oilers in the 1991 AFC Championship game on Sunday by nearly blowing a 20–0 fourth quarter lead in squeaking by the Bills 23–20 in overtime. And you, Jason Elam, don't think that you're cool now because drunken Broncos fans rescued you and made sure that you were on the plane to Buffalo. Anyone could have made that chip shot of a field goal.

Getting back to my earlier reference to the Giants, let me just say that the NFC East is in a shambles. Maybe if the Giants played some real teams (No, the Bengals don't count. And if Troy Aikman knew how to manage a clock, then the Giants would be tied with Dallas for first place anyway.) then we'd see who the beast of the East really is. But to tell you the truth, I'm not really sure who that is anymore.

Dallas looked like they were ready to rebound when they upended Jacksonville two weeks ago, but couldn't find the end zone in falling to Philadelphia on Sunday. After they lose to San Francisco on Sunday, then the D in Big D will truly stand for Disaster.

Philadelphia: What can I say except look at their quarterbacks? Why don't they trade for Scott Zolak and try to throw him in the mix? Hey, anything's worth a shot.

I can't really say too much about Washington except that they don't pose much of a threat unless they're playing at Jack Kent Cooke Stadium. Oh, and the last I knew, the Super Bowl isn't being played in Washington this year.

And just to back Jon up and talk about all of the teams that nobody cares about, here we go.

Atlanta lost to Carolina last week, and they'll probably lose to St. Louis on Sunday (even though Tony Banks is Rams signal caller). Chicago and Indianapolis are both on their way to battling for the number one pick in next year's draft, and Arizona and Cincinnati are right behind them. (Hey Bruce Coslet, resign, because you couldn't lead North Haven High School— my alma mater—to any victories).

Oh, and on one final note let me just say that football belongs in Tennessee as much as hockey belongs in Carolina. The Oilers will always be terrible, no matter what town they play in. (They may be 4–4, but they still suck.)

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian Staff member.

Celtics prepared for a new year

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — After the worst season in franchise history, the Boston Celtics gave Rick Pitino $50 million to restore the franchise to its former glory.

He overhauled the roster and the front office, moved training camp, even considered changing the traditional black shoes to white.

And after all that, this is what Boston fans can look forward to in 1997-98: If the team can stay relatively free of injury, if Pitino's harping can rejuvenate Pervis Ellison and Dee Brown, if some rookies click and the Celtics catch enough opponents napping, they just might win 15 games like they did last year.

Pitino has grown fond of saying that the Celtics won 15 games for a reason — and that has given him license to revamp the roster. But taken in total, the moves have left Boston with less talent than before.

Dino Radja was traded to Philadelphia, and then, when he flunked a physical and was returned to Boston, the Celtics bought out his contract.

Pitino cut nine players in one day, including captain Rick Fox, to clear salary cap room to sign free agent Travis Knight and make Shaquille O'Neal's backup's backup his starting center. He drafted not one, but two guards in the first round for his already guard-rich team, anointing them as the backcourt of the future and signaling further overhaul.

He declared Eric Williams — the team's second-best player to Antoine Walker — untouchable, then gave him away for two second-round picks to clear space to sign free agents Chris Mills and Tyus Edney.

Edney, now the No. 4 point guard, may not make the roster. And Mills, who might have been the second-best player with Williams gone, was traded to New York for four players — including Walter McCarty, who becomes the sixth member (including coaches) of Kentucky's 1996 NCAA championship team.

Constant turmoil is not what Pitino meant when he said he wanted the Celtics to be exciting again. Rather, he was talking about an up-tempo style of play that has so far shown its effects only on the Boston players themselves.

During a military-style training camp, which was appropriately held at a U.S. Navy base in Newport, R.I., players were resorting to intravenous fluid replenishment to avoid dehydration. The Celtics did indeed run their opponents ragged during the exhibition season, but they also went 1-7 in the preseason — a sign that simple hustle may not carry a team as far in the NBA as in college. Like M.L. Carr before him, Pitino has evidently realized that teams frequently need to get worse before they can get better. But unlike Carr, who sought to rebuild through the draft lottery — a plan that backfired when the Celtics didn't get the rights to Tim Duncan, Pitino is trying to clear up the money to be a player in the free agent market.

And, unlike Carr, the Boston fans are willing to give Pitino the benefit of the doubt when he makes unconventional moves. After all, he turned Providence around, he turned the Knicks around and he turned Kentucky around.

The Celtics are banking on Pitino doing it here, too.

Hey Hockey Fans:

Can the Minutemen, led by Maine transfer Tim Lovell and senior Brad Norton, make the leap to contenders in Hockey East?

Check out the Collegian's UMass hockey preview coming out this Friday!

Attention Sports Staff:

There will be a mandatory meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 5 at 7 p.m. Winter beats will be discussed. If you have any questions, call Luke Meredith at 545–1851.

■ family

continued from page 16

from him."

Having professional relatives can help players get motivated in that way, or sometimes, through other aspects of the pro sports life.

"I definitely liked his lifestyle when I went up to visit him," Juden said. "That was pretty sweet. That gave me a little extra boost."

Drafted out of high school by the Lightning, that boost might make the difference when Juden tries to achieve his own NHL dreams after this season.

Leigh Torbin is Collegian columnist.

CLUB KAI
THURSDAY NIGHT
Craze Promotions Presents
MONSTER MASH
By DJ Cool Regg
best costume cash giveaway
FRIDAY NIGHT
FREAKY FRIDAY HALLOWEEN BALL
Dinner Buffet 9-11 p.m.
$100.00 cash prizes for best costumes
with special guest D.J.s
SATURDAY NIGHT
COLLEGE PARTY
special guest D.J.
SUNDAY NIGHT
Open Party
Everyone's Welcome
No Cover
special guest D.J.
MONDAY NIGHT
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
$2.00 HALF TIME BUFFET- 50" TV
November 5
Ladies Night
no cover for the ladies
DJ Cool Regg
$10 Wings
8:30-close
HALLOWEEN DRINK SPECIALS
Ghostbusters
Bloodtransfusion
$2.00
$1 Shots
Zombie & Devil's Tail
DRESS TO IMPRESS • POSITIVE I.D. • 21+
ET TAKE TAIL •

The Collegian urge you to eat.
HAS YOUR AUTO BEEN...
REJECTED ...OR CONCERNED IT WILL BE?
WE CAN HELP!
Let the Experts at MIDAS
Repair your Cars'
EXHAUST • SUSPENSION • BRAKES
Stop by or Call Today - Free Shuttle Service to Campus
HADLEY 397 Russell St. (Rte. 9) 586-9991
MIDAS
NORTHAMPTON 143 King St. (Rte. 5) 586-4840
90 days same as cash

Thursdays 9pm to Midnight GLOW BOWL
Glow Ball
Glow Show
Thursday Special College Rates
Friday Disco Bowl
Saturdays Retro Bowl!
Free Bowling Top 3 Finishers
10pm to 1am
Live DJ
Laser Lite Show
The Xtreme n Glow Bowling Entire Center Will GLOW
Northampton Bowl 584-4830

La Cazuela
RESTAURANT
the Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
... hand made cooking ... seasonal menu
... superb margaritas
... extraordinary tequila list
... warm hospitality!
Please join us!
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
OLD SOUTHWEST GRILL NORTHAMPTON
413 • 586 • 0400

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM BOSTON beginning Nov. 1
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $162 $295
PARIS $218 $399
ROME $274 $473
MADRID $226 $415
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Everlapseas available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Ave., NY, NY 10017
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Write for Arts...Call Us At 545-1361 for more information

Big Guys Liquors
"We're Big on Friendly Service"
Turning Leaf White Zinfandel $5.95
Hornsby $19.99 case $4.99 6-pack
Cancun Tequila Gold and Silver $9.99 1 liter
Rte. 63 N. Amherst, MA (413) 549-3555

amc theatres A Difference!
$3.50 (Two-Line) Show Daily
• Special Engagement, No Passes or Coupons
Silence is Golden - No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
MT. FARMS 6 • 584-9153 MT. FARMS MALL
Gattaca (PG-13) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:10
Playing God (R) Today at 8:20
The Full Monty (R) Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:30
I know What You Did Last Summer (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:20
Rocketman (PG) Today at 5:50 ($2.50)
HAMPSHIRE 6 • 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL
Kiss the Girls (R) Today at 5:30 ($2.50) and 8:30
The Peacemaker (R) Today at 8:20
A Life Less Ordinary (R) Today at 5:40 ($2.50) and 8:40
In and Out (PG-13) Today at 6:00 ($2.50) and 8:40
Devil's Advocate (R) Today at 5:10 ($2.50) and 8:20
Seven Years in Tibet (PG-13) Today at 5:20 ($2.50) and 8:30
L.A. Confidential (R) Today at 5:10 ($2.50)

YOU CAN ALSO CALL LUKE IF YOU WANT TO WRITE FOR SPORTS. SO GRAB A PEN AND HOP ON THE

SKI & Snowboard $229
College Ski Weeks '98!
Mont Sutton, Canada
◆◆5 DAY LIFT TICKET
◆◆5 NIGHTS LODGING
◆◆5 NIGHTS PARTIES
1 800 848 9545

KAI CHI
WE DELIVER
586-2774
Sun -Weds Thurs-Sat
noon-midnight noon-2am

OLDSMOBILE Minuteman VOLKSWAGEN
Patricia Dolan
SALES REPRESENTATIVE
TEL. 617-275-8000
FAX 617-271-1325
39 NORTH ROAD
BEDFORD, MASS. 01730

classé café
GREAT BREAKFAST TILL 3 P.M.!
REMEMBER: ALL HOMEMADE YOU ARE WHAT YOU EAT.
Mon - Sat 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
168 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291
O.C.M.P. Welcome

SCHOOL SUPPLIES
A terrific selection of magazines, binders, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, printer cartridges, T-shirts, art supplies, calendars, candy, toys, stationary & the best card shop in the Valley!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant St • 253-2540
OPEN Weekdays 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.
Sundays 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Peter Pan & PVTA
Your Community Link To The Northeast!
Williamstown Greenfield Pittsfield Amherst Lenox Northampton Holyoke Springfield
BOSTON NEW YORK
DAILY EXPRESS SERVICE
Peter Pan
800-343-9999
Amherst, Peter Pan Terminal, 79 S Pleasant St
Umass
Campus Cntr, or SW Hampden Dinning Common
Northampton, Peter Pan Terminal 1 Roundhouse Plaza

FREE for all students!
HEAR your E-mail by Phone!
FREE!
• E-mail • Chat
• Voicemail • Student Stories
• Personal Web Pages • Message Boards
www.collegeclub.com
or call toll-free (888) E-MAIL ME
COLLEGE CLUB

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

84 Jeep CJ7 4x4, hardtop, 132,000+ miles, automatic. Need to sell fast. Needs some work. $925 or make an offer. Call Luis @ 549-5514.

87 Nissan Maxima Auto, power everything, A/C, 74k, maroon. Perfect condition. Take a ride $3500/neg. Call Harris 549-5717.

VW GTI 1986 AC/cruise, sporty, great shape. $2500 or B/O. 549-6472.

1989 Nissan King Cab 4x4 SE Great condition, 170k Mi. Asking $5000. Call HM (413)862-3634, WK 545-3081.

Toyota Corolla 1992 AC, Sharp, Clean, Drives Like Sharp! $5700. Call 549-7166.

Wanted: Junk Cars Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

EMPLOYMENT

Kai Chi Restaurant Waitstaff, Part-time. Apply within. 586-2774.

Mother's Helper Weekday afternoons. $7/hour. References. Please call (413)549-7788.

Driver Needed 1 hour at noon. Nov 3 or soon after. Delivering meals in Amherst. 253-2486 or 585-0713 after 2pm. Car required.

EMPLOYMENT

CHILDREN'S HEALTH RESEARCH

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate in a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work Monday through Thursday evenings. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $5.75 per hour with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available for Part Time employees. Free transportation is provided from the PVTA busline. For further information or to arrange a personal interview, Call: 413-587-1607. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Jobs for the Environment Campaign with MassPirg to reduce pesticide use. Flexible schedule. $50-$75/day. Call Terry @ 256-6434.

Personal Administrator with good typing, organizational, and PR skills. Contact 549-3613.

Posterer Wanted $6/hr 259-1227.

LEGAL ASSISTANTS WANTED Spring 1998 Internships With The Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Contact The Student Legal Services Office today. 545-1995. 922 Campus Center.

CARRIERS AND DRIVERS NEEDED

for morning delivery of Newspapers on campus and in Amherst

Call John Riley at 584-7804 or 1-800-858-4275 Ext. 0

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: Professional DJ spinning all types of music for your next party or function. Call for more details. 253-6593. DJ FOOZ (Ask for Tim).

FOR SALE

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass repairs, jewelry restoration, diamond engagements, wedding rings. Silverscape Designs, 264 N Pleasant St., Amherst. 253-3324 Open Daily.

Mongoose Bike For Sale Large. $240 or B/O. Call 549-6926.

FOR SALE

Elton John 4 excellent seats. 11/5. (516)867-7392.

Elton John Tickets For Sale Great seats. Call 253-6352.

COMPUTERS! New P166MMX from $995. Laptops, peripherals. ZarVision 582-9198 V/MC/AMEX.

Laptop Notebook Works good. $150. Good for school. Call Steve (413)295-2027.

Color VGA Monitor for computer. Works great. Call CPC (413)584-8857.

MISCELLANEOUS

EARN $750-$1500/WEEK Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 x 95.

ROOM FOR RENT

Housemate Wanted $220-270/month. 548-7972.

ROOMATE WANTED

One bedroom available in Sugarloaf. $333/month. Call 665-3559.

Prefer female non-smoking grad student. Nice house with yard. Available Jan 98. 323-9268.

ROOMATE WANTED

Bedroom for rent on Ingate Farms. Large ranch. Scenic hiking, South Amherst. $350. 256-5983.

Female Roommates Wanted Boulders Apts. Amherst. On busline. 259-2995.

SERVICES

Fall yard cleaning service offered. Raking, clearing, etc. Call The Brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi 549-9384. Ask for Dave. All work $8/hour.

Transcription, Editing, Typing for students, professors & businesses. Domenichelli Transcription Services (413)783-8607. domenbus@javanet.com

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 98 Free food and drinks! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica and Florida from $399. Organize a small group and travel FREE! Highest commissions and lowest prices. Call Surf and Sun Tours to become a campus representative (800)574-7577.

Spring Break and other travel Special rates for students. Call Travel Network at (201)533-0300. 1-800-699-4988 outside NJ.

ROOMMATE WANTED

RELIABLE SPRING BREAK TOURS Bahamas, Cancun & Ski Trips! FREE FOOD & FREE DRINKS! Sign up before Nov. 30. Organize a group- travel free. Call for details and free brochure. Call 1(888)SPRING BREAK Today!

EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH CLASS TRAVEL needs students to promote Spring Break 1998! Sell 15 trips & travel free! Highly motivated students can earn a free trip & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica or Florida! North America's largest student tour operator! Call Now! 1-800-838-6411.

Earn MONEY and FREE TRIPS!! Absolute Best SPRING BREAK Package available!! INDIVIDUALS, student ORGANIZATIONS, or small GROUPS wanted!! Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS at 1-800-327-6013 or http://www.icpt.com

SPRING BREAK Largest selection of Spring Break destinations including cruises! Group discounts and free trips available. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4FUN.

Spring Break "Take 2" hiring Reps! Sell 15. Take 2 free. Hottest destinations! Free parties, eats, and drinks! Sunsplash 1-800-426-7710 or www.sunsplash-tours.com

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK

Cancun From $599
Jamaica From $579
Best
Bahamas From $629
Florida From $99

NOW HIRING REPS!

1-800-234-7007

http://www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Sell/Trade your preowned games and systems. Call Let's Play at 549-4505.

COLLEGIAN CLASSFIEDS

available on the concourse or visit our friendly office in the campus center basement

The most popular question on Campus:

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THAT BOX?"

The Answer:

SELLING COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Come and see us today!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass ID number of the student placing the ad listed on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students 20¢ per word/day

All others 40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

For Your Information

THURSDAY, OCT. 30

Book Reading — James Salter, author of the new memoir Burning the Days, reads at 8 p.m. at Memorial Hall.

Lecture — "Anti–Semitism Today: From the Subtle to the Extreme," a one–credit course given by Lauren Levin, Eastern States Civil Rights Director of the Anti–Defamation League will be given from 7–9 p.m. at the Hillel House. The public is invited to sit in on this lecture.

Meeting — Organizational meeting for World AIDS Day events at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 902.

Open House — UVC–TV 19 is holding an open house between 3–5 p.m. in the Student Union, Room 216, behind the Hatch. There will be information sessions, tours, and refreshments offered to all those who attend.

Prison Awareness Week Events — Rally against the Criminal Injustice System at noon on the Student Union Steps. Planning/informational meeting for the American Prisons On Trial Conference (Feb. 22–26) at 5 p.m. in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge. Discussion on censorship in America at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center. Sponsored by the Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League, Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Black Student Union.

Speaker — Alison Bechdel, creator of the comic strip Dykes to Watch Out For, will speak on "Assimilation and It's Discontents: Chronicling Fin–de–Siecle Queer Culture" at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 101. Part of the GLBT Studies Lecture Series and co–sponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLB GSO, Women's Studies, the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters, Pride Alliance, Hampshire College Cultural Studies Program and Words and Pictures Museum. For more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

Study Abroad Fair — Find out opportunities to study abroad with UMass Amherst International Program from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Campus Center Concourse.

FRIDAY, OCT. 31

Service — Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Symposium — "Seeing is Believing: Images of Lesbian, Gays and Bisexuals on Television" beginning at 2 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C. Co–sponsored by The Stonewall Center, the GLB GSO and the Media Education Foundation. for more information, contact The Stonewall Center at 545–4824.

SATURDAY, NOV. 1

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable will be performing their free weekly comedy improv show at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 163.

Symposium — A symposium on "The Future of the Social History of Art" will take place from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. The event is free and open to the public. For more information call the Art Department at 538–2200.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

NOTICES

Art Contributions — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space is looking for contributions to the Southern Asian Cultural Exhibition which will show in the spring of 1998. If you have anything from artwork to crafts depicting Asian culture, and would like the opportunity to participate in this exhibition, contact Amanda at 545–0792.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

Daily Listings sponsored by:

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board	23 CNN
3	CBS/3	Hartford	24 CNN SI
4	CBS/4	Boston	25 Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	28 UCTV
8	PBS/57	Springfield	27 TBS
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	28 BET
8	UPN/20	Hartford	29 TV Land
9	Weather Channel		30 Univision
10	NBC/30	New Britain	31 Comedy Central
11	Fox/61	Hartford	32 Cartoon
12	PBS/24	Hartford	33 Much Music
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
16	UMass Academic TV
17	HSCN Programming
18	TV–19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield

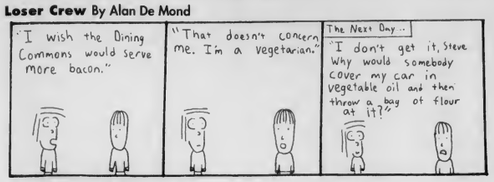
545-3500

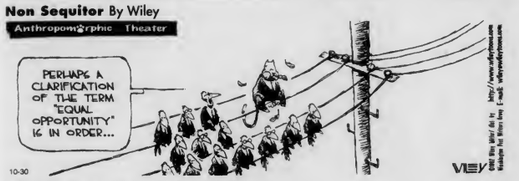
TV LISTING SPONSORSHIP FOR SALE
INQUIRE @ 545-3500

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 30, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	6	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Great Railway Journeys		Mystery: Hetty Wainthropp		Wait for God	Keeping Up	Murder-Horrid	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Real TV	Promised Land "Sami Russell"		Diagnosis Murder "Crash" (In Stereo)		News		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land "Sami Russell"		Diagnosis Murder "Crash" (In Stereo)		News		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	"Village of the Damned" (1995, Horror) Christopher Reeve.		20/20		News		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		BoyWorld	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Out for Justice" (1991, Drama) Steven Seagal.		News				Star Trek: Next Gener.
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica	ER "Good Touch, Bad Touch"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Married...With Cheers		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Honey, I Shrunk the Kids		Fame L.A. "Seize the Day"		News	Grace Under	Vibe
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica	ER "Good Touch, Bad Touch"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Home Imp.	Simpsons	Seinfeld	Frasier	Living Single	Between Bros	413 Hope St. "Hate Crimes"	News			Simpsons	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Union Square	Seinfeld	Veronica	ER "Good Touch, Bad Touch"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Dra--Cell	Mystery: Hetty Wainthropp		Brideshead Revisited		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Village of the Damned" (1995, Horror) Christopher Reeve.		20/20				News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Med Abo. You	Med Abo. You	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Dirty Dancing" (1987, Drama) Jennifer Grey.		News		M*A*S*H		M*A*S*H	Reel TV
WTBS	46	Family Matters	Family Matters	Coach	Coach	"Maximum Overdrive" (1986, Horror) Emilio Estevez, Pat Hingle.		"Graveyard Shift" (1990, Horror)				David Andrews.	Kelly Wolf.
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Poison Ivy"		Biography: Gary Gilmore		Sea Tales		Unexplained "Alien Abductions"		Law & Order "Seed"
CNN	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prima News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	39	Richard Lewis	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Cataclysm" (1980, Comedy) Corey Chase, Bill Murray.				Richard Lewis	Make-Laugh	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Wings	Strange Planes (R)	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: "Wolverine" (R)	Into Unknown.	Movie Magic.		Wings	"Eagles of the Crown"	Justice Files	"Psycho Killers"
ESPN	50	Up Close	Sportscenter		Wkend Kickoff	College Football: North Carolina at Georgia Tech. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait	"Anne Rice"	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"The Haunting of Lisa" (1996, Suspense) Cheryl Ladd.				Homicide: Life on the Street
MTV	59	MTV Live	Viewers	All-Time Top 10 (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	Beavis-Butt.	Sports	Rock N Jock B-Ball Jam (R) (In Stereo)			Oddville, MTV	Loveline (R)
NICK	53	Doug	You Afraid?	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Secret-of Alex	Happy Days	Munsters	Addams F.	Odd Couple	Dick Van Dyke	Newhart	Happy Days
SCIFI	60	Twilight Zone	Gattaca	Time Trax "The Dream Team"		Sequest 2032 (In Stereo)		"To Die For" (1989, Horror) Brendan Hughes, Sydney Walsh.				Time Trax "The Dream Team"
TLC	28	Homelime (R)	Hometime (R)	Home Again	Home Again	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Quest (R)	Quest (R)	Hauntings, Across America (R)		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	54	Kung Fu: Legend		Lois & Clark-Superman		"The Horse Soldiers" (1959, Adventure) John Wayne, William Holden.				Rough Cut		Two Mules for Sister Sara
USA	62	Baywatch "Homecoming"		Highrisender: The Series		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Lionheart" (1990, Adventure) Jean-Claude Van Damme.				Silk Stalkings "Crush" (R)
HBO	65	5:15 "Ladyhuge" (1992)		"Top Gun" (1986, Drama)		Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) PG		"Acts of Betrayal" (1997) Maria Conchita Alonso.		Perversions		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	67	5:45 "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989)				"The Presidio" (1988, Suspense) Sean Connery.				"The Return of the Living Dead" (1985)		"Alcoholic"
SHOW	66	(4:30)		"Meatballs Part II" (1984) Richard Mulligan.				"The Shining" (1980, Horror) Jack Nicholson, Shelley Duvall.			Pick-A-Flick



Bruno By C. Baldwin



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Loser Crew By Alan De Mond

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Thatch By Jeff Shesol

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — There are some things you will not do for advancement or profit, and today you'll have to make a choice about certain others. Is it worth it?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You will receive a message that brings a promise of something big to happen in the near future. Focus on today's events, however.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — A journey, literally or figuratively, is in store for you soon, and you must be ready to meet with some self–created surprises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may be running late or falling behind at this time, but with a steady effort you can keep yourself from losing any profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Keep your judgments to yourself for the time being, and keep your eyes and ears open. It is important to be receptive to new information.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Protection is a result of careful judgment and a sense of responsibility, both of which you have in spades at this time. Keep it up!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — A conflict is likely to arise toward midday between you and someone who feels you are encroaching on his or her turf. Strike a compromise.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may not be able to do everything on the docket today, but you can pick and choose effectively and produce results with what you are able.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — An unexpected gain comes your way today – was it something you did? You may be in a position of accidental good fortune right now.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — A decision is expected from you, and others are waiting to hear what you have in mind. Do not waste time playing games; be honest and direct.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Though you are not altogether willing to concede to a rival, you had better recognize the fact that you are not in a superior position.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Pay attention to symbols today: you'll realize that there is more to what is going on than meets the eye. You can get to the bottom of it soon.

Quote of the Day

"Hand me my leather."

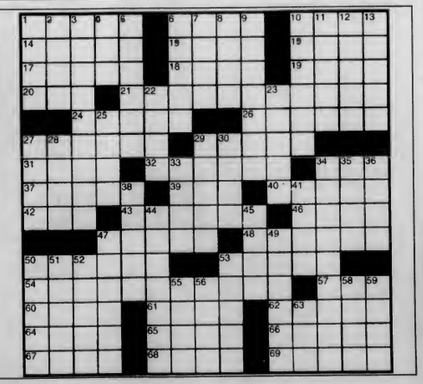
–Tori Amos

Close to Home By John McPherson

After debuting its new weather format, TV 52's ratings soared to No. 1.

ACROSS

1 Mid-length skirts
6 Short nail
10 Bakery buy
14 Put — save up
15 S-shaped molding
16 Writer Wiesel
17 Stoneworker
18 Departed
19 Quarry
20 Alias
21 Forage crop
24 Asparagus part
26 Safe places
27 Abhor
29 Annoyingly proper person
31 Sees
32 Acting group
34 Ending for social
37 Robin Hood's weapon
39 Tina Turner's ex
40 "Mr. Spock" portrayer
42 Bandleader Brown
43 Gain entry to
46 Mast
47 Circular
48 Pay no attention to
50 Of the supernatural
53 Conspires
54 Kind of suit
57 Playing marble
60 Writer Morrison
61 Early morning
62 Geography-class feature
64 Part of A.D.
65 Commentator Sevareid
66 Like some seals
67 Thin
68 Slat
69 Portions of medicine



DOWN

1 — Cass Elliot
2 Writer Dinesen
3 Catastrophes
4 Oath-taker's response
5 Feels
6 — of London
7 Novelist James
8 Bronze coin
9 Mild condiment
10 Carry off
11 Complexion shade
12 Suit material
13 Sidelong glances
22 Electrical unit
23 Weighed down
25 Mexican coin
27 Distribute the cards
28 "Jane —"
29 Hearth tool
30 Feels sorry
33 Potato substitute
34 Phonies
35 Fly high
36 Ancient Phoenician city
38 Partitions
41 "— It Romantic?"
44 Fortress
45 Farm structure
47 Jazz- —, music genre
49 Rang
50 Computer numbering system
51 Genetic copy
52 Large showy flower
53 Type of runner
55 Singer Irene —
56 Taunt
58 Have — in one's bonnet
59 Gets hitched
63 Asian

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

K	O	A	L	A		L	O	U		A	L	P	H	A
I	S	L	A	M		I	L	K		S	U	R	E	R
S	H	A	D	E	T	R	E	E		C	L	A	M	P
S	A	N		B	R	A	G		D	R	U	M	S
		J	A	Y	S		L	E	T
L	O	S	S		B	U	B	B	L	E	D
V	I	P	S		T	R	O	T		B	U	B	I	E
O	M	I	T		S	I	N	E	W		R	O	C	K
W	I	N	E	D		M	E	S	H		K	N	E	E
T	E	R	R	I	E	R		O	B	E	Y	S
			P	O	S		T	O	E	D
K	A	P	P	A		P	I	E		B	E	E
L	I	N	E	D		L	I	G	H	T	Y	E	A	R
O	W	N	E	R		O	P	E		L	A	S	S	O
W	I	S	P	Y		P	E	R		E	M	I	T	S

10-30-97 © 1997 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Texas Chili
Quiche Lorraine
Meatball Grinder
Wheatball Grinder

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Breaded Veal Patties
Fiesta Rice and Cheese
1/4 lb Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Turkey Burger
Texas Chili
Elbows w/ Tomato Sauce or Salsa Con Verde
Sesame Noodles and Pea Pods

DINNER
Duchess Meat Pie
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Hot and Spicy Vegetable Patsa
Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Turkey Bacon Swiss Folded Pita

DINNER
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Veal Parmesan

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Reuben on Rye
Fettuccini and Tomato Sauce
Sesame Noodles and Pea Pods

DINNER
Boneless Pesto Chicken
Veal Parmesan
Garden Chili

Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Photo Technician: Lauren Kosky
Copy Editor: Melissa Toubar
Production Supervisor: Sam Smullin
Production Staff: Jonnie Hwang, Angie Annese

SPORTS

UMass defeats Dartmouth on Senior Day

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

On a day when the seniors were honored with a pre-game ceremony, it was the juniors of the Massachusetts field hockey team which provided the fire-power to propel the Minutewomen (10–8, 3–0 Atlantic 10) to a 3–1 win over Dartmouth (8–6, 3–2 Ivy League) at Richard F. Garber Field.

Juniors Erica Johnston and Laura Phelan scored and Vicky Browne added three assists in the win. However, the day's scoring was not limited to the class of 1999. Senior Amy Ott added a pair of assists to represent the senior class on the day's point list.

Ott, Sharon Hughes, Courtney MacLean and Jen Gutzman were all honored before the game.

"It was a little emotional for the seniors, but they went out with class and with style," UMass coach Patty Shea said. "Dartmouth is a game that's always tough for UMass. It's always a nail–biter and it's always close."

UMass, which suffered from early game sluggishness in its last two contests, had no trouble getting going against the Big Green. In fact, it took less than five minutes for the Minutewomen to find the Dartmouth cage.

Johnston redirected the ball off a Browne free hit just outside the circle past Big Green goalie Brittany D'Augustine on the left side for a 1–0 UMass lead.

"I told them that their mindset had to be that they were down 2–0," Shea said. "They needed the urgency they have had in the last 10 minutes of games in the first 10 minutes."

Dartmouth, though, was able to break through a stingy Minutewoman defense in the first 12 minutes of the second half. Down a goal, the Big Green offense found forward Kristen Leadbeater, who beat UMass keeper Zowie Tucker for Dartmouth's only score of the day.

"When they scored, we knew we had to play harder," Phelan said.

The Big Green did not hold the game's momentum long. With 17:28 remaining in the game, Phelan connected with the first of her two penalty corner goals. Phelan, who assumed the role of striker on the offensive penalty corners, fired another shot past D'Augustine for a UMass insurance goal with 5:10 left in regulation.

It was a career day for Phelan, who spent six weeks on the bench nursing an injury, as the goals were the first two of the season for the midfielder.

"She's got a great corner hit," Shea said. "She was injured and she's just now starting to get back into it. Everybody in this group has something to offer this team and we need everybody in order to be successful."

The theory of a team effort was exemplified by the play of the UMass defense. Hughes, the center back, and Ott, the team's sweeper, worked in conjunction to thwart any Big Green attack up the middle. Gutzman and freshman Patty Robinson controlled to sidelines.

"Sharon Hughes played very, very well," Shea said. "She was a key factor in the game."

The Minutewomen also received the benefit of strong play on their defensive penalty corners. Dartmouth was not able to convert on any of its three first half corners, and the UMass backline did not allow a corner in the second half.

"It's much better," Shea said. "We're starting to really work the kinks out and we've made a few changes in it. But the easiest way to defend penalty corners is to not give them up. That is the goal, then you don't have to worry about your penalty corner defense."

Massachusetts	3
Dartmouth	1

The win over the Big Green gives the Minutewomen momentum heading into the last weekend of the regular season.

"We knew we wanted to stay on the winning side going into this weekend, because it's a big weekend."

This weekend translates into the final two conference games UMass will face this year, Friday at West Chester and Sunday at St. Joseph's. The Halloween contest against the Golden Rams will determine the No. 1 seed for the league tournament, which the Minutewomen will host starting on Nov. 8.

"This gives us huge momentum," Shea said of yesterday's win. "We're going down knowing we're playing good hockey right now and West Chester hasn't played in a week, but we have this recent game and we know what we can do. We have a win and that helps our focus."

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

Forward Vicky Browne charges the net in the second half of yesterday's 3–1 UMass win.

Phelan returns in style

By Aaron M. Saykin
Collegian Staff

As they prepare to embark upon their two biggest games of the 1997 campaign, the members of the Massachusetts field hockey team have a new scoring threat in the form of junior midfielder Laura Phelan.

After battling back from an injury–plagued season, the Mountaintop, Pa. native exploded for two penalty–corner goals yesterday, powering the Minuetwomen (10–8, 3–0 Atlantic 10) to a 3–1 victory over Dartmouth at Richard F. Garber Field.

"It feels really good to get some points behind me," said Phelan, who notched her first two tallies of the season against the Big Green. "We wanted to stay on the winning side of things going into this weekend."

With its final two contests of the regular season to be played on the road against A–10 opponents West Chester and St. Joseph's, UMass embraces Phelan's return to full steam.

"It dictates how we really need everybody in our group to play well," Massachusetts coach Patty Shea said of Phelan's added spark to the Minutewoman offense. "She's starting to get her game back at a real critical time in the season."

Having been named to the Atlantic 10 All–Tournament team in 1996 after her game–winning goal against Temple in the tournament's semi–final game, Phelan is no stranger to success in the clutch. The former 1994 Pennsylvania high school All–State selection converted on the UMass game– winning score yesterday against Dartmouth after the Big Green had tied the game, and, with 5:10 remaining in the contest, put it out of reach with her second goal on the afternoon.

"We knew that Laura had it in her," said Shea of her breakthrough performer. "She's been injured for six weeks. That's a significant part of the season. But she's come back hard, and with a great attitude."

Despite previous struggles with offensive penalty–corner production, Phelan's two successful conversions against Dartmouth come as no surprise to Shea.

"She's got a great penalty–corner head," said Shea of the former Crestwood High School star. "She was injured, but she's getting back into the swing of things."

After a shaky UMass effort to open the game against last Saturday's foe, Connecticut, and a similar lack of intensity a Saturday earlier against La Salle, Phelan's offensive spark could not have come at a better time, as the Big Green grabbed the game's momentum after tying the contest 11 minutes into the second frame.

"It gave us a big lift," Phelan said of her eventual game– winning tally. "Once they scored (to tie the game), I knew the momentum was going to shift."

Minutewomen Notes: Phelan's return to stardom should give UMass a boost, as it prepares for a two–game showdown this weekend in her home state against St. Joseph's of Philadelphia and the Golden Rams of West Chester.

If the Minutewomen return to Amherst with two victories, they will have cemented the No. 1 seed in the Atlantic 10 tournament, which UMass will host at Richard F. Garber Field beginning on Nov. 8.

In the past, the team which captured the A–10 tournament crown was required to win a play–in game against the winner of another league to advance to the NCAA tournament.

However, this season, the winners of the A–10 and the Ivy League will receive automatic bids into the National Tournament, emphasizing the importance of a high seed for Massachusetts in its conference tournament.

Also a bright spot for the Minutewomen is junior forward Erica Johnston, who added to her A–10 scoring lead with her 18th goal of the 1997 campaign. Johnston has collected at least one goal in every game that UMass has scored in, except in the Minutewomen's 4–1 defeat at the hands of Wake Forest, Christine Millbauer notched UMass's only tally against the Demon Deacons.

To state the unobvious, and to add an otherwise meaningless stat, the Minutewomen are 3–1 this year at home when the officials are wearing yellow jerseys.

Family matters on ice

If you missed Sunday night's Game 7 of the World Series... too bad, although it was understandable to miss the grand finale after six largely lackluster games, several of which left me longing for homework. Part of the problem was that I really just didn't care whether Cleveland or Florida won the thing. It was a complete ambivalence for me as I sat and just enjoyed a tremendous ball game without a care in the world about the outcome.

UMass hockey forward Dan Juden had a serious rooting interest though. While Dan watched from his couch, his cousin Jeff intently watched the game unfold from the Cleveland Indians' bullpen.

Leigh Torbin

"Being in the World Series for him is like being in the Stanley Cup for me — it's the highest you can possibly get," Dan Juden said. "It's awesome. I'm psyched for him, I'm nervous for him, I'm a little bit of everything."

While both Judens found themselves a little down on Monday morning, Dan could find some measure of comfort at practice from the multiple players on his team with pro athletes in the family.

A week ago tonight, Brad Norton's brother Jeff was the the FleetCenter playing against the Bruins for the Tampa Bay Lightning. Two nights later, Bryan Fitzgerald's older brother Tom sliced the Fleet's ice with the Florida Panthers, perhaps looking for some revenge from three weeks ago when their cousin, Keith Tkachuk, and his Phoenix Coyotes were topped by the Bruins in overtime.

Of course, holdout Paul Kariya won't play in Beantown with the Ducks tonight, but Dean Sterk will still cheer for him in Amherst. If you grew up near Boston's hallowed collegiate ponds, you remember David Emma who won the Hobey Baker Award at BC In 1991 as the National Player of the Year. Now, if you spend time with the Minutemen, you can get to know his cousin, freshman Jay Shaw.

Also, Jeff Blanchard has a famous Uncle Bob. Some Bobby Orr guy to be exact. Guess he was a hockey player or something and not just the guy who did the Baybank ads and Christmas stuff with Bob Lobel from Channel 4 in Boston, because that's where I always knew him from.

When one of my youth coaches wouldn't let anyone wear No. 4 I thought it was because he got confused when he was trying to honor Steve Grogan's No. 14. This Orr guy must have been something else.

Assistant coach Scott MacPherson, who does much of the team's recruiting, insists it is a complete coincidence and not at all by design.

"Once you get up to that elite level of athletes, you find that it's an intertwined web," he said. "It's almost like circus people. Anyone who's been in the circus probably has a relative who has been in the circus and anyone who's played hockey at this level probably has a relative who has too."

If that connection doesn't come from blood, the top athletes — those in the tight–knit hockey community — tend to find each other anyway.

Stork isn't directly related to any professional athletes, but he does have a close relation with one of the man that The Hockey News recently dubbed "the best player in hockey today" on its cover. It's common for Canadian Junior players far from home to stay with a foster family in that town, and during his two years with the Penticton Panthers of the BCJHL, Kariya found himself with Mr. and Mrs. Jerry and Roberta Stork in Penticton.

A year later, Kariya would become the first freshman to win the Hobey Baker for leading Maine to a 40–1–2 record and its first national championship. He soon left for the 1994 silver medal–winning Canadian Olympic team and then left for NHL stardom. He also left an impression on Stork.

"If it wasn't for him I don't think I'd be where I am today," Stork said. "Paul Kariya was a really dedicated person. He worked hard in everything he did, not just on the ice but off of it. After school he did so much extra stuff, like lifting weights, just so he could make it to the NHL. He helped me and motivated me and I took a lot

Turn to FAMILY, page 13

Packers leave Patriots on the ropes

Mike Kobylanski on NFL

Well, what can I say about the National Football League? I know that I may only be the little guy down here in the Campus Center Basement, but I'm ready to prove my worth.

Let's start off with the Patriots. Another beautiful Monday night display against the Packers. Once again, Drew Bledsoe proved my point that he can not win big games. He came up empty in the Super Bowl last January, and put up pitiful numbers against the Broncos and Packers this season. (And just to refresh your memory, it was an awesome performance by the defense that propelled the Pats over Jacksonville in the AFC championship game.)

It may be time for Pete Carroll to press the panic button on the 5–3 Patriots, who will be in real trouble if they fall to the 6–2 Vikings on Sunday. (I'm sorry, but any team with Brad Johnson at quarterback should not have a better record than the Patriots.) Now is the time for the Pats to show their true mettle and gear up for a playoff run.

The biggest hero of Week 9: Warren Moon. He may be old enough to be my grandfather (well, he's not quite that old), but he lit up the Raiders for 409 yards and five touchdowns. I don't care even if the Raiders did beat the Broncos two weeks ago, they are just awful. Al Davis better fire himself and invest his time in putting a few more pounds of grease on top of his head.

Oh, and just to use the Seahawks as a reference point to gauge the performance of the Patriots, both teams have a 5–3 mark. When you have the same record as the Jets and Seattle, and have a worse mark than the Vikings and Giants, then you know you have problems.

And speaking of 5–3 teams, who can forget the Bucs. Why have they dropped three straight? Well, it's because Trent Dilfer has eight fewer touchdown tosses in that span, and because the run defense has been atrocious. I still have faith in the Bucs, though. They'll annihilate the hapless Colts on Sunday and regain their winning ways.

Hey, Jim Harbaugh, how's your hand? If I call you a baby, are you going to come to Amherst and try to kick my ass too? Captain

Turn to NFL, page 13

Pitino looking to revive Celts

Brett Mauser on NBA

I've always been an athlete. Baseball, hoop, soccer, the whole shebang. The first thing I can remember from my glory days was my basketball coach yelling at me because I didn't know what a pick was. I tried to be sneaky by saying that I did, but he didn't buy it.

From a fan's standpoint, ever since my zygote days, I've always been fixated on Celtic green. I dreamt of being Larry Bird on the day he showed up Isaiah Thomas by stealing the inbounding pass. I dreamt of embracing the ball as time ran out in the 1986 NBA Finals.

How things have changed. The Celtics have never been the same. They haven't put on a ring in eleven years, they've auditioned about 800 head coaches, and instead of seeing smiling faces in the crowd, you see the yellow backsides of the empty chairs. Not to mention the fact that L.B. is a Pacer. You know something's wrong when L.B.'s a Pacer.

After last season's disaster, the Celtics needed a spark. A lot thought that spark might be yours truly spotting up for the trey. But instead, they needed a mastermind because It was obvious that Red Auerbach might not be with us in every facet of life.

Enter Rick Pitino.

With the likes of Boston U, Providence, Kentucky, even the Knicks, Pitino has shown everybody that he's the Big Apple. He helped the Friars to the Final Four with Billy Donovan as their "star player." Now the real question... how did Donovan's NBA career go? No, don't worry, you're not the only one who didn't know the guy even existed.

The thing about Pitino that's going to put the Celtic yellow and blue (get it?) back on the map is that he makes bad players good. He builds the textbook definition of a "team." On day one, he was given the money and the authority. To say the least, he has used that authority.

Looking at the Celtics roster now, there are some familiar and unfamiliar faces, more of the latter. There were seven players who averaged double figures in points last year. Five of them have packed their bags, and one doesn't even count (Dana Barros played only a third of the season).

Arriving in Boston to play under Pitino's wing are "big" names like Andrew Declercq, Tyus Edney, Bruce Bowen, and a few others that have opponents shaking In their Filas. He wasn't going by scouting reports or irrelevant training camp numbers. He was inking players he saw firsthand, either in SEC conference play or in the Big Dance. He does his research and it will pay off in the long run. I think we should all thank Chris Mills collectively for bringing in some cheap, young talent.

Turn to NBA, page 13

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVII Issue 42 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, October 31, 1997

A treat for the freaks

The Jim Rose Circus hit Pearl Street this week. Check out our ghoulish review (see Arts and Living, page 6).

UMass gettin' its Mac on

Steve MacKinnon had two goals in the hockey opener against Lowell. He and the first line will be needed in a tough Hockey East weekend (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Arafat denies rumors that he is severely ill

RAMALLAH, West Bank (AP) — Insisting that he was in good health, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat blamed Israel for recurring rumors that he is suffering from a severe illness.

"This is silly Israeli propaganda and rumors," Arafat, 68, told reporters Wednesday evening in an impromptu news conference called to dispel new rumors that he had been hospitalized after feeling faint.

Asked if he was in good health, Arafat said: "As you can see, yes."

Arafat adviser Nabil Abourdeneh said Arafat had routine health check-ups in his office, not in a hospital. He said he did not remember the last time Arafat had a checkup.

Arafat's wife, Soha, also said her husband was not hospitalized. She accused Israel of waging a campaign to try and erode her husband's standing whenever the peace process was in trouble.

"I advise the Israeli media and government not to use these tactics. They should focus on the important issues like the implementation of the peace process," Mrs. Arafat said.

NATION

Standoff in Illinois ends after five weeks

ROBY, Ill. (AP) — A five-week standoff between a mentally troubled woman and police ended peacefully yesterday when she ventured outside her home and officers managed to grab her.

Shirley Allen is "out, she's safe and in the care of medical professionals," said State Police spokeswoman Pam Wieties. The standoff ended just before noon.

"She came out on the back deck in the back of her house," Christian County Sheriff Dick Mahan said. "She walked out far enough out that troopers were able to grab her. No one was injured. It was without incident."

She was taken to St. John's Hospital in Springfield, the state capital, about 20 miles to the west.

Nearly two hours after Allen was taken, several of her relatives left Roby in a caravan of cars. Allen's stepdaughter, Kate Waddell, was smiling broadly, and Allen's brother, Byron Dugger, raised his fist in a triumphant gesture.

The standoff in this small central Illinois town began when Allen brandished a shotgun as her brother and sheriff's deputies tried to take her in for the court-ordered evaluation on Sept. 22. Allen's relatives said they requested the exam because she was getting increasingly depressed and paranoid.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 42	HIGH: 64 LOW: 53	HIGH: 59 LOW: 46

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK / COLLEGIAN

Flower for you!

With winter approaching, flowers like these are enjoying their final days.

Professors criticize Picket Code

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Faculty leaders at the University of Massachusetts have criticized the administration's distribution of the policy on demonstrations and the picket code to all students this fall as having "a chilling effect" on freedom of speech on campus.

In an Oct. 7 letter to Chancellor David K. Scott, the Executive Board of the UMass branch of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP) condemned the distribution of the University's policy on demonstrations to all students at the start of this semester.

> "The union and the faculty feel strongly that freedom of speech is one of the great freedoms of society and of the University, and we wouldn't want anyone to jeopardize that."
> — Sara Lennox

Jenny Spencer, president of the MSP, wrote in the letter that while "the MSP recognizes the need for a University policy on campus demonstrations and picketing," the mass distribution of the policy during the first week of the semester may discourage students from voicing their opinions.

"We are concerned about when and how you chose to disseminate the guidelines," Spencer wrote. "Their distribution to every University student at the very beginning of the semester was perceived as an effort at intimidation and as a threat to students' right as citizens to perform constitutionally–protected acts of civil disobedience."

The administration mailed the policy, entitled the "University of Massachusetts Guidelines for Responses to Demonstrations on University Property," with cover letters from Scott and President William M. Bulger, to all students, faculty and staff the first week of the fall 1997 semester.

Tom Juravich, director of the Labor Center and a member of the MSP Executive Board, said the tone of the letters and the timing of the mailing was intimidating to students. The administration, Juravich said, should have made students aware of the guidelines in a less threatening way.

"It was done in a way that had a chilling impact on students," Juravitch said. "I think it could have and should have been done in a less threatening manner."

Juravich said that the guidelines were mailed to students as a response to pressure on the administration from the state legislature in the wake of the Goodell Takeover last spring.

"The campus is under a new set of pressures as a result of the Goodell occupation," Juravich said. "It [the distribution of the guidelines] was done in a time and fashion to communicate to students that the administration was going to take charge of the University."

Although he recognizes the pressure the administration was facing from outside, Juravich said, he did not feel that the mass distribution was an acceptable response.

"We need to continue to have a commitment to open and free dialogue. I feel very strongly that those core values need to remain central to the work we do as a University," Juravich said. "I believe this action threatened those values."

Sara Lennox, director of the Social Thought and Political Economy Program and a member of the MSP Executive Board, said the MSP was also concerned that the distribution of the guidelines represented a change in the administration's policy of enforcement of the picket code.

The MSP noted in its letter that while there was "no substantial changes" in the wording of the picketing code itself, the "wide distribution of these guidelines may be intended to signal a significant change in the University's enforcement policies."

"Should this be the case, we fear that the perception that political dissent will be harshly punished may have a chilling effect on freedom of speech on campus," the letter stated.

Lennox said that she hopes the administration does not intend to move towards a strict enforcement of the code.

"It seemed that the administration was trying to convey a message that if you break this code, you will face very serious repercussions," Lennox said. "In the past the case has been that the administration has used the code in flexible ways."

Lennox said that the University will suffer if students are afraid to express their opinions because of enforcement of the code.

"The union and the faculty feel strongly that freedom of speech is one of the great freedoms of society and of the University, and we wouldn't want anyone to jeopardize that," Lennox said. "It would damage the institution if student felt they couldn't speak out."

Other faculty members did not consider the distribution of the guidelines as threatening to students.

John Bracey, President of the Faculty Senate, said that students should not be intimidated by the distribution of the code.

"If you believe in civil disobedience you should be willing to accept the consequences," Bracey said. "The distribution of the code shouldn't have any effect on you at all."

Since the policy itself has not changed, Bracey said, students have no reason to regard the code differently.

"Why should you feel intimidated if you were prepared to accept the consequences before?" Bracey asked. "The intimidation only comes in if you feel intimidated."

Scott has not yet responded to the MSP letter, and was not available for comment.

Students discuss privatization

RSOs want to preserve Campus Center's "college atmosphere"

By Julie Siegal
Collegian Staff

Members of University of Massachusetts student businesses and Registered Student Organizations (RSOs) expressed their concerns last night about how a new Campus Center and Student Union will affect the future roles of their businesses.

The University Center 2000 planning committee, in charge of facilitating the development of the new Campus Center/Student Union complex, lent their ears to concerned student business employees about what they expect out of a new Campus Center.

The potential role of privatization in the new campus center worried student business employees about whether or not they could compete with these private businesses and corporations.

Student businesses should continue to be a priority in the new campus center, as it is for students now, said Brooke Harvey, Earthfoods employee.

Students were concerned private businesses would dominate the new campus center complex, competing and possibly harming student businesses.

"It's all about money in the end," said Samantha Withall, Earthfoods employee and member of the Board of Student Businesses. "If we build it they will come, and the school [UMass] would like to get their money from privatization. It's a concern of mine because if the school wants money, they can grab it easily."

Others were worried that incorporating private businesses into the Campus Center would cause it to lose its "personal, college atmosphere."

"You walk into [Boston University's] campus center and it's like going to the mall," said Patricia Belizaire of the Campus Center administration. "We want a 'people' university."

BU's campus center has a McDonald's inside, which takes away from the personal atmosphere, Belizaire said.

The University must show they support the student businesses by not allowing privatization to hit campus, said Brenda Santos, Greenough Snack Bar employee.

"We can't afford to ignore the fact that private businesses are coming in and the administration knows that," she said. "If they support co–curricular learning, how are they showing that, because it's not showing by putting us halfway in between Brueggers and Antonio's."

Privatization on campus can also take away from local businesses and the local economy, Harvey said. If a bookstore like Barnes and Noble secures space in the Campus Center, it would probably hurt the businesses of bookstores in Amherst center, she said.

Students were also concerned about the types of space they would be allocated in the new complex and expressed what they wanted in renovations.

Turn to PRIVATIZATION, page 2

Jury finds teen-age au pair guilty of second-degree murder

By Leslie Miller
Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE — A jury convicted a teen-age English au pair last night of second-degree murder in the killing of a baby in her care by shaking him in a fit of frustrated rage. Louise Woodward broke down into hysterical sobs while her lawyer Andrew Good embraced her. "I didn't do anything," she cried. "Why did they do that to me?"

Woodward's parents sat stone-faced after the verdict was read. It took jurors approximately 27 hours over three days to convict Woodward, now 19, in the death of 8-month-old Matthew Eappen. The child died in the hospital Feb. 9, five days after Woodward called an emergency operator to say he was unconscious.

The three-week trial has riveted audiences in the United States and Britain, where gavel-to-gavel television coverage has turned the case into a real-life drama.

The second-degree murder conviction carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison with eligibility for parole after 15 years. Middlesex Superior Judge Hiller B. Zobel set sentencing for this morning.

The prosecution's case relied on experts who testified that medical and autopsy reports showed the baby's injuries were caused by a violent shaking and his head slamming against a hard surface. Police officers also testified that Woodward told them she had been "a little rough" with the child, a statement she has denied making. And Matthew's parents, physicians Sunil and Deborah Eappen, said that Woodward had chafed at their efforts to get her to curb her late hours.

Woodward, who took the stand on her own behalf, was unflappable as she denied doing anything to harm the child. Medical experts called by her lawyers testified that there were no external signs of trauma; they said the baby had a previously undetected head injury that could have been reopened by minor jarring.

Bolstered by the strength of their case, defense attorneys adopted an "all or nothing" strategy that barred the jury from considering a reduced charge of manslaughter in the case.

Prayer banned in schools

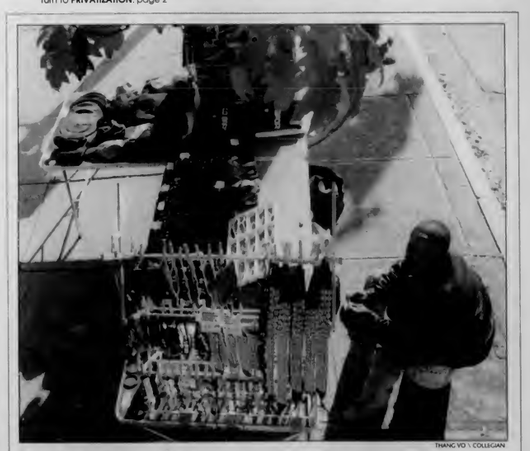
By Kendal Weaver
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — A federal judge yesterday established guidelines for religious activities at Alabama public schools, prohibiting vocal prayers or Bible devotionals on school property while allowing a student's brief thanks to God at graduation.

U.S. District Judge Ira DeMent also ordered training sessions for teachers and administrators in DeKalb County schools — where students allegedly have been coerced into participating in religious activities — and said he'll appoint a monitor to ensure the court's orders are followed.

DeMent's ruling extended his previous orders striking down Alabama's 1993 school prayer law and rejecting Gov. Fob James' claim that the states, not the federal government or courts, can set their own laws on religious conduct in public places.

DeMent's ruling raised the possibility of contempt proceedings against any state or public school official who violates his order. Religious practices in Alabama's courtrooms and schools have been a politically charged issue. The governor and other political figures rallied behind a circuit judge in Gadsden who has been ordered to stop conducting prayers at the start of court sessions and to remove a carved display of the Ten Commandments from behind his bench.



James even told a Baptist gathering in February that he would use state troopers and the National Guard to stop anyone trying to stop the prayer and the Ten Commandments display from the judge's courtroom.

Donald Sweeney, a lawyer for the DeKalb County school board and other school boards in the state, said the judge's opinion gives educators across Alabama clear guidelines to follow.

"Before this opinion, some schools were following the law in good faith; others were not," Sweeney said "No longer will well-intending persons, political or otherwise, be able to argue to our principals or educators that 'the law is not clear, or the law doesn't apply in your city or county so do what you want and what we want you to do. You won't get in trouble.'"

DeMent's ruling bars Alabama public schools from allowing any "school organized or officially sanctioned religious activity," including vocal prayer, Bible devotionals, distribution of religious materials and discussions of a devotional nature. But it gives specific examples of what is permissible: use of religious texts in an academic context, such as homework or artwork or reports that are part of a course of study; and the display of religious symbols or clothing with religious messages, so long as they are in accordance with applicable "time, place and manner restrictions."

The order bars prayers, invocations or devotional messages at commencement exercises.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Super street vendor

Kwame Nyarko of Amherst sells different merchandise on North Pleasant Street in Amherst.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK \ COLLEGIAN

Sign says no smoking...
Junior design major Holly MacPherson smokes near the Campus Center yesterday.

Congress, Clinton criticize Jiang

Chinese president defends human rights record during visit to D.C.

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Confronting some of his harshest critics, Chinese President Jiang Zemin defended Beijing's human rights record yesterday amid blunt questions about allegations of forced abortions, religious persecution and the sale of organs from executed prisoners.

Winding up a two-day visit to Washington, Jiang told members of Congress that since China opened to the world in the 1970s, "The Chinese people have enjoyed a much better life, and it has intensified efforts to improve democracy and the legal system." From Capitol Hill to the White House, Democrats and Republicans closed ranks to raise candid concerns about China as Washington and Beijing end eight years of diplomatic estrangement.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Jiang was "very vigorous in defending some positions we don't agree with."

"He got it from the president and now he got it from Congress," said Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle a day after Jiang heard a lecture about human rights from President Clinton.

Jiang, the first Chinese leader welcomed in Washington since the 1989 Tiananmen Square massacre, headed from Washington to Philadelphia to visit such symbols of American democracy as the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall. Today, Jiang will be in New York, where he will step into the heart of American capitalism and ring the opening bell at the stock exchange.

Unlike Wednesday when hundreds protested in Lafayette Park, only a handful of demonstrators shadowed Jiang's stops yesterday in Washington. Protest leaders said they were focusing their efforts on rallies in Philadelphia.

The Chinese leader concluded his visit to the capital with a speech acknowledging that relations with the United States have been marked with "estrangement and contacts, confrontation and cooperation, friction and harmony."

"Different views held by countries on the human rights issue ought to be addressed through dialogue so confrontation could be avoided," Jiang said.

Addressing American trade concerns, Jiang pledged to "open China still wider to the outside world."

Jiang, in his speech, said China had improved human rights and ended slavery in Tibet, comparing Beijing's action to "the liberation of black slaves in American history." After China's intervention, the people of Tibet are "living and working in happiness and contentment," the Chinese leader said.

Despite the strongly held views on Capitol Hill, the Chinese leader appeared to make some headway in a breakfast with about 50 members of Congress.

"I think frankly the president's comments about democracy and the rule of law and the direction that are trying to move in is very encouraging," Gingrich said. Senate Republican leader Trent Lott said, "The important thing is for us to see what he does when he returns."

But Rep. Chris Smith, (R-N.J.), said of Jiang: "He told whoppers today. He told big, big lies today. He gave us the party line."

Faced with hostile questioning, Jiang stood his ground.

"He denied there was religious persecution," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt. "He denied there was a denial of political and rights of speech. He denied there was forced abortion. He denied there was international sale of organs from executed prisoners, all of which was raised."

Lott told Jiang that China has made "incredible economic progress" in the past dozen years but that "our relationship cannot be based simply on economics."

"We do not believe that freedom is limited by geography or by history," Lott said. "We believe that all men and women should be able to live, work and speak free from governmental interference." Gingrich said members of Congress were "very direct on religious liberty, very direct on issues of [weapons] proliferation, very direct on questions of compulsory abortion, very direct on questions about jamming Radio America and Radio Free Asia and also very direct in talking about Tibet and the Dalai Lama."

Before the breakfast, Jiang met separately with the four congressional leaders.

■ privatization

continued from page 1

Having easy access to student businesses and RSO offices, including wheelchair access, closet room, and changing the spaces architecturally in student-run restaurants to cut back on lines were some of their main priorities.

"We'd like to have a nice, formal storefront and windows," Withall of Earthfoods said. "We don't want to be placed in the holes of the building."

The students said the biggest hardship for their businesses is just total lack of overall space and said they hoped the new Campus Center complex would accommodate them better.

Better ventilation, more telephone lines, storage space, visibility, and security are other problems the students say they want for the future campus center complex.

Student businesses, RSOs and agencies like WMUA, UVC and the Collegian that are open late need security for personal reasons, as well as to protect the expensive equipment, the students said.

The next UC 2000 workshop will be held from 5–7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 13 in Campus Center, room 174. The topic will be retail establishments in the new building.

"The killer awoke before dawn
He put his boots on"
He went to the cupboard
and he opened the Doors... cookies!!!

Daily Collegian – got milk?

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES
Presents
SOMETHING EVERY FRIDAY'S
HALLOWEEN SPECTACULAR
PSYCHIC FAIR
THE ULTIMATE PSYCHIC FAIR
TAROT CARD READER
PALM READER
The Complete
PERSONAL NUMEROLOGY
Past, Present & Future All
Under One Roof!
FRIDAY OCTOBER 31, 1997
7:00 PM ROOM 163 CAMPUS CENTER
MOVIE: "MEN IN BLACK"
FEATURING: TOMMY LEE JONES, WILL SMITH, LINDA FIORENTINO AND VINCENT D'ONOFRIO
STUDENT OPENERS: STEVE BRYKMAN AND BOUNDARIES
SHOWTIMES FOR M.I.B. ARE
9PM & 11PM IN THE
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
"MEN IN BLACK" ALSO SHOWING
SUNDAY NOV. 2
IN THE STUDENT UNION
BALLROOM
AT 8PM AND 10PM

This series is made possible by a grant from Umass Auxiliary Services and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and: DAILY COLLEGIAN http://www.umass.edu.campact/events/saf.htm
phone # 545-3600

Yearbook Staff Prepares for Record Turnout

By Arnold Layne
Index Archives

Amherst- For the 129th year in a row, the UMass Yearbook Club begins production on the University's prestigious Index, this year however, will be designed and published not only as the 129th yearbook by the Index, but also the first to present the yearbook as a tour guide to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

> "The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." -Sean Marien

Asked on whether or not graduation seniors will be part of the yearbook, Managing Editor Loretta Kwan said "This year's book will not only include (Seniors), but will also include useful information on places to eat, places to go out to and also places to go when you're not feeling too well. There are a lot of places in this book. It's great!"

"Seniors will have to call the DaVor number to get in the yearbook. And quick." replied Editor-in-chief Jill Aordkian when asked how seniors will get in the book. "Last year we couldn't get all the Seniors in the book because they didn't get their photo taken soon enough."

This year the Index will be extending it's Senior Photo Shoot to allow for thousands of Seniors to get their photo in the book. Director of Marketing Sean Marien added "Seniors should call the number immediately. The earlier you call, the better chance you have to get in the book." The number to call for appointments is 1-800-836-05158, and Seniors are encouraged to call as soon as possible during normal business hours.

"You have to call, you can't get around that." Photo Editor Aaron Eccles reply to if there was another way for Seniors to get in the book. "If you don't call, you can't get in, you just can't! There's no way."

"There's no need to worry, every students who gets their photo taken is put in the book, well except that once but....." said Kwan on the likeliness of not getting in the book. "Just call the number and show up. That's it."

A new feature of the 1998 Index is the addition of the Grad Edition. "The Grad Edition is the best thing this campus has seen since the invention of the disposable lighter" Copy Editor Sean Maguire commented. The Grad Edition comes with the purchase of each yearbook. The Grad Edition will be available to Seniors before commencement, which gives graduates the opportunity to give parting comments to their friends in school.

President Clinton and Chancellor Scott were contacted about the Grad Edition, however both were unavailable for comment.

Get your Senior Photo Taken Now!
Call 1-800-836-0558
To Make an Appointment Today
There will be $5 sitting fee
This will be your only chance to get in this year's book

~ NATIONAL / INTERNATIONAL ~

Ireland holds presidential race

By Robert Barr
Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland — Irish voters chose their next president yesterday, almost certainly electing a woman to succeed Mary Robinson.

With only two of the five candidates showing substantial support in opinion polls, Ireland apparently was choosing either its first president from Northern Ireland or its first from Fine Gael, the nation's second-largest party.

Mary McAleese, a lawyer and academic from Belfast, had a solid lead in late opinion polls and the backing of Fianna Fail, the nation's largest party. She was also the heavy favorite of Irish bettors.

Mary Banotti, a Fine Gael member of the European parliament, was the only other candidate in double figures in the last poll published by The Irish Times.

Fianna Fail had monopolized the presidency, a largely ceremonial post, until Robinson won in 1990 with the backing of Ireland's Labor Party. Robinson is now the United Nation's commissioner for human rights.

Some 2.7 million people were eligible to vote this year, and results will be counted Friday.

The early turnout in Dublin was light but voters in the capital faced the added complication of a taxi strike, which snarled traffic.

Thomas Brosnan of Dublin said he voted for McAleese because "she's articulate, she's decisive, and she's from the north." He also her election would give meaning to the Irish constitution, which regards Northern Ireland as part of the nation.

Another Dubliner, Kevin Kelly, said he would vote for Banotti — if he voted at all.

"It's been a bit of a zilch campaign," he said, adding that Banotti at least had a track record in politics. None of the other four candidates has held elective office. An opinion poll published Wednesday in The Irish Times showed that McAleese, 46, was the first choice of 37 percent while Banotti, 58, trailed at 24 percent.

Dana Rosemary Scallon, 46, a native of Northern Ireland who now lives in Alabama, was the choice of 8 percent; anti-nuclear campaigner Adi Roche, 42, was a point behind; and former policeman and victims' rights advocate Derek Nally, 61, was at 4 percent. McAleese and Scallon were able to run for office — even if they were living outside of Ireland — because they hold Irish passports. The winning candidate needs a majority of votes, which is likely to require two counts Friday. Voters mark their first and second choices on the ballot; the lowest-ranked candidates in the first count are eliminated and the second choices are then distributed among the survivors.

Mona Tyson of Dublin said she would probably vote for Adi Roche, but wouldn't mark a second choice. "I wouldn't give any of the others my vote," she said.

Voters also decided on a constitutional amendment that would allow the disclosure of the contents of Cabinet discussions in certain, limited circumstances.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK \ COLLEGIAN

Renovations, renovations
Students hang out outside Stockbridge Hall yesterday.

Algerians protest election fraud

By Elaine Ganley
Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — Angered by alleged fraud in last week's local elections, opposition parties and pro-government allies joined forces yesterday to stage the largest anti-government protest in six years.

The demonstration, which drew an estimated 30,000 people to the streets of Algiers, was a clear signal to President Liamine Zeroual that the multi-party political system he put in place must be given a larger voice in the nation's affairs.

Rows of women in headscarves from a moderate Islamic party marched before rows of militants from an anti-fundamentalist group, finding common anger at the local elections won by the government.

"Algerians are all brothers," the crowd sang out as they marched from the working-class neighborhood of Belcourt to the government headquarters of the Algiers region, next to the parliament building.

Chanting "Stop the fraud!" and "Cheating thieves!," the protesters called for the resignation of Prime Minister Ahmed Ouyahia, installed by Zeroual.

In the wake of daily protests since Saturday, the presidency announced yesterday that Zeroual would deliver a speech on national television and radio tonight. It did not elaborate.

No violence was reported during the march, the largest anti-government gathering since the military-backed regime canceled legislative elections in January 1992.

The Islamic Salvation Front had been expected to win the 1992 election because of voter discontent with corruption and high unemployment in the petroleum-rich nation. The insurgency that began after the elections were canceled has left an estimated 75,000 people dead.

Riot police stood watch during the march yesterday and sharpshooters were posted on rooftops.

"This is the beginning," Sheik Mahfoud Nahnah, head of the moderate Islamic party, Movement for a Peaceful Society, told The Associated Press. "We refuse dictatorship. We refuse one-party politics. We refuse silence over the election fraud."

Politicians and many newspapers now refer to the government as the "RND state," a reference to the pro-government National Democratic Rally that placed first in local voting Oct. 23 and in June parliamentary elections.

Nahnah's moderate Islamic party placed second in the legislative vote and has ministers in the government.

The participation in the march of Nahnah's party and the National Liberation Front, which also has ministers, has led to speculation that the government could crack, but a government spokesman dismissed the protests.

"Elections don't happen without people contesting or reacting to them," Hamraoui Habib Chawki told the AP. He said only about 1.6 percent of the voting results nationwide were in question. Others disagreed.

"All parties have been touched by widespread fraud and all parties have but a single demand: the true results," said Sheik Abdellah Djaballah of the moderate fundamentalist Ennahda party.

IRA claims responsibility for bombing

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Irish Republican Army dissidents tried to wreck a British government building in Northern Ireland's second-largest city yesterday, but their bomb failed to explode fully and no one was hurt.

The Continuity IRA, a shadowy group that emerged in 1995 during a previous IRA cease-fire, later claimed responsibility and warned there would be "no peace in Ireland" until their demands were met.

The abortive attack came as Britain announced plans to reform its anti-terrorist laws in response to declining violence in Northern Ireland.

Today first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton travels to Belfast to deliver speeches on the importance of women and youth in peacemaking efforts.

A masked gunman had carried a gym bag containing the bomb into an office building in Londonderry, 70 miles southwest of Belfast, and warned a receptionist before fleeing. Police evacuated more than 300 workers.

The detonator went off about 20 minutes later, but police said the bulk of the bomb — about 1.5 pounds of Semtex commercial explosive and two gallons of gasoline — failed to explode. The presence of Semtex provided the clearest evidence yet that not all members of the mainstream IRA support the current truce. The IRA smuggled more than 2 tons of Czech-made Semtex from Libya to Ireland in the mid-1980s and has often used it to devastating effect.

In its statement, the Continuity IRA criticized negotiations in Belfast that aim to find a compromise way to govern Northern Ireland.

The group reiterated three traditional demands: All British troops must be withdrawn from Northern Ireland, all IRA prisoners must be released, and politicians must agree on a new constitution to unite the north with the rest of Ireland, which won independence from Britain in 1922.

The Belfast talks began in June 1996 and gained momentum after the IRA resumed a truce in July. The British and Irish governments, which co-sponsor the talks, admitted the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party to the discussions last month.

One of Sinn Fein's senior politicians in Londonderry, Dodie McGuinness, criticized the Continuity IRA for "trying to undermine the peace process."

But pro-British Protestant politicians asserted the attack was part of a Sinn Fein-IRA plan to increase pressure for concessions at the talks.

Also yesterday, a telephoned bomb warning from the Continuity IRA forced police to close down the center of Armagh, 40 miles southwest of Belfast. No bomb was found.

The day after Sinn Fein joined the negotiations, the Continuity IRA claimed responsibility for a 500-pound car bomb that wrecked a rural police station near Armagh.

Hungry?
$5.99 NO LIMIT
OFFER EXPIRES 10/31/97
COLLEGE SPECIAL
NO COUPON NECESSARY
Large One-Topping Pizza
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.
Call 586-7772
331 Russell St • Rte 9 • Hadley

UMass HOCKEY
VS
BC
Sunday, Nov. 2nd
@ Mullins
2pm
Catch all the action live
on WMUA 91.1 FM
Tickets are available at the Cage or Mullins Center Box office.
HOCKEY EAST

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Honors college will benefit all

I have to admit to being a little baffled by all the controversy raised by the Commonwealth College proposal. What kind of backwards thinking opposes increased academic quality? The kind that construes the proposal as being elitist.

The opponents of the honors college would have it that creating the college would divert funds and resources from the rest of the University. By and large, it wouldn't. The original $10 million it would cost to build the actual facility would be funded by the state, and wouldn't come out of the University's budget.

Opponents also balk at the iden of taking faculty away from their regular duties. This too, wouldn't happen. The honors college wouldn't be permanently staffed. According to Chancellor Scott's proposal, faculty would be borrowed for a year or semester from UMass and the other Five Colleges. While teaching in the honors college, professors would be trained in advanced teaching techniques. After their year in the honors college, the professors could then take their new skills back to their regular classes.

So really, the University at large wouldn't lose anything. And what it gains in return is tremendous. First, an extra 1600 students could graduate with honors. Second, these students would be encouraged and assisted in undertaking independent research. This does a lot to woo potential employers and graduate schools.

The end result is more money for the University. If alumni earn more, they'll give more. This means expanded financial aid and academic programs for the entire University.

So the question becomes whether or not separate academic facilities should be provided for the sole use of those who are academically superior. The answer is no. That's why, in the current honors program, non-honors students can take honors classes. That's why students, regardless of how well they did in high school or on their SATs, can join the program provided they have a minimum GPA of 3.2. These facets of the program would all remain the same.

"The question becomes whether or not separate academic facilities should be provided for the sole use of those who are academically superior."

Gerrit DeYoung

I think what's scaring a lot of people about the proposal is that a separate building is going to house the program. This isn't really a substantial change. It's just a way of making the program more coherent and cohesive by housing it under one roof.

Another concern students have about the proposal is admittance criteria. The main sticking point is the use of SAT scores. Admittedly, it has been shown that SATs tend to be biased towards white males. For that reason, I do believe that the admission standards should be reviewed.

But I don't think we should throw out the baby with the bath water. Overall, the Commonwealth College will be a tremendous resource for all who choose to use it. It will allow for far greater educational opportunities for a far greater number of students. It will bring renowned visiting faculty to campus. It will enhance the image of the whole University. Really, everyone wins.

Gerrit DeYoung is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

I–AA football up or out?

To the Editor:

It seems like I–AA football in New England is going in either of two directions, up or out. What should UMass do? Our situation is much like two other New England universities that made very different decisions recently. The unprofitable expense, up to $5 million a year, is high to maintain a I–AA program, money that could be used to address other needs on the campus. Then there is Title IX, with which schools rightly need to comply, a factor northern schools seem to be more concerned with than southern schools. Finally, there is fan support. New England college football, at least in IAA, does not have much of a following. Mid–season attendance at New England IAA games, excluding bands, ranges from 1,200 to 7,000 (figures from Boston Globe.) More people go to a high school Thanksgiving game. The fact is New England I–AA football is in decline, both in fan support and national recognition. It seems to me that if we stay the course we simply become fodder for the southern A–10 teams, and provide them the victories needed for post–season play. So do we go up or out?

Recently, the faculty voted down I–A football as being too costly in the face of urgent need elsewhere on campus, but they left the question half answered. We still spend a lot of money on a football team in a fading division (A–10 New England Division) that only a small number of people care about. So what do we do? I have been a fan of UMass football (rain or shine) for over 20 years, yet I am torn over a decision. It seems logical and essential to follow either of our fellow universities (New Hampshire and Maine) that made decisions; up or out, otherwise what's the point

Doug Smith
UMass Biology Department

Phi Mu Delta not the culprits

To the Editor:

We would care to say that an accusation such as the one which was printed in Wednesday's letters to the editor section was and is falsified. One of our brothers lives in a rural area in Connecticut where his father has an enormous amount of crops. Last weekend his dad came up to visit with a pick–up truck full of pumpkins for us to decorate our house with. To say that we would steal from the same community in which we have done more service for this semester than ever before is very offensive. We are terribly sorry about the fact that someone stole pumpkins from young children. None of us would want that to happen to our children. We do not hold the whole community responsible for individuals' tasteless and absurd comments of spite towards fraternities, but we do hold the writers responsible. As for Will and Catherine Oldershaw, we received many more pumpkins this season than we know what to do with and we still have some left over. We know it is already Halloween, but if the two of you would care to visit us at our house we will gladly let each of you take a couple of our best pumpkins home with you.

The brothers of Phi Mu Delta

Thanks for pumpkins

To the Editor:

We would like to thank the Collegian for printing our letter about the stolen pumpkins, and thank the people who offered to help us. A special thanks to the F.V.L.F. (Fraternity Victim Liberation Front) who carved the pumpkins beautifully and gave them to us. We forgive the ones who stole the pumpkins.

Sincerely,
Catherine Oldershaw, age 7
William Oldershaw, age 11

Protesting may prevent holocaust

I visited the Holocaust memorial last weekend by accident. It is a magnificent structure, made of four or five giant glass pillars. Underneath the pillars are grates, beneath which cinders burn. From the grates, a mystical steam rises into the hollow pillars. Inscribed on the pillars are numbers — about six million of them, if I am correct. On the inside of the pillars are meaningful quotes. In between the pillars are little blocks with more quotes and historical accounts of what happened.

So, my girlfriend Kiley and I walked through the structure and read the quotes. Whenever I think about the Holocaust, I get sad and teary–eyed. Kiley didn't want to be there. She knew that I was going to cry, and she didn't want to see me do that in front of her friends. Anyhow, I stood at the first quote for a long time. It said something along the lines of this:

When they came for the Homosexuals, I did not protest.

When they came for the cripples, I did not protest.

When they came for the Jews, I did not protest.

When they came for me, it was too late.

This quote struck mc in a peculiar way. I found comfort in that quote at first, probably because it didn't make me cry immediately after reading it. I began to wonder why it didn't make me sad as all the other quotes had done. The more I thought about the quote, however, the more it began to sadden me. I began to cry.

So I sat there crying, wondering why this quote had such an odd effect on me. The first thought that came to mind was that this quote was true to humanity; most people would not protest until they themselves were in trouble. But certainly people would protest against the senseless killing of anyone, related or not, wouldn't they?

I think that is what made me cry; society did not have the same conscience or consciousness during the Holocaust that is does today. It is a pretty basic presumption that someone would speak out if someone else — anyone else — were being persecuted.

Mark Griffin

There is something oddly surreal about the Holocaust to me. I cannot imagine how society let such a travesty occur. And almost no one protested — well, not enough to make a difference — until it was too late. Maybe the surreal quality lies in the difference between yesterday's war and today's civilization.

When I arrived on the University of Massachusetts campus, I encountered political action at its finest. I have witnessed several protests over all aspects of life on campus. In the month that I have been here I have seen beautiful Gay Rights demonstrations, protests against the International Red Cross (possibly the most righteous organization in the world,) protests against the new honors college at UMass, the Save Our Beer demonstration, and the end–all be–all of protests: The Protest Against All Meaningless Protests.

The last of these protests has quite an ironic and paradoxical appeal to it. Indeed, this protest against protests gives those of us without a cause reason to become active in the political community. A few weeks ago, a friend of mine marched in a feminist NOW rally, for the sake of meeting some babes. Sure, he met some babes, but I doubt his heart was into the cause which he was supporting.

Today's society, if nothing else, has given people the chance to have different opinions. In fact, many political scientists argue that our society was founded and thrives because of this difference of opinion. However, only since the 1960's have we seen a true abundance of political action in America. I contend that it is a result of the Holocaust, and following, that statement I saw inscribed on the Holocaust Memorial in Boston.

Some people spend their entire lives struggling to be counted, striving to make a difference. Hitler did. Many times, people my age are criticized for becoming involved just for the sake of becoming involved — The Protest Against All Meaningless Protests. But why should I not become involved, even if it is to meet chicks. Protests tend to notice 5 thousand ruffians marching their street, prompting them to ask themselves what the hell is going on.

Bottom line: protests and demonstrations raise our awareness about current issues facing our world. If our society in the 1930's and 1940's had been as focused on issues facing it as it is today, the Holocaust could have been prevented. So if someone can raise the conscience and consciousness of our society by standing out there, holding a sign (even if it is just to meet some members of the opposite sex,) why not? It might prevent a holocaust or two.

Mark Griffin is a UMass student.

Write for Ed/Op!

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

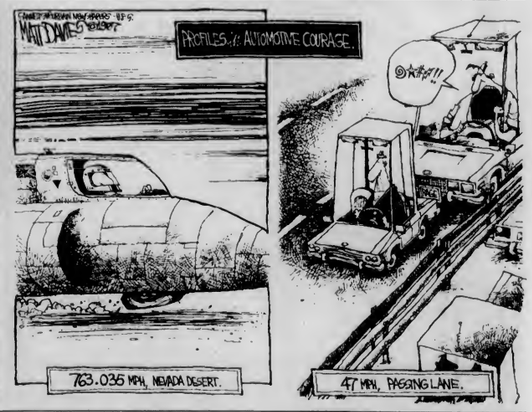
The Collegian Editorial page needs new writers. We want you to write humor, politics, satire, lifestyle, or any of a thousand other styles — let us be as broad as the student body is.

Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.

We especially encourage material that relates to current issues at UMass.

They can be submitted to Editorial/Opinion Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003, or by email to: letters@ailrmo.ait.umass.edu



Anyone who is interested should submit material by email (letters@ailrmo.ait.umass.edu), fax (545–1592), or by dropping it off at the Collegian offices for Dan Bodah.

Letters may be edited for length, clarity and style.

Editorials should be 500–700 words long and should include a phone number so we can call you

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Christopher Stamm Editor–in–Chief Laura Stock Managing Editor Ryan MacDonald Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager
Luis Luna Advertising Manager David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Humphrey brown III Senior Diversity Editor

Seema Gangatirkar Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Sunanda Ghosh Developing Nations Editor
Daniel Bodah Editorial/Opinion Editor
Rachael Pepe Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Bryan Schwartzman Jewish Affairs Editor

Christine Suh Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jonathan Liberty News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Luke Meredith Sports Editor
Laura Barcella Women's Issues Editor

Position Vacant Editorial Production Manager
Joe Savitch Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Kimberly Berardi Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Remembering the Million Woman March 1997

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Women from all over the country sharing the common theme of sisterhood.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Minister Yusef Muhammad from Muhammad's Mosque in Springfield speaking to the women heading to the March.

The Million Woman March was the idea if Coney and Phile Chionesu, grass–roots activists who only recently became well known even here in their hometown of Philadelphia, Pa. Determined to put togeither an event that spoke first to the needs of women locked in poor neighborhoods, where they watch too many of their men, women and children and neighbors fall victim to drugs or crime.

In following their vision, the organizers largely excluded mainstream groups, including sororities, which are significant networking groups for black women and many established civil rights groups.

Choinesu called the march "a declaration of independence from ignorance, poverty, enslavement, and all the things that has happened to us that has helped to bring about the confusion and disharmony that we experience with one another."

— Million Woman March Committee

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Women from UMass in Philadelphia at the March.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Women gather on Benjamin Franklin Parkway to listen to the speakers.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Men came to show their support in Philadelphia at the March.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

The March drew an estimated 1.3 million women to Philadelphia.

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Women keeping warm and discussing unity.

Attention ALANA students! Write for the Collegian Multicultural, Developing Nations and Black Affairs Pages. It's your voice, your outlet, your responsibility as a student of color to be heard! Contact us at 545–1851.

Hollywood's king of glitzy sleaze

COURTESY STEPHEN VAUGHAN

Director Paul Verhoeven returns to his sci-fi roots with Starship Troopers, coming out in November.

Adam Levine

There is a shining star which burns brightly amongst the vast wasteland of contemporary Hollywood. His name is synonymous with everything innovative movie making stands for today: excessive gratuitous sexuality and disturbingly realistic violence.

He is the patron saint of mind-numbing entertainment, and a resurrector of the essence of male voyeurism. This man is a popular culture icon, who represents the smut of high concept, enormously budgeted, low-brow sensationalism.

He is director Paul Verhoeven, and my sarcasm is quite sincere, I assure you. Best known for his skillful directing of such superstars as Arnold Schwarzenegger, Michael Douglas, Sharon Stone and Elizabeth Berkeley, Verhoeven has used his eccentric talents to evolve into one of the most ridiculously shocking directors of the 20th century. Yet, his talent for the craftsmanship of filmmaking can not be denied, and his films are as brutally entertaining as they are absurd in their nature.

Verhoeven was once a very well respected filmmaker back in his native land of Holland. There he was responsible for classy romantic war epics and supposedly intriguing character studies, including a well known cult hit called Turkish Delight. But, these films are hard to find here in the United States, and since making his new home in Hollywood, Verhoeven has become the poster child for guilty pleasures. He made his mark with the runaway hit Robocop, which featured such extreme elegance as man running around all nuked up after falling into toxic waste. Robocop also displayed Paul's comical side with satirical news footage and advertisements intertwined with Robocop's relentless pursuit of revenge and justice.

Following Robocop, Verhoeven made the sci-fi spectacular Total Recall before changing his focus towards naked women. His post sci-fi spectacles included Basic Instinct and the misunderstood Show Girls. Now, after recent upsets at the box office, Verhoeven

Turn to PAUL VERHOEVE page 7

Jim Rose Circus a ghastly treat

By Alexandria Lipka
Collegian Staff

JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Pearl Street
Oct. 28

Mexican Transvestite Wrestling, hypnosis, chainsaws, insects, the Enigma. The Human Dartboard, a man who can hang a car battery from his tongue ring, contortionists, Women Sumo Wrestlers, razor and bile swallowing and the adage that "what goes down, must come up" — welcome to the world of the Jim Rose Circus.

Banned in certain parts of Europe and billed as an "alternative circus" this display of freaks was filled with nothing but sideshow attractions that made some scream and gasp, while others cringed and became nauseated. Under the big top of Pearl Street, our fearless ringmaster and commentator for the evening was none other than Jim Rose himself. Beginning with Bebe the Circus Queen, Rose proceeded in giving us a play by play while Bebe walked on swords, had a bowling ball dropped on her stomach while lying on a bed of nails and held a grindstone to the part of her that is "most a Mrs."

The Enigma, a being with puzzle pieces tattooed all over his body and coral graphed into his skull (to give the appearance of horns), intoxicated us next with his gross ability to swallow a sword, ingest, regurgitate and ingest again, through his nose, a mixture of Gatorade, yogurt, honey and bong water and to have a live scorpion placed into his mouth. Perhaps the most well-known and celebrated attraction of the Jim Rose Circus, the Enigma also ate live maggots and grasshoppers and, when his portion of the show was over, provided the evening's musical score.

As promised, things were constantly happening everywhere. In between the Mexican Transvestite Wrestling, and the Women's Sumo Wrestling Championships, the Rubberman (who doubles as a Mexican Transvestite) successfully, maneuvered his body through the head of an unstrung tennis racket and Rose, our insane tour guide, allowed a reluctant member of the audience to stand on his head while he lay face down in a pile of broken glass. Coming up unscratched, Rose reminded us that it wasn't about just watching, he wanted us all to participate in the festivities. Four eager audience members were then chosen to be hypnotized on stage and another lucky viewer held and apple in his mouth while his initials were carved into it by a chainsaw. The fun didn't stop there though, only after we were warned to gather our belongings and try not to escape, did several masked characters rip through the crowd bearing chainsaws and water guns.

The finale featured the Amazing Mr. Lifto, boasting 11 body piercings, who simultaneously lifted a cinder block with his nipple rings, a car battery from his tongue ring and an iron from each ear — ouch! He also hung a tiny Liberty Bell from the part of his that was well hung to begin with — yes, majority ruled, and we got the X-rated version.

It was definitely a night to remember and a night filled with much confusion. How does someone determine that they have these exquisite talents and why would they want to display them so publicly? But it was all about pleasing the public and astounding us with the craziest freakshow known to man. Demonstrating his need for customer satisfaction, Rose kindly dislocated his shoulder for us so he could escape from a straightjacket and, only after assuring us that, "where there is no brain, there is no pain" did he stick a teaspoon handle straight up his nose — now that's entertainment!

COURTESY MARK VAN S.

Jim Rose and his band of human oddities terrorized a suspecting public at Pearl Street Tuesday night.

Irish author to visit Amherst College

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

Irish novelist Roddy Doyle, celebrated author of several books, including The Woman Who Walked into Doors, and Paddy Clarke Ha Ha Ha, which won the prestigious Booker Prize in 1993, will give a talk entitled "Trampus, Bruce Springsteen and Me" today at 4 p.m. in Johnson Chapel at Amherst College.

At this occasion, Amherst College will confer upon Doyle the honorary degree, Doctor of Human Letters. A public reception will follow the lecture in the same building, one floor below the main chapel.

Newsweek has described Doyle as "the most commercially successful and widely read" of writers involved in today's major renaissance of Irish vernacular, who are noted for their infectious comic qualities and ribald dialogue. But Doyle "hasn't pandered to his audience: as he's grown more popular," Newsweek noted, "his books have grown darker and better."

The prizewinning Paddy Clarke Ha Ha Ha, written from the point of view of a 10-year-old Irish boy, begins with humorous escapades but becomes more violent and disturbing as the story progresses. And The Woman Who Walked into Doors is a somber look at wife-beating and alcoholism.

There will be screenings of several of Doyle's books that have been made into films in the Amherst College Frontroom until Nov. 1.

The Snapper, in which the oldest daughter in a tightly-knit Irish family has a child out of wedlock, will be shown at 10 p.m. tonight.

Also showing will be The Van, the story of the friendship between two men and their ill-fated partnership in a fish 'n' chips van, will be shown at 9 p.m. on Saturday.

The three books that the films are based upon make up a series called The Barrytown Trilogy.

Admission to all the events is free and open to the public.

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

History Department Career Night

Date: Monday, November 3, 1997
Time: 4:00 PM -6:00 PM
Location: Herter 601 Lounge

Joye Bowman
Director of Undergraduate Studies, Moderator

Linda Lau
U.S. Department of Defense

Susan Hammond
Mather Career Center, Assistant Director, Career Education

Donald Valentine
Graduate Student, School of Education

Judith Holmes
Legal Studies Department and Pre-Law Advisor

Mark Brennan
Attorney at Law

Sponsored By: Campus Career Network, Alumni Association, Department of History

For more information, please contact: Mather Career Center at 545-2224 Refreshments Served - All Students Are Welcome!!

The Arts & Living

is always looking for TALENTED WRITERS to cover

•Books
•Music •Arts
& more.

If you're interested, come and talk to Sarema Gangatirkar, Arts & Living Editor.

Info call 545-1491

Simplicity's surprising allure

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Promising newcomer Meredith Brooks delivered the goods and then some to a packed crowd at the Iron Horse Wednesday evening.

By Marty Keane
Collegian Staff

MEREDITH BROOKS
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 29

NORTHAMPTON — A friend of mine said to me while leaving Meredith Brooks' show at the Iron Horse that he "Walked through the door a cynical observer and left a fan." Undoubtedly, this scene was repeated in parking lots throughout downtown Northampton late Wednesday evening. Before a hearty crowd at the Pioneer Valley's finest live music venue, the relative newcomer ably and confidently displayed why she's not just another angry "bitch."

That's not to say that she's perfect, but then again, that is where part of her quirky charm lies; hey, she even dropped a water bottle o.. her monitor. Brooks is the happy medium between the overplayed "woman scorned" act of Alanis Morrisette and the hokey blandness of Sheryl Crow. Tuesday night's performance had all the trappings of a top- flight rock show as she and her band pounded out the perfect mix of genuine sincerity and solid musical chops.

Although seemingly a bit sluggish and distant from the start, Brooks (who in person is a dead ringer for Courtney Cox) opened strong with bouncy run-throughs of "My Little Town," "Polyanne," and the clever "Birthday."

The set quickly caught fire on "Stop" as her band of four, somehow crammed onto the Horse's miniscule stage, fleshed out one radio-friendly guitar anthem after another and created elements of sonic dissonance through some effusive camaraderie and jamming.

From there, Brooks and company never looked back as the rest of the show ebbed and flowed magnificently. "Somedays," along with the soon-to-be-a-hit "What Would Happen," showcased an emotive element and by the time the glorious set closer, "It Don't Get Better," rolled around, she simply had the house at her beck and call. Featuring meaty Delta blues riffs as well as an utterly irresistible hook, it evoked memories of Melissa Etheridge at her foot-stomping, pull no punches best.

What was perhaps most surprising was the eager crowd response throughout, and not just for "Bitch," a song that frankly was one of the low points. Much like Kurt Cobain's feelings towards "Smells Like Teen Spirit" and Radiohead's regarding "Creep," the song seems to have become a necessary burden to becoming a star. No worry though, the songs on her platinum debut Blurring the Edges suggest she has more than a few legs to stand on.

While hardly a revolutionary effort, it still conveys a more genuine sense of immediacy than nearly all her contemporaries due to her potent vocalisms, which were on full display thank the Horse's crystal-clear acoustics.

And, for all the surprise a knock-s formidable lead guitar skills. On "My Little Town," she confidently toyed with her whammy bar, creating rolling, chunky riffs and "Wash My Hands" created a menacing wall of guitar noise.

Meredith Brooks can be a lot of things: she may be a bitch, a lover, a tease and a goddess on her knees — but one thing's for sure, she's no one-hit-wonder. Welcome to the big time Ms. Brooks, you've earned it.

Trainspotting team strikes back

Boyle directs Ewan McGregor in Life Less Ordinary

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

A LIFE LESS ORDINARY
Directed by Danny Boyle
with Ewan McGregor, Cameron Diaz, Holly Hunter
Playing at Hampshire Six Theater

A Life Less Ordinary was hyped all the way up to heaven and then panned straight down to hell, a metaphor which coincides with the story's plot. The hip faces and suave styles of gen-x superstars Ewan McGregor and Cameron Diaz have been gracing magazine covers for months prior the film's release and received remarkable attention by the entertainment press, all the way back to last summer's MTV music awards.

What a surprise director Danny Boyle must have faced when critics across the board chastised his recent endeavor for its cliché representations of American conventional cinema. What ever! A Life Less Ordinary is a film which demonstrates just how fun making a movie ought to be.

This is really a story about a critically acclaimed group of British filmmakers, who were previously responsible for the cult hits Shallow Grave and Trainspotting, coming to America to make their first major studio production. As doing so, they successfully created a film which equally pays homage to as well as mocks the whole ideology of the romantic comedy (a rather stale genre I might add).

A Life Less Ordinary is everything the critics accused it of being, a sappy plotless and quite bizarre tale of pointless love. But on that note, it certainly does deliver an explosive two hours filled with quirky characters, an outrageous narrative, excellent music and creative directing and cinematography. It stars McGregor as a recently terminally depressed man who in the matter of hours loses his job as a janitor to a computer and has his girlfriend leave him for a gymnastics instructor. Sound cliché? Sure it does, but when McGregor storms into his former boss' (Ian Holm in a ruthless role) office holding the robot, who took his job, hostage with a gun, you kind of get the point that this movie is so weird it just might work on one level or another.

The rest of the movie is just as absurd and nonsensical, but its just so charming. McGregor kidnaps the boss' daughter, played by Diaz. Diaz is an angry daddy's girl who gets off on shooting her fiance, and the two hide out, fall in love, fall out of love, and beat up two angels (Delroy Lindo and Holly Hunter) who will do anything to bring these unlikely lovers together. They sing karaoke at a hillbilly bar, get shot at by the angels and then decide to rob a bank. People may have found that all kinda shmultzy, but those are probably the same critics that praise Julia Roberts' movies for their realism.

A Life Less Ordinary can be defined all on its own, and whether its your cup of tea or not, Boyle can not be criticized for his innovative takes on dry overdone formulas. Even when the movie eventually does get to weird for its own good; at the end both main characters give us a little lesson on love and how they discovered it, you still feel the sense of ingenuity that Boyle transcends. Perhaps this is just his perception of America and judging from his film he just may be right, we are society of hopelessly romantic fools who far to often just don't want to accept how both fun and weird love can be. A-

■ Paul Verhoeven

continued from page 6

is returning to his original fascination for the science fiction genre. On Nov. 7, audiences beware, Verhoeven is back with all his eccentricities intact for Starship Troopers.

Based on the classic novel by Robert Heinlen, Verhoeven's latest release is not only the second most expensive film of the year (it fell right beneath James Cameron's Titantic) but it may just be the slickest piece of crap since Independence Day, and my vote is it will kick ID4's ass.

When gigantic alien insects blow up Buenos Aires, the Earth Force Army launches in all out attack traveling to the bugs home planet to give them the sweet taste of revenge. Starship Troopers follows the character of Johnny Rico, a reluctant hero who hopes to win back his girlfriend by proving to her that he can be a courageous soldier. What a plot! What a movie event this is going to be! Let's hope and pray that Paul hasn't lost his remarkable abilities to create pop culture trash allowing us to enjoy every guilty moment.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

Two Pianos, Four Hands opens off-Broadway

By Mary Campbell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — While two men talk and play pianos on stage, members of the audience superimpose onto the show their own unmusical lives, with their quandaries, frustrations, thrills, disappointments and love-hate relationships.

The fascinating, funny, thought-provoking Two Pianos, Four Hands, which opened yesterday at off-Broadway's Promenade Theater, stars Richard Greenblatt and Ted Dykstra, a couple of Canadians who took many years of piano lessons.

"Do I have to practice?" one wails in a little-boy voice. "You do if you want your allowance," thunders back a fatherly voice.

Greenblatt, 44, and Dykstra, 36, have the expressive faces of children, as they chronicle their early piano lessons, one often standing to become the dread piano teacher.

"It sounded much better at home" says the pupil, meekly. "So then what key are we in, dear?" the teacher says.

There's the consternation of recitals and competitions, childish mischief against a duet partner, growing love for an activity at which one begins to excel. Greenblatt and Dykstra, without exaggerating much, make it all very funny.

They get conflicting advice. One teacher says arpeggios have to be played with two hands: "You wouldn't make love to a woman with one hand." Another teacher says arpeggios have to be played with one hand: "The chicks will think you're a real man."

And questions bubble: What does a parent say when a child declares for a career in music — or golf or novel writing? What does a striver do when he realizes he'll never be the best in his beloved endeavor — or even near the best? How does one handle monumental rejection — no, you aren't good enough to get into the music conservatory.

Finally, Greenblatt and Dykstra give a real performance, from Bach's "D Minor Concerto," with an encore of Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze."

They both stopped piano lessons and became actors. But the piano still gives them great joy and they dedicate the show, which they devised, to their piano teachers.

"Two Pianos, Four Hands" was performed in Toronto in 1996. Gloria Muzio directed here.

big.

big technology. Intelligent test programming environments. High speed digital instruments. Next generation superchips. And more. Teradyne is your source for innovation, quality and leadership in Automatic Test Equipment, complex connection systems and telecommunications and software test. Our ability to bring the most exciting products to market started more than 40 years ago with the introduction of the first automatic diode tester. Since then, we've continued to set the standard with products such as the first tester with tester-per-pin architecture, the industry's first million-dollar tester and the world's largest most complex backplane. And all the while continuing our excellence in innovation recognized by the R & D 100 award for the revolutionary tester device docking system.

big customers. While we can't possibly name them all, we help today's leading electronics companies deliver their products to a fast-evolving market. Whether it's automotive electronics, cellular phones, PCs, or computer networks, Teradyne is the power behind the products. We're a worldwide presence working in partnership with all the big names.

big possibilities. To an engineering or business grad, Teradyne represents the opportunity to gain real involvement on real projects from day one. As soon as you join us, you will benefit from an informal culture where creativity and teamwork prevail. Whether your specialty is Software, Hardware, Mechanical, or Application Engineering or Business, Teradyne perfectly suits your background. We have exciting opportunities in all our locations from California to Boston, and even Internationally.

To find out more about Teradyne, see us on campus or send your resume to: Teradyne, Inc., Attn: University Relations, 321 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02118. Or e-mail joan.oday@teradyne.com. An equal opportunity employer.

not-so-big name
TERADYNE
www.teradyne.com

WE'RE COMING TO YOUR CAMPUS SOON!
See your placement office for details.

Boston, MA • Nashua, NH • Deerfield, IL • Agoura Hills, CA • San Jose, CA • Walnut Creek, CA • Dublin, Ireland • Kumamoto, Japan

Men's XC looks to carry UM tradition

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Last year, the Massachusetts men's cross country team placed third at the Atlantic 10 Championships under coach Ken O'Brien. In his 29th year leading the Minutemen, the squad placed first in the conference for the first time in history.

In 30 years of coaching track and cross country at UMass Ken O'Brien has brought home 15 Yankee Conference titles, three New England titles, and two IC4A titles. This year, in year No. 31, the task of winning the upcoming A–10 Championships is as imposing as ever.

The Minutemen will try to capture the title this year to continue their tradition of success. This time around, though, they will be running on extremely young legs and after a fairly disappointing regular season.

In many of the past years, O'Brien has had a good core of seniors to lead the team and healthy underclassmen to provide a needed boost. This year he has the talent, but the experience and health are questionable.

Only two seniors will take part in the A–10 Championships tomorrow at Fairfax, Va. One, Ryan Carrara, has paced the team nearly all season and placed 14th overall in last year's conference Championships. He has been touted as the leader of the team, and he is expected to be the most crucial factor in where the team places overall.

"There will be a group of 20 or 25 people that will break away after about a mile, and any one of those runners can win on any given day." O'Brien said. "Ryan's the one we'll have in there [top 25]."

Men's Cross Country
A–10 Championships
Saturday

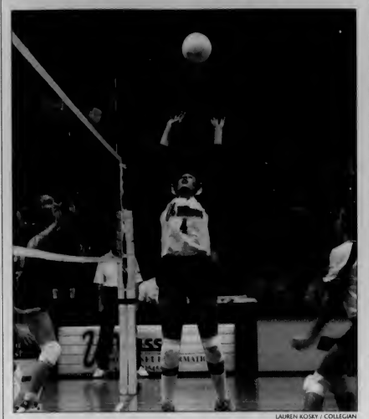
Behind him, the experience drops off dramatically. Sophomore Peter Gleason proved his worth two weeks ago by placing first among UMass runners at the New England Championships. He is quickly and quietly stepping into a leadership role on the team.

"Ryan has helped Peter," O'Brien said. "But indirectly, Peter is helping Ryan just as much. Peter pushes Ryan by working as hard as he does."

Other youngsters, such as freshman Brendan Sullivan and sophomore Kevin Somers, have shown flashes of brilliance, but have not been consistent runners during the course of the season. Sullivan has been bothered by shin problems, limiting his performance late in the year. The coach notices the effects of youth on a team.

"If you have a younger team, you have some inconsistency," O'Brien said.

Despite these factors, the Minutemen hope to bring home another top three finish this year, continuing the UMass tradition.



Minutewomen to host A–10 foes

By Jamie Jee
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team will look to continue its resurgent play this weekend as it takes on conference rivals Duquesne and St. Bonaventure. The Minutewomen return home to the Curry Hicks Cage tonight for a 7 p.m. match against Duquesne and will meet St. Bonaventure at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

The Minutewomen are currently 6–6 in the Atlantic 10 and 11–12 overall. They will continue their conference stretch, with tonight marking the first of eight A–10 games in a row before tournament slots are determined.

Last weekend UMass split their matches on the road versus conference foes Xavier and Dayton. In the first match against Xavier, sophomore middle blocker Jill Meyers led the way for the Minutewomen, collecting a whopping 26 kills and 18 digs to go with a 19-kill performance from sophomore outside hitter Sarah Watters. Sophomore setter Kari Hogancamp impressed with a .409 hitting percentage and 17 digs while freshman setter Jennifer Drennan set up her teammates with 61 assists.

Freshman setter Jennifer Drennan has been a bright spot in a disappointing volleyball campaign thus far.

"We played well against Xavier. They had won six of their last seven and were beating tough teams, so it was an important win," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said.

UMass lost the following match to a tough Dayton squad, despite showing poise in battling back to even things up at two games a piece. Senior outside hitter, Lesley Nolan, collected a pair of lucky 13s for kills and digs in the loss.

Volleyball
Massachusetts vs. Duquesne
Tonight, 7 p.m.

"We started off bad against Dayton but still had our best hitting percentage for a conference match," Kenny said. "Although we had a balanced attack, we just never had all our key hitters together."

The Minutewomen enter tonight's match with the all–time edge over Duquesne, 10–4. The team played the Lady Dukes to the tune of 3–1 win in their matchup earlier this season, but UMass is aware of the team's improvement and sharpened tools. They also hold a 6–6 conference record and are 11–12 overall.

"Duquesne is one of the best hitting teams in the conference," Kenny said. "Their outside hitters are always a big threat especially with [Sheila] Lopez and [Beth] Murphy."

This junior–sophomore tandem has hit the ball hard all season, and according to Kenny, their containment will be key.

"It'll be important for us to pass off of their jump serves," Kenny said. "That will allow our offense to become consistent. It'll probably come down to who makes the least amount of mistakes."

History bodes well for the Minutewomen against St. Bonaventure. UMass is 13–1 all–time versus the Bonnies, which includes a 3–1 drumming earlier this year. The Bonnies have yet to win a conference match this year, going 0–12 while holding a 4–19 mark overall.

The Minutewomen will have to watch out for senior star middle hitter Nikki Renninger, who is coming off a 22 kill performance in a win over Niagra.

Nikki Renninger takes a lot of swings for St. B's and is a key force for them at the net," said Kenny. "We've worked on our outside hitting and concentrated on our defense, so we should be prepared."

The Minutewomen defense has remained strong throughout the season and hope to pick up their blocking down the stretch.

Fab freshman Jennifer Drennan has picked up the ball this year and with 42 assists last Saturday, became just the third UMass player to reach the 1,000 assist plateau in a single season. She remains on pace to smash the UMass single– season freshman assist record currently held by graduate Cass Anderson.

Nolan is chasing a record of her own and should be the school's all–time careér dig leader after tonight. She needs just two to break Minutewomen volleyball legend Dionne Nash's mark of 1,390. Nolan is already UMass' career leader in double–figure dig matches with 72.

Pitino era begins in Boston against Bulls

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

WALTHAM — Welcome back to the NBA, Rick Pitino. For openers, meet Michael Jordan and the world champion Chicago Bulls.

The new Boston Celtics that Pitino is rebuilding from the remains of a 15-67 disaster start their season tonight at home against Chicago, which was 69-13. Even Pitino admits they're nowhere near ready, especially with a frequently changing roster.

"I don't think we're ready for anybody yet with experience, never mind the Bulls," he said after yesterday's practice. "So I would rather open with the Bulls because it's a good measuring stick of how much we need to improve when you play against the best."

Pitino has been so busy running rigorous practices and teaching his complex offensive and defensive systems that he hasn't had time to consider how he might feel in his first game as coach of the franchise with the most NBA titles that hasn't won one since 1986.

"It's very special, but my mind is so preoccupied with plays and matchups, I don't really notice too much," he said. "I'm very, very excited. I'm not nervous."

After eight seasons at Kentucky — including an NCAA championship in 1996 — Pitino replaced M.L. Carr as coach last May after the worst season in Celtics history and the second worst in the NBA last season. He says he has no regrets even though he knows he's many years away from contending for the NBA title.

"We accomplished what we set out to at Kentucky," he said. "It was eight glorious years and now I just can't wait every single day to get started with the Boston Celtics. So I've had the best of both worlds."

The hiring of Pitino, who coached New York for two seasons before moving to Kentucky, was the first in a long line of changes that probably won't end for a while.

Only four players from last season's team are expected to be on the opening-night roster. Last week, Pitino obtained young forwards Walter McCarty, Doniae' Jones and John Thomas from the Knicks. This week, he got shot-blocker Roy Rogers from Vancouver.

Of Boston's 15 players — including three on the injured list — 12 were drafted in the first round, eight played in the Final Four and eight are in their first or second season in the NBA. And the team should be better than last year's.

But the players are still learning Pitino's systems. He hopes they won't be distracted by the spectacle of opening night against Jordan and the champions.

"What I will tell them is feed on the emotion on defense and, on offense, be poised and under control, making the right plays," Pitino said. "Don't rush on offense and don't play under the influence of emotion on offense."

On defense, rookie Ron Mercer, who played at Kentucky the past two seasons, will be matched against Jordan at the start.

"I'm going to have to be on my toes in every aspect of the game just to guard him," Mercer said. "It's going to take a team effort. One person cannot stop him... whether you're a rookie or a veteran."

Guard Dana Barros, at 30 the second oldest Celtic, sees no need to look back to last year's problems.

"Last year doesn't matter and this year is not going to matter next year. We've got too many things that we need to focus on with a new system," he said. "We want to play wild and crazy, not under control at all. We want to get teams in a crazy game. We're not there yet."

Pitino is confident they'll get there eventually. Now, though, he just wants his players to work hard, entertain the fans and make progress day by day. It's just that there may not be many wins in the first few weeks of the season, especially tonight against the Bulls.

"I'm very optimistic," he said, but "we know we'd have to play one incredible game at this stage in our season to beat them."

UMass cross-country seeks third A-10 title

By Jim Ettringham
Collegian Staff

The phrase "the third time is a charm" is usually uttered only by those who have failed on two previous endeavors. The Massachusetts women's cross–country team will hope it applies to two–time winners as well.

The Minutewomen, Atlantic 10 champs in each of the past two seasons, will put their title on the line tomorrow in Fairfax, Va. Top UMass runner Rebecca Donaghue led the charge last year, capturing first place overall — only the second time ever that a UMass runner took individual champion honors.

Currently ranked first in the conference, the Minutewomen's season began shrouded in doubt. Donaghue lost a summer of training to heel problems, and Christy Martin was nursing a minor injury as well.

Women's Cross Country
A–10 Championships
Saturday

Ironically, those two are the only UMass runners who enter tomorrow's race on a roll. The Minutewomen are coming off of a sixth place finish in the New England Championships two weeks ago, which coach Julie LaFreniere described as "not bad, but not what we had in mind." While Donaghue and Martin finished 16th and 18th, respectively, no other UMass runner finished above 48th. LaFreniere chalked it up to a "bad day."

While the competition at the New England Championships was much more challenging, such teams as Virginia Tech can pose problems for the Minutewomen tomorrow in their quest for another A–10 title.

"We are not the kind of teams that can make mistakes," LaFreniere said.

■ football

continued from page 12

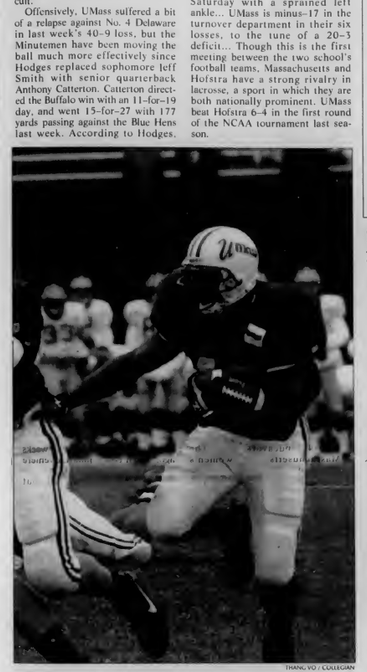
opportunity to win the football game," Hodges said.

The Bulls' 459 passing yards were a record for opponents against UMass, but UMass's stingy run defense held UB to 54 yards on the ground and the Minutemen held on late for a 26–20 win.

Hofstra is led by quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi, who has thrown for 2,628 yards and 22 touchdowns this season, with only seven interceptions and a .709 completion percentage.

Wideouts Bryan Kish, who has 68 catches for 868 yards and seven touchdowns, and Wayne Yearwood, with 54 catches and nine touchdowns, lead a deep receiving corps.

According to Hodges, the UMass coaching staff has had to make adjustments defensively because Hofstra's run and shoot offense is different than any other the Minutemen have faced this season. Hodges said that UMass will employ more nickel coverages, but that the injuries to Hunter and White have made these adjustments more difficult.



Offensively, UMass suffered a bit of a relapse against No. 4 Delaware in last week's 40–9 loss, but the Minutemen have been moving the ball much more effectively since Hodges replaced sophomore Jeff Smith with senior quarterback Anthony Catterton. Catterton directed the Buffalo win with an 11–for–19 day, and went 15–for–27 with 177 yards passing against the Blue Hens last week. According to Hodges, Catterton has helped stabilize a very young offense.

"The team has responded to Catterton well," Hodges said. "He's surrounded by kids, and he's shown poise and leadership, and he's thrown the ball really well."

The ground attack, long a UMass strong point, is led by freshman surprise Marcel Shipp. Shipp leads the squad with 492 yards, ninth in the A–10, and is on pace for the second best rushing season by a freshman in school history.

"Our goal is to take it one game at a time, and see how many of these we can win," Hodges said. "We've had a lot of adversity... [but] our players have stayed focused... and I'm proud of the way they've responded to a very difficult [season]."

Minuteman Notes... The injury bug has hit UMass. Beside Hunter and White, senior wide receiver Darryl Thomas is doubtful with a shoulder injury, as is sophomore backup quarterback Jeff Smith with a calf injury. Deyan Hawgood, the starting center, is questionable for Saturday with a sprained left ankle... UMass is minus–17 in the turnover department in their six losses, to the tune of a 20–3 deficit... Though this is the first meeting between the two school's football teams, Massachusetts and Hofstra have a strong rivalry in lacrosse, a sport in which they are both nationally prominent. UMass beat Hofstra 6–4 in the first round of the NCAA tournament last season.

The UMass running attack of Marcel Shipp and Co. will need to counterattack the strong Hofstra passing attack if the Minutemen are to win this weekend.

UMass plays for top seeding in A–10 against West Chester

By Aaron M. Saykin
Collegian Staff

Although it will not be "do or die" for her team, Massachusetts field hockey coach Patty Shea realizes that there will be a great deal at stake when the Minutewomen travel to Pennsylvania this weekend to close out Atlantic 10 regular–season play against West Chester today and St. Joseph's on Sunday.

Currently standing at 3–0 in the conference, UMass looks to solidify the No. 1 seed in the A–10 tournament with a victory today over the divisional rival Golden Rams, who post an undefeated mark in the A–10 and have their sights set on the top seed.

"This late into the season every game counts," said Shea, whose team also captured the top spot in the 1996 tournament under the direction of retired coach Pam Hixon. "We know that we've already qualified for the tournament, but now we have the ability to put ourselves in a better position."

Although the Minutewomen competed on a grass surface at Totman Field until this fall, they travel to the now unfamiliar grass field at West Chester, as they have become accustomed to playing on the artificial turf of Richard F. Garber Field. Despite having been away from competition on the natural surface since the early stages of the season, Shea does not believe the transition should pose any problems for her squad.

"It's not even a thought in our heads," Shea said of her team's mental approach. "Championship teams do it on any surface."

In the past, the winner of the A–10 tournament would have to win a Play–In game against another conference winner to advance to the NCAA Tournament; however, in addition to the winner of the Ivy League, the A–10 post–season champion will also receive an automatic bid to the national tournament, augmenting the importance of a higher seed in their conference–post season for the Minutewomen, who will decide their own destiny today against West Chester.

"It's not do or die for us this weekend, but the team feels very confident in themselves," Shea said. "There's a lot more at stake in the tournament."

Despite pounding the Golden Rams 7–0 in their last meeting, which came during the 1996 campaign, UMass will face a significantly improved West Chester team from one year ago, as they enter the contest as the underdogs to the Rams, who are currently ranked No. 12 in the nation.

Volleyball
Massachusetts vs. Duquesne
Tonight, 7 p.m.

"Right now they're a team with a lot of confidence," Shea said of West Chester. "Going from not winning a conference game [in 1996] to challenging for a conference title is a huge turnaround. They keep doing what it takes to win."

Although not favored in this afternoon's game, Shea feels that her Minutewomen's experience from their A–10 conference tournament title in 1996, in which they were the No. 1 seed, may give them a slight edge over a Ram team who did not even qualify for the event last season.

"We have a little bit of history behind us," Shea said. "In games of this emotion anything can happen. I think we're ready for that."

In addition to West Chester, UMass must face a St. Joseph's team, which is hoping to grab the fourth and final spot in the A–10 tournament, and a win over the Minutewomen would place the Hawks in a favorable position.

"St. Joe's is still in the tournament hunt, and they'll be fighting for the fourth spot," Shea said. "It will be a difficult game. They'll be ready to play."

Despite entering their most crucial weekend of the season, the UMass players have remained composed under the approaching pressure, Shea said.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 12

trip will let us know where we are as a program," coach Sam Koch said. "They are two of the top teams of the country, and both teams have a strong tradition."

The four participating teams in the tournament, UMass, UCLA, Duke, and Cal–State Fullerton will use a point system to determine the tourney champ. Two points will be awarded for a win, and one point for a tie.

The Minutemen have never played UCLA or Cal–State Fullerton. The trip to California will be the first since 1995 for UMass, when they played in the Stanford Classic.

First on the slate will be a Halloween matchup against the Bruins on Friday night at 11 p.m. EST. UCLA finished 16–4 last season and is enjoying another successful season in 1997. The Bruins are currently ranked No. 3 in the nation with a 13–2 record, and the Minutemen will be looking to pull a few tricks out of their bag and upset the hosts.

Leading the way for UCLA will be Seth George, Josh Keller, and Carlos Bocanegra. The Bruins are coached by soccer legend Sigi Schmid, who sports a 296–58–33 career mark.

The Minutemen will then square off against Cal–State Fullerton on Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

Cal–State Fullerton has a 9–7 record this year, 3–1 in the Mountain Pacific Soccer Federation. The Titans are tied for first in the MPSF thanks to an upset over UCLA earlier this year. Sheldon Thomas is the main offensive threat for the Titans.

Minutemen Notes: Looking beyond this weekend, the Minutemen appear to be in good shape for making the A–10 tournament. The Minutemen are currently in first place in the A–10 with 21 points. However, most of the teams in the conference still have two conference matchups to play. The top four teams qualify for the tournament and ties are based on head–to–head record. Virginia Tech is second with 19 points, while Xavier, Dayton, and St. Bonaventure are all tied for third with 18 points. Temple is also in the hunt for a berth, but can not surpass UMass.

Gavin Hewitt and the rest of the Minutemen gear up for A–10s with a pair of California contests.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

prepare themselves for another run at the title. Already posting two convincing wins over RPI (6–0) and Vermont (3–2), the Terriers have slid into the No. 2 slot in the USA Today Poll.

Co–captain Chris Drury is a large part of the Terrier attack. The senior paced BU with 38 goals last season while tallying 55 points. Mallen knows the road to success begins with shutting down the Terriers top scorer.

"If we can stop him we're in good shape," Mallen said. "He is one of the top forwards in the country. But I think we should concentrate on shutting everybody else down."

Everyone else includes BU's complimentary forward Mike Sylvia, co–captain defenseman Chris Kelleher, and a talented duo of goaltenders in Tom Noble and Michael Larocque.

"They have a lot of weapons," Mallen said. "But there are a lot of new faces on their team. So we'll see what happens."

